On the other side of the question one of the drawbacks of such laws is that a theatre manager is always liable to arrest even though he be trying to follow the law to the very best of his ability. There is an element of injustice in those laws, more especially injustice to the children than to the man. There are so many laws that keep children from doing things that in our cities a boy cannot play ball anywhere or fly a kite without being chased by a policeman. In fact the life of a poor youngster in a large city is very much circumscribed.

It is not our intention to discuss this matter at length, but it is a question that we would like to have discussed by our readers. We know there is a great deal to be said both ways on this point, and we invite those who have been troubled with this unpleasant phase of the business to write their views to this paper and give the question a thorough airing. Do not be backward in letting us hear from you, so that the cries of distress that we hear may be silenced, and finally settle the question: Is "Kid Business" Worth Bidding For?

Aerial Projection

Since the publication of the first article under this heading, we have been apprised that the subject of the projection of moving pictures on surfaces other than the usual sheet or screen, is engaging widespread attention. As we note elsewhere there are several devices of a novel kind which are being brought to the attention of the exhibitor.

It will be interesting to recall in addition to those mentioned last week, yet another device differing from the screen or sheet in projection work, which though applicable to lantern slides, can also on occasion no doubt be used for moving picture projection. We refer to the invention of Mr. Eric Stuart Bruce, an English scientist, which was put on the market some years ago. He called it, if we remember aright, by some such name as The Radioscope. We are not quite sure of the whole of the title, but at any rate, it was a "scope" of some kind. Bruce's idea was to dispense with the screen, or wall, and substitute for it something in the nature of an aerial surface, if we may so term it.

This he did in the following manner: He constructed a piece of apparatus which consisted roughly of two flat boards with smooth surfaces secured at their common center, so as to form a cross piece resembling a maltese cross. This was set up in the position that the screen would occupy, and revolved at a very great rate of speed.

The effect on the eye of the spectator was that of an intangible screen or surface. It looked, indeed, like a curtain of homogeneous vapor. Even so, it admitted of the projection of a lantern slide positive. The total effect of the projected image was that of a picture suspended in the air. You were oblivious of the fact that the image was being received on a screen of any kind.

Bruce's idea we can hardly dignify by the name of invention. It was pretty well exploited at the time, and attracted much attention, if not a commercial success. It was something of a novelty and embodied an idea that was present in many minds, namely, that it is possible to provide some other surface beside a whitened screen, or wall which shall heighten the effect of the picture, giving it greater brilliancy, depth and richness without detracting from any other qualities it may possess.

Though not strictly coming under the head of aerial projection, it appears to be overlooked that there are other ways of increasing the brilliancy of a projected picture, whether stationary or moving. It is by no means essential that the picture should be projected from the front, as everybody knows. It can be projected from the back of a stage. When this is done, a translucent fabric —or a partly translucent fabric—heightens the effects. Then, again, as old lanternists and others are aware, if your sheet is moistened or wet, the image which is projected upon it, seems to acquire increased brilliancy.

Also germane to the subject is the idea in many minds that a white surface is not aesthetically the best for projection purposes. We have seen pictures produced on neutral surfaces—very light grays, blues and the like—which had a pleasingly subdued effect. One thing is tolerably certain, there should not be any "whites" in the picture on the screen. They indicate poor photography or infidelity to nature. We hope that these ideas in regard to variety of surface for projection will stimulate attention and invention in connection with the subject.

Exposing Moving Pictures Indoors.

Progress in the optical side of picture making is not so rapid as could be wished. One result of this is, that during the past, or we should say, closing winter season, we have heard expressions from film makers as to the difficulty of taking moving pictures indoors, notwithstanding the high actinic value of the artificial light employed. In other words the studio substitute for daylight was not powerful enough. There is a limit even to the power of artificial light in enclosed places. We have heard it said that some pictures are made under a candle power of 200,000. We have seen pictures made with this alleged power of light, and they were under exposed, giving soot and whitewash, or black and white effects on the screen which indicates bad photography.

We are moved to write this article because we perceive that one of the most renowned European opticians has brought out a moving picture lens which is advertised to allow of the successful taking of indoor moving pictures. In other words, in the winter, when one is forced to work in a studio by artificial light, this lens admits of approximately correct exposures being given.

The working aperture of the lens which is made by Dallmeyer of London is F. 1.9, approximately F. 2. In other words, the largest aperture of this lens is equivalent to ½ of its focal length. Say the focal length of the lens is three inches. Then, this opening, F. 1.9, would be roughly an inch in diameter.

What is the practical value of all this? Merely that the larger the working aperture of the lens, the greater the volume of light that passes through it, and therefore the longer the exposure on the film. By length of exposure we do not mean length of time, but volume of light. In other words more light from the subject reaches the film, and consequently the subject is better or more fully exposed.

The value of a lens working at F. 1.9 will be more apparent to the reader when we say that the largest working aperture of most of the kinematographic lenses in use is approximately F. 3 or F. 4. The F. 4 lens, for example, has an aperture only half the size of the F. 2; consequently it is only half as quick. It is a well known optical law that the ratio of aperture to focal length determines the rapidity of the lens. Consequently the larger the opening, the more light the lens passes, and the more quickly does the lens act.

Let us imagine two photographs of an indoor scene being taken. One has the lens working at F. 2; the other lens works at F. 4. Then, if the picture taken with the lens working at F. 2 was correctly exposed, that taken with the lens at F. 4, would be under or only half exposed. The result in the latter case would be a negative giving an under-exposed positive on the screen.

This article will primarily interest the optical readers of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD, although it should also interest everybody concerned in the making, particularly the exposing, of moving pictures. At the moment of writing we are in some doubt as to whether a lens of this great rapidity F. 2 is made by the American opticians. If it is not, we feel sure that the enterprise of the optical industry in this country will produce such an instrument. It clearly has very great value in the practical making of the picture.

Moving pictures of a recent fight between 17,000 London police and a half dozen burglars will be shown in New York. They will not be shown in London. Why? Never mind. Fight pictures are against the law.

Portugal police have adopted a plan to exhibit in cinematograph theaters moving pictures of fugitive criminals. There are only two drawbacks at present. The difficulty of getting the negatives, and getting the public to stand for it.

The Film and the Play.

The filming of stage plays in this country has hardly, if at all, commenced. Some time ago, it was said that an offer was made to Miss Maude Adams or Mr. Charles Frohman, her manager, or both, of $50,000 if the lady would allow a moving picture to be taken of her in the part of Joan of Arc. The offer, it is said, was refused. $50,000 is a lot of money. We cannot imagine any theatrical manager or any actress refusing such a sum for a couple of hours' work. Perhaps the story was a mere canard designed to advertise Miss Maude Adams. Perhaps, after all, it was the mere jeu d'esprit of a Broadway newspaper press agent. Sweet are the uses of advertisements! Anyhow, the fact that $50,000 was mentioned in connection with the possible filming of an American stage play, indicates, we think, what is in people's minds, namely, that they would like to see films of great stage productions. Why shouldn't they? Let us, for the sake of argument, suppose that a moving picture was made of Hamlet, as is being played just now by Mr. Sothern and Miss Marlowe. This picture would form either a licensed or an Independent ordinary release. It would go the rounds of thousands of theaters for several weeks, if not months. What would happen? People would be interested to see the photograph of an actual stage play made on a theatrical stage. But would they be satisfied with it? Would their curiosity be appeased? We doubt it. We think that, appreciating the film as a film, people would be desirous more than ever of seeing the original actors and actresses. In other words, Mr. Sothern and Miss Marlowe and their company would be profited by a magnificent advertisement. Is it not so with the performers in a moving picture studio? Has it not been proved out that the public at large is interested in the personalities of Miss Turner, Miss Lawrence, Miss White and the other handsome ladies of the various moving picture making companies? Unquestionably this is so. These ladies receive bold advertisement, and we hope that their salaries rise in proportion to their popularity. For popularity without money is not worth a rap.

So we seriously suggest that the American film makers should take a leaf out of the book of friend Barker and endeavor to make films of notable stage plays. We think the moving picture public would be interested in these pictures. We think, too, that if the theatrical managers are properly approached, they will see the thing in a proper business light and co-operate with the film makers, instead of, as at present, antagonizing them.

Propagandry and the Picture House

By Thomas Bedding, F. R. P. S.

Rather a formidible title for an article, is it not? It is one of which I have long wanted to deliver myself. Considering the known enterprise of the American advertiser and propagandist, I am surprised that, so far, he has allowed the moving picture house to escape his attention. There are, as we are constantly told, between 10,000 and 12,000 moving picture houses in this country. This fact opens up an interesting vista of possibilities which I propose to briefly glance at.

As to the American advertiser: Nothing is sacred to him. Not even the Egyptian pyramids; a beautiful landscape; the side of a house, the top of the house. With him no considerations of aesthetic beauty ever weigh, so long as he can get his advertisement before the eyes of a probable buyer of his goods he would, I believe, if were allowed to, advertise on a funeral hearse. He seems, so far, to have left the picture house alone, that is to say, he does not seem to have taken advantage of the screen for the purpose of bringing his goods before the eyes of the daily 5,000,000 visitors who we are told visit these houses. I am merely mentioning and commenting upon this fact and expressing surprise that Mr. Postum, Mr. Moxie, Mr. Munyon or Mr. Anybody else (it does not matter who), has not put his advertising man on to these picture houses. He will probably do so when the fact is brought to his notice that this is a cheap and easy way of reaching a large body of people through the optical lantern.

Whether the exhibitor and whether the public will stand for this sort of thing is another matter. In many ordinary theatres and vaudeville houses there are, of course, advertising sheets. They seem to be tolerated by audiences there; so why not in a moving picture house? If the advertisement is artistic and effective, why not? I do not want to say unkind things about films any more than I can help, but frankly, there are some pictures that are produced that are less interesting than clever advertisements.

Advertising on the screen of proprietary articles is one of the minor uses to which the moving picture house might be put. The Tuberculosis people are using the picture house for spreading their anti-white plague campaign. Is this, I wonder, the beginning of a series of other campaigns? Suffragettes, or suffragists are becoming busy in this country. Will they, too, seek the aid of the lantern slide in demanding votes for women? I wonder!

Then you have the Prohibitionists, a very powerful factor in the community. Think of it! They can bring their propaganda before 5,000,000 of people—mostly young people. They could make an effective appeal to these millions by means of the lantern slide in the theatre. As to contending political factions: What they might do in the moving picture theatre makes one speculate. They could at least provide amusement by their mutual criticisms of each other, if even they did nothing else.

Mind! I do not want to see the moving picture theatre deflected from its proper uses, namely, the adequate exhibition of the moving picture; I am only drawing attention to possibilities. The American advertiser has no soul, nor, as a rule, has the individual who sells him advertising space. It is a question of supply and demand. I only doubt whether the ordinary exhibitor will be strong enough to resist the inducement of the almighty dollar in exchange for the exhibition of a number of advertising lantern slides. In drawing attention to possible dangers in this respect, I must not be understood as endorsing the conversion of the moving picture theatre into an advertising medium.

Seriously, a moving picture house offers very fine scope for a daring organizer, if it be true that all these millions daily gather in those houses. This means roughly that 35,000,000 of people a week could be thus reached; rather more than a third of the entire population of the United States. 35,000,000 a week! Think of it! Probably neither the churches of the country nor the theatres of the country nor any other institution of the country reach as many people as these in a week, and appeal to them through that most effective of all agencies in attracting the understanding, the human eye.

Some great Mark Hanna, when he is running a McKinley for presidential candidate, may one day appeal to the people through the picture house; it is possible that by this appeal to 35,000,000 people a week on the moving picture screen he could turn the votes of the country in favor of his candidate.

There is much for the reader to think about as to the possibilities of the picture house for propagandic purposes.

Some one has said that the man who turns the crank of a projector is the whole thing. He is while he is turning it. The photographer is important while regulating the speed of his machine's handle, attending to questions of light, and adjusting his instrument to get sharp emphasis, to say nothing of scenic selection and exposure of film. Any man of common sense knows that each is a cog-wheel in an intricate piece of mechanism, forming necessary parts of the whole delivery of an idea from the playwright's imagination to the comprehension of the spectator. The actor must be considered, and an entirely new art is coming into existence through facial expression in the photoplay. An instructor of deaf mutes, in a letter to "The New York Times," says that her pupils can read the phrases and sentences uttered by moving-picture actors easier than they can the exaggerated labial movements of their instructors. The latter have only recently adopted the method of reading speech from the lips in preference to the laborious sign method, according to the writer of the article, and what actors in the photo play say is perfectly intelligible to deaf mutes in the audience.

In primitive exhibitions, the movement of human beings in a picture was enough to enlist interest for a while, then it became necessary to provide a framework of incident for a dramatic situation. The scenario read: Scene I. John and Joe love Mary, married to Jim. Scene II. John shoots Jim through the window. Joe is suspected. III. Incriminating evidence against Joe. Cowboys prepare to hang him. IV. John confesses the crime to Mary. V. Cowboys hanging Joe. VI. Mary to the rescue, dreadful suspense during several scenes. Mary arrives in time to shoot the lariat with which Joe is being hung, down comes Joe, cowboys chase the villain, Mary and Joe embrace. Gradually rising in quality, the drama on the screen began to rival imitatively and competitively the play on the stage in presenting phases of the eternal human struggle as it is going on before our eyes. In an effort to equal or excel the older art, it has been found that character portrayal is necessary to enforce an idea, and the idea is the starting point of every serious effort to enlist the attention of an audience. "What is the point of your article?" the editor inquires of the writer. "What is the point of your play?" the producer should ask of the playwright. What is the motif. The essence of a play is the motif, it is what carries across the apron of the stage into the hearts of the audience, and it can never be satisfactorily portrayed by sub-titles in too great profusion.

In carrying the thought from the screen to the audience, the actor is the essential medium of transmission. He must be fitted to the situation by costume, show his relation to the other characters by his attitude—it is the attitude towards other characters which suggests love, jealousy, hatred or other emotional tendency, but the obvious emotional attitude is easy to portray compared to the masked one. We all wear masks in our daily intercourse, but while this can be imparted by other means, the eyes and the lips are most effective in facial expression of any kind, whether the emotion be open or subdued. Nearly all the varieties of emotion find outlet through the eyes and lips, they center all attention when a woman of interesting personality is on the stage, possibly for reasons explained by the poet:

"Here's to your eyes, sweetheart,
Here's to your eyes!
Many a man has lost his way,
Many a man has gone astray,
Following, following, all the day—
Some woman's eyes."
"Here's to your lips, sweetheart,
Here's to your lips!
What if a man should die unshriven,
Unrepentant and unforgiven;
His dream of bliss is two links riven—
Some woman's lips."

We are not permitted to see the sealing of love in the final scenes because actors and actresses have the microbe scare and only pretend, but they can really talk to us if they will. Language forms the readiest instrument of thought and words may be suggested by labial expression when freed of sentiment as well as when incumbered by emotion, whether in cynical comment or outburst of heart-burning, they carry the effect to the close observer. Why take such pains? The balance between failure and success in a picture play is very delicate, the audience is sensitive to details infinitely small. I have seen them laugh at a tragic presentation and sit unmoved while the actors in the photo-play split their cheeks and slapped one another on the back in extravagant delight, every detail of the picture is closely scrutinized by those who sit in the dark with attention concentrated on the one light spot in the auditorium, so the highest development of the photo-play may come when the performers speak all the way through as on the actual stage. This is being done in a way, but the lines to be spoken may, eventually, become a part of the written scenario.

As for the eyes, I have seen an accomplished young actress portray the vanishing of human reason so vividly that its light seemed to die out as we watched her. In another, more difficult and subtle role, she conveyed clearly the fact that she was exhibiting concealment and caution by her wistful scrutiny of a suspected husband. Only recently another young and accomplished actress carried one of the most difficult parts ever assigned to a woman, one of high emotional intensity, suppressed by the splendid fortitude of the character, clear to the end, only to show mental dissolution in the first stage and restoration by a timely incident, almost entirely by intelligent use of wonderfully expressive eyes, fixing the characterization so strongly in the minds of the spectators that it will long be remembered as one of the most remarkable portrayals on the screen. Every actor and actress should study the use of these potent influences. Their characterizations seem real or unreal, rich or impoverished, according to our susceptibility and their powers of suggestion.

The Open Market

By John M. Bradley.

An open market would prove the salvation of motion pictures, and not, as some persons claim, the future ruin of this popular amusement. Two years ago an open market would have meant complete demoralization of the cinematographic art. Two years ago most of the exhibitors were of the uncultured class—men who had no taste, no education, and not even good principles, men who thought that sensational and suggestive pictures were the only ones to please the public. The manufacturers, also, at that time were not encouraging the better work; they were fighting to copy each other in suggestive pictures; their motto was the same as to-day: "Quantity, no matter what the quality."

Under such conditions an open market would have been a calamity; a slashing of prices, etc.

Conditions have changed. To-day, while we still encounter bad characters among the purveyors and patrons of the shows, we must admit that the better classes have also become users of the pictures.

This fact cannot be denied when we see the moving pictures anew the old stands they were occupying, in cheap thoroughfares, to invade the best shopping districts, and even the fashionable residential districts of our great cities. We see the cheap old store fronts disappear to make room for better, larger and more expensive theatres. We see the uncultured and unprincipled exhibitors leave the field, disgusted, and their places taken by the honest, educated and experienced show managers. We see some improvement in the productions and in the manner of showing the pictures, with good music, to say nothing of the better attendance. Now that the better classes are taking to motion pictures and the exhibitors are doing everything in their power to build comfortable houses for a better class of work, it is only natural to presage a great improvement in the business, provided the manufacturers meet these better conditions by improving the productions.

With the fine houses of to-day, well managed and well patronized, we have no use for inferior and bad pictures, and some of our licensed and independent manufacturers would be out of business if the public had any voice in the matter. This is the seat of the trouble. The public, like the exhibitors, are at the mercy of the manufacturers, who, after dividing themselves into two camps, had each faction bound hand and foot to arbitary corporations, viz. General Film Company and Sales Company. These two corporations accept the work of their privileged manufacturers, bad or good alike, they push these goods on the renters, and the poor renter has to put them out to the theatres and receive the kicks. These two corporations have no consideration for the public or the exhibitors; they are in existence for the mere purpose of making money, to run the industry to the ground; they are like the farmer with the goose laying the golden eggs—they are willing to kill the goose to get all the eggs at once. They have no ambition and no thought of the morrow, and when their arbitrary rules, not to say their oppressive ways, have killed the pictures, they will not care, as they will have enough money stored away to retire and enjoy themselves.

With such a spirit it is not surprising to see the apathy of our manufacturers. They produce two, three or four reels each per week to keep the quantity going, and pay no attention to quality. A manufacturer is not ashamed to be named as the best manufacturer, but he wants to be known as the one releasing so many reels per week.

If the manufacturers keep on producing films such as "Boris Godounoff," "Boris Godounoff," "Rumpelstiltskin," "Romeo," "The Mannerheim Cup," etc., we will soon discourage the better classes and the manufacturers will have to add a little more gaiety to their pictures to make them more attractive and more sensational in order to please the old patrons of the dirty little shows of days gone by.

To-day, with a better class of spectators, experienced managers and fine houses, we want good productions, and no matter if we have no manufacturers, the ones able to produce good features will be the ones to sell their pictures, while the weak manufacturers will gradually die out as they will soon lose a sufficient market to keep them alive, no matter if they have to offer their output at 1 cents.

The days are gone when an exhibitor could accept any sort of service as long as it was cheap. These palmy days are no more. To-day, exhibitors spending $25,000 or $50,000 on a house are not going to ruin themselves and displease their patrons by showing inferior pictures, because they are cheap. The public has been educated to better things, and will not stand for bad pictures, and the exhibitor who thinks that he can save money by accepting a cheap service will soon find himself sold out by the sheriff.

Some persons claim that an open market would encourage many new manufacturers to enter the field. This argument would have been reasonable some years ago, when any old thing was good enough as long as it would move on the screen. It was the palmy days when all that a man needed was to have a camera. This man is still making pictures, because he is either supported by the General Film Company or by the Sales Company, while talented men, able to produce the very best, cannot enter the market because they cannot be recognized by either of the two corporations. This is why I advocate an open market. An open market will give a chance to talent to enter the field, while the same open market will ruin the manufacturer who is doing business simply because he is supported by one of the above-named corporations.

An open market is no real danger, because any new manufacturer has to meet hard competition. When, in the old days, the manufacturers were nothing else than camera crank turners, it was easy for new manufacturers to also buy a camera and turn the crank. To-day, it is a different proposition. The new manufacturer must enter in direct competition with men that have years of experience, big plants and everything at their disposition, to turn out the very best work. Capitalists are conservative fellows. Some years ago they were willing to invest, because there was no real competition, but to-day you cannot ask a capitalist to put some $50,000 in a new manufacturing plant, when he knows that plants are already in existence, involving perhaps millions of dolars. The capitalist of to-day will say to any new manufacturer: "Yes, your proposition sounds O. K., but have you the experience and the facilities to produce, if not better, at least as good as Jones, who has been in the business for ten years, and has a fully equipped plant worth $500,000?" Evidently we will always find a few fools ready to invest a little money in a new plant, but they are not dangerous. When a man is so thoughtless he has not much money to invest; he merely squanders what he has on some "dreamers." I am sure that many are ready to beat out my statement; they have invested, they have lost and they are sorry.

A closed market is more dangerous than an open market, as with a closed market the work is left with the few manufacturers protected by either the General Film Company or the Sales Company, who have only one ambition—to produce queer stories running on the usual themes of an elopement, of a man abandoning his wife, of a woman running away from her husband, etc. An open market would eliminate the cheap man, and the natural competition would force the manufacturers to exert themselves to produce only the best. Give us an open market, and we will soon get a picture that can be shown over and over again, and make money for the manufacturers, like "Italian Cavalry," "Last Days of Pompeii," "Nero," etc. When our manufacturers will abandon all their foolish stories of personal jealousies, divorces, unfaithfulness, etc., they will increase the interest in motion pictures and bring them to the plane they should occupy, not only in the theatres but in the schools and the churches, and when the manufacturers will follow this legitimate course of producing masterpieces, at the cost of several thousands of dollars for the negative alone, the foolish little manufacturer will find out that he is not in the game, and the sooner he drops off the better for him. Thus the open market will naturally and gradually eliminate the manufacturers who have no reason to be in the game. Competition will force good pictures and good work will win each time, as the exhibitor of to-day, with so much money invested in his theatre, will call for the best and will not be so foolish as to ruin his enterprise by showing inferior pictures for the sake of saving a few dollars on his service. While an open market will close many manufacturers, a closed market will encourage more manufacturers to enter the field. If the General Film Company on one side and the Sales Company on the other side, try their very best to restrict the manufacturing field to a few, they cannot stop the ambition of all the newcomers, who are determined to get a piece of the cake. They are starting a third movement. This third movement is not yet baptized, but will not stop the overgrowing crop of manufacturers, and unless we have an open market we will see a fourth, a fifth, and, perhaps, more movements.

The only way to stop the crop of new manufacturers is to improve the work to such a degree as to make it unprofitable to produce cheap or ordinary pictures. When our good manufacturers will devote their time to the production of masterpieces they will protect themselves more efficiently than by any known or unknown patents. The cost of production will be such that the little man will not be in it.

With the 2 to 4 release per week system the manufacturer cannot improve; he cannot waste time nor money; the factory, as well as the camera man, must turn out so many feet per day, regardless of atmospheric and other conditions. When we watch the pictures on the screen it is easy to see that no consideration is taken of the atmospheric conditions. We are shown what should be a fine piece of scenery, yet the photography is weak and dull; in other words, we can see that it was not a clear day, but a day with an atmosphere laden with mist. If the manufacturer was not the 2 to 4 release per week fiend, if he was not compelled to turn out so many feet per week, he would, when the atmosphere is not clear enough, postpone to another day the taking of the picture.

We are told that Ambrosio consumed several months to produce his "Nero," or the Burning of Rome. This film was and is still a great success. A year after its release Nero was shown again to enthusiastic crowds. If we have not been misrepresented, Ambrosio sold some 800 copies of his Nero.

This leads us to a little arithmetic:

Suppose that a manufacturer takes six weeks to produce a masterpiece, at a cost of $5,000 for the negative, and that he disposes of 500 copies.

Sales of 500 copies at $100		$50,000.00
Cost of the negative	$5,000
Cost of 500 copies and expenses	25,000	30,000.00
His profit		$20,000.00

The manufacturer of to-day cannot spare six weeks on a negative, but to maintain his reputation of releasing two reels per week he will make twelve negatives during these five weeks at a cost of $500 per negative, and sell only 40 copies from each negative.

Sales of 40 copies from 12 negatives, or 480 copies		$48,000.00
Cost of 12 negatives at $500 each	$6,000
Cost of 480 copies (40 from each negative)	24,000	30,000.00
His profit		$18,000.00

A masterpiece taking six weeks to produce will net the manufacturer $20,000, while his two releases for six weeks will net him $18,000. I do not give the above figures as being strictly correct they are merely to illustrate and show that there is more money in high-class work.

Masterpieces would stop this stupid fad of daily changes. With good pictures we do not need to change every day. Nero and other such productions have advertised themselves, while "Heart Hunger for Happiness" disgusts any one. "The Italian Cavalry," although an old thing, is still the talk of every one, and every time it is shown it is a sure success for the exhibitor. Your neighbors tell you of it, and you tell your friends that they should not miss such a treat. "Heart Hunger for Happiness" is a different story. When you see this foolish lover pulling out his tongue, then fed like a hog, you have seen enough of it. You will not advise your friends to spend a nickel to see it. Same with that absurd picture, "A Queen for a Day." What art can you see in this film? Certainly it is not in the breaking of the dishes, smashing of the furniture, drinking of whiskey, et No art whatever, but a lot of vulgarity. Both the Pathe and Vitagraph Companies, producers of the two above-ed films, have proven that they have the experience and the facilities to produce high-class work, both have presented us with masterpieces. Why, then, should they devote their time to such foolish pictures, such vulgar and out-of-place productions? Because they have recognized that with the stupid fad of daily changes and the workings of the General Film Company they cannot dispose of more copies of their masterpieces than they can of their inferior pictures. Why should they work hard to better their work when they are not rewarded, when their sales are the same for bad picutres as for good ones? An open market would establish a genuine competition, and would put an end to stupid fad of daily changes.

How is it that an opera or a good play can remain for months and months on the boards, and that the finest motion pictures cannot stand more than one day?

It is high time that the trade should have a national convention and that such matters should be discussed.

The day that we will have an open market Pathe Freres will not waste their time to show us a foolish lover pulling his tongue and allowing himself to be fed like a hog, nor will the Vitagraph Company waste their time to show us an Irish cook breaking the dishes, drinking whiskey and pulling a roll of money from under her skirt. No, these two companies, who can and have produced high-class work, will endeavor to be in the lead and abandon such foolish and stupid pictures to the numerous new manufacturers, who have a few hundreds of dollars to lose in the game.

Our first pictures were much like the nickel books. You know what they are. Badly printed on very shoddy paper, poorly written, sensational stories, but devoured by the readers (low classes) to reach the climax. We know that our cultured classes want better literature, they want a better looking cover, good paper, fine printing, artistic illustrations, good composition and clean stories. When some of our manufacturers started to improve the pictures we got a better class of patrons, and this new class of lovers of motion pictures induced many exhibitors to build fine houses in better districts. But since the apparition of the General Film Co. and of the Sales Co. our manufacturers seem to have returned to the old style of the cheap 5-cent novels.

The best argument that I can offer for an open market is the well known fact that when the Biograph was supreme, a new system of the General Film Co. and the stupid daily changes, "Herod of the New Born King," and other such high productions of Gaumont, are classed with the "Heart Hunger for Happiness" of Pathe, the "Queen of a Day," of the Vitagraph, etc. Yes, these admirable Gaumont films are classed with the regular, two, three and four per week releases. When "The Christian Martyr" of Gaumont will have worked the same circuit as "Bertie's Elopement," of Selig, both films will join the great army of bygones.

Allow me to repeat, the public has been educated, the public wants good pictures, and as the exhibitor has spent, and is still spending, much money to build fine theatres to capture the patronage of the better classes, the exhibitor is not going to be so foolish to show bad pictures for the sake of saving a few dollars on his service. Consequently, the manufacturers must realize that there is no danger in an open market. Granted that an open market will induce an army of new manufacturers to enter the field. What can they do? Suppose that an open market is declared. Pathes, Gaumont, Ambrosio, Biograph, Eclair, Great Northern, Vitagraph, etc., will decide to resume the high class productions for which they have been so favorably known, and what could Jones Co., Black Co., Brown Co., etc., do in face of such competition? Before these new manufacturers could produce pictures to beat the masterpieces of the already well established manufacturers, they would have to sink a lot of money in experiments and failures, and, as already stated, if we still find new fools to invest a few hundreds of dollars in a moving picture plant, the real capitalists, the men with the money and the brains, will not enter such a hazardous game. Let us have a little common sense, and remember that if in certain low districts of some of our cities we have still some men asking for sensational and suggestive pictures, the great majority of lovers of the motion pictures call for high-class work, and will patronize the places where such work is shown.

The convention suggested for the coming summer is an absolute necessity, as it is time that the exhibitors should meet and discuss such questions of mutual interest. The exhibitors have more money involved in the game than all the manufacturers put together, and it is time for the exhibitors to come to a mutual understanding and decide if an open market will prove the salvation of the industry, and not if a closed market, under the exclusive control of the General Film Co. and of the Sales Co. is not the surest thing to bring the death blow to motion pictures.

PICTURE PERSONALITIES.

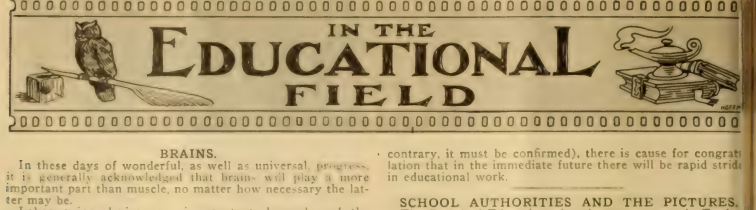
Arthur Johnson.

There is a good deal of truth in the idea that it is hard to get a stationary picture of a moving picture actor, especially Arthur Johnson, because he is always on the move even when he is not acting. Therefore, the picture that you see herewith was sketched under difficulties. Mr. Johnson is no need to possess an animated pictures that he thought our artist was taking a moving picture, and found it very hard to keep still. He thought he ought to be acting all the time.

We reminded up the subject of this sketch at the Sales Company ball, and put him through the third degree, and of course, being a moving picture actor, he was not sitting on the talk end of it, especially concerning himself because as everybody knows, moving picture actors never have anything to say (except to swear once in a while). They are dumb. Mrs. Johnson is the center of the family, and, perhaps, Mr. Johnson does not know what a good little wife against his side is. She was a jewel the other night, and perhaps "Lil' Artha" did not like it. But Mrs. Johnson (Miss Eveson maiden) makes no mistake in telling business secrets to a newspaper man, because if there is anyone in the world who keeps a secret it seems to himself it is a newspaper man (until the paper comes out).

Mr. Johnson is known all over the world as moving pictures. He has a more familiar than that of Labin Drew. Thousands of our readers will remember him in the days prior to the well-known Biograph leading man. He left the Biograph Company almost a year ago and went on the Edison circuit, at the Independent side, but was not there, and by the time this paper reaches the reader the Lubin Company, of Philadelphia, will contain one week's pay. This leaves us sure of Mr. Johnson to bring back against Gertrude Bambrick Miss Florence Lawrence who is also with the Lubin Company, and moving picture lovers will be glad to see these two picture stars working together again. In the mean, what is the Biograph's loss is Lubin's gain, and this is not the first instance where Lubin has been the lesson that outbid a competitor by giving one rebbie the head of the Sub and the other fellow the tail, keeping the middle for himself.

He has done his bit from the villain on the mash "mailing drama all the way up to reading Shakespearian roles, and therefore is well qualified for the good work in which he is now engaged.



BRAINS.

In these days of wonderful, as well as universal, progress, it is generally acknowledged that brains will play a more important part than muscle, no matter how necessary the latter may be.

Labor-saving devices are in constant demand, and the laborer of the future will be an intelligent rather than a mere physical agent; physical power, plus brains, plus mechanical devices, will revolutionize all kinds of labor. It has often been said that one great difference between the past and the present is "brains." Not that our forefathers were lacking in intelligence, by no means but, rather, that we, their descendants, have built upon their foundation; each succeeding generation as occasion presented and demanded, meeting new conditions with a use of the highest and best powers of which man stands possessed.

Using the Brains.

A famous artist, whose colorings caused universal admiration, when asked "what do you mix with your paint to produce such wonderful effects?" replied: "Brains, simply brains," thereby giving a grand proof to the truth that brains make a wonderful "plus" to whatever cause they may be added.

A lecturer upon educational subjects included the "using of the brain as a mighty and valuable addition to every sphere of life," as a subject of special importance, illustrating the same with the fact that a ton of crude steel may be worth, say, $10. A ton of steel, plus brains to make it into steel rails, made it worth $20; giving a number of other valuable uses which constantly increased in value, until, finally, he came to the steel spring of a watch, which showed that a ton of steel plus brains to make it into watch springs made it worth thousands of dollars.

The Cinematograph a Stimulus to the Use of the Brain.

While last week attention was drawn to the fact that the cinematograph would become helpful in an educational manner by concentrating the faculties, we are able now further to speak of it as a help to the use of the brains. Professor G. P. Baker, Professor of Literature in Harvard University, in a lecture recently said: "Moving pictures are good for the brain and stimulate the imagination; one is compelled to use his brain to fill out the parts not given on the film, and the fact that the brain must be so used is an argument in the picture's favor."

The writer of this article has made it a special practice to take several intelligent children with him, for the especial purpose of studying their receptive attitude when viewing the pictures. To say that the results were interesting would not fully describe them; they were positively extraordinary; very often the young people could see points almost obscure to their elders; and occasionally could predict the forthcoming effects. Nowhere else can it be found that such rapid comprehension exists, making the cinematograph a marvel in its powers of concentration, imagination and comprehensiveness.

Applied Educationally.

The old method of telling a boy to "use his brains" (if he unfortunately showed any dullness) too often failed through lack of being taught how to use his brains." Pedagogy seldom went far enough in applying education to do any more than impart the knowledge; the use of the knowledge was optional with the scholar; making the wide difference between the studious pupil and the indolent one a source of annoyance and dissatisfaction to the teacher; besides producing unsatisfactory results.

With what joy the teacher will hail any power which proves at once an incentive and a stimulant, equalizes the capabilities of the scholars, quickens the perceptive powers, concentrates the faculties and makes indelible impressions upon the memory, so that the work of both teacher and scholar shall be at once made easier and more thorough! If cinematography is going to be the new power Professor Baker predicts (and there is no reason to belittle the prediction, but, rather, to the contrary, it must be confirmed), there is cause for congratulation that in the immediate future there will be rapid strides in educational work.

SCHOOL AUTHORITIES AND THE PICTURES.

The Board of Education of an important town in England recently appointed a sub-committee to consider the relation of moving pictures to education. After due consideration this committee recommended "that scholars should occasionally be allowed to leave school an hour earlier in order to attend cinematograph exhibitions of educational pictures." While by this action this board has joined scores of others in indorsing the value of the "picture teacher," they have differed from those who have considered the question of equipping their schools with a moving picture outfit. In this particular case there is the suggestion of working in conjunction with an established moving picture place. The suggestion seems a good one, bringing out the further idea of it being worth while for the moving picture people to offer to work with and for the schools. In the thousands of small towns throughout the United States a system of co-operation between the various educational authorities would not only be helpful, but would eliminate opposition or even friction, making such a combination of interests mutually advantageous in many ways.

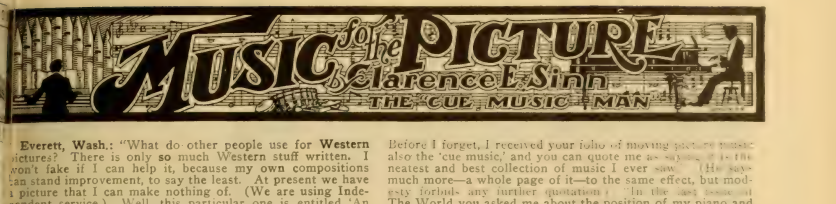
A NEW ATTITUDE.

It is not very long since there was a hue and cry against the moving pictures as a demoralizing agency; this was followed by the suggestion that they would gradually die out. To-day this is all changed; thinking people, business people and others have found in the cinematograph an instrument of great possibilities. Now that the educators and educational authorities are using the cinematograph, it has got into the best hands, plainly showing that in its evil days it was because of those whose usage was not of a proper order. Within the last few days a New York Supreme Court Judge lamented the fact that "ghouls and vultures" had so misused the moving pictures for their own evil purposes, wisely placing the blame where it belongs.

THE CLERGY AND THE PICTURE.

It is interesting to note and record that clergymen are everywhere becoming rightly interested in the moving picture. Having wisely seen that causes for previous criticism were removable, and that it was not necessary to "smash the organ because it was out of tune," all that was needed being a properly attuned instrument and a good player to produce harmony and inspiring music. So with the cinematograph; in proper hands it is both educational and inspiring, even from the point of view of the most exacting clergyman, or any religious body. It is now a common item of news to read of churches using the moving picture, whether it be to secure proper exhibitions or to illustrate their own work and themes; the action is equally laudable. Individual clergymen, too, are now using the moving picture as they used to use the stereopticon, but in a larger way, and with more satisfactory results. Clergymen lecturers are now advertised, and it argues well for the future of this line of cinematography to have in the hands and mouths of this religiously educated profession this helpful and valuable means of imparting knowledge besides giving a new and pleasing form of church entertainment.

Professor Baker, of Harvard, lecturing on "The Signs of the Times in the Drama," says: "Moving pictures are taking the place of the melodrama; there is less tendency toward immorality and crime in the picture show. Drama is having a far-reaching effect on the people of this country, and is improving wonderfully. Public censorship will prevent the production of immoral plays." This new attitude toward the moving picture is not by any means local or individual. A wide reading of the public press shows that it is universal; also, that it is constantly growing.



Everett, Wash.: "What do other people use for Western pictures? There is only so much Western stuff written. I won't fake if I can help it, because my own compositions can stand improvement, to say the least. At present we have a picture that I can make nothing of. (We are using Independent service.) Well, this particular one is entitled 'An Unreasonable Jealousy.' Looks well in the synopsis. Tell me whether it is my fault or the picture's. I love pictures and work hard in them. I have been in dramatic work myself and appreciate them from a dramatic standpoint. In answering this, please do not use my name in full. Use M. M."

There is no music which is purely typical of our Western country. The "cowboy"-songs so popular in the past (like "Idaho," "Pony Boy" and the like) are the only things we have which are at all suggestive of the "cow puncher." The number, as you say, is limited—there being probably half a dozen (of such—a matter which is sufficiently known to the average audience to answer the purpose. All are lively tunes, and are useful in most of the "wild west" pictures. For Indian music, Belstedt's "War Dance" and the "Sun Dance" are good characteristic numbers, and the second movement in "Trailing the Trail" is also a good little bit, especially in pathetic Indian scenes. For other pathetic, sentimental and melo-dramatic music generally, work out the same as in ordinary melodrama. I do not now recall the picture you mention, so cannot offer any further suggestions in the matter. You having been, as you say, in dramatic work, will remember that music is used to accent or bring out the more important features of the play. Where the dialogue runs along evenly, with no suggestion of action, music is rarely employed. The same holds good in picture work to this degree only. The more important features are worked up with appropriate music (which may be melo-dramatic or other descriptive music), while the quiet or "neutral" portions are filled with something non-committal—usually a waltz, intermezzo or anything not particularly suggestive. Personally, I do not, as a general rule, like waltz "fill-ins" for either cowboy or soldier pictures. To me they seem to suggest the ballroom or drawing-room rather than scenes in which (by comparison) rough men predominate. I prefer two-four intermezzos when you can't otherwise find anything applicable. The argument will be used against me that as this form of "intermezzo" is played in ballroom for a two-step, it ought to carry the same suggestiveness as the waltz. I only offer it as a personal opinion. You will use your own judgment in these inconsequential matters, anyway.

From Defiance, Ohio: "Would be very much obliged to you if you would give me a small list of music (popular and classic) suitable for moving picture and the parts (light or heavy, mysterious, plaintive, etc.). As you probably guessed from the tenor of this letter, I am new to the moving picture game in fact, I am only an operator at present, but hope to become manager of a house in a short while, and wish to get 'next.'"

The desired list is now on the way to the correspondent.

From Milford, Conn.: "I am playing in a moving picture theater and have for the past two months been very much interested in reading your articles on music in the MOVING PICTURE WORLD, which have been of great help to me. I have wanted to get a list of music to use and ask, as a favor, if you will send me a complete list for all kinds of pictures and oblige, Mr. B."

Thanks for your kindly appreciation of my efforts. I am more than delighted to hear that my little talks are helpful. I am sure I want to make them so if I can. A list is being prepared for you, and will be sent soon. I want to beg for a little leniency from those who have not yet received lists of the music titles asked for. I have a great many requests and it takes time, so if you will be patient you will be taken care of.

Here is E. A. Dunn again: "Mr. Dear Mr. Sinn—Just saw MOVING PICTURE WORLD for January 14, also January 28, also what E. A. Dunn had to say. I expect there will be quite a rumpus kicked up regarding the use of the organ in moving picture houses. Come what may, I am ready for them. Before I forget, I received your folio of moving picture music also the 'cue music,' and you can quote me as saying it is the neatest and best collection of music I ever saw. (He says much more—a whole page of it—to the same effect, but modesty forbids any further quotation.) In the last issue of The World you asked me about the position of my piano and organ. The piano and organ are at right angles to each other. The organ is a low affair and the drummer's head is visible above the top. As to the programme we play: I told you in one of my former epistles that we do not go on before 2 p. m. The show starts at 10.30 a. m. The changes are Wednesday and Sunday. On these days we show up at 10.30, watch every picture (sometimes twice), and then pick our programme. I have just made a new piano stool—took an old piano stool, unscrewed the top from the screw, took the legs from a high-backed chair, and screwed the long piano screw to the bottom of the chair, and placed the screw back in the groove in the old stool's legs, making a very comfortable chair which enables me to switch from the piano to the organ without breaking the melody I am playing. Do you get me?" (I am giving this description at length because I used the same scheme some years ago and found it a good one.—C. E. S.) "A word about our trap drummer, Bill Judd. He is one of the best in the business bar no one, and I know what I am talking about. He has about $300 worth of traps, and about one-half of them he made himself. I can only think of one of contraptions he has. Awhile ago we had a picture depicting a rustic scene, and the farmer comes along and starts to pump water, and the noise he got out of some home-made affair brought down the house. It sounded exactly like the noise of a pump handle. Another thing, he keeps both drums going while he is working effects. We had a picture not long ago called 'A Popular Tune,' and he whistled, played a violin, a mouth organ, an alto horn and sang. What do you think of that? (I think we have heard so much about bad drummers and their offenses that it is a positive relief to hear about the other kind. Good for Bill. Long may he live!)

I would like to quote a little example of the use of popular songs in working out comedies. We had 'Midnight Marauders" (Biograph) and I played it as follows: 'You Are Going to Get Something That You Don't Expect." When burglar appears, staccato mysterious. When wife runs to get husband awake, "Don't Wake Me Up, I'm Dreaming." Note—"Please Go 'Way and Let Me Sleep" ought to be used and buried by now.) Husband walks down steps, gun in hand—"tramp, tramp, tramp." Burglar rustles around trying to get out, "I Don't Know Where I'm Going, but I'm on My Way." Husband falls out of window, "I'll Be Back in a minute, but I've Got to Go Now." Next scene husband tells wife all about it, "I'm Your Little Bird Outside." How do you like it? That is the usual way, I believe, at least so far as I have observed. All these song title suggestions are worth while providing your audiences knows what you are playing. In the case you are giving them popular stuff which is pretty well known, and quite often you can be helped greatly in that way. It is a relief from the monotonous rag march." But song titles should always be chosen with the view of their application by the audience and we must be pretty sure they are generally known if we are to use them.

Mr. Dunn is fortunate both in having ample time to study his pictures before he plays them, and in having a house arranged for his trap drummer. The suggestions which are readily applied are just as important in the cases where many cases much more so. The next letter is apropos.

Mr. Sinn: Dear sir—"I am playing piano alone in a picture theater. We have no drummer, nothing but piano, and the manager wants me to put in sound effects whenever I can and play, too. I think that is asking too much. What do you think? I don't mind doing some things, but we had a picture of a man dying of consumption and his wife kissing him. The manager wanted me to imitate the kiss. Of course the people laughed, they always laugh when a kiss is featured, and I think it spoiled the picture, because the scene was a sad one. What do you think? Don't print my name or address. Hazel B."

(Continued on bottom of Page 360)

Sales Company Employees' Ball

At Alhambra Hall, New York, February 3.

The picture that we publish herewith does very scant justice to the Sales Company employees' ball, February 3, at Alhambra Hall, New York City, it being impossible to photograph all four sides of a room at one time, we get a glimpse of only one-fourth of those present, and only for the brief moment of the taking of a photograph, arranged as you see them in the picture. All the rest of the time they were a very lively bunch of picture people. Each one a moving picture in himself. Everybody who was anybody (with a few unavoidable exceptions) was there with bells on. And it certainly was a very lively evening, except for one thing.

The one thing that proved an exception to a lively time was the introduction of moving pictures between dances. There is nothing wrong about moving pictures between dances, if they do not hand out "weepers." But, unfortunately, the guests were handed the choicest collection of tragedies that were ever projected on a screen in one single evening. It seems that every manufacturer deliberately dug up the most doleful subject that he could lay his hands on to contribute to the gayety of the occasion. Not a comedy in the lot, out of perhaps a dozen reels that were shown. This is a good indication of the forgetfulness on the part of manufacturers in general that comedy is the thing and drama is "aus gerspiel."

There was everything shown at the ball, from the dying child to the young lady who was put through all the horrors of a torture chamber, and later dutifully burned her pretty face with a red-hot iron, showing the ghastly scars as an evidence of good faith. Weep! Weep! Weep! Weepers! Weepers! Weepers! Weep and the world weeps with you; laugh, and you laugh alone!

Outside of that it was fine. Everybody was bright and happy, and had a good time. Nobody over-danced, because the pictures made good rests between the dances. Those who did not like the "weepers" talked business.

One of the features of the evening was a round-up of popular New York singers, and while the dances were going on they were singing the latest hits from the various music publishing houses which they represent. The list included Mr. Leo Edwards, Harry Collins, Bolsford Coffs, Frank McFarland, Edward Doerr, William Mac Arthur, Joseph McCarthy and C. B. Rockwell. The band was a dream. They came from Stauch's Pavilion, Coney Island, where they play dance music the year round. They are certainly some kiddoes at playing dance music. The hall was tastefully decorated, as will be seen in the picture, with specially made pennants representing the various makers, draped from the boxes, which were occupied by the well-known Independent manufacturers. There were also boxes reserved for various other departments of the trade, which were occupied to their capacities. When the guests had finished throwing their paper streamers the hall looked like a garland, and it was necessary to stop the dancing and clean off the floor a number of times. At daylight some of the guests were still in the hall, without the disposition or ability to go home.

The ball was successfully conducted by Charles Abrams and Joe Miles, and they did their parts in a masterful manner, which, no doubt, will earn them a reputation all over the world as "bear cats" in getting up moving picture dances and promoting good fellowship in the business generally.

COMMITTEE.

Chas. Fearing, President; J. R. Niles, Treasurer; Miss E. G. Brown, Secretary; John W. Wood, F.E. Gribbon, James T. Gilmartin, Herbert L. Taylor, G. C. Ryan, J. Lewis, M. Piver, W. Moore, R. E. Bevins.

GUESTS.

Reliance and N. Y. Motion Picture Co.'s box—Chas. O. Bauman and wife, Miss M. Kenney, H. J. Stryckmans, Miss Marion Leonard, Mr. Gausman and the full cast of the Reliance Stock Company.

Atlas Co.'s box—H. L. Miles and wife, J. R. Miles and wife, Miss F. Gribbons, Miss Former and Miss Harris, Mr. Brulatour.

Powers Picture Co.—P. A. Powers, Thomas Evans and wife, Pearl White and Mr. Carrigean.

Imp. Co.—Carl Laemmle and wife, with party of friends.

Rex Co.—Messrs. Porter and Engle, Miss Hoelfell and Miss Goldman.

Solax Co.—Mr. Geo. Magie and daughter.

Moving Picture World box.—Mr. W. H. Coles and Miss Kathryn Eggleston, F. H. Richardson and wife, Mrs. J. H. Saunders and daughter, Miss Edna Ellaby, H. A. Fischbeck.

Nestor Film Co.—David Horsley and wife and Mr. Simmone.

Great Northern Film Co.—I. C. Oes and party.

Lux Film Co.—Messrs. Prieur and Professor Houdim.

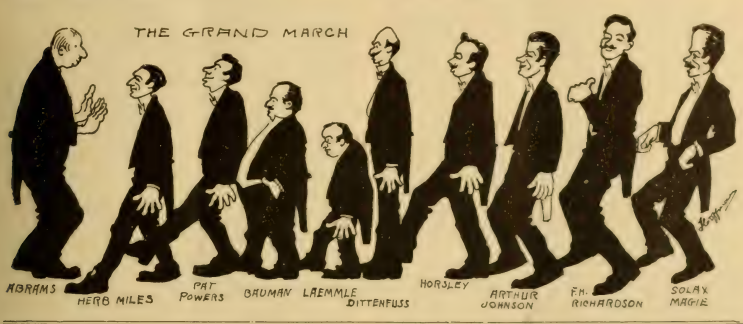
Champion Film Co.—Mark M. Dintenfass and wife.

Thanhouser Co.—Bert Adler chaperoned the Thanhouser Company, with Mr. Gregory as an assistant.

Eclair Film Co.—Mr. Offeman.

Besides the above box-holders was a goodly number of exchange men and exhibitors, many of whom we did not have the pleasure of meeting.

The Press was represented by Mr. Greenland for the Billboard, Mr. Cooke for the Nickelodeon, L. J. Rubenstein, of Film Reports, and H. F. Hoffman and A. MacArthur for the Moving Picture World.



London Letter

By A. E. Taylor.

We in London are rather amused at the controversy that has been waging your side as to the selection of the word "Photoplay" as the cognomen of Moving Picture Houses. In England we have "Electric Theater," "Cinema," "Theater de Luxe," "Palais Cinema" "Picture Theater," "Animated Pictures," "Picturedrome," "White Palace," "Myriorama," "Bioscope," Biograph," Kinetoscope," and various others. There is certainly need for some universal name by which Moving Pictures might be known amongst all English speaking peoples, but if it is to become the recognized term it must be something better than "Photoplay." Years of close intercourse with the people who patronize this class of entertainment has convinced me that any name to become popular must not be too high falutin. There is one phrase which is used by all classes in England and that is, "The Pictures." Men women and children alike say they are going to the pictures. Why not use that term for the moving picture house?

* * *

There are now very few moving picture houses in this country, where chimerical gloom prevails during the performance. Nearly every theatre is semi-lighted and it is possible to find one's seat without the uniformed attendant and his electric torch. The English people are a suspicious race, and have an idea that anything conducted in the dark must pander to impropriety and indecency. In consequence managers endeavor to have their halls as well lighted during the performance as is consistent with a good view of the picture. Many daylight screens have met with a qualified success, and as inventors are still diligently devoting their attention to this matter, the time may not be far distant when we shall find the present condition of things less distressing.

* * *

Over here there is a growing tendency to appoint managers of the moving picture houses only those who have had a thorough grounding in all the technicalities of the business. The consequence is, a notable improvement in the way these places are conducted, and in the class of entertainment provided. Until quite recently anyone was considered good enough to direct the front of the house and the results proved disastrous to many private individuals and limited companies. Now not only has a candidate for a managerial position to possess commercial qualifications, but also practical knowledge of the projector, besides insight into matters electrical, and musical ability. And all this makes for the good of the industry.

* * *

Whilst the moving picture is gradually but surely ousting the variety hall and the theater from popularity, it has also sounded the death knell of the evening concert in suburban London. This admission has been made by an authority on concerts in the metropolis. Personally I do not wonder at this for many of the so-called evening concerts were simply caterwauling displays, whereas at "the pictures" one is always certain of a programme well worth seeing. By the way, too, the English people have a dislike for those picture shows which run variety turns, and do not care for the combination of the music hall and pictures at a picture theater. And yet they like pictures at the variety theater. Verily there is no accounting for tastes.

* * *

There is a movement on foot in France for the regulation of the kinematograph industry which will doubtless attract attention inaugurated with the object of obviating overproduction and the lowering of prices a syndicate is being formed. Producers are not to issue more than three thousand feet of negatives per week, to do no renting direct or indirect and to sell only under certain restrictions. Renters are not to sell films, or to effect the whole of their purchases, with the exception of ten per cent, with members of the syndicate, and are not to buy old or new films below price. Renters are to make up the whole of their programs from films placed at their disposal by members of the syndicate. The selling price of films is fixed at 40 per foot for ordinary films, and 75 cent per foot for artistic films. I should think there will be trouble ahead as renters are forbidden to deal with Pathes or Gaumonts unless those firms join the syndicate. Should they do so the condition as to limitation of output is not to apply to those firms. It seems to me that this rather stultifies the utility of the syndicate as Pathes and Gaumonts, who now produce treble the quantity to be recognized per week, would then be at liberty to increase their output as much as they could and as much of that is bound to be good quality they would practically secure a sympathy of the market and oust the others. The syndicate's manoeuvres are not to apply to any other than French territory, so we in England can regard it with imperturbability. It remains to be seen the thin edge of a wedge.

Withdrawal of Injunction Against Gaumont Type of Camera

On January 17, 1911, an order to show cause, signed by E. Henry Lacombe, United States District Judge, and addressed to the Independent Moving Pictures Company of America, Thomas D. Cochrane, its general manager, and Carl Laemmle, its president, called upon them to show cause on January 28, 1911, why they should not be adjudged in contempt of court as for disobedience of the injunction theretofore issued in the case and served on the first day of March, 1910. That injunction of March 2d, 1910, had been issued because of the use of Warwick and Pathe cameras prior to that time. The order to show cause was based upon the affidavits of Edward Kessel, Adam Kessel, Jr., Max Laemmli and Charles A. Buckbee, and later an affidavit of Albert C. Wiechers was added. These affidavits set out the use of Gaumont cameras in July and September, 1910, and charged same as an infringement of the Edison patent and a violation of the injunction. The affidavits also set out the alleged use of a Warwick camera in June, 1910, and charged that as an infringement of the patent and a violation of the injunction.

The return of the order to show cause was later extended by the Court to January 28, 1911. On that day counsel for the defendants, Hon. William J. Wallace, formerly Senior U. S. Circuit Judge for the Second Circuit, and Wm. Houston Kenyon, Esq., of the firm of Kenyon & Kenyon, of New York, appeared before the court prepared with affidavits, upwards of sixty in number, setting out the long and extensive and general use of Gaumont cameras and other similar cameras of the beater type to the knowledge of the complainant and its emissaries, also setting out that no suit had ever been brought against any such camera as an infringement or any claim made or notice given that it was an infringement, save the episode in the case against the Champion Film Co., in December last; also that the beater camera had not been really defended in that case and that its construction and mode of operation and the results obtained by its use had been misrepresented by the complainant to the Court in that case; that the Gaumont and other cameras of the beater type, when properly understood in their true construction and mode of operation and results, do not belong to the Edison or Warwick type of positive feed devices operating by the interlocking of a pin or stud with perforations in the film to produce intermittent motion, but belong rather to the Biograph type, where there is more or less possibility of slip and which the Circuit Court of Appeals in the case against the American Mutoscope and Biograph Co. held was not an infringement of the Edison patent; and finally setting out new references of the prior art which were not proved, or known to the Circuit Court of Appeals, in either of the former cases against the American Mutoscope and Biograph Co., and which disclose the Edison positive intermittent feed device in which a pin or stud interlocks with perforations in a tape. Complainant's counsel, J. Edgar Bull, Esq., of the firm of Gifford & Bull, and John Robert Taylor, Esq., of the firm of Dyer, Dyer & Taylor, pleaded with the Court for a postponement of the hearing, owing to the great number of the defendants' affidavits, and for leave to file replying affidavits. The Court granted a postponement to Wednesday, February 1, at 11 A. M.

At that time defendants' counsel presented their defense in a printed volume of 205 pages, including 62 affidavits; but complainant's counsel read a typewritten statement to the Court withdrawing the motion for contempt for contempt in so far as it related to the use of Gaumont cameras. The significance of this action by the complainant will be appreciated when it is stated that the defendants' affidavits showed that substantially its entire business since March, 1910, when the preliminary injunction was served upon it, had been based upon, and had proceeded by the use of, the Gaumont cameras in question. The paper read by complainant's counsel in open court was in full as follows:

IN THE CIRCUIT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES.
FOR THE SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF NEW YORK.

MOTION PICTURE PATENTS COMPANY,
vs.
CARL LAEMMLE and INDEPENDENT MOVING PICTURES COMPANY OF AMERICA.

STATEMENT OF COMPLAINANT'S COUNSEL.

The complainant hereby formally withdraws so much of its motion to punish the defendant for contempt as relates to, or in any way bears upon, the defendants' use of the Gaumont, or so-called "Beater" type of camera, referred to in the motion papers, reserving unto itself in the prosecution of the motion to those violations which involve the use of the Warwick type of camera. We take this action because it is evident from the character of the reply affidavits, coupled with the fact, announced in open court, that the Champion case, in which the question of infringement of the Gaumont camera was decided, is not appealed, that it is the defendants' plan to try out the question of infringement of the Gaumont camera in the Court of Appeals in those contempt proceedings, and not on a preliminary injunction motion; and we understand from the defendants' counsel, also expressed in open court, that a motion to punish for contempt is not the proceeding in which to try out a question of infringement. We consider it wise to have the findings of this Court with respect to the Gaumont camera reviewed, they may do so by taking an appeal in the Champion case.

February, 1911.

Commenting on this statement of complainant's counsel in open court, it amounts to a public admission that there is a new question of infringement involved in the use of the Gaumont camera, which was not involved in the case, that, in the judgment of the complainant, no one who is under general injunction will be in contempt for using the Gaumont camera.

The statement might be regarded as meaning that, in the judgment of complainant, the question of infringement could properly be raised on a motion for preliminary injunction, although in the case of a motion for attachment for contempt, it is well settled law that the infringement must be clear, otherwise the motion must be denied. But later in the day, February 1st, complainants' counsel, Messrs. Dyer, Dyer & Taylor, formally withdrew a motion for preliminary injunction pending in the Eastern District of New York, and which stood for hearing on February 10th, and which would have brought up the question of infringement by the Gaumont camera, not on motion for attachment for contempt, but on a motion for preliminary injunction. The circumstances of that withdrawal were these:

On November 28, 1910, notice of motion for preliminary injunction was served upon Adam Kessel, Jr., Charles O. Bauman and Louis Burstein in the suit by the Motion Picture Patents Co., against them in the Eastern District of New York. Those papers alleged only the use of Warwick or similar cameras. The defendants, in December, 1910, filed replying affidavits in which they referred to the Gaumont camera and denied the use at all on or with feed cameras. This was before the decision in the case against the Champion Film Co., which latter decision was filed on December 28, 1910. Subsequently, and on or about January 5th to 10th, 1911, complainant made and filed rebuttal affidavits fully describing the Gaumont camera and introducing photographs of it and alleging its use by the defendants in July, 1910 (a use which had not been referred to, it is to be noted, in complainant's original affidavits of November 28, 1910). On January 25th, defendants' counsel notified complainant's counsel that leave would be asked to file affidavits defending the Gaumont camera from the charge of infringement, and on substantially the same affidavits that were to be used for that purpose in the case against Carl Laemmle and the Independent Moving Pictures Co., and this notice was repeated on January 31st, after those affidavits had been served in the latter case. This motion for injunction against Kessel and others would, therefore, have given complainant an opportunity to try out the question of infringement on a motion for preliminary injunction. But late in the afternoon of February 1st, complainant's counsel, as stated, withdrew this entire motion for injunction in all its branches.

The notice of withdrawal of the motion for injunction against Kessel and others was as follows:

IN THE CIRCUIT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES.
FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF NEW YORK.

MOTION PICTURE PATENTS COMPANY, Complainant,
vs.
ADAM KESSEL, JR., et al,
Defendants.

IN EQUITY
On Reissue Patent
No. 12,037.

NOTICE.

To Messrs. Kenyon & Kenyon,
Of Counsel for Defendant,
20 Wall Street, New York City.

Sirs: Take Notice that we hereby withdraw the motion for preliminary injunction heretofore noticed in this case which is now set for hearing on Friday, February 10, 1911.

Yours, etc.,
DYER, DYER & TAYLOR,
Of Counsel for Complainant.

Dated New York, February 1, 1911.
JRT-BAB

Service of the foregoing notice is hereby acknowledged this 1st day of February, 1911.

Kenyon & Kenyon,
Of Counsel for Defendants.

This notice was accompanied by the following letter:

DYER, DYER & TAYLOR,
Counsellors at Law,
31 Nassau Street,
New York, February 1, 1911.

Messrs. Kenyon & Kenyon,
20 Wall Street, New York City.
Gentlemen:

Motion Picture Patents Company vs. Adam Kessel, Jr., et al.

In this case, the defendants' answer is due on Monday next. In view of the fact that the case will be at issue so shortly, and since there have been so many postponements of the hearing on the motion for preliminary injunction, we have decided to withdraw that motion, temporarily at least, in the expectation that the case can be promptly brought on for final hearing. Enclosed, therefore, we send you a notice to this effect.

Yours very truly,
DYER, DYER & TAYLOR.

JRT-B.
Enc.—Notice.

The situation, therefore, is that defendants' counsel in the case against the Independent Moving Pictures Company of America and Carl Laemmle, have practically admitted, and stated in open court, the issue of infringement by the Gaumont camera, and on complainant's own motion for attachment for contempt for the use of that camera, and the complainant's counsel, after a close study of defendants' affidavits on that issue, have declined to meet the issue on that way, and have withdrawn the motion, and defendants' counsel, in the case against Adam Kessel, Jr., and others, in Brooklyn, have tendered the issue on a motion for preliminary injunction, and the complainant has declined to meet the issue even in that way, and has withdrawn the motion for preliminary injunction.

This course of the complainant is full of significance to the manufacturers and users of Independent Moving Picture films, because, as was known at the time of the suit against the Independent Moving Pictures Company of America, a very large proportion of the entire production of the Independent manufacturers is made by the use of Gaumont cameras. Complainant's course in avoiding the question without a struggle seems to confirm the well nigh universal expert opinion of the trade and of its advisers, that the Gaumont camera is not an infringement of the Edison patent, as the same has been construed by the Circuit Court of Appeals, and seems to confirm also the prior practical judgment of the complainant's officers and advisers, as evidenced by their course heretofore, and up to within a month or two of proceeding against all instances of the use of Warwick pin or stud cameras, but not proceeding against any instances of the use of Gaumont or similar beater type cameras.

"The Old Man and Jim"—Champion

The Old Man and Jim is a picture play from the well-known dialect poem of James Whitcomb Riley, which many of our readers will remember by the familiar line of "Good-by, Jim, Take keer yourself." There is a great deal of sentiment in that story, and the poem is a great favorite of many business men who have a great fondness for the Hoosier poet. The Champion Film Company in this film has a good foundation, as every good picture play must have upon which to construct its picture. Given the foundation, the story is in the hands of the picture story teller, and upon him depends the interpretation.

They may have a new producer at the Champion studio, or it may be the old one, we hope it is the latter, but in this film the Champion Company have produced a picture play that will stand side by side with any film of the past year and hold its own with ease. This article is not paid for in any way, and we are inspired by no other reason than to give credit where credit is due. We were surprised at the good quality of this picture.

In the very first scene of this Civil War drama, it was noticed at first glance that the producer is thoroughly familiar with the costuming of the period. Also the furniture and general ensemble of a family gathering at the time of the Civil War is perfect. There is a softness of quality and harmony of detail about that first scene that makes it the most restful picture you could wish to look upon.

The succeeding scenes are worked out with the same intelligent consistency as the first, leading up to the climax, which is a battle scene that, in a moving picture, may be called a model. One could imagine the cheers of the audience as Old Glory came waving through the clouds of smoke and told that the battle was won. We can imagine the general pandemonium of applause when this picture is shown to its first audience on Washington's Birthday. We do not know what the producer's name is, but our hat is off to him.

The story of "The Old Man and Jim" is about an old hoosier character who had a large family of nine boys and perhaps a few girls sprinkled in for good measure. He loved them all, but especially his eldest son, Jim, and from this love of the old man for his son, the poem took its name, "The Old Man and Jim." Jim was a wayward lad, always in trouble or getting his father into trouble. He drank, he smoked and he played unpleasant pranks upon other people. But, after all, he had a good, winning way and a human side that drew folks to him and made them love him. With all his faults, the old man loved Jim, and to him the sun rose and set upon his head.

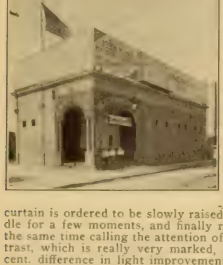
One of Jim's escapades was a flirtation with a young married woman who came with her husband to visit Jim's family. It later proved that Jim and this lady, who was unfortunately married to a mean man, were really deeply in love with each other, and remained so until death. The loving couple were caught by the jealous husband in loving embrace, and an unpleasant scene took place which was not brought to a final settlement, because at that moment the other boys came bursting into the room with news that the Civil War had broken out, and the quarrel was forgotten in the excitement. Jim went to the war and his father's words in parting were: "Good bye, Jim, take keer yourself."

The succeeding scenes show Jim with the army. Occasionally the old man writes him, and he always closes his letters with his homely benediction: "Good bye, Jim, take keer yourself." The battle scenes that follow are exciting and artistic. We see Jim in the thick of the fight, we see him wounded and dying, and our hearts go out to this good-for-nothing boy who proved himself a hero for his country's sake. We see him in succeeding stages of his early demise. He is brought home to die. It is on his death bed that the true love of Jim and the other fellow's wife for each other is really revealed. All the rest of the family and the neighbors then realize what a good boy they have lost, and as his soul passes away he hears the words of the old man saying "Good bye, Jim, take keer yourself."

Scene from "The Old Man and Jim."

THE MIRROR SCREEN LECTURED.

The Keystone Theatre in West Hoboken, N. J., has installed the first moving-picture screen on their side of the Hudson. In order to impress their audiences with the value of the Mirror Screen, the Keystone management has secured the services of Mr H. F. Hoffman, of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD to lecture upon the Mirror Screen before the picture is shown. A very good way of demonstrating the Mirror Screen is employed by Mr Hoffman in the following manner: He begins with a few remarks explaining the Mirror screen, outlining a short history of projection screens. Then, that the audience may judge for themselves, he calls for the old curtain to be lowered and the picture started upon that. After a moment the old curtain is ordered to be slowly raised and stopped in the middle for a few moments, and finally rolled up out of sight, at the same time calling the attention of the audience to the contrast, which is really very marked, and amounts to 100 per cent. difference in light improvement. In lecturing the Mirror Screen, Mr. Hoffman also calls attention to the lighted condition of the house, which has been installed also with the Mirror Screen. He calls attention to the fact that the picture and the house are both bright, which is not lost upon the audience.



The Keystone Theatre is owned by Mr. Charles Rabe, who has been an exhibitor for a number of years, and any one who knows him knows also that there is nothing good in new moving-picture improvements coming along that he does not buy. The house seats about 700, using first and second-run Association pictures, and one commercial, besides five acts of vaudeville.

WORLD OFFICE VISITORS.

Mr. William H. Harbeck, the well-known moving picture photographer of scenic subjects, called upon us this week en route for Europe. He left New York by the Lusitania, on Wednesday last so by the time this issue of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD is published, he will be pretty well across the Atlantic.

Mr. Harbeck proposes visiting London, Paris, and Berlin for the purpose of acquainting himself with moving picture progress in those cities and the countries of which they are the capitals.

Mr. Harbeck's work in filming the country, traversed by the Canadian-Pacific Railroad, is well known. He showed us on his visit, some specimens of his films which are of the very highest technical and pictorial qualities. We especially commend Mr. Harbeck, as a high type of maker of moving pictures who thoroughly understands the technique of his work.

The A. J. Corcoran Company, Inc., manufacturers of tanks for film-developing purposes, with offices at 11 John street, acquainted us with the fact that they have installed the Corcoran system in several of the film-manufacturers' laboratories, but until recently treated this business only as a side line. Having observed with what strides this industry has advanced within the past twelve to eighteen months, and owing to the volume of orders now on their books, the Corcoran Company has been obliged to increase its facilities to handle this trade, and is now in a position to dispatch any and all orders within a reasonable time.

On another page will be found a cut of the Corcoran developing tank.

A postal card to the company will bring a descriptive catalogue and price list of their product.

* * *

This week we had a visit from C. C. Spinks, president of the Auto Foto Independent Animated Picture Manufacturing Company, of Chicago and St. Louis. Mr. Spinks is interested in the making of educational, industrial and scenic films. Moreover, his company is laying itself out for the production of films for advertising purposes.

A non-infringing camera, on a novel principle, is one of Mr. Spinks' objects of work at the present time. This camera may possibly see light at an early date. Moreover, the subject of the film in natural colors is engaging his attention.

A JUMBLE WORD PUZZLE.

From each of the following 100 words take one letter to form a sentence of 100 letters. This sentence, referring to an event that should be of interest to persons connected with motion pictures, and that will convey a good deal of information.

First prize—$25.00 in cash.
Second prize—$10.00 in cash.
Third prize—Two years' subscription to MOVING PICTURE WORLD.
Fourth prize—Motion picture handbook.

The sentence forming the solution of this puzzle is sealed in a jar at the offices of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD, Chicago. All answers must contain the key to the puzzle. All answers to be mailed in sealed envelopes, as the prizes will be awarded according to the post marks. Address all answers CONTEST, care MOVING PICTURE WORLD, 160 Washington Street, Chicago, Ill.

At the close of the contest the MOVING PICTURE WORLD will publish the name and portrait of the originator.

Very — in — sent — while — hoping — has — in — after — all — move — and — in — on — very — ever — reason — unto — drives — daily — had — in — earnest — your — run — the — and — I — hope — life's — hopeful — in — seeking — the — good — intelligently — everywhere — ruling — lessons — reaching — a — reading — operators — every — edit — line — notations — circulation — king — hurried — lessons — — projection — endeavor — electricians — another — always — noted — innumerably — natural — operators — Illinois — first — matters — usually — likewise — come — intelligent — learned — noting — very — relieving — year — noting — royal — appeals — having — some — circulation — all — you — word — earnestly — with — and — gate — do — long — constant — listens — variety — volumes — that — responded — persons — practical — searching — doings — pictures — order — everywhere.

SEEN AT THE BALL.

Pat Powers imitating the figure 7 while dancing with a young lady under the four-foot mark.

From a half to a dozen and a half tall green bottles outside of the boxes of each manufacturer.

Carl Laemmle with his usual smile and a glad hand for everybody.

Miss Kenny, of the Bison Co., in her first "real" low neck gown. She was observed making her get-away while trying to save her new gown from the falling rain, and, believe me ——

The boys reported the pastoral scenes were great, with all the little calves showing themselves to good advantage.

Tom Evans and his wife.

Dittenfass had his frau along, too.

Herbert Miles leading the grand march with Miss Former.

Bert Adler with his new BROWN suit.

The editor of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD Trouble Department, but he was not needed with such orderly company.

Mr. Laemmle journeyed to Chicago the next afternoon, presumably to get eighteen hours' sleep on the Twentieth Century train.

A general feeling of good fellowship among all present.

MAC.

DEPARTURE OF MONSIEUR VANDAL.

Mr. Marcel Vandal, the Directoire Generale of the Eclair Company, of Paris, returned home last Thursday on the steamship La Savoie. Mr. Vandal, during his sojourn in America, having purchased the ground where the Eclair American Film Factory is to be built, and having also completed, with the assistance of the architects, the plans for a most modern, up-to-date and complete film factory, has returned to Paris in order to expedite the shipping from there of the printing machines, perforators, etc., etc. In the next few months the Eclair American factory will be in full operation and turning out films, the quality of which will be above reproach and not easily duplicated.

During his stay in America Mr. Vandal has made a great many friends and business acquaintances who will be most happy to have him back, and in the meantime they wish him "bon voyage."

Ellis Cohen has been made the agent for the famous Cellit non-inflammable film, also Edinol Hydro, the best developer for moving picture films, both products of the Farbenfabriken, of Elberfeld Co. His office is now located at 117 Hudson Street, New York City.

Mr. Cohen was formerly manager of the Moving Picture Department of the Morning Telegraph.

CONSTRUCTION DECORATIONS

This Construction page is not an advertising scheme, but a page published in the interests of the exhibitor to point out to him anything new of any real merit, so as to enable him to maintain his house in an up-to-date condition.

In our issue of January 28, we gave a description of a new indirect light, and we did so because this new style of lighting appealed to us as the most proper manner to light a moving picture theatre, without blurring the picture on the screen, and without having lights to shine in the eyes of the spectators.

Following our policy to investigate everything new pertaining to motion pictures, we decided to experiment with this new lighting system, and had one of the lights placed in our Chicago offices. The results have been so satisfactory and the comments from the many exhibitors, who have visited us during the past week, have been so encouraging, that we deem it our duty to say a few more words on this new lighting system.

An exhibitor writes: "If the electric bulb is set in the suspended basket, the rays must go to the ceiling and a heavy shadow must float over the seats." Illustration No. 1 is made from the observations of our correspondent, and it is true that if the light fixture was suspended in the open air the rays would shoot skyward and the basket, acting as a sort of eclipse between the light and the seats, would throw a strong shadow under the fixture.

Our correspondent did not realize that the rays of light hit against the ceiling, and falling back downward, they then fill the whole room with a diffused soft light, eliminating all shadows, as illustration No. 2 shows. We do not criticize our correspondent, as his observation is the general verdict of persons who have not seen the light in operation, and cannot understand from a mere description why a light placed in a suspended basket does not show a shadow of said basket. They argue that if you place a lamp on a table, a shadow of the table will show on the floor.

We hope that the two above illustrations will explain the mystery of this new lighting system, yet to remove any doubt on the part of skeptical persons, we took the following picture to fully demonstrate the claims made for this new light.

The following photo was taken at 8:30 p. m. with no other light in the office, no flashlight, but with the only electric bulb seen burning in the suspended basket.

While the light is somewhat strong at the ceiling, it is easy to see how said light is well diffused all over the room, and no shadows can be detected on the two desks, placed just under the light fixture. Everything on the desks can be seen as plainly as in daylight; with a magnifying glass, the reader can read the words "Jockey Music" from a copy of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD laying on the desk at the left. All the papers are free from any shadow, the keys of the typewriter can be seen. The picture on the wall of the Essanay plant is no sharper, no clearer, than the lower picture, showing Cattle Mary, the new Imp girl. The comparison between these two pictures shows in the most conclusive manner that the light is evenly diffused and that any one can work at either desk, as it enjoying a full daylight.

While the rays of the electric bulb are reflected to the ceiling of a moving picture theatre, they do not shoot directly on the screen; consequently, they cannot injure the picture.

The light shown in the above picture would be entirely too strong for a moving picture theatre. The ordinances calling for lighted houses do not require a light strong enough to read small print, but merely a light sufficient to show the vacant seats, aisles and persons sitting next to you. There could be no ordinance asking for too much light, as the regular play and opera houses have recognized that a dim light is preferable to a strongly-illuminated auditorium. In the indirect lighting system the electric bulb can be changed to give more or less light.

The main drawback with the present side lights is that they make a number of seats very uncomfortable, while they keep other seats in total darkness. If the side lights are too high the rays fall on the heads of some spectators, and if they are low they shine in the eyes of other spectators.

As we have installed the new indirect lighting system in our Western offices, we cordially invite every person passing through Chicago to call at rooms 307-309 Post Building, 160 Washington Street, Chicago, to judge by themselves, and our representative will be only too pleased to demonstrate the new system and experiment with bulbs of different candle power.

J. M. B.

PRINCESS THEATRE DESTROYED BY FIRE

On Sunday evening, February 4, the Princess Theatre, of Cedar Rapids, Ia., was destroyed by fire. As the Princess was using a new set of reels this fire proves once more that the supposed safe N. I. film is as dangerous as the common celluloid. The different Legislatures considering the question of prohibiting the exhibition of motion pictures printed on N. I. stock should keep all this in mind before passing a law that could injure thousands of exhibitors all over the country.

Remember that the Legislature of Ohio is considering a bill to prohibit the exhibition of pictures not printed on N. I. stock, and it is understood that this bill, pushed by the owners of the M. P. P. Co., is for the purpose of forcing the independents without having to fight the patents on the camera as it is said that the same bill is pending in other States.

LOS ANGELES NOTES.

By Richard V. Spencer.
(Coast Correspondent of the "World.")

Exceptionally bad weather has delayed the work of the local studios for the past three weeks, scarcely a day of which permitted good photography. Up to January 5th, less than three inches of rain had fallen, but since that date the downpour has been steady, a condition most unusual. The Biograph Company and the local Pathe studio have been most inconvenienced of the companies working here owing to the fact that they have not had time to lay in a reserve supply of finished pictures. The Bison and Selig companies both have plenty of finished stories to draw from. Mr. Ballauser, the Bison director, informed me that he had fourteen in reserve, and the Selig company has probaly a similar number.

California Co.—Few local enterprises have been pushed forward to productive operation more rapidly, and with greater promise of a successful business career, than the California Motion Picture Manufacturing Company. Organized and incorporated last December, the company has made remarkable progress. They have erected a large studio at Long Beach. No expense has been spared in the arrangement of the different working departments, and the equipment therein. Mr. Duhem, the general manager of the new concern, is a man who had had years practical experience in moving picture work. The dressing is being assembled and drilled under his personal direction. Releases are now in progress for the company's first release, which has been delayed owing to bad local weather conditions preventing good photography. The new concern will not market through the Sales Company. It is their intention to sell direct to the different exchanges, who will in turn supply the exhibitors with the company's film. The company has had many inquires from exchanges throughout the United States and Canada, and even from abroad in England, and far off Sweden.

Bison.—Art Acord, a local cowboy broncho-buster of wide repute, and a member of the Bison Stock Company, recently subdued the broncho "Cyclone" after a terrific fight. Acord is the first man that has ever rode old "Cyclone" to the finish and conquered him. While the fight was at its height, Monty Montgomery, hurriedly put the Bison camera in action, getting a good picture of the fight. The film will be watched with interest by the local moving picture men, the cowboys especially.

Pathe.—January has proved to be a hoodoo for local moving picture men owning automobiles. On the first, Fred J. Balshofer, the Bison director, while on a trip to Santa Monica, wrecked his machine and put it into the auto hospital for repairs. Now comes James Young Deer, the Pathe director. While driving down town the other night in his sixty horse-power Thomas Racer, the car skidded on the wet asphalt and tried to climb a lamp post at Eighth and Broadway. The shock threw Young Deer and several friends in the car, out into the muddy street, but none of them were injured.

Bison Girl in Vaudeville.—Marguerite Favor, who formerly played leads with the Bison company, is now appearing in vaudeville at the Hyman. Miss Favor demonstrates convincingly that she is just as good in vaudeville as she was in the more difficult work of acting for the pictures.

Another New Theater.—Frank L. Stiff, a local architect, is drawing plans for a moving pictures theater to be established at No. 340 South Spring St., by Messrs. Quinn & McLean. The present three story building which adjoins the Los Angeles Theater on the south, will be torn down to make way for the new structure.

Broncho Busting Exhibition.—To demonstrate that women as well as men are fitted for the more severe tests of life, Mrs. Dell Blancett, champion woman rider of the world will ride bucking broncbos at the exhibitions to be given by the Out West Club, a local Equestrienne Association, at Fiesta Park, February 4th, and 5th. Mrs Blancett scorns to use tied stirrups or any of the many little protective measures frequently adopted by men riders. Mrs. Blancett rides wild broncbos with all the freedom and grace of the expert cowpuncher born on a saddle. Capt. J. S. Henderson, who has the arrangements in charge, states that the performances will entail all the details of the early Western sports. The old Banning stage will be resurrected and again held up and shot full of holes, as frequently happened in the old days of Road Agentry. Eight, —— count 'em —— eight of the most ferocious bucking broncos possible to secure have been rounded up and on the opening date will match their wits against the expert riders that will try to subdue them. Dell Blancett, Mrs. Blancett, Art Acord, all champion riders, and others from the local picture studios will take part in the performances.

To Catch Lions for Camera.—A dispatch from Kalispell, Mont., states that negotiations have been entered into between one of the moving picture manufacturing companies of New York and Charlie Ordish, a noted mountain lion hunter of the Flathead Valley country, for the production of a film showing him capturing a lion with his dogs and helpers. Ordish has caught many mountain lions alive, having taken four already this winter. He holds a record of seventy-four shot and lassoed in the four winters which he has spent in the Flathead country. The name of the moving picture company was not mentioned in the dispatch.

NEW ENGLAND NOTES.

Pawtucket, R. I., is soon to have a new scenic temple, which will add one more moving picture theater to the already very large string owned by Mr. William Bradstreet. Mr. Fred Lovett, of Providence, will be resident manager. Mr. Lovett is considered an excellent executive.

The Women's New England representative has written of the controversy between the owner of the Day Street Methodist Church, West Somerville, Mass., and vox populi. The people agitated against a moving picture show in the church. Then they also spoke against allowing a negro church to be established there. Mr. W. R. Hale, of West Somerville, purchased the church building and had it remodelled into a moving picture theater at a cost of $6,000. Mr. Hale has now asked West Somerville to decide between the moving picture theater and the negro congregation, through Mayor Burns. It is understood that a license will be granted, as a petition was sent to Mayor Burns, signed by 200 business men, praying that the moving picture show be allowed, rather than the congregation permitted to occupy the premises.

The Portsmouth Theater, Portsmouth, N. H., plays high-class, legitimate shows, but often has open dates, which are filled with moving pictures and vaudeville.

It is rumored that the Portland Convention Rink, Portland, Me., is to be converted into a moving picture theater. If so, the rink will make one of the largest theaters in that State.

Mr. H. I. Dillenback, manager Nelson Theater, Springfield, Mass., is also the New England agent for the "Herbst Process Pictures." The Herbst Process "full light" pictures are on exhibition at the new Central Theater, Lynn, Mass., on and after Monday, February 6. Mr. Dillenback states that this process is a special machine which greatly betters the picture when projected on the screen. HENRY.

BOSTON.

Although the W. E. Greene Film Exchange and the Boston Film Rental Co., the two New England independent film exchanges, have succeeded in acquiring a considerable percentage of the business of New England moving picture houses, yet old General Film Co. shows the same spirit as of old, which spirit might be defined as independent and autocratic. It has come to the notice of the World's New England representative that General Film Co.'s Boston office has only one class of service for sale to the moving pictures of Boston proper. "Either all new, first-run reels or nothing," is the way they put it. Houses using four reels of pictures cannot purchase two first run and two commercial reels, nor can any other combination of service be made. This stand was taken recently by General Film Co. against a local moving picture theater, which was investigating the matter. Another moving picture house located in a Massachusetts city, outside of Boston, was handed a similar argument by the "trust" exchange, when inquiring concerning a change of service. As one exhibitor puts it: "Oh, for a good, live, open market!"

When speaking with moving picture managers regarding the respective qualities of the films released by the two factions, the World's New England representative has noticed that the answers are far from those given a year or so ago. The majority of managers seem perfectly willing to state that the difference in the average quality of the films of the Patents and Sales Co.'s is not very marked. Exhibitors showing "trust" pictures have told the writer that the reason the house was on the licensed side was not because of great superiority of quality. Independent exhibitors have expressed the same opinions in many cases. The great majority of moving picture theaters in Boston and throughout the whole of New England are now running the film service which is the least in evidence in their immediate locality. In other words, it is becoming more and more unusual to see two moving picture theaters in immediate competition with each other, both of which are using films from the same faction.

The superiority of the licensed programme over that of the independent output is not of sufficient magnitude to make any difference. The question now asked by New England moving picture theatres is: "Which service is shown the most around me; I will take the one the least in evidence." In order to show just how much this line of procedure is in evidence, the WORLD'S New England representative will enumerate the principal moving picture theatres of Boston proper, taking them from one end of the city to the other in their geographical order, and mention which class of film service each uses: the new Washington Theater, independent; the Unique Theater, licensed, the Premier Theatre, independent; the Savoy Theater, licensed, the Pastime and Bijou Dream, both licensed, the Old South Theatre, independent. The houses just enumerated lie in one continuous string along Washington Street. The houses next mentioned lie off Tremont Street, Tremont Row and Bowdoin Square, all of which thoroughfares directly connect with each other and make one long street to all practical purposes: the Beacon Theater, licensed, the Theater Comique, independent; the Star Theater, licensed; Austin & Stones, independent; the New Palace Theater, independent; the Bowdoin Square Theater, licensed; the Olympic and Jolliette Theaters, both independent. This review clearly shows how the two classes of film service are broken up, and proves the statement that the section wherefor the moving picture theaters use licensed or independent films is not so much a question of quality as a question of competition.

G. L. Whalen, who has gained considerable success "talking the pictures," has completed a lengthy engagement at the Park Theater, Worcester, Mass., one of the houses making the Gordon Bros.' string of moving picture and vaudeville houses. Whalen is considered to be one of the best picture talkers in the New England States.

Frank L. Browne, formerly general manager of the Old South and new Washington Theaters, is now connected with the Warren Church booking office.

Mike R. Sheedy, J. J. Flynn and Jeff Davis, all connected with the moving picture business, are about to open a vaudeville booking office. Owing to the steadily increasing number of New England moving picture theaters, which are adding vaudeville to the programme, it has been difficult for these theaters to obtain their vaudeville. This new office will cater to moving picture theaters running vaudeville, besides the regular vaudeville houses.

The WORLD'S New England representative has read the open letter of Mr. J. Stuart Blackton for the Vitagraph Co., in the WORLD of January 11. Henry has no wish to misstate or to attempt to abuse any one or anything. Therefore, if after noting and answering the question below, Mr. Blackton shows the writer to have published incorrect statements, Henry is only too glad to offer his apologies openly to Mr. Blackton and the Vitagraph Co.

Mr. Blackton, no doubt, noticed that the writer's article on this question was placed under the caption "Boston." This is to clearly state that anything appearing under Boston has nothing whatsoever to do with New England, as the space above is devoted to news from that section. Therefore, reference was made to replies made by Boston moving picture theaters. Only Boston moving picture managers remarked to the writer that their replies had been as stated in these columns of February 4.

Now, if Mr Blackton will offer for publication the replies in full of all the Boston moving picture theaters that answered the letter in question, and those replies show that Henry's statement, as to the reasons offered the Vitagraph Co., were incorrect, Henry will be quick to extend his apologies, not even offering as an excuse "that's what they said they wrote."

The Boston Council for the Promotion of Public Morality has been organized, with a list of charter members, representing all the religious denominations of the city. The purpose of the society is to keep a watch over things theatrical.

Mr. George E. Lothrop has acquired another interest in the Bowdoin Square Theater property, which is running "pop" vaudeville and pictures.

William O. Johnson until recently manager of the Savoy Theatre, is no longer at that house.

Irving Hamilton, formerly resident manager of the Savoy Theater, Fall River, Mass., has been placed in charge of the Orpheum Theatre, Marcus Loew's big Boston "pop" vaudeville and picture house. Hynes.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y.—Six months for the operator who stole two picture machines from his employer, after being picked up when he was down and out. It would have been six years instead of six months, except for his wife and family. The exhibitor, Mr. Millard, refused to prosecute in the criminal court

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Empress has been running recently a number of reels of a religious character, which have been both uplifting and entertaining. Manager Notes is always aiming toward the refining and educational in the motion picture business. "There are sufficient good reels made by the independent manufacturers," says Manager Notes, "and neither my patrons nor myself will have anything but what is worth spending their time and money for, and worth wishing to see again."

The Paramount Film Exchange continues to be rushed. Manager Walker has taken over the business of the "B. and W." and W. H. Bradley and J. Boyd Dexter are again associated with the Paramount. Two new houses have turned Independent recently—The Star and the Poraker. With the system that Manager Walker works upon, that of good business principles, and a weekly programme which can be absolutely relied upon, theatre managers and their patrons find no cause for complaint.

No word of discord has been heard among the managers here for lack of audiences, and there is always a good house no matter what hour one drops in, and no matter what theatel it may be. One might think that people would hurry home after their day's work, but not so in Washington. As the departments of government close at 4.30, and most of the private offices at 5 o'clock, many of these employees stop in a motion picture play before leaving the business district for their homes. The Arcade has an exceptionally fine patronage. All the Brylawski houses are doing excellent business. Manager LaMott, of the Hippodrome, is always in the best of spirits, because his house is always full. The addition of an instrumental number and a song is a feature at this theatre. The Leader, Plaza, Maryland, Virginia and Crystal are other down-town houses always filled.

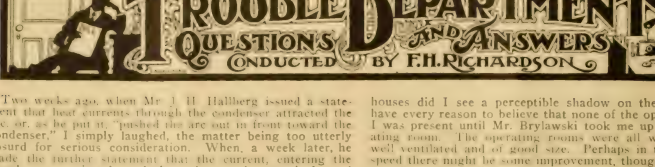
The recent change of proprietorship of the Alhambra from Pearce & Scheck, of Baltimore, to C. A. Cassanova, of this city, has not been noticed by the patrons of that establishment, for the management of William Airey has proceeded along the same course as before. With a daily programme of three reels of the latest films, uninterrupted by songs or vaudeville, but accompanied by good music, Manager Airey secures excellent patronage, which has not been decreased by the springing up of other near-by houses. Mr. Airey is a pioneer in the moving-picture business, having had a show on the road before the 5-cent theatre was thought of. He was the second man to open a 5-cent show in Baltimore and one of the first in Washington. His films are characterized for their mirror-like clearness. He makes a specialty of advertising in advance his programme, which pleases his patrons. W. H.

San Francisco, Cal.—According to latest reports, the business in Frisco is about equally divided between the licensed and the Independent camps. On account of the great boom in theatre building, the Police Commissioners have passed a resolution stopping the granting of any licenses for nickelodeon picture theatres, which means that several now in the course of construction will be unable to open until such time as the Police Commissioners rescind this resolution.

Messrs. Greer & Kane, proprietors of the Golden Gate Film Exchange, are among those negotiating for a license for a first class house to seat about 1,500 people. Among the theatres that have been opened during the past thirty days are the "Garrick," the "Premium" and the "Photoplay," all belonging to Messrs. Turner & Dahnken, and all of them A1 houses.

Palestine, Texas, writes that his theatre is 125 feet long, 25 feet wide and 16 feet high, and runs through from street to street. He says that they operate 8 14 inch fans during the summer, but find that it is not enough to keep the place cool, and he wants some one to suggest a remedy.

Many exhibitors cling to the absurd idea that electric fans are all that is needed for the ventilation of a moving picture theatre. As a matter of fact, they are valueless as all they do is to keep circulating the foul air and the dust. What Palestine needs is an exhaust fan at one end of his building, placed at whichever end the ceiling is highest, so as to draw out the foul air. Then, if the ventilating ducts to admit the pure air is at the opposite side to the one during the day time, he would have an atmosphere inside his theatre as cool and inviting as any shady part of the street. If it is desirous to further cool the air, it may be drawn in pipes which are cooled by ice, or other means. We would recommend Palestine to write to The Kimble Electric Company, 1621 Washington boulevard, Chicago, Ill., who intend to manufacture fan suitable for moving picture theatres. We should judge that a three foot exhaust would be large enough for his place.



Two weeks ago, when Mr. J. H. Hallberg issued a statement that heat currents through the condenser attracted the arc, or, as he put it, pushed the arc out in front toward the condenser," I simply laughed, the matter being too utterly absurd for serious consideration. When, a week later, he made the further statement that the current, entering the lamphouse, passing through the carbons and out again formed a magnet which also, in conjunction with the "heat current" influenced the arc, the matter was not even replied to, it was so silly (that's the only word that fits). But now comes the Index, in an editorial, setting forth the fact that there is an unexplained, unknown force which seems to attract the arc toward the condenser, citing the alleged fact that when the arc is struck with carbons straight up and down and central with each other, the flame shoots upward and forward only. I am willing to seriously consider a proposition of this kind, no matter by whom made, since it makes no absurd, hysterical claims, but merely sets forth a proposition entirely susceptible of proof one way or the other, and free from attempts to advertise some special appliance by making claims for it that are absurd and which insult intelligence.

As to the flame shooting forward, I am neither in position to affirm or deny this, as I have not noted it in experiments of the past. Possibly it does. I have not A. C. available just now to try it out. If it is the fact, I would attribute it to a slight possible static charge in the condenser. I don't really know that a lens would retain such a change, but I do know that heat and friction would produce it. Whether or not heat alone would do it I cannot say, not being an "electrical expert," but this I do know, that even allowing such a force to be present, it is not sufficient to materially influence the position of the crater. This I can say positively, based upon experience.

Several letters have been received from readers of the department saying that their experience is that good light is impossible with carbons set straight up and down and central with each other. Some of these will appear next week. That has been the experience of the Editor also. Had the hot-air expert confined his remarks to common sense, refrained from attempting to advertise his transformer by making ridiculous claims for it, and evinced the slightest knowledge of the action of light, heat and air currents in lamphouses, I would not have poked fun at him. Mr. Hallberg may be a competent electrician, or he may not be; I don't know. I presume, however, that he is. Be that as it may, one of the department correspondents pertinently inquires, in a letter just received: "What does Mr. Hallberg know about projection? When and where did he ever run a projection machine? Let him set forth his experience in actual projection practice and we will then listen to him with more respect when it comes to projection matters or matters dealing with practical projection."

And now, will some of our readers who are using A. C. and who are able to set the lamp perpendicular, kindly (with carbons set exactly central with each other) experiment and report what they find?

A Caller.—Mr. John Cooper, of the Sterling Economizer Company, Warren, O., manufacturers of electric economizers (transformers) for moving picture machines, called on the Trouble Department editor last week. Mr. Cooper was about to sail for Europe in the interest of his company, and on his return he has agreed to place a Sterling Economizer in any theater in this city which we may select, in order that we may observe its action and pass judgment upon its efficiency and general performance.

Washington.—On Saturday, January 28th, and Sunday the 29th, the editor was in Washington. Saturday night he ran the Paul J. Rainey Arctic Circle films at the Metropolitan Club and Sunday night at the Players' Club. Between times he visited a few of the Washington theaters and spoke to a gathering of operators and managers in the Circle Theater or Pennsylvania Avenue. Altogether four houses were visited while the show was on, namely, the Colonial, Cosmos, Pickwick and Lafayette. The first three named are under the general management of Mr. Julian Brylawski. The projection in these three houses was excellent. The screen was evenly illuminated, and at no time during my stay in these houses did I see a perceptible shadow on the curtains. I have every reason to believe that none of the operators knew I was present until Mr. Brylawski took me up to the operating room. The operating rooms were all well equipped, well ventilated and of good size. Perhaps in the matter of speed there might be some improvement, though I could not stay long enough in any one house to be able to say positively that this is true. At any rate, the projection was far and away ahead of that usually seen in New York City. Mr. Brylawski is himself very well posted on projection machinery, and, while I could not coincide with some of his views, ideas and opinions, still I believe he is in position to intelligently criticise the projection in his houses, a thing the great majority of managers are not capable of doing. The auditorium lighting in these theaters, particularly the Cosmos, was a matter of surprise. The ceiling lights and side lights were white incandescent globes, entirely covered with a tolerably light green glass shade. This gave sufficient light for one to read ordinary newspaper print and the effect was pleasing, yet it did not seem to materially affect the brilliancy of the picture. Mr. Brylawski has his operating rooms equipped, as has also Mr. Herbst, of the Circle Theater, with the best re-winding device I have seen to date. The re-winder, stands and reels are encased in a narrow metal box and the re-winder is run by a motor also encased in a box. The switch is handily placed within the operator's reach and the thing is semi-automatic in operation. Mr. Brylawski has promised us a photograph of the device, which I trust he will send along at his very earliest convenience. On Sunday afternoon I visited the Lafayette Theater. On the front hung a bunch of circulars setting forth eleven different points of excellence wherein the Lafayette Theater excelled, or was supposed to excell. The sixth reason related that, "Our pictures are changed daily and properly run. 7th.—"Our pictures are noted for their clearness and absence of flicker." 9th.—"We take great care that our music fits the pictures and is well rendered." 10th. —"There are always polite attendants to look after your comfort and maintain perfect order." This was, of course, most encouraging, and, purchasing a ticket I entered, but looked in vain for the polite attendants. They were conspicuous by their absence. I sat through one entire show and there was hardly a time during the hour that the screen was entirely free from shadows. At times they were very, very bad, also the light was quite yellow. As to the music, it did not fit the picture particularly at any stage of the game, so far as I could see. Taking it altogether the Lafayette projection is decidedly in need of improvement.

At noon, Sunday, the writer spoke to a gathering of operators and managers in the Circle Theater, after which Mr. Frank Egan, operator of the Circle Theater, and president of the Washington Operators' Union, ran a film. Of course, this was no test of Friend Egan's work. That is to say, it was no test of his regular every-day performance. He certainly did, however, demonstrate the fact that he knows how to project a picture, for his work was perfect. The light was brilliant, white and very well handled indeed. There was nothing to criticise in the matter of speed. If Neighbor Egan projects that kind of a picture all the time, and I have no reason to suppose he does not, the Circle ought to do a land office business. Mr. Herbst, owner of the Circle, is another wide-awake, up-to-date moving picture man who is a credit to the business. I wish we had more like him. The Circle is a neat, tastily decorated house with a sloping cement floor. Its appointments are strictly up-to-date. The Motiograph machine is used, and, as before intimated, a mirror screen occupies the place of honor in front of the audience.

Small Town Location.—Messrs. Gwinn Bros. & Co., Harrington, Wash., write that they are conducting a family theater in a town of 1,000 population. They say it is a family theater in more than one sense. It caters to a family trade and is run entirely by members of the family. The letter continues: "We read carefully the Trouble Department and benefit materially by its advice. Though we take advantage of many of its suggestions, we are too new to offer any. In a small town of this kind our patrons are our neighbors. They demand clean, moral and as nearly pure pictures as can be had. Yet we firmly believe there is little or no real demand for anything else. We believe that cheap vaudeville is destined to continue to furnish entertainment to those who demand short skirts and questionable phrases. We began business with licensed service, but have been using Independent for three months. 'Nuff said! In ordering our Association exchange service discontinued, we said to their manager: 'We know that the Association puts out good service, but our experience leads us to believe that the country exhibitor does not get it, and it is what WE get that most concerns US.'"

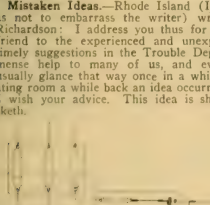
I have printed a portion of this letter because it comes from a man operating, and operating successfully, in a town of 1,000. Also, because the remarks he makes are of interest. No comment, however, is necessary more than to say that it is a fact that in our large cities there is, in certain sections, an apparent preference for the impure picture, though I believe that were such pictures unavailable the box office receipts would not be at all affected.

Richardson Theater.—New York City writes as follows: "On behalf of my employes, as well as myself, I beg to ask your advice through the Trouble Department. During the coming summer we have in view the installation of an open air show, which we hope to make up-to-date in every particular. We, provided you respond, intend to follow your suggestions to the letter. When finished it will be a 'Richardson' theater; that is to say, a theater after your own ideas. We trust you will favor us through the 'World,' and whether you do or not, our sincere good wishes are yours. Kindly suppress name and location of theater. Enclosed find money order for your Handbook."

While the editor feels flattered at the confidence shown, he must decline to accept the responsibility of offering advice under these circumstances for the following reasons: He has very definite ideas of how these things should be done and what he would do were the theater his own. Now, should he advise and the advice be followed and the theater, for any reason, prove a failure, it would be human nature for the man who owned it to say: "Well, if I had done it my way things would have been different." In other words, I would get the blame without any benefit whatever, except the knowledge that I had tried to help some one. Then, too, in order to offer intelligent advice I would have too look over the ground and the neighborhood and know all about the thing from start to finish. If the writer will call on me personally at my home any evening, except Tuesday or Friday evenings, sending a card, in advance, I will be glad to talk the matter over with him and offer such advice as I may, after a thorough understanding of the situation; but I would only do even this with the distinct understanding that the recipient of the advice proceed entirely upon his own responsibility.

Mistaken Ideas.—Rhode Island (I suppress name of city so as not to embarrass the writer) writes as follows: "Friend Richardson: I address you thus for the reason that you are a friend to the experienced and unexperienced operator. Your timely suggestions in the Trouble Department have been of immense help to many of us, and even experienced operators usually glance that way once in a while. While wiring an operating room a while back an idea occurred to me concerning which I wish your advice. This idea is shown in the accompanying sketh.



Now, what I wish to know is, with this sort of a connection what would be the general result and the amperage of each lamp?"

The sketch shows, Rhode Island, that your ideas concerning matters of this sort are somewhat twisted. The connection shown would not work at all, so far as the lamps are concerned. That is to say, you could light one lamp all right, but when you undertook to light the other the arc that was first struck would go out. This by reason of the fact that the lamp having the shortest arc, consequently the least arc resistance, would take practically all the current. As to the rheostat shown by dotted lines, why, my dear boy, it simply amounts to connecting two rheostats in series across 220 volts when neither arc is burning, without any arc in series. When one of the arcs is struck you then have both rheostats working in series on 220 volts, while one of them is also working on 110 in series with the arc. The one rheostat would be carrying double load and would get very hot. The whole connection is impossible.

Handbook Complimented.—Mr. Milt C. Hagan, Utica, N. Y., writes: "The Handbook arrived sometime ago. I do not think there is an operator in the business who could not pick out somethings in the book which would benefit him more than ten times the amount of its cost. I certainly wish you all the success in the world and hope in the near future to see another and even more complete edition of the Handbook."

We are, of course, glad you like the book, Neighbor Hagan, and can assure you that "there are others." Many of the letters received are enthusiastic and though more than 2,000 copies have been sold, there has not been a single criticism offered by a purchaser up to date.

Machine Trouble.—Temple, Tex., has a new Powers, No. 6. If I published his letter in full I should probably be accused of partiality and favoring the Powers Company. He is, however, having trouble with the film jumping and says that the intermittent sprocket seems to have a tendency to grip the film and carry it on past the apron. Says that the jumping and gripping occurs with all makes of film.

I do not know, Temple, just what the trouble is, but it seems plain that the intermittent sprocket is at fault. It is possible that in milling the sprocket some rough edges were left on the teeth; that is to say, kind of a wire edge. Take a condensing lens and look carefully at the back side of the sprocket teeth. If you find any of them with a kind of a rough metal edge at one corner, take a very fine file—very fine, mind you—or a piece of very fine emery cloth bent over the edge of the file and carefully smooth this roughness away. It is quite possible this is all there is wrong. If you do not find this condition present, then I cannot imagine why the film should grip the sprocket teeth, except that some blunder has been made in the milling of the teeth and they have been left too large. If the jumping is rhythmical, that is to say, occurs four times every turn of the crank, it would indicate that either the intermittent sprocket is out of line or the shaft is sprung; in all probability the former. Please advise me immediately as to what you are able to discover, and I will take the matter up with the Powers Company for you.

Outside Shutter Is the Real Thing.—Mr. C. Henningsen, Stillwater, Minn., contributes the following: "I have changed my Edison 5-inch inside shutter to a 9-inch outside shutter at a cost of $4 for materials used. I removed the old shutter and put in its place a 14½ inch cog wheel, fastened with a set screw. Next I fitted to the iron frame of the machine a 16 by 6 inch iron rod. I used two small brackets and the plate screws on the machine.

I then made a brass hub with a ⅜ inch hole, and put a set screw in the middle; to this I soldered a ⅜ 16 inch reinforced brass tubing 6 inches long, opposite to the set screw.

Then I made an arbor of 3/16 inch steel 7 inches long, put a wheel on the end, the same size as the first mentioned wheel. I put the arbor in brass tubing. Then I cut the slot in the wood frame, placed the brass hub on the iron rod so that the two wheels fitted in the gear and run smoothly, put on the 9 inch shutter, oiled the bearings and the job was done. It has been on since October last and works fine.

I may say that I was assisted by Mr. C. M. Hardware, operator at the "Gem," who has tried the machine and found it flickerless.

If the above statement is not plain enough to interested parties, I will be glad to give further information.

Many thanks, Neighbor Henningsen, for the excellent description of your method of installing the outside shutter on the Edison. Inasmuch as you speak of cutting a slot in the wood frame I take it that it was an Edison Model machine. You do not say whether it was a two-wing or three-wing shutter, but I take it these are three wings. Could you not send us a sketch of the two illustrating your method of attaching shutter, some dimensions or shutter blades? A full size outline sketch of shutter would be the best.

Information Wanted.—Beverly, Mass., writes: "I notice the mirror arrangement for watching carbon arc in a late issue and would like to say that the carbons may be seen on the shutter (outside shutter I mean), when the open strikes

NESTO

"Rarely Equalled—Neve

Generous and Judicious Use of Money,—Hard and Form The Solid Basis of Nestor's Excelle

Release of Wed

IF IT'S A
NESTOR
IT'S GOOD!

"THE LIGH

1000 F

For Bulletins
14

Scene fr

"The Light Beyond"

Lights up the pathway to success for the Exchangeman, Exhibitor and Nestor. The story deals with the eternal triangle, in which Fate plays an important part. A devilish pretty maiden is devotedly and unselfishly loved by two good men, one of whom locks up his burning secret within his throbbing bosom that the girl might be happy. She is, and so is the other fellow, who becomes her husband. For a time things go smooth; then Fate takes a hand, and a myriad of stirring and pathetic incidents follow one another thick and fast. A chain of heart-appealing circumstances, sweetly marshalled by a cute baby girl, leads to a second marriage—this time the silent lover comes into his own, and all concerned are happy.

A GENTLE TIP!

ORDER, GET AND SHOW

"THE LIGHT BEYOND"

It will make you and your audience happy.

"In The COMING Wednesd

"His Father's House" For Release Wednesday, Feb. 22nd, 1911 A Deep, Ringing Note of Pathos

DAVID HORSLEY, German Savings

FILMS

"passed—Often Imitated"

NESTOR FILMS — MADE BY DAVID HORSLEY

Work,—Honest and Unremitting Efforts—All These n Which Grows In Magnitude Every Week
uary 15th, 1911

BEYOND"

Pathos

SORLIST 1011"
, N. Y.

Beyond"

IT PAYS TO GET
Nestor Films!

"In The Commissioned Ranks"

the wondrous military picture to be released

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 8th, 1911

was recently shown before the Board of Censors and a goodly sprinkling of Critics, Ministers, and Press Representatives. It received unanimous and spontaneous approval. At the Sales Company Ball, February 3rd, it was again shown, this time before a large and select gathering of moving picture people. A number of distinctly high class pictures, the best productions of leading makes, were also shown, but "In The Commissioned Ranks" easily won the honors of the evening.

POSITIVELY

no cold copies of this picture will be obtainable—Avoid disappointment and ORDER NOW!

ORDER NOW! ORDER NOW! ORDER NOW!

arch 8th, 1911
COMING!
ed Ranks"

For Release
Wednesday, March 1st, 1911
A Delicious Comedy-Drama
"THE Professor's Romance"

Building, 4th Avenue and 14th Street, New York

the blade. I would like your help in the following: Suppose I am sent out to run a show in a certain business block where there is a bowling alley in the basement, stores on the first floor, offices on the second, and I was to show on the third, all four floors using the same system. What would I be obliged to do to be sure I would not put everybody else's lights out? What other way is there besides looking at the main fuses to ascertain the maximum quantity (amperes) used in a building of that description? How can one tell alternating from direct current without lighting the arc lamp?"

You would have to know that the wires running to the third floor were large enough to carry your current, plus all the other current they would be loaded with. The only way to tell the amount of current being consumed in the building is to either hook in an ammeter or else count the number of incandescent lights and estimate the current consumed in the motors, heating apparatus, arc lamps, etc., if any there be. It would be well to install fuses as much larger than those you find in place as the current you are going to use in your lamp. That is to say, if the fuses already in are 100 ampere, and you propose using 30, then you should install 130 ampere fuses. If the wires running up to the third floor are not large enough you can run temporary wires of your own, using No. 6 rubber covered for the purpose, unless you will use more than a 30 ampere arc, in which case No. 5 you can tell alternating from direct in several ways. The quickest and easiest, however, is to moisten your thumb and finger and touch the opposite poles of the live switch; if the current is alternating you can feel the alternation in a series of quick little jerks. You can also tell that it is alternating if there is a transformer out on the pole though the absence of the transformer does not prove that the current is not alternating; also if there be a meter it will be marked A. C. or D. C. My way is to take a slight shock and "feel" your alterations. If you run temporary wires, have a city inspectator examine and approve of the work when it is done.

That Alien Law Again.—New York City writes: "As everybody in trouble seems to go to you for consolation and help, I will join the procession. I operated in New York City for four years, three of which were put in in one house. Of late, I have been working in Jersey City, but a week ago the house went out of business. As I am not a citizen I cannot go back to New York, since my license soon expires. I would like to get a job somewhere in New Jersey; can furnish A No. 1 references from every house I ever worked in and will undertake to give satisfaction, if given the opportunity."

I have quoted this letter for the reason that this gentleman is deprived of earning his daily bread within the bounds of the State of New York through the effect of alleged law. I say "alleged" law, because I do not think it is law at all in any true sense of the word, law being supposed to be synonymous with justice. I firmly believe that any man who behaves himself like a gentleman has a right to earn his bread by the sweat of his brow in any old corner of this earth that he wants to, and it is nobody's confounded business whether he happens to have been born in that particular corner of the earth or not, or whether he has the right to vote there or not. In the humble opinion of the editor of this Department, that particular "law" is an outrage on decency, common sense and justice. If there is any theater manager or owner (outside New York) who may wish to give this gentleman a trial, will write him in care of the Trouble Department, I will promptly forward the same.

Certain Things Denied.—Mr. F. W. Marquard, Secretary I. A. T. S. E., No. 181, Baltimore, Md., writes in part as follows: "We wish to say that some of the statements contained in the letter the party wrote you, which was published in the Department, were false. As regards the statement that one man went up and found out what the examination questions were and then told others, that is false, since the questions are verbal and different to each applicant examined. Another statement that the law was passed for the benefit of operators is also wrong, as it was passed to protect the public in general, as too many children were getting into the business."

The letter complained of was published on page 1467 of December 24, 1910, issue, and I am glad to know that the statements therein contained were not true. It is a matter of surprise that the writer made them, he claiming to be a member of the Baltimore Union. Neighbor Marquard asks for the writer's name. This I cannot give without violating all ethics of journalism, except the writer consent. An editor, in publishing a letter of that kind accepts the responsibility himself, and I guess Friend Marquard, it is up to me. I will, however, agree to this: That no more letters from Baltimore that can in any possible way affect the Union there will be published without first being submitted to the Baltimore Union for their approval. You will have to forgive me for the publication of the former letter, since to all appearances the thing was correct. I scanned the letter very closely and it was written so circumstantially that I believed its statements. However, it has caused me to decide that letters of that kind will in future be first referred to the operators' union of the city whence it comes, where there is one, before publication.

Light Plant.—Washington writes: "In the last issue of the World I find several partial answers to my letter of inquiry, which leads me to think I might not have been explicit in my queries. All of the plants described in the World are fixed plants, or those to be used on a short circuit, and none of them would fill the bill for my work. What I thought might be possible is this: That with a 2 or 2½ K.w., D.C. dynamo, about 60 volt, by using ¾ carbons I could throw a 7 by 9 picture 30 feet and have enough current left for five or six incandescent lights."

Well, Washington, I do not know that I can add anything to what has already been said. A 3 K.w. 60 volt dynamo would be plenty large enough to furnish current for a good projection arc. Also, I presume you could burn a few incandescent lights, since 30 amperes at 60 volts is only 1,800 watts. The engine must, of course, have an efficient governor to maintain steady speed, and the question comes up of the shocks to both the engine and dynamo when you close your carbons and throw in a load of say 30 amperes instantly, and when you cut it out again. However, with that small a picture you could get good light with considerably less than 30 amperes—probably with 20. I would suggest that you submit this problem to some manufacturer of dynamos, like the General Electric Company, for instance. The Toledo outfit advertised in these pages has high indorsement by some of its users.

New York City.—Mr. R. Schultz writes: "To the few signs of appreciation you get from the crank turners, let me add my share, with the hope that some day the know-it-alls who are 'ten years in the business,' went to school with Edison and look at the stars who pose in the Trouble Department, will recognize what you are doing for the business. However, to get back to the bread and butter era, what has been done about that alien operator law? My card is up in May—what then? Can you enlighten me? Another thing: You have doubtless heard of the motor drive the Powers Company is putting on the market. The writer is the one who got them busy—woke them up to the fact that many sales were lost through lack of a motor drive. Exhibitors cannot get men to turn a crank ten hours a day at any price. I understand now that the motor drive is up before the Department for approval, and it gets my goat to think that after working patiently four months twisting a crank for ten hours every day, now that a motor is just in sight I am called away to Europe on business. As the saying is, 'Can you beat it?' I am booked to sail February 4th, to be gone six weeks, and if there is anything I can do or find out for you on the other side of the pond just say the word and I will be there with the goods."

Your kind words, Neighbor Schultz, are appreciated. It is a fact that many of those who turn their noses up at the mention of the Trouble Department are at the same time slyly digging everything they can out of it. This I happen to know in many instances to be a fact. They are more than welcome to any information they can get from the Department, whether they give this paper credit for it or not. As to the alien operators' law, I am afraid, old man, you are up against it. It is said to be law, and also law is said to be justice. Is there any justice in depriving a human being of the opportunity to earn his daily bread in his chosen profession? It would seem that America is tremendously afraid that the "foreigner" will become a public charge upon the community, and many are deported on this account. Then we turn around and enact a law which says to the foreign operator: "You cannot work!" I will heartily agree that the foreigner who comes to America with intent to make it his home should of right become naturalized. I will, however, agree that the fact of his non-naturalization should have no effect whatsoever on his right to work at any calling, trade or profession which he may choose. More than this, I will assert that a law of that kind is nothing short of an outrage, enacted by those who misrepresent the people. I shall be glad indeed to have any items of interest concerning projection procedure across the water.

Other Corkscrews.—Mr. J. B. Quesinberry, Vale, Ore., writes: "Enclosed find check for Handbook. The World is a welcome visitor with me and the Trouble Department gets my first attention, as I am not one of the operators who know it all, though I have been complimented by visiting film

"THE SIGN OF THE FLYING A"

AMERICAN RELEASES

TWO REELS EACH WEEK

Monday and Thursday

Release Monday, February 13th

"A Quiet Evening at Home"

A full reel Comedy of exceptional merit. Not a dull foot in the reel. Very funny.

Length, approximately, 985 feet

Release Thursday, February 16th

"In the Land of Cactus"

A Western Drama. Realistic and abounding in thrilling situations. Length, approximately, 980 feet

Release Monday, February 20th

"The College Spendthrift"

A Dramatic exposition of youthful folly and its inevitable harvest of regret. A film your audience will like.

Length, approximately, 990 feet

Release Thursday, February 23d

"Strategy"

A film that tells a tragic story, leading to a thrilling climax and ending in a situation that is truly laughable and funny.

Length, approximately, 980 feet

ALL Independent Exchanges Buy AMERICAN FILMS

AMERICAN FILM MANUFACTURING CO.

Bank Floor, Ashland Block, Chicago, Ill.

YOU WHO PAY
WANT TO KNOW THE TRUTH

INVESTIGATE THE MOTIOGRAPH and you will find THE TRUTH salient and alive—in every feature

SIMPLE ARTISTIC RIGID DURABLE

THE MOTIOGRAPH is a distinctive triumph in mechanical skill and workmanship, and in showing this superb projection machine the makers have kept well in advance of the times, more than anticipating the requirements of the photoplay house

THE MOTIOGRAPH CANNOT BE APPROACHED BY ANY OTHER MACHINE

1911 MODEL now ready. Send for name of nearest dealer. Motiograph and you [illegible]

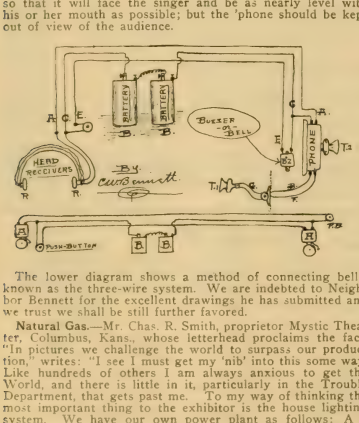
ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MFG. CO., 564-572 West Randolph Street, Chicago, Ill.

AGENTS IN ALL PRINCIPAL CITIES

men several times on my light. We ran Association pictures here for a year, but are now running Independent. The Association stuff is superior in quality, to my way of thinking, but I could not stand for their game. The General Film Company seem to think they have the picture business bottled up and that they have the only corkscrew that will open the bottle."

You have come very near stating the thing in a nutshell, Neighbor Quesinberry, but there never yet has been in all the history of the world an individual corporation or trust which succeeded for any length of time in bottling up anything, though it must admitted that the Standard Oil Company came pretty close to it. The Motion Picture Patents Company and the General Film Company are pursuing a policy that probably seems good to them. The editor of this Department is not a prophet, nor the son of a prophet, but he makes the prediction nevertheless that in the long run that policy will prove a failure. The Patents Company has done a great deal of good in certain directions, not, perhaps, directly through its own efforts, but the moral effect of the formation of the company was to correct some very flagrant, glaring abuses previously existent. The Patents Company also has done a great deal of harm in other directions and, if allowed to have its way, would, in my judgment, eventually ruin the business.

Another Idea from Bennett.—Our good friend, C. W. Bennett, Crystal Falls, Mich., sends in a third sketch illustrating how a telephone may be used to enable the operator to hear the singer. This idea should be of considerable use to operators where alternating current of high amperage is used, since it would enable them to hear the singer and run slides correctly. The top diagram illustrates this idea, RR being the receiver in the operating room similar, to those used in the central office of the telephone companies. The box marked "Phone" can be any ordinary telephone, so long as it is in good condition. BZ is a buzzer used to call the singer before time to expose the title side of song. Transmitter "T-1" can be installed near singer, and the 'phone itself be located in a convenient place out of sight of the audience. In using this contrivance a few minutes before the time for the illustrated song, the operator should press the buzzer button, thus calling the singer, notifying her that the song is about to go on. The same buzzer will also give the piano player notice that the illustrated song title is about to be thrown on the curtain. The operator now places the head receiver RR in place, to which enough flexible wire is attached to allow him to move about at will. The head piece is, of course, removed and hung up as soon as the song is over. The transmitter, or 'phone box, can be placed so that it will face the singer and be as nearly level with his or her mouth as possible; but the 'phone should be kept out of view of the audience.



The lower diagram shows a method of connecting bells, known as the three-wire system. We are indebted to Neighbor Bennett for the excellent drawings he has submitted and we trust we shall be still further favored.

Natural Gas.—Mr. Chas. R. Smith, proprietor Mystic Theater, Columbus, Kans., whose letterhead proclaims the fact, "In pictures we challenge the world to surpass our production," writes: "I see I must get my 'nib' into this some way. Like hundreds of others I am always anxious to get the World, and there is little in it, particularly in the Trouble Department, that gets past me. To my way of thinking the most important thing to the exhibitor is the house lighting system. We have our own power plant as follows: A 6 k.w. Westinghouse generator running 1,675 per minute, 125 volts. We run this generator with a 10 h.p. gas engine (we are blessed with natural gas). We use 110 volt lamps and reduce the speed of the generator to produce that voltage. Twenty-five cents (25c) per 1,000 cubic feet is the price for gas and the heaviest bill we have had for an entire month's run was two dollars and seventy-five cents ($2.75). We use for the most part 4 or 8 c.p. globes, but the number is such as to furnish illumination equal to about 76 16 c.p. lamps. Our throw is 65 feet and our picture 12 by 18; 25 amperes is used in projection. You will discover our letterhead says, 'We challenge the world for quality in pictures.' That goes, for we mean just what we say. We use a patent screen that looks a purplish blue in daylight, but when the light is on the very whitest card cannot be seen when held against the screen. Some 'tourist' put it up for us and we do not know what the preparation is. We have received many letters asking how we do this or that. The correspondent invariably states, 'A friend of mine saw your show and told me of it.' We were born, as the saying is, 'natural machinists,' and in 1903 made our one-pin movement for the Edison machine by removing one of the pins from the cam wheel and putting the mainspring of a watch around the cam, filling the wheel with clay and casting in a Babbitt lug to fill in the opening of the cam on that side. It was then necessary to change the wing of the shutter, which we did by taking ordinary mica, putting gold leaf between and glueing the edges down, making a flicker blade out of tin from a sardine box. This is, of course, ancient history, but I hope before long to show you a machine without cam or star, but using a much improved sprocket. In this machine the film will be moved in about half the time required by the present machines and with less than half the strain, thus giving more time for exposure, consequently utilizing a greater percentage of light."

I hesitated about publishing that natural gas story, Friend Smith, but am afraid when you subscribers who are paying $50 and upwards a month for light, cast their optics over it they will experience a severe case of heart failure. Let us trust the new machine you speak of will materialize, though frankly, I am skeptical about those things for the reason that it seems as though about everything under the sun in the shape of an intermittent movement has been tried and retried. Still there is always the possibility that you will evolve something new and valuable. Let us hope this will prove to be the fact.

A Few Questions.—New York City, N. Y., writes: "Kindly solve the following puzzles: 1. What are the standard sizes of aperture plates of the Powers Nos. 5 and 6, Edison, Standard, and Motiograph? 2. Can you figure lenses according to millimeter? 3. What do you mean by ¼ or ½ size lenses—is it the E. F. or diameter of lens? 4. Does the lens focus differ at different throws, or is it only sharp at one point? That is, if I use the lens at 50 feet throw and then want to use it at 80 feet. I know it will project a larger picture, but does the focus fail?"

1. The standard aperture plate is supposed to be 15/16 inch in width, while 11/16 of an inch high, but they vary slightly from this. All aperture plates are supposed to be the same width, namely 11/16 inch. To get closer to it than this you will have to use a pair of calipers. 2. I don't bother with m.m. lens markings. It is so much more convenient to measure them and figure on the E. F. 3. The ¼ and ½ size refers to the diameter of the lens. The ordinary moving picture lens is a ¼ size lens, while the ordinary stereopticon lens is ½ size, though ¼ size lenses are also used for stereo. I forget the exact diameter of the two lenses and have not the data at hand, but if my recollection serves me right, the ½ size lens is 2¼ inches in diameter. 4. A projection lens focuses at any distance. You can project a clear, sharp picture within an inch of the lens, but the closer the curtain is brought to the lens, the farther away the lens must be removed from the aperture, and when you would get the lens right up against the curtain the lens would have to be quite a long distance from the film. In other words, if you are projecting a picture at 50 feet and you change your curtain 20 feet farther away, you could still focus the picture, but the lens would be a little further in the jacket than it was before.

Licensed Exchanges.—Delhi, N. Y., asks the name of New York exchanges handling licensed film. I have requested the Motion Picture Patents Company to supply Delhi with a full list of New York licensed exchanges.

A Dissolver.—Cincinnati, O., contributes the following: "Though I have been a reader of the Moving Picture World for a long time, I have just mustered courage to write a line. The Trouble Department is immense and deserves all the praise possible, for in it is more sound sense and knowledge than any other publication now printed. I like your straight-from-the-shoulder talk which one doesn't have to have a Webster to understand. Enclosed you will find a rough sketch of a dissolver which I made and am using. It certainly does fade one picture into the other nicely. If this idea does not reach the scrap basket I will send you something else."

The idea has not reached the scrap basket, Cincinnati, but though I studied your sketch for nearly an hour I could not quite make out what you meant. Moreover, there are so many, many types of dissolvers, any one of which will produce excellent results, that publication of dissolver sketches would, I believe, hardly be profitable. Any device which gradually shuts off the light of one lens, while at the same time turning on the light of the other, will do the trick, and one does it nearly as well as another, provided, of course, they are properly proportioned and properly handled. So far as I know, the first form of dissolver for electric work was merely a straight board pointed at one end and notched like the tail end of an arrow at the other, with a lever to raise and lower it in front of the lenses. It gave excellent results; in fact, almost as perfect dissolving as anything I have ever seen. Don't let this discourage you, Cincinnati. Send in anything you may think will prove of interest and value.

Ghost.—Shawnee, Okla., comes in with the folowing: "We have 110 volt 60 cycle A.C. current, Powers No. 6 lamp, Hallberg economizer and we get bad light. I have tried all sets of carbons and condensers of various focal length. Our throw is 65 feet. The trouble is I get a double spot, one being about ⅛ above the other, the spot on the outside shutter showing the tips of the carbons, and the final outcome of all of this is a straight streak horizontally across the screen at about its center. Can you tell me what to do to eliminate this difficulty? There is no Union out here and wages are exceedingly low. The screens show the result. What do you think of a manager who wants you to put an extension on the lamp house to keep from breaking condensers? Or another who wanted me to tighten the hot carbon clamps with my fingers to prevent accidentally twisting off the screws? I have your Handbook. Have written the Viascope people for a catalogue of their machines, but they have ignored my letter. Where could I get a catalogue of machines using the beater dog and claw movement; also a frictional gripper?"

As regards your light, frankly, I do not know what the trouble is, but I am inclined to think you are using too low an amperage; possibly your economizer is working on a lower voltage than it is wound for. You must understand that to get a good light with alternating you have got to use heavy amperage, almost invariably where the amperage is weak a double spot will appear on the gate. I can say no more to you about setting the carbons than you will find in the Handbook. My advice to you is to try boosting up the amperage and see what effect that has. Managers of the type you name are merely a joke, and a very bad joke at that. The one who wanted an extension put on the back of the lamp house would doubtless have been hugely and deeply insulted had anyone undertaken the contract of telling him what cause ignorance he was displaying—ignorance of projection, I mean. He had the idea that he could move back the lamp and save condenser breakage, and he was perfectly right in that idea. Where he fell down was lack of knowledge as to what other difficulties he would encounter in putting such a scheme in practice, namely, the enormous waste of light, for one. The Gaumont Company, of Paris, France, makes the only beater type machine sold in this country, and the Selig Company, Chicago, makes a finger feed or dog and claw movement machine. Why the Viascope did not send you a catalogue I cannot say. The only "gripper" movement I know of is a machine made in Germany. I have not the address of the maker and I believe it is no longer in use. Only a few were sold. The Viascope Co. made such a machine, but, so far as I know, it was never marketed.

One of the Early Projectors.—Herewith appears a photograph of the first No. 1 Powers machine. Before this machine was placed on the market, Mr. Powers had made and sold a few machines called the Peerlesscope. The photograph, however, shows the first wholly "Powers" machine put out. The automatic fire shutter was a later addition which was not added until the machine had been on the market for some time. A study of this little mechanism will show how little real change there has been in projectors, except in appearance and mechanical excellence. It is worthy of note that this machine gave a very excellent picture and that with modern film the performance is almost equal to that of the latest type of two-wing shutter mechanism.

THE DAYLIGHT SCREEN.

This week our representative made a journey to Fourteenth Street and investigated the new daylight screen manufactured by Koch & Stackhouse, Stroudsburg, Pa., and can testify in all truth and sincerity that it certainly is a daylight screen. In other words, moving pictures were being shown upon it in an office that was as light by day-light as any office in Manhattan. The picture was a very brilliant reflection, and this screen is bound to make its mark in the market. We felt of it and we smelt of it, and we tasted it, and put it to every test that a screen could be put to, and we found out that it was something more than the mere idea of applying aluminum to a curtain. There seems to be a principle about this screen which has been in existence long as the world has been. It seems to be that of increasing the surface by a conical method. That is to say, as though there were millions of microscopic chocolate creams spread over a surface. The light striking each chocolate cream would spread over more surface than it would upon a round spot as big as the bottom of said chocolate cream. Another analogous illustration is the old familiar "Sapolio" sign that is made of slats and reads three ways. As you approach it, it reads one thing as you pass it, looking straight at it, it reads another, and when you get by it, and look back, there are still other words to be seen.

Looking at the picture on the daylight screen from the side it is scarcely possible to distinguish what is going on in the picture, yet when one holds a piece of cardboard on the sheet, as seen at this side angle, the action is plainly visible on the cardboard, but lost on the daylight screen.

When viewed from the front the picture is as bright as moonlight on the daylight screen, and the same piece of cardboard from the front appears like a piece of dirty window glass before the curtain. That is the test. There is a difference of 100 per cent. between the Daylight Screen and a piece of white cardboard held before it, in favor of the former.

(Continued from page 383.)

You are certainly up against it, Hazel. You are right in the contention that the scene was spoiled. It seems that your manager wants his pictures worked up, but don't know what "working up" a picture means. It seems as if he ought to provide some one beside the piano player to make the musical effects if he wants them made. I don't see where I can be of any service. I'm sorry for you, Hazel, but it is no fault of

SUGGESTIONS FOR PICTURE MUSIC

THE SLAVES REVOLT (Parlo)

Iris (Greek intermezzo) till change of scene then Heroic (a marsh) till the sets down
Light hurry (agitato) till change
Andante (plaintive) till change
The Dervishes (fantastical dance) by Brodo
Agitato till change of scene till title
"Elissa and Cupid Triumph Over the Cruelties of Love" by Purcell and movement by Lampe "Victim of Sorrow" till Elissa sees Cupid behind her chair
Agitato p. and f. till end of combat. For last scene some loud triumphant modern polonaise or brisk 3/4 march.

LICENSED.

"Bumptious as Romeo" (Edison).—The rotund figure of Bumptious is scarcely the replica of the slight form with which Romeo is usually associated, but nevertheless Bumptious essays the difficult role of the love-sick swain. His coaching is funny, his own acting is funny and there is generally a yell of delight when in the balcony scene the entire castle falls upon the hero. The march of the audience from the theater is funnier yet. The entire film is a good travesty upon Romeo and Juliet.

"The Sheriff's Sister" (Kalem).—A melodrama of the most arrant type, but containing some features which hold the interest. There is nothing new in the deception of a girl by a Mexican, nor is there much new in the way it is worked out. She discovers his duplicity before it is too late by the revelation of one of the witnesses that the man is her husband. This little denouement is cleverly managed, and the reconciliation with the brother is fervent enough to be real. The audience seemed to like it, and it surely has sufficient action to hold the interest from beginning to end.

"Hearts, Hunger and Happiness" (Pathe).—A rather lively comedy, presenting the adventures of a love-lorn youth for whom fasting is prescribed as a cure. The young man's indication of mental distress at the banquet is quite as funny as one might wish. The rest of the picture is scarcely above commonplace.

"Disinherited" (Urban).—Not a particularly strong plot, yet it tells the story of a domestic trouble graphically enough and the part played by the child in inducing the grandfather to accept his mother again is touching. In fact, the best acting, and the most interesting part of the picture is that of the acting of the child. The others do not rise above the usual thing.

"Three Sisters" (Biograph).—One of the company's famous sermons in pictures. Not always is it possible to induce a girl to leave a lover and take up with another, particularly a minister, but in this instance it was successfully done by a clever sister. The film teaches that immorality of various sorts is rife everywhere, especially lying in wait for girls. It has no claim to interest.

"Age vs. Youth" (Lubin).—Not an impossible reversal in fortune, but rather improbable. Maybe, however, the possibility creates an interest that makes the picture worth while. The principal interest will center in the love story and the fact that the young people finally succeed in obtaining their desire.

"Only a Sister" (Melies).—Some sort of symposium of the kindliness of sisters with reference to their erring brothers seems to have been produced of late. It is always interesting to see a scapegrace reform after ruining his father and breaking the hearts of his mother and sisters. Fortunes may be regained and broken hearts will heal under proper care, while hitherto unconscionable scamps can ultimately become men. If the kindly offices of a sister are interesting and are done in a sufficiently picturesque section of the country the resulting picture has some claims to attention. All these features are present in this one, hence it is moderately pleasing.

"Curse of the Red Man" (Selig).—Sermons seem to be plentiful of late. This pictured story of the results to an Indian from his undue indulgence in whiskey may be included in the category. Probably the tribe would refuse to accept him as one of them after he was educated, though this is not the first time that this phase of the return of an Indian to his own after attending school has been emphasized. The chase through the desert, and the death scene are realistic. There is plenty of action and the audience seemed attracted by the picture.

"Carmenita, the Faithful" (Essanay).—A Mexican love tale filled with melodramatic thrills and carrying more than the usual share of Mexican jealousy and dirty work. The character drawing is excellent and the story has much merit as a lurid tale. But in the end all difficulties disappear as the bad Mexican is led away to prison.

"Jiggers Looks for a Job" (Gaumont).—A comedy in which the fun rests upon the absurdity of the presentations. Exaggeration is made to supply the humor and the stunts Jiggers does under the influence of love are sufficiently overdrawn to be funny.

"Krimmel Waterfalls" (Gaumont).—An excellent picture made in the Austrian Tyrol. The night scene deserves special commendation. The operator selected his viewpoints with the eye of an artist and did his work extraordinarily well.

"The Cowboy's Devotion" (Pathe).—A Western picture by the American company, with a killing with a pistol, and a woman falling dead as she gives testimony that frees a man of a murder charge. Most of these Western pictures have a sameness to them that becomes monotonous with much repetition. They are interesting in a way, but unless some striking novelty is introduced they do not rise above the mass which has come from the studios in the past few months. The Pathes are masters of some subjects and would consult their own interests and conserve their reputation by devoting their efforts to the reproduction of some other variety of subject. Let the Western pictures go, and bring out those individual films which so often in the past have ranked among the masterpieces.

'A Queen for a Day" (Vitagraph).—A funny picture though perhaps the real humor of it rests in the scene where Heiny gets his for successfully making the wealthy Bridget believe he is a prince long enough to marry her. There are laughs scattered along through the picture, and at the close any audience will agreed it has seen something really humorous, albeit the fun in places descends to coarseness.

"Selling Old Master" (Edison).—A picture filled with the pathos of humanity and depicting graphically the loyalty of the Southern darkey to his master and the family. The pathos is relieved by a number of humorous situations, quite the most attractive one being the sale of the aged master's portrait by the former slaves. The pleasant ending of the story is that of faithfulness rewarded. Nothing about the play seems improbable. Even the marriage of the young Southern girl to the wealthy young man is a repetition of what has happened many times over. The actors have interpreted both the pathos and the humoir with unusual skill, and the audience showed its appreciation by applauding vigorously.

"The Slaves' Revolt" (Pathe).—This is an Egyptian picture, and so far as mechanical and dramatic construction is concerned, it is a worthy addition to the Egyptian series. But no slaves revolted and killed Pharaoh. It is not, therefore, historically accurate. The action is spirited and the burning of the palace and the uprising of the oppressed Syrians are admirably managed. Probably any audience will be interested, largely because of the action and the setting.

"Rice Industry in Japan" (Pathe).—An industrial illustrating a little-known business. The pictures were all made outdoors, and like this firm's out-door work, leave nothing to be desired. The audience that sees this picture will understand the production and harvesting of rice in Japan quite as well as they would if they went over the ground.

"The Trail of the Pomas Charm" (Kalem).—An Indian story, based upon the veneration of the Indians for a charm. Jealousy is interwoven, and a fight between Indians and cowboys enliven the scene. It is neither better nor worse than the usual Indian pictures. The principal interest is in the action and the fight.

"Society and the Man" (Vitagraph).—Almost like an illustration of an old-time Sunday-school story, in which a writer asserted that city life ruined both men and women. Perhaps this family's experience is a type of an occasional wreck, but it by no means represents all. A good many may agree that they were wise to leave the rush of the city and seek for contentment rather than money. It will do no harm to disseminate that impression, but it is to be hoped that uninformed audiences will not accept the story this film tells as accurately representing life in the city.

"Heart Beats of Long ago" (Biograph).—A dramatic story, or, at least, some parts of it are dramatic, of an old Italian love story between families who cultivated a feud. Of course, it is apparent to whoever has followed the intricacies of an Italian drama of about six or seven centuries age that a feud is necessary to the daily life of those people. When a love affair developed between two families who had been jealously nursing a feud for a number of years, it meant death for somebody. In this instance the unfortunate lover was put in an air-tight closet by his sweetheart, and before she could relieve him he smothered. A very uncomfortable death to die, and a very tearful situation when the closet was opened and his dead body fell out. Staging and costuming are elaborate, but the story has no more than a modicum of interest. It seems too improbable.

"A Double Elopement" (Lubin)—A single elopement in a family is common even in motion pictures, but a double one, where mother and daughter manage to get away from opposite sides of the same house, is sufficiently novel to relieve the tedium of the usual love tale. And then, when both proceed with all due speed to the same minister, the fun breaks out afresh. The Lubin snap has been freely utilized in the development of the plot, and the picture is really funny.

"Max Has the Boxing Fever" (Pathe)—A good deal of fun could be developed from Max's enthusiasm for boxing, but when the producer puts the two people on roller skates, something which no boxer would ever attempt, the fun disappears and mere silliness appears in its place. Nothing else need be said of this film.

"An Imitator of Blondin" (Pathe).—Amusing stunts could be developed from the atempts of an amateur to practice on a slack wire, but whoever saw an amateur attempt such fool things as are shown here? Even fun ought to be made true to life, else it loses a considerable proportion of its humor.

"Too Much Mother-in-Law" (Selig).—An incident like this has been used before, the receipt of a telegram from home, which acted as a free pass to the man who received it. Even the doors of banks and the severity of judges melted before its influence. And he arrives at home and the cause of the telegram is put into his arms. There is a touch about this picture which will appeal to every one who has never been there, even though it is so improbable as to be untrue. The advent of the little one will remove obstacles which nothing else can touch.

"The Doctor" (Edison).—If detractors of the photoplay could see this beautiful drama their objections must speedily vanish. No better, sweeter thing could be devised, no more ennobling subject is possible. The doctor has summed up all the tenderness of the human heart, and has depicted it so graphically that no one can misunderstand it. The reproduction of the famous painting, "The Doctor," which has been so much admired, is an excellent piece of work. The love story which runs through it is improved by the ending, which shows the girl noble enough and good enough herself to understand the motives which prompted her fiance to leave her on the eve of their wedding and attend the poor child. The simple story, touching the heart from the beginning, is so well told that it cannot be mistaken or misunderstood, will touch the hearts of any audience in the land, and the moisture will well up in the eyes. In short, it would be difficult to conceive a picture more ennobling or purer in its influence. It represents what the photoplay is capable of doing. It will rank with one of the great pictures of the month.

"A Woman's Voice" (Essanay).—That a woman's voice over the telephone from an unexpected quarter might cause consternation is plainly evident from this picture. Whether all women would act hastily and return their engagement rings without asking an explanation is a question. Apart from this somewhat questionable proceeding the picture is lively and somewhat humorous. Fortunately for the bewildered artist, the young woman proves amenable to reason and the misunderstanding is satisfactorily adjusted.

"Ten Words for Twenty-five Cents" (Essanay).—A humorous possibility shown wherein a telegraph operator is the offending party. The cutting off of three words to get the message inside the cost limit created some disturbance in a salesman's family, but the chief sufferer was himself. He found his people all right, after many moving incidents by field and flood on his way home.

"The Strongest Tie" (Gaumont).—The conception of people forced to the extremity of possibly selling their children, or being in a position where the suggestion of such a sale is made to them, is not pleasant and should scarcely be made the basis for a motion picture. It teaches nothing of importance. It does not educate. It surely does not amuse. Hence it has no real excuse for existence. The sooner such morbid pictures disappear from the screen the better it will be for the motion picture business.

"Jiggers' Moving Day" (Gaumont).—A rough-house film, representing the unfortunate Jiggers in a perilous predicament and making him sweat with his extreme exertions.

"The Deluge" (Vitagraph).—Probably everybody has formed a conception of the deluge, which is a mental picture of a huge house-boat, a crowd of curious people lounging about and making fun of the hoary-headed old man and his sons who have been for years constructing this boat. Then comes the procession of animals into the boat and the burst of waters, which overwhelms the scoffing people outside, while the ark rides to safety with all its motley collection of animals and people. They will not be disappointed in this picture. It is all here, just as the fancy has pictured it. The staging is as elaborate as anything undertaken in a long time, and the reproduction of the scenes which have been indellibly impressed upon the minds of the people since their childhood are so faithful that the audience sits almost spellbound as the scenes follow each other in quick succession. The scene of the drowning of the multitude is one of the most realistic ever put on the screen. And there is a holy calm falls over the senses as the ark is seen floating serenely upon the waters which have overwhelmed the world. You live the whole story. You see it actually transpiring before you. You actually see the waste of waters, and you wonder whether they will ever subside. Then comes the episodes of the raven and the dove—both reproduced as described. And finally the grounding of the ark and the return of the animals to the world—now a dead world—to be repeopled. The entire picture is a marvelous rendition of one of the most dramatic stories in all history. The producer has looked carefully after costuming and surroundings, and he has displayed a marvelous breadth of Biblical knowledge to reproduce a scene of this character so faithfully and so realistically.

INDEPENDENT.

"The Westerner and the Earl" (Thanhouser).—Of course, this play might be true to life, but it seems improbable enough to be only a story. This is not saying that it is not interesting or that it lacks humor. It is merely placing the story itself in the proper category. The working out of the plot, by which the foreign nobleman was dispossessed of the idea that he wanted that particular American girl, and how her ambitious mother learned that an American son-in-law was good enough after all, furnishes much entertainment and keeps the audience in good humor, and makes them appreciate the fake capture of the girl and her noble lover.

"Doctor Against His Will" (Eclair).—A reproduction of a comedy by Moliere which is certain to please, though perhaps the story is somewhat complicated for a motion picture. This may be due to the character of the subject, or it may be due to the fact that a considerable proportion has to be eliminated to get it in the film. However, what is left is amusing, even sparkling in places, and the actors have succeeded admirably in interpreting the work.

"Freddie's Shoes" (Powers).—A story which is told with the life and careful attention to reproduction which characterizes the works of this company. It is quite up to the usual run of the Powers plays, though it does not by any means rank with the best this house has turned out.

"The Command From Galilee" (Rehance).—A dramatic story which has the effect of creating mingled feelings in the one who sees it. Whether the impression is altogether pleasing or not may, perhaps, be beside the mark. Through most of the scenes the quality of the acting must be admitted, while the fanatical portion is more than ordinarily well rendered. The sensational features are admirably managed, yet, admitting all this, the picture is not altogether pleasing. Certain features of it, while they may be truthful reproductions, leave a sense of unrest in the mind. Perhaps the lesson they teach is sufficient justification for their existence, but they are not the sort that leaves the audience in good humor. If the object was to make them think, that object has been accomplished. If it was to amuse, it has scarcely succeeded. If it was to instruct, the instruction is mingled with considerable unpleasantness. The impression depends upon the viewpoint.

"The Cattle King of Arizona" (Powers).—A Western picture photoplay containing a choice collection of thrills and ending with the cowboy getting the girl he wanted. Life, action, unexpected, but apparently perfectly natural situations, strong, forceful actions, all are there, and the photography have been combined in a thriller that will delight almost any audience. The staging was done by a master and details have been worked out with attention to the small things which do so much to make a picture convincing.

"Criminal Chief's Capture" (Great Northern).—A detective story of merit and showing through a succession of thrilling scenes the clever work of a relentless and fearless sleuth. After overcoming a long succession of apparently insuperable difficulties the chief of the criminals is captured. Almost everyone likes detective stories, and here is a remarkably good one.

"The Feast of Foolshead" (Itala).—This popular comedian appears again in some of his inimitable stunts, and raises many a laugh before the film runs its course.

"His Great Sacrifice" (Atlas).—Whether it is desirable to depict a surgical operation in such minute details is a question which probably each one who sees this picture will be able to settle for themselves. If it is looked upon as an educational film, perhaps there is no ground for criticism, but if it is merely to gratify the morbid curiosity of the sated throng always looking for something exciting, then it is not to be commended. These things are known in a general way, but there are some things in life that are better known to each one individually, not shown like this to the morbidly curious and those who are honestly interested alike. The implied tale of love running through it, leading the devoted one to offer himself as the sacrifice for the skin grafter's instruments is tender enough to be touching. But the bald representation of all the paraphernalia for a surgical operation is rather chilling and could quite as well have been left to the imagination.

"Judged by a Higher Power" (Champion).—One scene in this is startling enough to satisfy the most ardent advocate of exciting scenes. To see a girl struck blind at the telephone by a well simulated flash of lightning is thrilling, and novel. To imply that it is the judgment of a higher power as a punishment for her misdeeds is equally startling. But the incident, so unusual to photoplays, is well handled and seems convincing. The appearance of the lightning stroke is rather too real for complete satisfaction. The remainder of the picture tells its story in a straightforward way, however, and leaving nothing obscure. The passion of jealousy is well enough acted and the motive for the girl's action is made apparent. Some details may have been left unfinished, but the main features have been managed cleverly enough to make the picture.

"The Return From Seaside Bathing" (Ambrosio).—A comedy with much life and considerable claim to recognition. The acting is up to the Ambrosio standard, while the story told is sufficiently clear to be easily followed.

"Tweedledum Tries Winter Sports" (Ambrosio).—This favorite comedian appears in a role which affords him opportunity to perform a wide variety of stunts, all of which are intensely amusing. The difficulties encountered and the troubles from which he escapes after hair raising and funny experiences would tax the ingenuity of the most fertile brain to conceive.

"A Brass Button" (Reliance).—A clever detective story. The clue to the thief, the imprint of a brass button, is a point which is sufficiently novel to arouse interest. The stealing of a necklace is not a novelty, nor can it be said to be novel to charge the servants with the theft. That is too common in real life, but to locate the thief in that altogether new way makes the picture more interesting than the average detective story.

"An Imaginary Elopement" (Imp).—The producer has taken the old story about gone with a handsomer man, or something to that effect and has based a lively comedy upon it. The principal feature of the film is the travesty upon detective work which is done by the fake detective, ending up with a rough house that leaves little of the unfortunate individual to be taken to the police station. Explanations and laughs follow and the difficulty which threatened to disrupt the peaceable family is satisfactorily adjusted.

"The Mix-Up" (Imp).—Imagine the feelings of a man who enters his home only to be thrown out in a number of different ways because he is mistaken for an importunate masher. The various styles of ejectment supply most of the interest in this film and while it is somewhat rough, it is lively and pleases the audience immensely. Criticism is unnecessary. It s a knockabout subject admirably developed.

"Mission in the Desert" (American).—Made in the Arizona desert this picture presents phases of life there well worth seeing and calculated to hold the attention of the audience without lagging from beginning to end. The actors perform their parts with discretion, while the photography is satisfactory.

"The Coachman of the Village" (Itala).—A story of village life which will interest those whose memory, perhaps, runs back to some such scenes. It is well photographed, while the actors perform their parts as satisfactorily as circumstances permit.

"Adrift" (Thanhouser).—A domestic picture, filled with the tears of grief and the heart thirsts of joy and thanksgiving. It is a picture that carries a moral lesson not likely to be forgotten once it is seen. The story is told so directly and with such convincing sincerity that it holds an audience spellbound. While not all families come so near wreck, still every family's way is beset with pathetic little difficulties that threaten serious consequences. Often enough, as in this film, a child ultimately brings about changes that sweep away the clouds. Acted in the satisfactory manner of the Thanhouser company and clearly photographed, this picture is sure to please any audience.

"Back to the Old Homestead" (Lux).—Some dramatic situations enter into the telling of this story, yet it is simple enough and probably many families have had similar experiences. Not all boys require the experience of being wounded while engaged in a robbery to send them back home, but many have felt some forceful influence compelling them to return. Each actor does his part reasonably well, and the photographer has not been remiss.

"The Ring of Love" (Solax).—A lively comedy, presenting with considerable fidelity to the truth what happened when a love-charmed ring was passed from one person to another. After the general mix-up most members of an audience will agree with the unfortunate policeman, driven into the river by the old maid, "it is a good thing the ring was lost."

"The Counting House Mystery" (Yankee).—A detective story, with many thrills scattered through it, each one more nerve-racking than the one before it. Nell, the young woman detective, already a favorite with photoplay audiences once more demonstrates her ability and adds further laurels to her fame. As in previous films of this same character, the acting is quite in keeping with the subject and the interest is never permitted to lag for an instant.

"At The Duke's Command" (Imp).—An elaborately staged subject, containing thrilling moments and situations that make the audience almost gasp so realistically are they done. It is the first time that the old time torture chamber and its horrors have been utilized in compelling a girl to sacrifice herself for the benefit of her lover, but the dramatic way in which she succeeds in discouraging the duke's attentions won for her the lasting regard of the audience. And then her lover, released from his tortures, does what the duke did not expect him to do, leads the girl away despite the disfigurement of her once beautiful face. This picture made a deep impression upon the audience. It is so clear and the story is made so plain that it cannot be misunderstood. The Imp company has achieved a success which will continue as long as this picture is shown. Even though the torture chamber is grewsome and the girl's sacrifice is horrible, the effect upon the audience is to increase their interest and when the young man leads the girl away they are quite ready to applaud.

"Foiling The Camorra" (Yankee).—A lively detective story, dealing with the Black Hand and the child kidnappers. It purports to tell the story of the capture of the ringleader and the release of the children and like all detective stories, if they are reasonably well told, it holds the interest of the audience throughout.

"A Pittsburg Millionaire" (American).—An interesting subject and the details of the play have been work out with care by the actors. The situations are sufficiently strong to hold the interest of the audience and keep them looking for what is coming next.

"Maid or Man" (Imp).—If this is accepted as a more or less funny story it is interesting, but if it is looked upon as probable disappointment will follow. It is scarcely possible that any such scrapes as these could be successfully escaped by the unfortunates who became involved. The situations are funny, even though they are somewhat improbable. And the Imp players have seized upon the salient points and have developed them in a logical way. The horror of the deacon's wife when she discovers him with the supposed young woman in his arms supplies a good ending to what may be termed an exceptionally lively picture. It may be improbable, but it performs its mission of entertaining.

SOLAX QUALITY.

Although the Solax films have only been on the market three months they have proven so popular that it is decided by the company to release a second weekly picture forthwith. We have noted with satisfaction the steady improvement in quality which the Solax pictures manifest. Moreover, we had evidence only this week that the efforts of this company are appreciated by the exchanges, as in our hearing a prominent exchange man, when he heard that a second Solax release was imminent, stated that he would give it preference over another make of film.—In an early issue of The World we propose giving a lengthy illustrated account of the Solax works, especially with reference to the technical and the artistic end of their method of production.

A HEROINE OF '76.

The Rex. Co. are deserving of all the compliments that are certain to swamp them from every exchange and exhibitor in the country upon their first release, "A Heroine of '76."

This story written around Geo. Washington during revolutionary days, portrays the patriot riding horseback through the wooded country unaccompanied, when overtaken by a severe snow storm. Desirous of obtaining shelter for himself and horse from the storm, he puts in at a tavern and expresses his wish to remain until morning. The British Governor General having put a price on Washington's head, taken dead or alive, created a feeling of ill will towards him among a certain class. The result was that immediately upon entering the tavern he was recognized by a party of men including the landlord, who were enjoying their ale before an open grate. Washington having made known his wish and being directed to his room, the drinking party lost no time in planning his death; the executioner to be the man unfortunate enough to draw the first black card, and it so happened that to the landlord fell the task.

The landlord's daughter, after having shown Washington to his room, returned to the floor below in time to overhear the murderous plot, and, unobserved, retraced her steps to the upper story, and upon some pretext moved Washington and his effects to another room, and herself occupied the bed.

After many "bracers" and much persuasion the landlord was finally started on his errand of murder. Climbing stealthily up the stairs and along the hall to the room he supposed was the one occupied by Washington, he slowly opened the door, and with knife drawn rushed to the side of the bed and plunged the blade into the breast of its sleeping occupant, and retired to the floor below to await developments.

At the break of day Washington is up and ready to continue his ride. He looks up the landlord, pays for his lodging and is off before the dazed father and murderer has time to pull himself together and ask a question; but upon investigation the truth comes to him in a flash, and the picture closes with the bereaved and terror-stricken parent mourning the loss of his daughter through his own murderous greed for riches.

The story throughout is dramatically interesting, well staged, acted and photographed. If this first Rex is to be a sample of the work to be regularly released by this company, we predict a glowing future for them. MacArthur.

Letters to the Editor

BIT THE HAND THAT FED HIM.

Editors Moving Picture World:

Gentlemen—One E. Howard, claiming to be from Chicago, accompanied by his wife, drifted into this city. I concluded to retain him as electrician in my large house and he agreed to remain all winter. He worked ten days and drew quite a lot of money ahead he needed badly to get down to housekeeping and left town, leaving me to hold my opening Sunday matinee performance without an operator. He took the keys to the M. P. booth along with him and never left word of any kind that he was going. All loose tools were gone from the booth upon examination after his departure. I do not care for the money end of it, but this is something that should be told other managers, so they can be on the lookout.

You are at liberty to publish anything you like over my signature regarding the matter, and I hope he will be exposed as he should be. Thanking you and wishing you continued success. I remain, very truly yours,

Dubuque, Iowa, Jan. 30, 1911. JAKE ROSENTHAL.

Grafton, January 28, 1911.

The World Photographic Pub. Co.,

Dear Sirs—Enclosed find two dollars ($2.00) for one year's subscription to Moving Picture World. Would like the subscription to begin with the December 3 issue. The one containing the first of C. E. Sinn's "Music for the Picture" articles. I've been an interested reader of the World for some time—borrowing our manager's copies; but he doesn't always get it. (He buys from a local newsdealer, and sometimes the Woman seems to have slipped us orbit, and fails to reach here.) Since Mr. Sinn's articles have appeared, I feel as if I want them all. These articles certainly are a help to us pianists—and I think every moving picture pianist should read them and benefit by them. I'm sure our audiences think so, too. Then your "Stories of the Films" department is a great help. I like to think out the music as I read the "stories." Then, when the pictures come I know what to play. Our manager runs three independent films—"change daily"—and it's a hustle to think of suitable music sometimes.

Hoping you can supply all the numbers containing Mr. Sinn's talks, I am, sincerely your well wisher,

(Miss) MARY C. LEEDS,
Pianist Brinkman Opera House, Grafton, W. Va.

San Francisco, Cal., Jan. 16, 1911.

To the Editors of the Moving Picture World.

Dear Sirs—I wish to call your attention to the enterprise displayed by Mr. Wm. Osterfeldt, picture operator at the Orpheum Theater, this city, who is arranging to take the motion picture of Aviator Ely, who will ascend and descend on a specially-arranged platform, on the Battleship Pennsylvania, and which is to be a government test. Mr. Osterfeldt has secured the permission of the government to take this picture, and if weather conditions permit, it will be one of the greatest pictures of the present age. Ely is to make an ascension from Tanforan (aviation ground), is to fly over this city, and descend on the Pennsylvania, then make an ascension from the boat. This idea is original with Mr. Osterfeldt, who also conceived the idea of taking the picture of Madame Tetrazzini when she was singing in evening dress in this city Christmas eve, in the open air, and was listened to by at least 100,000 persons. The picture was not taken, however, on account of it being at night, but it is to be hoped that the Ely picture will be a success.

Very truly,
644 Broadway, San Francisco, Cal. B. MICHEL.

Editors Moving Picture World:

Gentlemen—I again request you to make another appeal in your next issue to the exhibitors of Penna. asking them to get busy while the present Legislature is in Session. Quick action is necessary by the exhibitors of Penns. who have small photoplay houses if they wish to continue in business.

Every exchange both Independent and Association in this State should urge the exhibitors dealing with them to take up the matter with the members of the Legislature from their District and ask them to vote for the passing of this amendment. Without a doubt 75% of the picture theaters in this State could not comply with the three four-foot aisle clause of said law.

It seems that some of the owners of these theaters do not realize what the present law would do if enforced and upheld by the Court, and are slow to act.

Trusting that you will make the appeal as strong as possible in your next issue and thanking you in advance for this favor as well as for past, I remain,

Yours very truly,
Reading, Pa., Feb. 1, 1911. GEO W. BENNETT.

Chicago, Ill., Feb. 11, 1911.

Editor Moving Picture World.

Dear Sir—In your last issue, Mr. F. H. Richardson states what is a grave insult to all scenario writers. He says "Scenarios are at this stage of the game too cheap to be worth stealing." He is wrong. Manufacturers have been, and are still paying high prices for scenarios, and if he wants to inspect my books, he will find that I have paid over $1,000 worth of scenarios, and many of them have been paid for as high as $25 apiece. I believe that an article worth $25 or even $10 is worth stealing. I know that other scenario writers have received good money for their manuscripts. Also if Mr. Richardson would inspect my books he will find that some unscrupulous manufacturers (in the great majority, I am pleased to state) have appropriated some of my manuscripts. That is, kept them, but never paid for them, while others have returned the manuscript, but have appropriated the ideas. The I can prove by several pictures that have been released by irresponsible manufacturers and which have been nothing else than copies of my original manuscript.

I do not claim to be an operator or an electrician, but I take it for granted that Richardson is all right as the head of the Trouble Department, but when he undertakes to solve the scenario problem, he is going too far out of his field.

Yours very truly,

MOVING PICTURE EXHIBITORS

Picture Machines complete with Asbestos Booth, Rheostat, Lamp House, Condensers, Objective, Shutter, Film Gate, Tension Device, Sprocket Wheels, Intermittent Movement, Crank Handle, Gears, Pinions, Shafts, Bearings, Etc., Etc.

Reel Carrying Cases $3.00, $4.50, $6.00

Spot Lights, for projecting $3.00
Incandescent ..... $4.00. Color Wheel ..... $4.00.

Imported Condensers $1.00

Lugs, A, B, ... 60 cts. pair. Magazine Rollers, etc. .....

ROYAL MOVING PICTURE SUPPLY CO. 1340 Monroe St. Philadelphia

STORIES OF THE FILMS

VITAGRAPH.

THE DELUGE.—This is a Biblical drama performed 3317 years B. C., a picture of the degeneration of the world, by sound. The Lord, observing the wickedness of the world, decides to destroy it. He instructs Noah to build an ark, or boat, in which he and his three sons, his wife and their wives take refuge. He is also told to take into the ark two of each of all living creatures. Noah does so, he is told, the rain descends upon the earth, covering it with water and the people are destroyed, but Noah, his sons and their families are saved.

After forty days of inundation the water subsides. Noah sends out a dove from the ark. It returns with an olive branch in its mouth.

After a short period the ark rests on Mount Ararat. Noah releases all the inmates from the ark. He and his sons and their wives build an altar unto the Lord, make sacrifice and offer up prayer and thanksgiving for their deliverance. The Lord sees a rainbow in the sky as a promise that he will never destroy the world again with a deluge.

THE LEAGUE OF MERCY.—Helen, an heiress and the ward of Martin Talbot, is interested in charity and recent work she is vice-president of the League of Mercy. Talbot's son makes love to her and her riches. In her visitations among the sick and poor she finds a young girl with a child. She takes the poor mother her clothes, aids and comforts her; tries to restore her to health. While she is there engaged Young Talbot, to whom she becomes affianced, enters. The young mother recognizes him as the father of her child. Helen grows back her engagement ring, denounces him and orders him from her home.

The sick woman falls back dead. Helen adopts the child and brings it up as a member of her own household.

AT THE WHITE MAN'S DOOR.—An Indian tries to court the white man's favor by selling furs. The Indian is detected and defeated in his game; the redman accuses his tribe against the white man; they waylay and wound him with a poisoned arrow, take him to their camp, where he is saved from death and released by an Indian Princess, who has fallen in love with him. When she withdraws the arrow from his wound she pleads it in the bosom of the redman.

Following the white man to his home, she discovers he has a wife and child. In jealous rage she takes the arrow from the redman's bosom, runs it into the arm of the wife, who falls prostrate and unconscious. The white man summons a doctor, administer to his wife as she did to him. The wife lives, the Indian Princess goes to the base of the rugged, where she prays, weeps, mourns and cries to the Great Spirit to receive her soul, dying a victim of her own vengeance.

A QUEEN FOR A DAY.—As a cook Bridget McSweeney feels very much discontented. She has a sneaking regard for Heinrich Vondiddlehaus, the grocer, who is very much in love with her. Bridget comes into the possession of a fortune from an uncle who died in Australia, and decides to live as becomes one of her vast wealth. She buys a house, makes a bid for society, and attracts much elegant attention. She is presented and tilts who lay siege to her heart in hope of gaining her fortune.

Heinrich does not give up his conquest for Bridget's love, to win her he surrounds himself with a following of counts, lords and deigns himself out as "The King of Coney Island." He presents himself to the fair Bridget, who immediately falls to his royal influence. They are married and soon she discovers that she has been duped and captured by her old friend Heinrich.

URBAN ECLIPSE.

ON THE BORDER OF THE FOREST.—The age of chivalry resounds itself in this fine romance.

Prince Otbert receives information that Count Harold is robbing travellers.

In the garb of a monk Otbert visits Harold's castles and finds the charges true. He denounces the Count, who promises amendment.

The Count soon forgets and attacks the Prince. Lady Isabella finds Otbert lying wounded. Harold captures the father of Lady Isabella, and later the Lady herself.

Otbert recovers, storms Harold's castle and frees the prisoners.

CATHERINE HOWARD.—Revival of an old drama founded on the marriage of King Henry VIII to Catherine Howard.

The Duke of Norfolk, friend of "Bluff King Hal," marries Catherine secretly.

The King sees Catherine, loves her, swears she shall be his wife, at the same time requests Norfolk to marry Margaret, Henry's sister.

Norfolk, to avoid marrying, pretends death and is placed in the tombs, expecting to be released by Catherine. She, however, deserts him and marries the King. Margaret saves Norfolk. Henry finds Catherine unfaithful and she is punished.

SELIG.

THE SURVIVAL OF THE FITTEST.—Tony, Pedro and Mlle. Caprin are all animal trainers with a circus belonging to the father of the latter. Both men are suitors for the hand of the young queen of the arena. Pedro is favored by the father, which is contrary to the wishes of Caprin. Accordingly Tony is summarily discharged previous to sailing of the show for America. The subsequent love scenes on the transatlantic passage for the States and finally while witnessing the performance as a spectator, saves Mlle. Caprin from being torn to pieces by the infuriated animals. Recognition and reconciliation follows.

PATHE.

BETTY'S APPRENTICESHIP.—The irresistible Betty is taken out by her mother, who finds that home is a poor place to keep such a wild and untamed spirit. The fond mother gets Betty an apprenticeship in a millinery shop. Everyone can imagine the result, and in short order the poor girl is discharged. Other positions, in the shoemaker's, pastry cook's, hardware shop and grocer's are all the scenes of her clever pranks. How she substitutes a toy bulldog for a live German cheese, which dies into space when the poor cooks attempt to slice it, is too killingly funny for words.

A WESTERN COURTSHIP.—A cowpuncher is deeply in love with the daughter of the ranchman for whom he works, and the course of true love never smooth until a messenger from Boston makes his appearance in all the finery produced by an up-to-date tailor. The cowpuncher is filled in love with the easterner, much to the disgust of the rough son of the West. At a dance the cowpuncher pulls the Boston dude's coat-tails and finally decides to take desperate measures to regain the regard of his erstwhile sweetheart. Binding up the entire party with two big revolvers, he compels the girl to accompany him, and the dude and the rest of the party take a wild ride across the snow covered ground to the nearest clergyman's house. They are notly pursued, however, and before the knot can be consummated the crowd bursts into the room. When the girl sees her lover about to be overpowered by the hands of the outraged crowd, her old regard for him springs into being, and using one of her lover's pistols, her hand does not shake while the thoroughly frightened minister performs the ceremony, and all ends happily.

WHIFFLES.—Whiffles is always in love, but being a bashful and timid youth, he does not make great progress at the home of his inamorata. In fact, his timidity actually drives before the girl he hopes to make Mrs. Whiffles; he knocks over and breaks a valuable vase. In his confusion at having done this he departs hastily, immediately after his departure, there enters Whiffles dressed in the height of fashion, accompanied by a pair of shoes for Mademoiselle's mother. The family is astonished, then angry, then they think it a great joke. Whiffles is highly indignant that he is nothing but a shoemaker, their humor turns again to wrath, and they throw the gentleman out of the window, much to the delight of discomfiture. Scarcely could he have touched the ground when Whiffles' timidity leaves him, once he had broken, and is immediately seized and thrown out after the manner of his former exit. Of course Whiffles is not discouraged, for he realizes Whiffles, and just how Whiffles is both Whiffles and not Whiffles is best explained in seeing the film, which must be seen to be thrilling.

LIEUT. SCOTT'S NARROW ESCAPE.—Lieut. Scott is watering his horse at a stream, when he is approached by a handsome Indian girl who is love at first sight, and leaving his horse, the young officer approaches the Indian village. The young Indian brave seeing the horse untethered and alone approaches, and finding the officer's army coat hanging on a bush, thinks that the owner of the unexpectedly and the Indian is killed. The shot recalls Scott and the business of the Indian tribesman, of course, blame the Lieutenant for the death of their tribesman. There is a general uprising among the Indians, but Scott makes his escape to headquarters. Thoroughly aroused, the Indians take to the warpath and completely annihilate a detachment of cavalry sent to cope with reinforcements and is captured. Yellow Moon, however, rides for help and arrives just in time to save the young officer from death. Indians leave him bound to a stake and are building a fire about him.

MELIES.

TONY, THE GREASER.—From force of habit, some might call him a "Greaser," true, he is a Mexican, but more than that he has the instinct and chivalrous nature. He falls in love with the American rancheman's daughter, and while she appreciates his sincerity, she does not return his affection for her. Tony not only loves, he respects her and will not inflict his attentions upon her, but never loses an opportunity of serving her, neither seeking recognition nor reward.

He overhears a conspiracy among a gang of dissolute Mexicans to attack the American ranch, and when they insult the stars and stripes he defends the flag, makes away with it, and a bold dash for the ranch to warn Helen of the approaching danger. She jumps upon his horse and makes a daring ride at break-neck speed to reach her father and his cowboys, who hasten to defend the home.

Tony, who has made a brave fight against the black hearted devils, is captured and shot as he presses to his lips a handkerchief that once belonged to the idol of his undying love.

The rancheman, his daughter and his men arrive in time to save the home and rout the desperadoes, but Tony, the brave, the poor Tony, dies, giving the evidence that shows his last thought was of her.

LUBIN.

A DOUBLE ELOPEMENT.—Walter Thompson and Lilly Brown were in love, but Lilly's mother refused to allow her daughter to be married as she didn't want to be left alone. Being unsuccessful in persuading Mrs. Brown to consent, Walter asked the father if he intended for him. Father was a widower and ought to have known better, but he wanted to help his son and he readily agreed to see Lilly's mother on the subject. Now Lilly's mother was a middle-aged widow and very good looking, and Mr. Thompson was smitten at once as his scruples against a second marriage disappeared like snow in summer and while the young folks were wooing under the parlor lamp, the parents were carrying on an ardent courtship. They decided to elope themselves, but on second thought would they let the children know of it. Meantime, the children had made a similar decision and oh, not for the world would they let their parents know of it. Both parties decided to elope both Walter and his father brought their ladders to the house at the same time. Both Lilly and her mother were waiting, one at a rear room and the other at the front window. Both did not see her act about the same time and both couples married to the minister's. If it hadn't been the same minister, things might have been awful the other out. However, as it was, they met, blushed, apologized, laughed. Then came the double wedding.

THE PETTICOAT SHERIFF.—Bill Jenkins was candidate for sheriff of Lucky Gulch. One day, his wife, Mrs. Jenkins, an active, determined woman was elected Mayor of a small town in Colorado. She determined to run her husband for sheriff and the boys elected her. Then Bud Evans, "a bad man" of the town, consented a compromise, and, of course, it was all right. Bill Jenkins, when he found his wife elected, was determined to run for sheriff and pinned it on her husband.

THE SHOW-GIRL'S STRATAGEM.—Ethel Lane finding her husband more interested in his studies than in herself, sought diversion in the studio of a young artist who was painting her portrait. Her husband's suspicions were aroused by the show-girl, arrived to visit them. She was coldly received by Lane. Being a very clever little girl she soon discovered rather more than friendly relations existing between the artist and Mrs. Lane. During a few days Jack Lane was a note from the artist, asking Mrs. Lane to dine with him in the studio. Instantly he was converted to a state of jealous fury. Revenge was prepared to follow his wife. The show-girl saw all this, went from the house to the studio, warned Mrs. Lane, helped her to leave by a back door and remained in her place. When Jack arrived he found the artist and the show-girl sitting down to dinner. Of course, he believed that he had suspected his wife unjustly. He denounced the show-girl for her escapade and left the studio. Arriving home he begged his wife to forgive him for his suspicions and for his neglect. The show-girl entered later and Lane in righteous wrath ordered her from the house. As she was about to leave she dropped a handkerchief but the show-girl merely smiled, shrugged her shoulders and left the home where she was an unrecognized heroine.

KALEM.

THE LOST RIBBON.—Jennie, the pretty daughter of a hardy pioneer cattleman is admired by all of her father's men, but she shows favor only upon one. Dick, the best cowpuncher in the bunch, is her favorite. Seeing a pretty piece of ribbon with which Jennie has bedecked herself, Dick suggested that the ribbon be divided, she to keep one piece and he the other. The same morning on which this ribbon episode occurred the father and mother of Jennie are called away to see a sick relative. After seeing her father started on the trail Jennie while returning to the house loses her share of the ribbon, which was picked up by Frank, a rejected suitor. Knowing that Dick is favored by Jennie, Frank shows him the piece of ribbon and tells him that Jennie gave it to him. A lively quarrel follows, the two men being separated by the ranch house, who suggests that the party of boys ride to the ranch cabin and learn from Jennie whether or not she gave the ribbon to Frank. While the quarrel about the ribbon is going on a band of Sioux Indians have attacked the cabin. Jennie and her young brother bar the doors and windows and take refuge in the upper story. The cowboys arrive on the scene just as the Indians have broken down the door. A short and sharp battle takes place. The Indians are driven away and Jennie and her brother rescued. As the rescued and rescuers are gathered together Frank, realizing his false position, confesses to Dick that he found the ribbon and hands it over.

GRANDMOTHER'S WAR STORY.—"Before I met him, your grandfather was in the Confederate Secret Service. Being an expert telegraph operator, he was detailed to tap the wires that connected the Union headquarters and learn what advance information it was possible to obtain. The Union officers were greatly worried about the leakage of important orders and sent detectives to inspect the telegraph lines. In the meantime the Yankees planned a decoy message to send over the wires, with a view of holding the operator who had been surreptitiously obtaining information intended only for the Union officers. The message read: 'Be ready to receive important dispatch late this evening.' Unsuspectingly your grandfather returned to his post to await the passing over the wire of the important message referred to when all of a sudden a detachment of Union soldiers broke down upon him and he certainly did have a narrow escape. He got away, however."

The escape of the secret service agent and the many complications that arise make this production one of thrills throughout.

GAUMONT.

NAPOLEON IN 1814.—The opening scene to this realistic war drama is laid at the Lapiere homestead in the little village of Tonnere, France.

Pere Lapiere, the surviving son of a war victim and the only support of his mother, is drafted into the army of the French. On January 6, 1814, we witness the leave-taking of Pere from his heart-broken mother for the recruiting camp of Napoleon.

In the battle of Fere Champenoise, we encounter Pere wounded and unable to accompany his comrades in their retreat before the advancing forces of Blucher.

Napoleon on his forced marches to aid Generals Mortier and Marmont in the defense of Paris, passes through Tonnere and takes possession of the Lapiere home for a much needed rest. This offers Madame Lapiere an opportunity to seek revenge herself upon the man she believes responsible for the death of her son, one of whose comrades was the prisoner advised of the visit met by him.

Taking a large knife, she is about to attack the sleeping Emperor but fortunately is interrupted by the awakened guard and hastily overpowered. The commotion rouses Napoleon and when he realizes the woman was about to attack him, he orders her liberated and confronting her asks her to step forward and explain what she contemplated.

The woman's passion roused, her thirst for revenge unsatisfied, she rushes forward with upraised arm, the gleaming steel blade in her hand, to strike the fatal blow, but the majesty of Napoleon, his strength of character, his look of compassion and sympathy, drives conviction to her very soul that she is wrong. Overcome of bashfulness follows, the knife falls to the floor, her arms drop to her side and she shamefacedly bows and on her bended knees implores his majesty's pardon.

At this juncture Pere, whose wounds do not prove fatal and who has slowly gained his way home, enters the room. He can see his mother kneeling and thus fall into such emotion that he utterly oblivious of their surroundings. When Pere realizes that he is in the presence of the Emperor, he salutes and is at once advanced in the parlance of the military ordered to step forward. The generous command for having returned home without leave of absence, the Napoleon, travelling with compassion the mother and son, orders Pere to be honorably discharged.

Resorting to the interests of his country, which after all encompass the individual welfare of every one of the fellow countrymen, Napoleon realizes the unfortunate experience of the night of March 30, 1814, was prompted by the sufferings of a mind tormented and perverted by the cruelty of the age and draws the curtain upon mother and son happy with one another in the enjoyment of a favorable turn of fate.

NAPOLEON IN 1814.—A dramatic incident from the life of this "Man of destiny" which shows him not only as a stern and fearless leader but as a decidedly just and sympathetic man.

War's devastations, separations, dangers all enhance between forced hardships, hardships and conflicts brought visibly before you.

Through all, the master spirit moves, directing, driving planning, encouraging, suffering not less than dangers with his soldiers and loved by them.

THE STRONGEST TIE.—Showing the strength of parental love even when tribal and hardships would seem so cruel as to kill all tenderness, and when a poor couple have an opportunity to sell their little daughter for a large sum of money. From the standpoint of the lonesome wealthy people, who would make the purchase, it shows what money cannot buy.

JIGGERS' MOVING DAY.—With an amateur drummer in the apartment on his right, a trombone player in that on his left, and a showmaker in the room above him, Jiggers grows nervous and decides to move. He hires two loungers to help him, rents a hand cart, loads it heavily and places himself between the cart handles and starts down the street. The unbalanced portion of the load and the weight forces him into the liveliest run in his experience.

EDISON.

SELLING OLD MASTER.—A mortgage upon the old place is being foreclosed, and the lawyer for the estate is present to see that the old home so long occupied by his family is theirs no more. Old Master is very strong, and the news results in his death, a death which leaves his young daughter in charge of two old darkies. The girl is sent to New York and given music lessons to the child of a wealthy family, and there is a young man in the family. Then we see the old studio in New York without Master and with very little money left.

She sits in front of an auction room, they see an announcement of the sale of the Southern furniture from an old Virginia home. They enter and find the portrait of "Old Master" about to be sold to a saloon keeper. They succeed in buying it from him, although he outbids them, and they find themselves upon the streets, without money and without means of support. The pathetic side of the situation is very strongly depicted by the entire situation, particularly when an officer of the law invites them to move on, as they are attracting a crowd.

At this moment two young people in an automobile see something grasping upon the sidewalk about a portrait, and another man in the automobile has stopped and in a few seconds more the girl kneels, clasping the portrait in her arms, to the astonishment of its dusky possessors. Of course she takes them home with her to the new home, and of course the old darkies become a prominent place above the mantel in the new establishment, while the old darkies become the faithful servitors of "Little Master" as they were of "Old Master."

THE DOCTOR.—"The Doctor," is a famous oil painting by Mr. Luke Fields, R. A., of England. In the latter part of the silent drama is shown in detail, the small but exact reproduction of that famous painting, which is now hanging in Tate's Gallery, London, and which won its painter knighthood.

Around this painting has been woven a sweet love story which opens in the twilight glow when the famous specialist, Dr. Gray, bends lightly over the head of his lady love and wins her consent to their union. There is quite a difference between their ages, yet the sweet little lady knows when she looks into his eyes that she is looking for true strong, tender hands and that all will be well with her.

Suddenly the spectator is confronted with a sharp contrast to the tender scene of love and happiness, in a view of one in which sorrow and anguish, pain and death, stands supreme. Beside home with father and mother snatching the life this ebb away from their darling child, lying upon an improvised operating table in desperation the father goes forth to send Doctor Gray, the famous specialist, and begs him to come and save this little life.

This by chance, transpires upon the night on which the wedding festivities are to be announced, and he is all dressed to leave when the telephone broken further makes his appeal for aid. It isn't money or fame that wins the doctor's consent to his duty but pure, human sympathy and he goes to the humble home to fight with mighty nerve and determination for the life of the child. He goes to cause to the gay reception at her home. A last news comes to her that he will be unable to attend. Her pride is struck to the quick and wounded in her heart, she determines to go her self and see why she is thus forgotten for the least of her greatest happiness. She goes and sees why she has been forgotten, and her heart goes out to the gallant doctor who fights for and wins the fight and wins and saves the little child's life.

TWO VALENTINES.—Here we have a typical New York negro boarding house with the usual mixture of nationalities and dispositions. The central figure in this particular boarding house is the principal colonizer in the house and the two Amethysts, a young man and a young girl who have very fancy hats, but unfortunately very bashful that they are almost too timid to speak to each other. As St. Valentine's day approaches both one in a way to decorate their sentiments by sending each other a beautiful valentine but in disguise that each are unbeknown recognized as they select two valentines, one and illustrated in appearance and most comedic alike as follows:

"My Valentine I love you.
Your sweetheart I would be.
But send back this sweeter verse
If you do not agree."

Upon receiving the valentines each is under the impression that the valentine has been returned and the natural overture of affection rejected. Thus is more than they can bear and they sadly leave the boarding house, which has no more charm for either of them. By some strange coincidence they find themselves side by side in a street car. Coming face to face suddenly, a pair of the car causes both valentines to drop and an explanation follows, with the result that they come to an understanding and joyfully return to the boarding house, where they are greeted vociferously and discreetly left alone. The two heads, very close together, are finally separated by a vision of the two valentines coming from the side and joining as one.

ESSANAY.

"A WOMAN'S VOICE."—Perry Wells, an artist, falls in love with Grace Allison, a young society debutante, the romance originating with the painting of a portrait of the young lady. Perry's portrait also wins the approval of Miss Allison's father and the match is agreed to. Perry is thoroughly devoted to his prospective bride, but at certain periods of the time he is so pressed with work that it appears to the thoughtless girl that he is neglecting her. In order to save all the time possible Perry moves into his studio and works late at night, often not arriving in the mornings until quite late. Perry employs a negro janitress to keep his studio tidy, the woman calling as a rule early in the morning before the artist arises. One morning while the negress is busy dusting and sweeping and Perry is still in dreamland, Miss Allison calls up on the telephone. Imagine her dismay when a woman's voice informs her that "this is Mr. Wells' studio"—and to that hour of the morning! Furthermore, the voice says that Mr. Wells is not up yet. Miss Allison hangs up the receiver with a long, thoroughly enraged, for she is confident that Perry is a contemptible deceiver. In a moment she smashes off the ring calls a messenger boy and dispatches the ring and a curt note to the luckless artist. It is some time before Perry can fathom it out, until the negro janitress confesses, when he makes her accompany him to his fiancee's house, where, happily, explanations are made and the ring is returned to Miss Allison.

"TEN WORDS FOR TWENTY-FIVE CENTS"—Binks, a traveling salesman, is called to the end when he receives a telegram from his wife, stating that she is dying. The information is both startling and unexpected, as she had only been left home a few days before his wife and appeared in the best of health. Binks makes a flash for home in the quickest possible time, but a series of obstacles to his progress arrives at his destination, his attire a wreck. Furthermore, he finds his wife just as base and hearty as when he had left her, with not the least appearance of any mortal ailment. The puzzle is explained when Mrs. Binks tells him that the original telegram had read: "My dear Frank, come home at once. I am dying." But the new telegraph operator, with the wisdom of Solomon, had cut off the last three words in order to get the message into the ten word limit.

"THE BAD MAN'S DOWNFALL."—When pretty Molly Martin comes out to the West to teach school she is beset by many admirers but the most persistent of all is Slim Jones who is the local aristocrat. He is the "bad man" of the town bully and a scoundrel worthless among all the citizens except the other cowboys. Slim's unscrupulous conduct arouses the righteous indignation of Molly's brother, who is a cowboy, and he is forbidden to come to the house. Slim continues all the young men of the town that he will shoot any of them on sight. He also uses on his girl the young women furiously charging and his unfortunate Mexican wife. Another cowboy comes to town and falls in love with Molly. The latter becomes aware of Slim's intentions to kill him and warns him. Fearless of Slim's threats, the young man calls on figure, but a pure sweet face, using the trail to undergo the toil of the heavy gait, when a five-cloud setting throws to the gallant hotel boys each which to duck. Such an occasion is on this day having taken out long before day took to gather the dewy blossoms and fruits from five passengers up said to the young autumn before the opening of the Fair. This done long before noon when the sun is on the wane and ropes off through their baggage and always until the morning was so came her. Going enough the village she meets Steve on it is about time for supper. Offering his bouquets, he purchases one to give to the object of his affection, owns, and of small, poor Bertha and she had some one to show her these little attentions, particularly Steve, as she has always loved the handsome young fisherman. Coy, though, imagining that she can have her chance of the boys on account of the her attractiveness, and delight in holding Steve's little favors up to ridicule, and this occasion is no exception, for when he leaves her to attend the Fair, she returns to her with the bunch of wildflowers, she pokes him at it. Then as the last straw she starts snatching the flowers from her and catches them under his head, leaving her for good. This at first amuses Coy, for she thinks herself rid of Steve and he will come back. But not so, for as he dashes back to his cottage he meets again the little flower seller. Her sense of pity is sufficient to turn and in a moment of pique through wounded pride rather than a tender sense for Bertha, he asks her to attend the Fair with him. Her joy is ecstatic at this and she and Steve make their way to the Fair leaving Coy to the tragedy of fate, who has from a distance witnessed their meeting. However, Cora assumes an indifferent mien. Feeling that this action is induced by a spirit of revenge. This is at first true but Steve's association with Bertha cultivates something more serious. He now realizes the worth of an affection born of a pure soul, and they become betrothed, their happiness following shortly after. Cora is now the one to suffer wounded pride. She realizes she has lost the best catch in the village, and to one whom she regards as so inferior. Obsessed by a desire for revenge she determines at once to speak it. Some time later she visits the young couple's cottage, ostensibly to congratulate them, but upon leaving drops a note to Bertha to meet her at the old trysting place. More than mere curiosity impels Bertha to see her, and on the eve of his departure on a long trip to the city she bids her an adieu. More than a year passes and no word comes from the sailing party, until late one afternoon their vessel is seen in the distance slowly nearing the shore. The little village is at once alive with excitement. The townspeople inform Bertha of the approach of the long absent fisher crew and she takes up her little charge, which had arrived in the meantime, and as near her way as fast as possible to the landing place. Her haste is almost hasty owing to joy in the anticipation of Steve's surprise when she shows in his arms their little son. But what grief awaits her, for upon arriving she finds him off to her cottage. Bertha arriving just in time to see them going hurriedly up the beach. Almost heartbroken and forlorn she starts in the same forward, when at a turn in the lane she comes face to face with Steve. What a meeting. He now realizes what a contemptible brute he is and cannot for the heart to face her. Bertha, however, has nothing but forgiveness and love shining in her countenance, so Steve takes the little one to her outstretched arms and together they go to their humble cottage. Bertha, Coy, transfixed with suppressed rage on the sands.

WHAT SHALL WE DO WITH OUR OLD?—An old carpenter starts off for work, leaving at home his wife old and ill. At the shop a new foreman is put in charge, and the treatment of the old hands takes place, as the employer insists upon the infusion of new blood among his employees, hence the old man with others suffers the penalty of being old—discharged. At his age he finds it impossible to obtain employment, and leaving home active and independent all his life, is so humbled to seek charity. Later, his savings having been exhausted and his wife quite sick, obtain, starvation promises to be their lot. He goes out to make a last effort for work, and on his way passes a residence before which stood an automobile. Two ladies alight, one carrying a dog, for which the couple have great affection and care. As he views this scene, the old man ponders over feeding time a dog's lot is preferable to his. Weary and hungry he at last brews to make a desperate attempt to obtain food by breaking into a butcher shop and stealing a basket of provisions. He is caught, however by a policeman before he has gotten a block away and taken to the Night Court. Here the old man tells his story as it appeared one, and little credence placed in it, as he is put back in the pen. The judge, a kindly disposed man, fearing he might have made a mistake, sends the officer to investigate. The officer returns with the report that the old man has not exaggerated the case. The judge then releases the old fellow and sends the officer home with him with aid—financial, medical and material. But it is too late, for the poor woman's life has gone out during her husband's forced absence.

Independent Film Stories.

GREAT NORTHERN.

FOUND AGAIN.—Two young people are betrothed and married, and for a time live happily together. Only the hope of a young man's love across cold, and the husband, to get rid of his wife, tells her that the marriage was not absolute. Full of grief, the young woman seeks her parents' home, taking with her her child. The mother gives her a cordial welcome, but the father cannot bear to think that disgrace has been brought on the family name, and he will not make a home for the young woman. The husband has succeeded for some means of gaining a livelihood, and being at accomplished singer he determines to tempt fortune on the operatic stage. He goes to a theatrical agent her voice is tested, and the result is so satisfactory that she is given an engagement. Fame is quickly hers, and she has a host of admirers. One of these, a baron, amuses her by his attentions, and in a fit of pique at the time the latter she strikes him a passionate blow in front of the assembled company. At this public rebuff the nobleman is greatly incensed, and sets about revenging himself on the prima donna. In an interview we are shown the theatrical star's little home, where a nurse keeps watch over the existence of her pretty child. The mother brings home a doll for the little one, and snatches a few moments relaxation from her multitudinous engagements. The time comes when she is invited back to the theatre, and in the operatic scene we see her singing on the stage and receiving showers of bouquets from admirers. The gay scene quickly changes to one of tragedy. The villainous baron is seated in one of the boxes and tries to bribe the prima donna's servant. He approaches rush forward, the inanimate form is borne from the stage, and consternation reigns in the theatre. The police question the servant, and victim is taken to the hospital. The doctor proceeds to dress the wounds, glances at the beautiful face, there is mutual recognition, kisses and all love not again. Greatly affected the man sinks on his lovers beside her, and as he does so, her spirit passes away.

THE LIFE OF A MUSCHIK.—A film that, with the aid of the simplest plot, gives a very clear idea of the daily life of the Russian peasant. A typical example is seen, with his wife and children, sitting down to their evening meal. In the corner is a little shrine, and before going out to the labors of the day the devout workman crosses himself in the fashion peculiar to his religion. At mid-day, the wife gets ready some food, and takes it to her husband in the fields. On the way back she is stopped by an official. Her husband hears her cries, and runs to her aid, but, however, is no match against him. The official, enraged at being thwarted, has the husband arrested and horsewhipped. Some time afterwards, we see the peasant at his labors, he is thrown from his horse and severely injured. The peasant's child comes to his assistance, and calls her father, who, however, is more disposed to take vengeance on his enemy than to help him. The official is severely injured, and the peasant is carefully tended at the peasant's home. The kindness shown to him brings about repentance, and he repents the error of his ways. A happy finale.

THE FALSE ALARM.—This is a rattling good comic, in which a man passes through all sorts of adventures in his dodge his mother-in-law, who comes to pay him a visit.

YANKEE.

HER BIRTHDAY SURPRISE.—Just how she happened to marry on her birthday, she could only attribute to an accident because the coincidence seemed to be the only thing remembered. However, her artist-husband kept this thought in mind when the time arrived for the celebration of their second wedding anniversary and planned a little surprise for his dear little spouse.

Hubby decided the most pleasing present he could bestow on his lovely wife would be a beautiful portrait of her painted by himself. How to execute a painting and keep it a secret was the next problem to solve. At last he took the housemaid in his confidence and secretly used her as a model. Filling order to dodge his mother-in-law, for a time, people began to gossip about a stranger woman who posed in the artist's studio, behind lock and key. The wife began to hear these comments and her father, mother and sister and brother joined the village mob in denouncing the disloyal and erring husband.

The portrait was nearly finished, but to divert suspicion, a change of models must be made, so the cook was pressed into service and the work continued in a small house in the outskirts of town.

But the family tracked him there and through the key hole saw him kissing his fair charge he was working on. Then they burst in the room and confronted him with his guilt. Of course you can imagine what happened when they saw the portrait.

A LIFETIME PENANCE.—Tales are numerous of the miscarriage of justice. Many crimes have gone unpunished and not a few men have been sorely punished for criminal deeds never committed.

But the man who goes through life with a conscience shattered by the knowledge of wrong inflicted on another usually comes to grief sooner or later. So it is no wonder that one of the principals in this all-absorbing film—surprise of ours, a wealthy broker, who accidentally killed one of his employees and told the world it was a case of suicide, was seized with frightful horror when confronted by a likeness of the dead man's face, many years after.

With all the sin was not likened unto his partner, and had not applied for a position to the very man he knew was the cause of his untimely years previous. the old broker would have no doubt carried his ever-haunting secret to his grave, but fate conspired to bring about proper retribution to the sorrowing family and a combination of circumstances served to add personal interest to the unfolding of the plot.

WOMAN WHO DARED.—Nell Pierce, favorite film detective of the motion picture kingdom watched the most subtle of crimes in her notable career. That she succeeded in running to earth the perpetrator of the dastardly deed against the station seemed nothing short of marvellous, but Nell is something of a marvel in herself and rarely suffers defeat.

Perhaps the story does not unfold as most plots do, but the mystery is not explained until the very last which keeps one "keyed up" with excitement and interest.

A series of remarkable changes of disguise characterize Miss Pierce's work in this film as above the average character impersonations. In short, "The Woman Who Dared" is an unusual production.

THANHOUSER.

FOR HER SAKE.—In the eve of the Civil War, a young southern girl secretly marries two suitors. The sum of her choice goes to fight under the Stars and Bars, the other to the Stripes and Stars. Full of bitterness, throws his fortunes in with the Union.

Later the young confederate is captured and the officer before whom he is brought to be questioned turns out to be his old rival. But the man in blue is lacking in chivalry. He forces the helpless foe, puts him in a cell, and by harsh treatment tries to break his spirit.

The girl, hearing of her lover's plight determines to rescue him. She eludes the sentries, reaches the prison, and by bribing the guard, the man a file with which he cuts away the bars. Then the two flee, but at the last moment are discovered by enemy forces. The officer, sight of the man, but the fugitives reach their horse and ride away.

The Union officer, enraged at the escape of his enemy takes up the pursuit himself. He tracks the pair to the home of the girl, and finds under the Federal lines. Whatever faults the Unionist has, he is not a coward. He stations his men around the house, and then with a flag of truce and escape, and, pistol in hand, enters alone. He boasts of the feat of making his foe a prisoner singlehanded.

In his search he finds the door of the parlor locked. He suspects inside a secret panel, smashes down the doors, and finds the man he wants, and he does not need arms.

The Confederate, grief stricken, is bending over the body of his fiancee, laid out for burial. The sentry's discharge of a rifling at him, had extinguished the light of his loved one's life.

CHECKMATE.—A young heiress had two suitors, one a well-to-do nobleman, with a long line of ancestors and wealth, and the other a bright, young American business man. The girl's aunt, with visions of high society in her mind's eye, favors the nobleman and is hurt and grieved when the girl selects the American. The baron, who never thought for a moment that the girl would be rejected, vows vengeance on his successful rival, and induces a friend to aid him in his plot.

When the young man calls for the fiancee, he finds she is out and waits for her in the room where the baron's friend is also waiting. In the moments later, the servant, attracted by cries, rushes in to find the baron lying wounded on the floor with the other bending over him. A knife in his hand. The baron and the aunt both swear that Jack did the stabbing, and the young man's protestations saw him with the knife. It is a clear case, according to the jury, and Jack is sent to prison for life.

But his sweetheart is faithful to him and determines to prove his innocence. Her task proves hard for her. She meets on the street a poor resembling Jack, a homeless outcast, whom she plans to work with. She finds him in a garret, where a law said gave him the food and shelter that he cannot lend himself. The girl makes a bargain with him. He is to take the place of the prisoner about to be paid liberally regardless of the length of time he serves. And the man gladly consents.

The heiress plans the substitution in such a clever way that the suspicions of the authorities are not aroused. The aunt, confronted with the man she has wronged, believes he is a ghost and admits that she and the baron plotted to put an innocent man in prison. She confesses that the baron's wounds were self-inflicted, the servant and the policeman, though they swore to the truth, placed a wrong construction on what they saw, and a man was punished for a crime he never committed.

The convict is promptly pardoned, without the

THEATRICAL ARCHITECT

FRANZ-CARL-KOENIG

OFFICE, STUDIO, AND SHOPS 4912 TO 20 PARKSIDE AVE., PHILA.

We not only make Plans and build

Theatres and Vaudeville Houses

We also build

MOVING PICTURE THEATRES

We have built over 60 Theatres the last 5 years which are all ORIGINAL in Construction, Design and Decorations

AMERICAN.

A PITTSBURG MILLIONAIRE.—Philip Nash, who advances rapidly from the position of a common laborer to that of general manager of one of the wealthiest and most important of our steel manufacturing interests; the marriage of this young man to his boyhood sweetheart; his wife's contentment with her lot, and then the final disruption of their happy home, due to the changed conditions attendant upon his rapid advance in the commercial world. The depiction of Nash's eventual downfall, after he has shown conclusively his preference for a singer of note, a young woman famous in the light opera world, whose charms and fascinations lead to his complete undoing, is very strong.

ON THE INSTALLMENT PLAN.—Two chaps from the country arrive in New York in their search for fame and fortune. On their success is dependent a large share in money which they will receive from a wealthy uncle and aunt if they make good. They fit up a small flat on the installment plan and then look for a position. This they find it impossible to obtain and therefore find it impossible to pay the installment colleege. The collector calls in his huskies who remove all the furniture from the young fellows' flat leaving the boys nothing but their bed clothes and pajamas. Coincident with this occurring they receive a telegram from their aunt and uncle that they propose to dine with them that same day. The boys are in an awful predicament as they have been writing their relations that they were getting along fine in the city. They have to keep up an appearance of prosperity. They discover that their neighbor in the next flat has left the city for the day and decide to appropriate his belongings temporarily. This they do and likewise take advantage of his well stocked larder and some extra suits of his clothes.

The aunt and uncle arrive and the neighbor returns to find the empty flat. His consternation can better be imagined than described. Investigation leads him to the boys' room. He indignantly takes back his possessions. The uncle and aunt leave in high dudgeon and the boys are left as they started—with an empty flat and a suit of pajamas apiece.

TOO MUCH AUNT.—The spirit of deviltry has been well developed in the boy, and the father believes that "to spare the rod is to spoil the child." In the family, however, there is a doting aunt and it leads him to the boys' room to indignantly takes back his possessions. The uncle and aunt leave in high dudgeon and the boys are left as they started—with an empty flat and a suit of pajamas apiece.

TOO MUCH AUNT.—The spirit of deviltry has been well developed in the boy, and the father believes that "to spare the rod is to spoil the child." In the family, however, there is a doting aunt and it leads him to the boys' room to indulge the youth by excess of cuddling. The youngster takes advantage of this weakness and on one occasion to remain away from the hated school, he has only to pretend to be suddenly affected with a violent "humanpicks." Mother's as far as his mother and aunt are concerned and he is assured of a day at home, until the father takes in hand. He has every reason to suspect the young man is bluffing and to make sure calls in a doctor and a specialist, who, after examining the lad's complaint a simple case of "Hookyites." Then, in spite of the tearful protests of Clarence's champion the father takes the matter into his own hands and administers the slipper with well applied energetics. The young man is completely cured and she he to school with great alacrity and to sit down, but firmly convinced that the old man knows his business.

A QUIET EVENING AT HOME.—The reel deals with one George Gibson, a commercial traveler, who returns home from a rather long and arduous trip on a Saturday. His wife is delighted to see him and gladly acquiesces in his request for a real old-fashioned quiet evening at home. After making her spouse comfortable with slippers and pipe, the loving wife takes her sewing and they settle for the day for a quiet evening at home, but to be. Things start to happen immediately. A neighbor reminds the wife of an engagement she has made some days before, but to please her husband the wife excuses herself from keeping the appointment, saying that she expects her husband home at any moment. They once more settle down to their quiet evening, but an answer comes to her invitation from the neighbor saying that she cannot wait any longer and must go out to take care of the house and look after Georges comfort and wait for George's arrival.

The old ladies arrive and it is up to the wife to make good on her assertion that George had not yet arrived at home. The husband is therefore hidden in the next room. He manages to get away from the card game and relieve his embarrassing position at the first opportunity she leaves. The old ladies, the dinner and the spinster aunt start to investigate their friend's flat and private affairs. In the meantime the husband and her jealous sweetheart return from an evening out and the most upon entering her room, catches sight of a pair of masculine feet under her bed. George has hidden there in order to be out of the sight of the old ladies upon their tour of the apartment. The maid thinks George a burglar and calls for help. By the time they are through with George he is a pitiable sight and everybody in your audience will have a sore side from laughter. There is sufficient slap-stick comedy in this reel that, when coupled with the logical and connected story it tells, it will undoubtedly prove to be one of the funniest reels released during the week.

CHAMPION.

THE OLD MAN AND JIM.—The "old man" never had much to say, excepting to Jim, and Jim was the father's favorite. The old man knew, and so did everybody in the town, including the lady's own husband, that Jim loved his neighbor's wife. But Jim didn't care and the old man was so completely wrapped up in him that he closed his eyes to the silliness of the lad. Nine sons and Jim was the wildest of them all. Then came news of the war that was soon to break forth between North and South.

And the inevitable happened. The lady's husband saw Jim stooped to kiss his wife and she permitted him to try. A row that resulted in a disgraceful fight was precipitated and while the husband lay stunned and kneeling upon the floor, the news was thrown like a bomb upon the excited crowd in the room. The war has broken out! The war, that terrible, but necessary slaughter of brave men was begun and Jim was the next to go. Some wagging tongues suggested that he had to go to escape the result of his amorous folly.

However, "old" Higler soon made back that Jim was not removed from the whole regiment, white or black, but his fighting was as good as his farming was bad and held carried two old dog through the hardest fight that ever was.

The old man wanted a letter to Jim and the read it to the boys. It said, "Guard Jim, take care o' yourself." Then came the battle of Petersburg. Here I cannot recommend the story in print for behind was cursing, and there was why mowed down the lads in line. They can spark kept Jude like a wild, for he dreamed only the time to get up to the enemy's line. Jim was pointed them to other and pushed to assist. In the fight Jim was wounded by a bullet and on Jim, a lieutenant with the arm gone.

So battle in those terrible times was over. None but the dead and wounded left on the battle up curious ones and those luxurious dead as one to life. Amongst even dusky was the face of beloved Jim held tight in the hand of his own Jim.

While his life blood ebbed away, Jim appeared to him a vision of the best great figure of liberty, George Washington, and in his ears sound the farther of emancipation. Amazing thing for whom Jim was now dying and believing those two great legends for Freedom, about whom he had comprehended in her rebus of freedom. Blending the visions the vision fades and Jim with an effort rises to his feet, climbs to the top of the dead and waving the beloved flag he calls to them to awaken and come to the battle. Furiously waving the tattered flag he dies, and the men, in spite of General Ulysses S. Grant and some of his aides.

Think of a picture that was fair enough up to the shoulder and the head of Jim and the war all through and a gorgeous red and white and blue covering him. The old man standing near him. Everybody looking away with tears, and the hand of the flag has rings to his father's, the old man's wedding ring on his own. Well, good bye Jim, and true to yourself.

SOLAX.

CORINNE IN DOLLYLAND.—[illegible] nothing splendid by her [illegible] was [illegible] dainty doubles that was [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] rently prospering in his love affair when a stranger appears on the scene. Wallace Crawford, an American patriot, was evidently finds Pablo trying bravery on his mama. Crawford rides up to the home of Rosita and asks for a drink. He is quick to note the lovers' tone and gradually carries off the Cuban girl and reserves to rave for again. He rides away and Rosita, forgetting Pablo, seeks with attractive to patch concern after the visitor. Pablo calls with his guitar and, as was his wont, played to the girl, who, second lesson, sits, his bowed his thoughts to another. Pablo, in a scene and awed on the course, hailed to steer by the surf. Some of this unfinished, Rosita dreams and her dream is depicted on the screen.

In her dream she meets Crawford, who is an adept in the art of disarming the opposite women. He attempts to coerce her, but is repulsed. Knowing the laughing of women for this ery he produces rare jewels and adorns the girl with a rich necklace, which she admires. She is now ready to be in his arms. He puts her more away, Crawford leading his horse. They are detected in their clandestine lovemaking by Pablo, who summons the guards. Rosita, in her dream, thinks Crawford means honorably by her and she directs his steps to the church and asks the priest to unite them in marriage. Crawford has not reckoned on this phase of his—to him—harmless love affair and he declines. He is overpowered by Pablo and only the intervention of the holy Father saves the life of the faithless American. During the struggle Rosita awakens from her sad dream. She is contrite, and the drama closes with the venerable Father uniting Rosita and Pablo in marriage.

BISON.

"THE HALF-BREED'S PLAN."—Dick, the husband of Manchuria's daughter, Daisy, is returning home with the money from the sale of cattle. Daisy and her father go to meet him, he is in a buggy and she on horseback. The half-breed plans to waylay them with his pals and secure the money. His plans go away, however, for Daisy, mounted on a fleet horse, gallops home and secures aid, and the cowboys by desperate riding rescue Dick and the old man, who are engaged in a running fight with their pursuers. One by one the desperadoes are picked off until they are all captured or wounded.

"THE SALTED MINE."—Burns "salts" a mine, hoping to sell it to Hacker, but Davis, a gambler, wins Hacker's money. Hacker starts home with a lonely road and wounds him, but is scared away by a prospector who hears the shot and carries Davis to a dwelling. The wallet drops from Davis' pocket and the prospector tosses it in the wagon. The prospector strikes a rich claim and tells his wife. The cowboys and others and flies claim papers first, driving the prospector off, who hitches up and finds the wallet, which he appropriates. He in payment of his stolen mine. Davis starts to work the mine and discovers that it is "salted" the salt is the fake of Burns for Hacker's benefit.

TRIALS OF BUD BROWN.—Bud soon demonstrates his ability to protect himself, and wins the friendship of the cowboys' sporting chum. The bully, who loves the boss' daughter and resents her preference for Bud, but takes his defeat with a sad grimace. Bud, but nearly loses his life when later attacked by Luke and his companions. He is saved by the girl, who calls the cowboys, and Luke and his pals are kicked out of camp.

ECLAIR.

PUNCH.—Peter has been out of work for some time, and his distress has fallen upon his family. His wife, Jane, endeavors to get work, but in vain. Their little boy George, of course, adds to the misfortune and trouble of his parents, and, having seen a fine Mr. Punch in the window of a toy store, the unfortunate mother lets him have it. The mother is penniless, and is obliged to resist the child's pleadings. A little later George falls ill—deprivation has undermined his health, and in his delirium, the child dreams of Mr. Punch, and calls continually for him. The mother is heartbroken, and in her crazed anguish she rushes out of the house, and entering a toy shop, seizes her opportunity to hide "Mr. Punch" under her shawl. She leaves the store hurriedly, but she has been seen by the shop proprietor, who quickly follows her. Jane rushes home and places the longed-for toy in the arms of the child, and is beside herself with joy when she sees that the possession of his one desire, seems to restore the child to the normal. In favor seems to have disappeared. At this moment the Toy Dealer enters, accompanied by two Policemen, who immediately place Jane under arrest for theft. At this, the husband returns, bringing the good news that he has found work when he learns what has happened, he is furious, but with his wife, for he cannot understand how she could bring herself to steal, even for her child's sake. The Merchant has been looking on all this while, and now understands the whole situation; he is a kind-hearted man, and, pitying the poor mother, he orders the policeman to free her, and leave the premises. At this great and unexpected kindness, the wife falls, weeping, into her husband's arms. The Toy Merchant then tells the little fellow that he may keep the "Mr. Punch," and departs after having received an affectionate kiss from the grateful child!

BEWARE OF THE BOMB.—The poor Janitor is frightened to death. Just outside his door is a suspicious box, in appearance quite alarming. It is recognized as a Bomb. The Police Department is called, and the officers sent to investigate do not go all patient room except a single sigh of relief that they watch the exit of the Municipal Laboratories drive off with the ominous article. Arrived at the fair laboratories, wherein the Expert Expert opens the suspicious box, the officers standing around in awed silence. No time announcement of all, when the box is at last opened, there lies a most luscious pineapple, of so tempting an odor that the Expert decides to "try one and eaten! Soon there is nothing left of the pineapple but the rind.

Next day an similar box is brought into the Laboratories. Of course, the Experts know all about such boxes now, no stupid precautions is necessary in this case—the quicker they get at the pineapple, the better, their mouths water at the very thought. Next instant, a crowd of greedy friends know quite where they are—a real bomb has exploded and scattered them to smithereens! They are justly punished for their gluttony.

IMP.

"ARTFUL KATE."—The story opens with a pretty love scene between the lieutenant and his betrothed, Kate Stanley. Hammond is ordered to join his regiment in Cuba and Kate is heartbroken. He tells her they must part and the girl decides to be brave. She makes him a promise that he will be true to her and not indulge in any flirtation with the dark-eyed senoritas that have been told lure men from their vows of constancy in the land of flowers. Hammond is off to the killing of sweet and constancy. Kate places in his watchcase a photograph of herself, kisses her manly soldier and the leave-taking is over—for a time.

The scene reverts to Cuba. Lieutenant Hammond arrives and is impressed with the country. Kate, having relatives in Havana, receives an invitation to pay them a visit and eagerly accepts, thinking she will see her lover. She is apprised of his arrival at Havana, and, knowing the predilection of soldiers to flirt, resolves to investigate. Attired in native Spanish costume, she goes out on the street and is immediately deserted by her fickle lover, who is looking for adventure. He does not recognize her and, to her anger, he attempts a violent flirtation. She repulses him, but he is persistent and is not to be denied. Then she is obsessed by an idea to accede to his advances. Hammond seeks an introduction to her through mutual friends and the enamored young man is persistent in his attentions. Kate, taking advantage of knowledge of being able to converse in the Spanish language, but procures a language book and is assisted by Kate, who is a fine linguist and a native of the country. Kate, by arts best known to women, obtains possession of her portrait from his watch to the great rage of Hammond, who is original, and Hammond is a willing victim to her wiles. There is a pretty love scene, in which the American soldier presents his suit with fervor, and Kate highly enjoying the situation.

The scene then reverts back to the States. Hammond has returned, a Spanish-American War hero, resplendent in his uniform—a hero universally admired. He loses no time in visiting Kate, who has preceded him home. He takes her in his arms. She questions him closely and playfully accuses him of flirting with the senoritas of Cuba. He indignantly denies it, hurt and reproachful. Kate produces his watch with the picture gone and inquires the reason. He is nonplussed, but, like a gentleman, he proceeds to lie artistically. He tells her that he had lost the one which, although outnumbered, he won by wielding his sword, but the portrait was lost from his watch. Kate playfully laughs through her tears and she will spring a surprise. He does so and she produces the picture and, with mischief, sings the dance that charmed him. She accuses him of his perfidy and Hammond can only stare. He realizes that he is checked mate and the girl has proof of the most positive sort. Of course, Kate is a woman and the result is inevitable. When her lover takes his dismissal literally and leaves, she affrightedly starts to recall him and fight him—and where better than—she wishes by unexpectedly returning at the opportune time to read her thoughts. She, of course, forgives him and, being a true woman, surrenders to her in his arms, thankful that women are prone to change their minds very suddenly in affairs of the heart.

POWERS.

AN UNFORESEEN COMPLICATION.—Professor Schmaltz, a professor of physiology, is about to demonstrate to the world his power of mesmerism. He calls on Jack Jones, and is met by his daughter, to assist him. Jack consents, providing the professor consents to the marriage of himself and May. The professor agrees to this arrangement. The great day is at hand and before the faculty of the college the Professor states he will now mesmerize Jack and then himself, claiming that after the bodies are in a cataleptic condition the spirits leave the body and commune together and after a time nature will resume her sway and the spirits will return to their respective bodies, but strange and unforeseen complications arise and the spirits, instead of returning to their respective bodies, get mixed. Jack's spirit enters the body of the Professor and the Professor's enters the body of Jack. Hence the boisterous manner of the Professor and the dignified manner of the young student, Jack. The unforeseen circumstances happening create a tremendous hoot. At last the Professor finally gets Jack and rights the wrong by again mesmerizing Jack and himself and the natural spirits returns to their respective bodies.

UNDER SOUTHERN SKIES.—Jimmy McCluskey holds a mortgage on the Peyton plantation and slaves. As he is about to foreclose on the property he secures the guardianship of an old servant girl, named Hoe, with whom he is in love. Ibra Sunnyside of the plantation is in love with Hannah. He cares nothing for her as the octaroon girl claims his entire attention. Mr. Peyton, expecting important mail from Europe, sends Paul, one of the slaves, to the landing. McCluskey, overhearing this, determines to get the bag. He arrives on the bay and finds the bay sitting on the bag buying his picture taken. At the foreclosure sale Mc-Cluskey buys the girl contributing Ibra Sunnyside. In the meantime, Paul, the slave, has been killed and the mail bag rifled. The struggle has been witnessed by an Indian. McCluskey and the octaroon are about to board the steamer Packet when McCluskey is accused of the murder of the boy. Ibra makes a rush on the scene with the photograph showing McCluskey, club in hand, standing over the boy. McCluskey is seized and put in irons and eventually escapes. He meets the Indian who saw him attack Paul and a terrific struggle and fisticuffs ensue between the two and the most realistic combat ever witnessed between two strong men takes place. The Indian eventually overpowers McCluskey and leaves him for dead and takes the glad tidings to the octaroon and George.

LUX.

BRONCO BILL, THE BRAVE COWBOY.—One of our believers in the western plains falls in love with the pretty daughter of a miner. He is handsome and daring, so of course the course is clear and Bill marries the girl. Bill has the sea of matrimony. There is, however, an adage whose tarnished condition at present is truth concerning love and a path that does not run smooth. This Bill soon finds out to his chagrin. Jim Jackson, a neighbor, is known to be an uncouth fellow, who interferes with Bill in a saloon. Bill is not aware that his opponent is the father of his wife, but knocks him senseless in knocking Jackson out. Later, Gracie brings her father home and, seeing their Jackson, recognizing Bill, does not give him a warm welcome. In fact Bill is ordered to leave Gracie alone and things look very black for Bill. A few weeks later Jackson organizes a strike among the miners, the plan being to raid the engineers' hut, and make off with the engineers' wives. Bill sends word to Jackson makes off with the cash box while the engineers' wives attract attention by firing his revolver. By this means he outwits the aid of Bill and another cowboy and Bill rides off in chase of the thief. After many miles of exciting chase, in lassoing the man. He is very much surprised to find it is the father of Grace and finally, snatching the cash box, he releases the prisoner bidding him ride off as soon as possible. A day or so later Cupid sets a cunning trap and into it fall Bill, his sweetheart, and her father.

MATILDA LOVESTRUCK.—Matilda is a lady, a "quilter lady," in fact, of the backwaters, and she falls in love with a fireman. The fireman has not a heart as warm as the flames with which he works, and the affair for him is not kindled in his noble bosom. Matilda then languishes for a sight of her beloved and the film deals with her advances in such a way as to cause roars of mirth. Matilda is a veritable Lady Jane and the fireman is even more elusive than the proverbial Bunthorne.

NESTOR.

THE LIGHT BEYOND.—So studious and retiring in disposition was Dave Randal, that no one, not even Annie Rooney, knew that he loved her. They met grown up together, and now that he worked for his father, she as frankly accepted his seeks and made no secret of it.

Then, like a bolt from the clear sky, came the announcement of her engagement to the sailor, Robert Summers.

Quietly Dave packed up his few belongings, then, leaving a letter of congratulation for Annie, in which he also acknowledged his love for the girl, the young man bade the Rooney family a hasty adieu, and started for the city.

The sailor and his bride had been married but two short years when old man Rooney, much against the more experienced seaman's better judgment, induced his son-in-law to accompany him across the bay. Summers had made the trip way across, however, than a violent storm arose, and although Annie, with baby Rosie in her arms, watched and waited on the shore that night and all the next day, the tide but brought her back two bats, their overturned boat, and a broken oar.

Five years passed, four of which Annie and little Rosie spent in the city, and although at Mrs. Watkins', where they had recently moved, their two rooms were but small and scantily furnished, the child seemed happier than ever before.

This, Annie learned from the landlady, was due to Rosie's new friend, the rising young contractor on the floor below. So, when tired of watching her mother sew, the tiny girl would slip downstairs to "help" her admirer—usually by cuddling in his arms and falling fast asleep.

One day, however, the child failed to appear. He called Mrs. Watkins, who told him the little one was sick and pointed out the room. But at the door the contractor was stopped by the doctor. In a couple of days he might come. Sorrowfully the young man returned to his room, but when next he called, it was Rosie's voice that bade him enter.

Hearing voices, Annie hurried from the back room, and what was her surprise in discovering that the young contractor was none other than Dave Randal.

Rosie was delighted. Clasping a chubby arm about the neck of each, she stoutly declared that Dave was to be her new papa—a prophecy which, happily, later on came true.

RELIANCE.

"TREE MEN."—Nell is the idol of the camp. Allen is favored with her affections, but she declines to marry him until he has proven his ability to refrain from drink. At the Yellow Jug tavern a man has his pocket picked by a gambler and the Indian exposes the thief. Nell draws a revolver, exonerating the Indian in his stand and the money is returned to its rightful owner. Allen having satisfied her that he has lost his appetite for liquor, wins her hand, but after the marriage he relapses into his old ways, and his selfishness leaves Nell destitute. A former admirer of Nell, Pedro, a handsome, thrifty Mexican, is furious at the conduct of Allen. The Indian forces her to accept a bag of gold nuggets which he has found, and Allen take it away from her and loses it gambling and drinking. The Indian tells the Mexican, who starts off to remonstrate with Allen and reaches the cabin as Allen, resenting Nell's reproaches, attacks her. Pedro interferes and is furiously set upon by Allen. In self-defense Pedro is compelled to kill Allen, and accompanied by Nel makes his escape. The Indian, who has been trailing Pedro and has seen the struggle through the window, comes into the house. He knows that the camp will avenge Allen's death and that the Mexican will be shown neither justice nor mercy. He hides in the room and when the body of Allen is discovered the Indian is accused of the crime, and stoically makes no defense, restored to sacrifice his life for the happiness of Nell and Pedro.

AMONG THE EXHIBITORS

Columbus, Ohio.—The Pastime Theater Company let a contract to Mr. W. L. Jameson to construct a moving picture theater at 17 South High Street, which will be ready for business a couple of weeks.

Kewaunee, Wisc.—Kewaunee has a new picture theater, which is situated in the building on the corner of Ellis and Milwaukee Streets, to seat about 150 patrons. The admission is 5 cents.

Cleveland, Ohio.—The Isis Theater at Superior Avenue and 30th Street has thrown open its doors and is now receiving patronage.

Harvard, Wisc.—M. J. R. Kelly has rented the White Building here and will have it remodeled into a moving picture theater.

West Bend, Wisc.—The Colonial Theater has changed hands and hereafter will be known as the Princess Theater under the management of Messrs. Manes & Day.

Superior, Wisc.—Mr. Sam Roberg has purchased the Model Theater at 522 Tower Avenue.

Kenosha, Wisc.—Mr. Baldwin & Shafe are negotiating for the purchase of the property on which Wigley Hall on College Avenue is located, and will convert it into a moving picture theater.

Pottsville, Pa.—Mr. Charles Brummer purchased the Lyric Moving Picture Theater.

Oskaloosa, Iowa.—Oskaloosa is to have another moving picture theater to be known as the Princess Theater, owned by the Princess Theater Company. The new theater is to be located on the corner of First Avenue and First Street, in the W. J. Newby Building.

Milwaukee, Wisc.—The Atlas Amusement Company has purchased two lots at Twentieth Street and Burleigh Line Avenue and will erect a large moving picture and vaudeville theater.

Macon, Ga.—J. Merton is considering the advisability of establishing a new moving picture theater here.

Litchfield, Minn.—The American Amusement Company has decided to establish a new moving picture theater here.

Jefferson, Iowa.—A. Hood has sold the Busy Bee Moving Picture Theater here to Ira Wigglus.

Mankato, Minn.—H. H. Wolcott has decided to establish a new moving picture show here.

Wabasha, Minn.—W. H. Chamberlain is making arrangements to start a new moving picture theater here.

Los Angeles, Cal.—H. H. Vanderlurgh is taking bids for the erection of a new moving picture theater on Monetta Avenue and Forty-seventh Place.

Centralia, Wash.—Mr. J. D. Rice has decided to remodel his building here into a vaudeville and moving picture theater.

Dodgeville, Wisc.—Joseph J. Schmitz has purchased the Crystal Theater here from D. M. Jones.

Ornamental Theatres

PLASTER RELIEF DECORATIONS

Theatres Designed Everywhere

Write for Illustrated Theatre Catalog. Send us Sizes of Theatre for Special Designs

The Decorators Supply Co.

2549 Archer Avenue : : CHICAGO, ILL.

Canon City, Colo.—Robert W. Foss and L. G. Ludwig have purchased the moving picture theater here from Messrs. Hoyle & Schultz.

New Albany, Ind.—Mr. Sullivan has opened a new moving picture theater on East Market Street. It is known as the Victoria.

Brazil, Ind.—Hugh McGurty and Martin Murphy are making arrangements to start a new moving picture theater here.

Logansport, Ind.—Frank Schafer has opened a new moving picture theater here.

Gibsonburg, Ohio.—L. L. Daniels is making arrangements to open a moving picture theater here.

Brenham, Texas.—Mr. Henry Question has opened a new moving picture theater here.

Bryan, Texas.—Messrs. Fairman and Long are making arrangements to start a new moving picture theater here.

Herrington, Kans.—Dr. L. D. Blachly and Rose Dennis are planning the erection of a new moving picture theater here.

Lima, Ohio.—H. B. Hoffman is making arrangements to open a new moving picture theater here.

Watseka, Ill.—E. H. Mantell & Son have bought the moving picture business from Will Curse.

Keithsburg, Ill.—Geo. H. Pugh has purchased the Gem Moving Picture Theater here from D. B. Mayhanbaw.

Princeton, Ill.—A. E. Long is planning to open a new moving picture theater here.

Corunna, Mich.—Mr. Hemingway has opened a new moving picture theater in the Millard Building.

Sioux Falls, S. Dak.—John Bigger has purchased the Majestic Theater here from Will H. Lyon.

Comordia, Kans.—Mr. Hoyt Axtell has leased the Natural Gas Hall and will convert it into a moving picture theater.

Wentworth, S. Dak.—E. W. Erickson & Son have opened a new moving picture theater here.

Chesley, Can. Man.—Joe Amico, Ed. Gerow and R. Lemieux have purchased the Chesley Moving Picture Theater here.

San Diego, Cal.—Joseph Schwartz has opened the Dreamland Theater at the corner of 10th Street and A.

Columbus, Ohio.—L. O. Jones has been awarded the contract for the erection of a new theater in West Broad Street for Dr. W. E. Edmiston.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Robert Seibert has purchased the Z. Gay Avenue Moving Picture Theater at 2710 Seneca Street from J. M. Hemelinger.

Portland, Ore.—Mrs. Ada Dobson has secured a permit for the erection of a two-story moving picture theater on Union Avenue.

Albia, Iowa.—John L. Morgan and Thos. Mosier, of Bussorah, have decided to start a new moving picture theater in Cressan.

Vincennes, Ind.—Theodore Charles, of Waukegan, Ill., opened the Star Theater January 21. Great preparations have been made, over new style floor and seats and fancy signs in front. Charles believes in good music and has installed a three-piece orchestra. Miss Laura Robinson, of vaudeville fame, has been engaged to sing. Both Powers and Motiograph machines have been installed, under the care of H. J. Hinkle, operator.

Temple, Tex.—Since the first of the year Mr. A. Vogel, manager of the Temple Theater, has secured some of the best Vaudeville ever seen here. At the Majestic Frank Lucas, manager, Mr. Al. Dowdy sings. Mr. Dowdy has a splendid voice and is an drawing card.

Springfield, Mass.—William C. Cummings has leased the Grand Moving Picture Theater here from H. J. Brown.

Girard, Ohio.—Ward Wilson has leased the Lima Theater here.

Watseka, Ill.—W. J. Glass has purchased the Royal Moving Picture Theater here from Mr. Lorner.

White Hall, Ill.—Mr. Porter has sold the Bungalow Moving Picture Theater in Jacksonville to Wm. Sweeney.

La Grange, Ill.—Mr. Ira J. Smith is planning the establishment of a new moving picture theater here.

Tacoma, Wash.—W. J. Walker is making arrangements to open a new moving picture theater here.

Wabasha, Minn.—W. H. Chamberlain is making arrangements to start a new moving picture theater here.

Wenatchee, Wash.—W. T. Reeves has received bids for new vaudeville and moving picture theater here.

Nashville, Tenn.—Dr. Dupuy, a colored man is planning to open a new moving picture theater here for colored people.

Hancock, Mich.—Thomas Coombs is considering the erection of a new theater here.

Red Springs, S. Dak.—M. Block is making arrangements for the erection of a new moving picture theater in West Avenue.

Rhinelander, Wis.—Hanson & Taylor have disposed of their interests in the Opera House and Regent Theater to Mr. Kruschewski.

Phoenix, Ariz.—The New Airdome Theater has opened here and is now doing an excellent business.

Wheeling, W. Va.—Barth's Opera House has been remodeled into a moving picture and amateur vaudeville theater.

Licensed Release Dates

BIOGRAPH.

Jan. 26—The Poor Shut Men (Dr.).....991
Jan. 30—A Wreath of Orange Blossoms (Dr.).....993
Feb. 2—Three Sisters (Dr.).....997
Feb. 6—Hiawatha, or Long Ago (Dr.).....997
Feb. 9—Possibilities Engagement Kiss (Com.).....997
Feb. 13—What Shall We Do With Our Old? (Dr.).....994
Feb. 16—Sister Teeka (Dr.).....998

EDISON.

Jan. 20—Mike the Miner (Dr.).....990
Jan. 24—An Eventful Evening (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 25—The Lover and the Comet (Com.).....995
Jan. 27—The Black Bordered Letter (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 31—The Try Out (Dr.).....995
Feb. 1—Bungtown as Rooms (Com.).....
Feb. 3—Selling Old Master (Dr.).....
Feb. 7—The Doctor (Dr.).....1000
Feb. 8—Two Valentines (Com.).....1000
Feb. 10—His First Commission (Dr.).....990
Feb. 14—The Rajah (Dr.).....1000
Feb. 15—The Ransom of Red Chief (Dr.).....
Feb. 17—A Stage Romance (Dr.).....

ESSANAY.

Jan. 28—The Two Reformations (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 30—The Jilted Joker (Com.).....640
Jan. 30—Hunk and Lank (Com.).....396
Feb. 1—Carmonita, The Faithful (Dr.).....995
Feb. 5—A Woman's Votes (Com.).....566
Feb. 7—Ten Words For Twenty-five Cents (Com.).....425
Feb. 11—The Bad Man's Downfall (Dr.).....1000
Feb. 14—Getting Sister Married (Com.).....
Feb. 18—Cattleman's Daughter (Dr.).....

GAUMONT.
G. Kleine.

Feb. 7—The Strongest Thing (Dr.).....605
Feb. 7—Digger's Moving Day (Com.).....395
Feb. 11—Napoleon In Exile (Dr.).....797
Feb. 13—Autumn Leaves (Scenic).....185
Feb. 14—The Reformation of the Suffragettes (Com.).....665
Feb. 14—Land Marks of Avignon, France (Scenic).....338
Feb. 18—Saul and David (Bib.).....128
Feb. 18—At the End of the Road (Dr.).....838

KALEM.

Jan. 18—Her Chum's Brother (Dr.).....980
Jan. 20—Robbie and the Redskins (Dr.).....850
Jan. 25—The Secret of the Still (Dr.).....850
Jan. 27—Puritans and Indians (Dr.).....970
Feb. 1—The Sheriff's Sister (Dr.).....1000
Feb. 3—The Trail of the Tomas Charm (Dr.).....1000
Feb. 5—Little Sister (Dr.).....970
Feb. 10—The Broken Trail (Dr.).....1000
Feb. 12—Grandmother's Will Story (Dr.).....975
Feb. 17—The Lost Ribbon (Dr.).....1000

LUBIN.

Jan. 16—Easy Coin (Com.).....250
Jan. 18—A Brother's Redemption (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 23—Father Makes Himself Useful (Com.).....975
Jan. 26—Father Love (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 30—His Rogue Uncle (Com.).....1000
Feb. 2—Age vs. Youth (Dr.).....1000
Feb. 6—A Double Elopement (Dr.).....960
Feb. 9—The Petticoat Sheriff (Com.).....1000
Feb. 13—The Snow-Girl's Stratagem (Dr.).....1000
Feb. 16—Getting Even (Com.).....600
Feb. 16—Schultz Has the Smallpox (Com.).....400
Feb. 20—The Test (Dr.).....1000

MELIES.

Jan. 12—The Owner of the "L L" Ranch (Dr.).....980
Jan. 19—Changing Cooks (Com.).....980
Jan. 26—How Mary Met the Cowpunchers (Dr.).....980
Feb. —Outlaw a Sister (Dr.).....
Feb. 9—Tony the Greaser (Dr.).....980
Feb. 16—Bully and His Wife (Dr.).....1000

PATHE.

Feb. 6—Max Has The Boxing Fever (Com.)...561
Feb. 6—An Imitator of Blondin (Com.).....400
Feb. 8—Legally Dead (Dr.).....1000
Feb. 10—The Missing Bride (Dr.).....960
Feb. 10—Review of the Chilian Troops (Sc.)..180
Feb. 13—Silver Leaf's Heart (Dr.).....1000
Feb. 13—Bertie's Apprenticeship (Com.).....680
Feb. 13—Lamaique Cemetery in China (Scenic) 315
Feb. 15—A Western Courtship (Dr.).....715
Feb. 17—The Accident (Indus.).....266
Feb. 17—Wildbee's Bootie (Com.).....499
Feb. 17—A Boy's Wit (Dr.).....462
Feb. 18—Lieut. Scott's Narrow Escape (Dr.)..984

SELIG.

Jan. 23—A Robust Patient (Com.).....1000
Jan. 26—The Spy (Dr.).....
Jan. 30—The Little Circus Rider (Dr.).....
Feb. 2—The Curse of the Forest (Dr.).....
Feb. 6—Too Much Mother-in-law (Com.).....
Feb. 9—Thelma (Dr.).....
Feb. 13—The Survival of the Fittest (Dr.).....1000
Feb. 16—The Buccaneers (Dr.).....1000

URBAN-ECLIPSE.
G. Kleine.)

Jan. 25—Scenes in Jersey of the British Isles (Scenic).....296
Feb. 5—On the Border of the Forest (Dr.)..885
Feb. 5—Canadian Iron Center, Port Arthur, Ontario (Scenic).....110
Feb. 15—Catherine Howard (Dr.).....1005

VITAGRAPH.

Jan. 28—Davy Jones in the South Seas.....
Jan. 31—Dears' Rescues (Dr.).....
Feb. 3—Society and the Man (Dr.).....
Feb. 6—A Queen for a Day (Com.).....
Feb. 7—The Deluge (Dr.).....978
Feb. 10—The League of Mercy (Dr.).....
Feb. 11—At the White Man's Door (Dr.).....
Feb. 14—Consuming Love (Dr.).....
Feb. 17—When the Light Waned (Dr.).....
Feb. 18—The New Stenographer (Com.).....

THIS WEEK'S PROGRAMME OF LICENSED FILMS.

Monday, February 13.

Biograph—What Shall We Do With Our Old? (Dr.).....994
Lubin—The Snow Girl's Stratagem (Dr.).....1000
Pathe—Betty's Apprenticeship (Com.).....689
Pathe—Lamaique Cemetery in China (Scenic)..315
Selig—The Survival of the Fittest (Dr.).....1000

Tuesday, February 14.

Edison—The Rajah (Dr.).....1000
Essanay—Getting Sister Married (Com.).....
Gaumont—The Reformation of the Suffragettes (Com.).....665
Gaumont—Land Marks of Avignon, France (Scenic).....338
Vitagraph—Consuming Love (Dr.).....
Wednesday, February 15.

Edison—The Ransom of Red Chief (Dr.).....
Kalem—Grandmother's War Story (Dr.).....975
Melies—The Aviator (Com.).....396
Pathe—A Western Courtship (Dr.).....715
Urban—Catherine Howard (Dr.).....1000

Thursday, February 16.

Biograph—Pioneer Folks (Dr.).....998
Lubin—Getting Even (Com.).....600
Lubin (Schultz Has the Smallpox (Com.).....400
Melies—Bully and His Wife (Dr.).....1000
Selig—The Buccaneers (Dr.).....1000

Friday, February 17.

Edison—A Stage Romance (Dr.).....
Kalem—Wilbee's Double (Com.).....499
Pathe—A Boy's Wit (Dr.).....462
Kalem—The Lost Ribbon (Dr.).....1000
Vitagraph—When the Light Waned (Dr.).....

Saturday, February 18.

Essanay—Cattleman's Daughter (Dr.).....
Gaumont—Saul and David (Bib.).....128
Gaumont—At the End of the Road (Dr.).....838
Pathe—Lieut. Scott's Narrow Escape (Dr.)....984
Vitagraph—The New Stenographer (Com.).....

AMONG THE EXHIBITORS.

Dayton, Ohio.—E. W. Hanly is having plans drawn for the erection of a new moving picture theater, to be located at the corner of Fifth and Ludlow streets.

Galveston, Texas.—Breham is to have a new moving picture theater which will be situated in the Healy Building. Moving pictures and vaudeville will be the feature here.

De Kalb, Ill.—A new moving picture theater is being built in the king store room at one time occupied by the Economy Brothers.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y.—Messrs. Antonskas and Pepas, who recently purchased the Leonard Carpenter property at 320 Main street, will open a moving picture theater there which will have a seating capacity of about 400.

Montello, Wis.—Messrs. Keene & Fields, have decided to open a moving picture show in the Opera House every Wednesday Night.

Denver, Col.—The Iris Amusement Company which is conducting a moving picture show in the Old Curtis Street Theater, has purchased three more at 2716-26 Curtis street and announces its intention of erecting a new moving picture and vaudeville theater which will cost about $100,000.

Iowa City, Iowa.—Mr. W. H. Engler has purchased the Bijou Theater here and will convert it into a moving picture theater.

Sioux City, Iowa.—Mr. Walter Beckwith, has purchased the theater at Onawedan and will operate it as a high class moving picture theater.

Milwaukee, Wis.—The Atlas Amusement Company has purchased two lots at Twentieth street and Fond du Lac avenue for the erection of a moving picture theater.

Cedar Rapids, Iowa.—The Majestic Theater, has been sold to Messrs. Charles O'Connel and Joe Cowin, who will convert it into a moving picture theater.

Point Pleasant, N. J.—Mr. G. P. Sanford opened a moving picture show at the Arnold Hall on Saturday night.

Wilkes-Barre, Penn.—A new moving picture theater has been opened in the building formerly occupied by the Wyoming Valley Trust Company.

Wagertown, Md.—Mr. James Madden is giving moving picture shows to the inhabitants at Sharpsburg.

Highland, N. Y.—The Hadley's moving picture Company made a hit when they gave a show here.

Indianola, Iowa.—Mr. Val Loring sold the Crystal Theater to Messrs. Barr and Simmerman.

Schuylkill Haven, Penn.—Mr. Charles Drummer has purchased the Lyric Motion Picture Theater, has made quite a number of improvement to the exterior and interior of same and will conduct good clean picture shows.

Two Harbors, Minn.— J. H. Free of Duluth, is contemplating the erection of a new $25,000 theater here.

Waverly, N. Y.—Mr. Lewis H. Bowers, the proprietor of the Snyders Hotel, will open a picture show in the building formerly occupied by A. C. Cowell.

Norfolk, Va.—A No. 6 Model Powers Cameragraph has been installed in the Palace Theater here.

Lansford, Penn.—Refined vaudeville and latest moving pictures are being shown at the local theater owned by Mr. John McTague.

St. Louis, Mo.—An elaborate moving picture theater is being constructed by Frank Talbot, owner of several large film theaters here. The new theater, it is said, will surpass in beauty and art any other theater in the city. It is to have a seating capacity of 1,600 persons and a parquet and balcony. The location of this house is at 3257 Delmar 6th street.

New York City.—Plans have been filed for making over the five-story furniture house on the east side of Third avenue, north of 59th street, into a moving picture house, at a cost of $5,000.

Gilfhorn, N. Mass.—The New Jones Theater here has opened to the public and are receiving a large business.

Seaford, Del.—Jesse A. Wright has completed the alterations to the theater on High street and will open it as a first class moving picture theater.

Houston, Texas.—Mr. Henry Quenton will erect a high grade moving picture theater in the Healy Building on West Alabo avenue in Brenham Hillsboro, N. D.—Mr. Thode Quanes and Mrs. E. S. Bryant are making arrangements to open a new picture theater here.

Classified Advertisements

[Classified advertisements, three cents per word, cash with order; 50 cents minimum; postage stamps accepted.]

SITUATION WANTED.

WANTED.—Position by lady pianist in orchestra for picture show. First-class sight reader, can play any class of music. Large western city preferred. MRS. EMILY BUTTON, Box 784, Billings, Mont.

HELP WANTED.

WANTED.—Scenario editor to select and write scenarios. Must have A-1 ability and experience. MARIE M. ZEMPFER, Champion Film Co., 12 East 15th St., N. Y. City.

EQUIPMENT WANTED.

WANTED.—Moving picture and colored illustrations suitable for lecture on Paris. First-class, cheap. Address SPENCER, 2010 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

THEATER FOR SALE.

FOR SALE.—A profitable Moving Picture and Vaudeville Theater in Grand Forks, North Dakota. Reason for selling, death in family. Write for particulars. Manager, UNIQUE THEATER BEAUTIFUL, Grand Forks, N. Dak.

EQUIPMENT FOR SALE.

FOR SALE.—Electric sign, lettered on both sides. 5c Vaudeville combinations show. For dimensions and price, address, H. F. FOWSER, Vaudette Theater, Lansing, Mich.

FOR SALE.—Good as new, Columbian Graphophone, type C, with four-minute and repeating attachments, 54-inch hammered brass horn and horn crane. Will sell cheap. Two still particulars, write HARRY SCHERER CO., Batesville, Indiana.

FOR SALE.—Folding Chairs (Stafford's). As besties Booth. New Powers Machine No. 5. Mirrors, Electric Fixtures, Screens, Etc. Complete Outfit. CHAS. H. HAINES, Elite Theater, Hazleton, Pa.

FOR SALE.—Powers' and American machine. Machine parts. Repairing. Supplies. The "S" Co., care of Moving Picture World.

FOR SALE.—200 Folding Chairs, 2 Excello Arc Lamps, cost $60.00 each. Can be connected in series. Cheap. J. W. DILLON, Danville, Ill.

FOR SALE.—Moving picture theater in a Massachusetts town of 100,000 to 125,000. Best location in the town, on the main street and at an important transfer point. Seats 700, all on ground floor. T. & D. M., care Moving Picture World.

FOR SALE.—Theater in Massachusetts city of 130,000. Seating capacity 600, equipped for playing pictures and vaudeville. Good location and business, price low. Must sell at once. Address The "S" Co., care of Moving Picture World.

FOR SALE.—One of the largest Moving Picture and Vaudeville Theaters in Washington, D. C. P. O. Box 270, Washington, D. C.

FOR SALE.—I will sell my new Edison Exhibition Style Machine complete for $100.00 Never been used. T. Mitchell, 4024 Lexington Street, Chicago, Ill.

Experienced PROFESSIONAL TALENT for Moving Pictures
Best Singers, Pianists, Trap Drummers, etc.
Let us look your house for the season.
The agency with the system.
AMERICAN THEATRICAL SINGERS AGENCY
59 Dearborn Street Chicago, Ill.
HILLIARD CAMPBELL, Mgr.
E. B. BIGELOW, Special Agent.

NEW FIELD BIG MONEY EASY WORK Why don't you think up plots for Motion Picture plays? It's easy, pays up to $50 a week for good work. Men and women. We teach you and help sell plots. Demand unlimited. Send for particulars.
ASS'D M. P. SCHOOLS
908 Chicago Opera House Bldg. CHICAGO

Incandescent Lamps
For Theatres, Parks and Shows
Clear, 6 Cents Colored, 7 Cents
SAFETY ELECTRIC CO.
15 Michigan Ave., Chicago, Ill.

Tuesday Release
Feb. 21
What Would You Do?
COMEDY
2 on 1
GET IT! HOWL
Fill your house and please your patrons
'Nuf 'Sed. Do It.
On the same Reel
The Mexican Centennial
Scenic, Educational, Instructive
2 on 1
Could You Want More?
2 Every Week 2

I WANT TO BUY
some 30 to 60 days old Independent films. Will pay a good price for same. Send lists with prices to
J. W., care Moving Picture World

Operators and Managers Hand-book $1.50

Sound Effects
In Picture Machine Theaters it is very essential that the imitations and sound effects are of the kind that can be depended upon. We make only practical and serviceable imitations that will give the exact reproduction of the original. We also manufacture Chimes, Tympani, Bells, Xylophones, Drums and accessories.
LEEDY MANUFACTURING COMPANY
1055 E. Palmer St., INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

Powers Picture Plays
TUESDAY SATURDAY
2 Every Week 2

IT DRAWS THE CROWD
Music is What You Want
See this budget, yet powerful folding organ adaptable to any occasion, sweet, rich and full tone. Built strong and durable. It is a big seller.
Send for full description.
BUHORN BROS.
152 Lake St., Chicago, Ill.

H. F. HOFFMAN
Lecturer of Special Releases
New York City and Vicinity
Care MOVING PICTURE WORLD
Telephone 1243 Gramercy

Film Titles, 3 feet, 25 cents
Announcements, 10c. per foot
GUNBY BROS.
199 Third Ave. New York

In Answering Advertisers Kindly Mention
Moving Picture World

Saturday Release
Feb. 25
Across The Mexican Border
DRAMA
Intense Dramatic Situation with excellent acting and unequaled photography.
Feature this. It is a Receipt Builder.
Commence to Ding Dong your exchange for Come Back to Erin
Powers Company
241st St. and Richardson Ave.
New York City

Drummers This high grade Orchestra Drum direct from factory to you for $30.00

Shell 9x14 Solid Maple
Shell 9x15 Rosewood or Walnut
10 Rods Kangaroo Heads Send U. S. Money or Express order. If you wish C. O. D. send $10.00 cash to guarantee Express charges.
E. P. ZEIDLER DRUM CO. Dept. F. CLEVELAND, OHIO.

COMPENSARC
[illegible]
Booklet 15018
Fort Wayne Electric Works
1402 Broadway
FORT WAYNE, INDIANA

Independent Release Dates

AMERICAN.

Jan. 19—The Bonanza King (Dr.).....990
Jan. 23—When A Man's Single (Com.).....1000
Jan. 26—Bertie's Bandit (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 30—The Gentus (Dr.).....1000
Feb. 2—The Mission in the Desert (Dr.).....
Feb. 6—A Pittsburg Millionaire (Dr.).....985
Feb. 9—On the Installment Plan (Com.).....500
Feb. 9—Too Much Aunt (Com.).....430
Feb. 13—A Quiet Evening at Home (Com.).....1000
Feb. 16—In the Land of Cactus (Dr.).....1000
Feb. 20—The College Speechtirift (Dr.).....990
Feb. 23—Strategy (Dr.).....980

ATLAS.

Jan. 25—Irish Hearts (Dr.).....
Feb. 1—His Great Sacrifice (Dr.).....
Feb. 8—Kelly, U. S. A. (Dr.).....
Feb. 15—Coals of Fire.....

CHAMPION

Jan. 26—Why He Went West (Dr.).....
Feb. 1—Judged by Higher Power (Dr.).....
Feb. 8—At Double Trouble Ranch (Dr.).....950
Feb. 15—Her Three Proposals (Com.).....950
Feb. 22—The Old Man and Jim (Dr.).....980

COLUMBIA.

Dec. 24—The Cattlemen's Feud (Dr.).....
Dec. 31—Trapped (Dr.).....
Jan. 7—Queen of the Prairies (Dr.).....

ECLAIR.

Feb. 6—Doctor Against His Will (Dr.).....984
Feb. 13—Mr. Faddleaway is on Strike (Com.)..522
Feb. 13—The Elixir of Bravery.....424
Feb. 20—The Heart of a Warrior (Dr.).....683
Feb. 20—Hospital for Small Animals (Spec.)...286
Feb. 27—"Dunch" (Dr.).....590
Feb. 27—Beware of the Bomb (Com.).....370

GREAT NORTHERN.

Jan. 28—Mr. Muggins Has His Sewing Done (Com.)
Feb. 4—The Criminal Chief's Capture.....
Feb. 11—Found Again (Dr.).....
Feb. 18—The Life of a Muschlk.....
Feb. 18—The False Alarm.....

IMP.

Feb. 2—An Imaginary Elopement (Com.).....500
Feb. 2—The Mix-Up (Com.).....500
Feb. 9—At the Duke's Command.....1000
Feb. 9—The Mirror (Com.).....500
Feb. 9—When the Cat's Away (Com.).....500
Feb. 13—Her Darkest Hour (Dr.).....1000
Feb. 16—The Convert (Dr.).....1000
Feb. 20—Pictureland.....1000
Feb. 23—Artful Kate (Dr.).....1000

LUX.

Jan. 27—An Infamous Son (Dr.).....652
Feb. 3—Back to the Old Homestead (Dr.).....944
Feb. 10—The Orphan's Friend (Dr.).....711
Feb. 10—That Horse Did Run (Com.).....272
Feb. 17—Bronco Bill, the Brave Cowboy (Dr.)..639
Feb. 17—Matilda Lovestruck (Com.).....272

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO.
("Bison.")

Feb. 7—The Half Breed's Plan.....
Feb. 10—The Salted Mine (Dr.).....
Feb. 14—A Deputy's Honor.....
Feb. 17—A Warrior's Squaw (Dr.).....

ITALA.
(By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

Jan. 28—My Son Is Guilty.....900
Feb. 2—Coachman of the Village.....900
Feb. 4—The Feast of Foolshead.....900
Feb. 9—John Milton (Dr.).....
Feb. 11—Foolshead at the Kinematograph.....
Feb. 16—Fatal Charm.....
Feb. 18—Who Will Eat the Turkey?.....

AMBROSIO.
(By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

Feb. 1—Tweedledum Tries Winter Sports.....500
Feb. 4—The Return from Sea Side Bathing....500
Feb. 5—The Savoy Cavalry.....500
Feb. 8—Tweedledom as a Detective.....500
Feb. 15—The Demon.....

NESTOR.

Jan. 18—Their New Minister (Com.).....1000
Jan. 25—The Man in 23 (Com.).....980
Feb. 1—The Bridal Trail (Dr.).....1000
Feb. 8—The Transgressor (Dr.).....1000
Feb. 15—The Light Beyond (Dr.).....1000

POWERS PICTURE PLAYS.

Feb. 4—The Cattle King of Arizona (Dr.).....
Feb. 7—Freddie's New Shoes (Com.).....
Feb. 11—A Trip Through Mexico (Scenic).....
Feb. 11—An Unforeseen Complication (Com.)..
Feb. 18—Under Southern Skies (Dr.).....
Feb. 21—What Would You Do (Com.).....
Feb. 25—Across the Mexican Border (Dr.).....

RELIANCE.

Jan. 28—The Last Laugh.....900
Feb. 1—A Brass Button.....800
Feb. 4—The Command From Galilee.....900
Feb. 8—The School Ma'am's Courage.....900
Feb. 11—The Little Avenger.....
Feb. 15—Three Men (Dr.).....
Feb. 18—Souls Courageous.....

REVIER.

Jan. 4—For Better Or Worse (Dr.).....
Jan. 11—The Gooseereek Claim (Dr.).....
Jan. 18—For the Child's Sake (Dr.).....800
Jan. 18—You Try It (Com.).....800

REX.

Feb. 16—A Heroine of '76 (Dr.).....910

SOLAX COMPANY.

Feb. 3—Ring Of Love (Com.).....
Feb. 3—Ring of Love (Cum.).....
Feb. 10—Mixed Pets (Com.).....
Feb. 17—Corinne in Dollyland (Com.).....
Feb. 24—Love's Test (Dr.).....

THANHOUSER.

Feb. 3—Adrift (Dr.).....
Feb. 7—The Westerner and the Earl (Dr.).....
Feb. 10—The Norwood Necklace (Dr.).....
Feb. 14—For Her Sake (Dr.).....
Feb. 17—Checkmate (Dr.).....
Feb. 21—For Washington (Dr.).....1000
Feb. 24—A Newsboy Hero (Dr.).....1000

YANKEE.

Feb. 3—The Counting House Mystery (Dr.)...
Feb. 6—Political Powers (Dr.).....
Feb. 10—Was She Justified (Dr.).....
Feb. 13—Condemned to Death (Dr.).....
Feb. 17—Her Birthday Surprise (Com.).....
Feb. 20—A Life-Time Penance (Dr.).....
Feb. 24—The Woman Who Dared (Dr.).....

THIS WEEK'S PROGRAMME OF INDEPENDENT FILMS.

Monday, February 13.

American—A Quiet Evening At Home (Com.) 1000
Eclair—Mr. Faddleaway is On Strike (Com.)..522
Eclair—The Elixir of Bravery.....424
Imp—Her Darkest Hour (Dr.).....1000
Yankee—Condemned to Death (Dr.).....

Tuesday, February 14.

Bison—A Deputy's Honor.....
Powers—An Unforseen Complication (Com.)...
Thanhouser—For Her Sake (Dr.)

Wednesday, February 15.

Ambrosio—The Demon.....
Atlas—Coals of Fire.....
Champion—Her Three Proposals (Com.).....950
Nestor—The Light Beyond (Dr.).....1000
Reliance—Three Men (Dr.).....

Thursday, February 16.

American—In The Land of Cactus (Dr.).....1000
Imp—The Convert (Dr.).....1000
Itala—Fatal Charm.....
Rex—A Heroine of '76 (Dr.).....910

Friday, February 17.

Bison—A Warrior's Squaw (Dr.).....
Lux—Bronco Bill, The Brave Cowboy (Dr.)...639
Lux—Matilda Lovestruck (Com.).....272
Solax—Corine in Dollyland (Com.).....
Thanhouser—Checkmate (Dr.).....
Yankee—Her Birthday Surprise (Com.).....

Saturday, February 18.

Great Northern—The Life of a Muschlk.....
Great Northern—The False Alarm.....
Itala—Who Will Eat The Turkey?.....
Powers—Under Southern Skies (Dr.).....
Reliance—Souls Courageous.....

AMONG THE EXHIBITORS

Trenton, N. J.—Trenton is to have a new vaudeville and moving picture theater, and it is planned to have the place modern in every respect and to give such productions only as will please the most critical audience. This theater is under the proprietorship of a large theatrical syndicate which is composed of Mr. Harry Haveson and M. Gilinsky and is located at 181 and 183 South Broad street, opposite Livingston. It will be fashioned after Lubin's Philadelphia Houses and will be able to seat about 1,000 patrons.

Bowling Green, Ky.—The Columbia Theater Company, is planning to establish a new moving picture theater in the Robold Building.

"Want to congratulate you on the excellent service you have been giving me—it has certainly been fine. The Independent Films are getting better all the time. We played to-night to 1,450 people in two performances; that's going some."

That's what A. F. Heineman, Memorial Opera House, Valparaiso, Ind., writes. And that's what they all say! Machines are selling rapidly. Did you get a copy of my Latest Supplement List? You had better write for one. Tell me how many reels of film you are using every week, how often you change and the amount of films you are putting on to each and every change; then let me submit to you a proposition whereby we can get together, and pretty soon you'll be a well-satisfied customer of

CARL LAEMMLE, President

The Laemmle Film Service

196-198 Lake Street, Chicago

OTHER OFFICES

Omaha, Neb. Minneapolis, Minn.

The biggest and best film renter in the world

If you are in the Market for

SECOND HAND FILMS

Write to the largest and most reliable Dealers and Importers of these goods in the U. S.

International Film Traders

German Savings Bank Building

147 Fourth Avenue, NEW YORK CITY

EAGLE FILM EXCHANGE

WE BUY the entire output of the Independent manufacturers. As about our Three-locked reel system.

Posters free. Prompt service. Da nd night service Write, wire or phone

143 NORTH EIGHTH STREET, PHILADELPHIA, PA

G. W. BRADENBURGH
CINEMATOGRAPH FILMS
233 North 8th Street ::: Philadelphia, Pa.
PHONE, MARKET 334

Cable:—Brad-Films Phila., Code:—A. B. C. 5th Edition

Bargain List A-1 Condition

Keno or the Prince and the Actor. (G. Nordisk) $35.
A Clown's Judgment. (Imp.) $35.
Guinevere's Lace for Sleeve. (Rex) $35.
Grandma's Love Mania. (Ambrosio) $35.
The Woman Hater. (Powers) $35.
So Runs the Way. (Reliance) $35.
The Wild Flower and the Rose. (Thanhouser) $35.
His Resolving Door. (Imp.) $35.
A Windy Day—A Chosen Marksman. (Italia) $35.
Awakenings of Gerald & Percy. (Imp.) $35.
The Poor Student. (Imp.) $35.
Regeneration. (American) $35.
A Brave Western Girl. (Rex) $35.
The Big Drum—The Dog Rescues. (Italia) $35.
The Woodsman. (Nestor) $35.
A Rocky Western Kid. (Powers) $35.
Fabio Beyond Hope. (Thanhouser) $35.
John Halifax. (Thanhouser) $35.
Rip Van Winkle. (Thanhouser) $35.
The Girl He Left Behind Him—The Ironclad Lassie. (Thanhouser) $35.
In the Czar's Name. (Yankee) $35.
Western Justice. (Yankee) $35.
A Fight for Millions. (Yankee) $35.
All the above reels posters FREE.

Nero, The Burning of Rome. (Ambrosio) $50.
The Carmelite—Sorry, Can't Stop. (Edair) $20.
Son of the Wilderness. (Ambrosio) $20.
The Light of Hearts. (Cines) $20.
The Farmer's Son. (Italia) $20.
Dungeon of the Ghost. (Italia) $20.
The Time Locks Safe. (Imp.) $35.
Generosity of an Indian Chief—Colonel's Boot. (Italia) $20.
Father's Baby Boy—Butcher's Bill. (Hepworth) $20.
Tantung Pigeon. (Nestor) $20.
Necklace of the Holy Virgins—A Beggar's Role. (Cines) $20.
A Daughter's Devotion. (Cines) $20.
Good for Evil. (Edair) $20.
The Wife Tax. (Italia) $20.
The Counting Sheet. (Dunker) $20.
Where Provinces of the Exile. (Champion) $20.
Deadly Hate. (Powers) $20.
After the Fall of the Eagle. Theater of Phenomena $20.
From Kidnapers to Rescuer. (Edair) $20.
Why Dukes the Coat—Mussetalle Loses the Ball. (Imp.) $20.
The Bubble. (Italia) $20.
Lieutenant Rose. (Clarendon) $.
Dot in Grim Comic Castle. (Edair) $20.
A Game for Two. (Imp.) $20.
His Second Wife. (Imp.) $20.
Count of Monte Cristo. (Vitagraph) $20.
The Black Hand. (Pathe) $20.
Man in the Iron Mask. (Cines) $20.
Alchemist, Duchess of Guise. (Italia) $20.
After Storm Comes Sunshine. (Hepworth) $20.
A Wife Reward. (Imp.) $20.
The Governor's Daughter. (Thanhouser) $20.
The Little Hero of Holland. (Thanhouser) $20.
Every Half Holiday—Confidence in Her. (Italia) $20.

Films at Ten Dollars per Reel. NO POSTERS.
Love Wins at Last—The World Be Champion.
Child Benefactor.
Fight for Honor—Chase for a Bike.
Stung with Six Feet.
Need Communism—Confidence in Curiosity.
His Best Deserts—Warrior Bold.
Soviet Service Woman.
A Dissatisfied Wagoner.
Chinese Sweeps Dragon—Interested Bondsman.
Sun Sign of Globe Hotel—Ivy Dress.
Woman Conquest—How the Page Box Earned the Ring.
A Close Call.
Future's Dream—An Entertaining Phonist.
Beautiful Bandsmen—New Burglar Alarm.
Stake a Last Battle.
Conquered With Mercy—In Love With a Picture Girl.
Cowboy and the Lieutenant.

Titles made on Eastman material, 4c. per foot. Any films not listed please make inquiries here as the above is only a small part of our stock. All films are inspected by us before released to standard of worn and thin specials. All films sent C. O. D., with advantage of examination on receipt of express charges. Agents wanted for England, Italy, Germany, India and Japan.

MR. OPERATOR
You Want to Make Some Extra Money
SO DO I
Write Me for Particulars at Once

Give me your exact voltage, cycles, make of machine, length of throw, size of pictures and make of carbons. If you have a current saver, state make. I will do the rest. Address Department W.

J. H. HALLBERG
36 East 23d Street New York City

For Rent
1000 Reels of Film
$1.00 per day Each
WRITE IMMEDIATELY
Alamo Film Exchange
Maison Blanche Building,
Canal and Dauphine Streets
New Orleans, La.
You pay express charges both ways.

LIGHT EFFECTS
Everything Electrical for Theatres, Parks, Productions and Vaudeville Acts.
UNIVERSAL ELECTRIC STAGE LIGHTING CO.
Kliegl Bros.
PROPRIETORS
1393-5 Broadway, New York City

Moving Picture Supplies
We are the largest dealers in Moving Picture Supplies and Machine Parts in the United States. We are also the largest jobbers of "Bio" and "Electra Pink Label" Carbons, and always carry a large stock for immediate delivery.
WRITE FOR LIST
American Moving Picture Supply Co.
110 Fourth Ave. New York City

CROWD YOUR HOUSE
GET BUSY
PICTURES OF FAMOUS
Schenk Trial
Be a Live Wire
GET THE MONEY
BEST EVER

Twenty-five Dollars Rental for Three Days.
Ten Dollars refunded on return of Pictures.
Lithographs, Posters, Banners, Announcement Slides and other Advertising matter.
Our Corps of Artists and Photographers, right on the ground, secured all interesting features of the trial.
This will not conflict with your present service, approved by all.
Immediate shipment on receipt of money order.
Pittsburg Film Exchange
America's Largest Film Renters
332 Third Ave., Pittsburg, Pa.

The Chautauqua Film Exchange
Get Ready to Use the BEST Service.
Releases Begin Soon
Write to-day for our list and terms
356 Dearborn Street - CHICAGO, ILL.

THE PHILADELPHIA FILM EXCHANGE, 934 Arch St., Philadelphia
The largest Independent Exchange in the East. The house where you can get quality and a square deal. We buy the entire output of the Sales Company. A trial will convince you. Open day and night. Call, write or phone.
Baltimore Office 610 East Baltimore Street Baltimore, Md.

LOUISE M. MARION'S
Great Novelty of
ILLUSTRATED POEMS
Patriotic and otherwise
Also her attractive comedy-play
MONEY! MONEY!! MONEY!!!
Is a great drawing card for
THEATERS, CLUBS, ETC.
Terms reasonable
Operator furnished when desired
Attractive painted posters and slides made from life models supplied free of charge

LOUISE M. MARION
321 West 23d St. New York City

READY FOR DELIVERY
Moving Picture World
BOUND VOLUME, No. 7.
July to December, 1910
TWO DOLLARS EACH, $2.00
Express charges collect

ANNUAL SUBSCRIPTION TO MOVING PICTURE WORLD, $2.00

SLIDES — PAT. APP'LD FOR — INDESTRUCTIBLE — NEW FILMS
OPERATORS WANTED
Refer to back issues of M. P. World.
Improve your pictures.
Improved star, cam, arbor and sprocket, $12.00 (Powers, Edison, Motiograph, Lubin)
Above outfit will make any two-pin movement as good as one pin. Write to-day.
E. W. LAVEZZI, - - 3042 N. Ashland Ave. Chicago

SAVE MONEY
and use our Program Board
with Interchangeable Porcelain Letters
Make your own Program
You cannot afford to be without one.
Announcements quickly changed.
Prices and full particulars on application.
Agents Wanted.
THE CAMBRIDGE TILE MFG. CO.
COVINGTON, KY.

NO HEADACHE
Do not drive away your patrons with an odorous disinfectant. Use the modern scientific germicide. Test how the OZONE (nascent oxygen) it liberates will sweeten and freshen the air. Dilute HYPOZONE 100 times with water and get the right disinfectant at ONE CENT PER GALLON.
WOOLF'S HYPOZONE
WOOLF CHEMICAL PRODUCTS, Inc.,
2 Rector Street 'Phone 6 Rector N. Y. CITY

ALWAYS IN THE LEAD.
HENRY BELMAR, Dramatic Director.
POWERS PICTURE PLAYS
Writer, Originator, Producer
Author of the following recent releases:
The Cattle King of Arizona Come Back to Erin
The Angel of His Dreams From Rags to Riches
Under Southern Skies
Can use short cast scenarios of every description.
HENRY BELMAR, 2779 Webster Ave., New York City

YANKEE FILMS
MONDAY, FEBRUARY 20,
"A LIFE-TIME PENANCE"
Heart throbs and thrills run rampant
FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 24,
"THE WOMAN WHO DARED"
A new Nell Pierce sleuth film
YANKEE FILM CO.
344 East 32d St. New York City

THE ONE BEST SOUVENIR
S. R. O. EVERY NIGHT
5c. EACH
$5.00 Per Hundred

This beautiful Souvenir Spoon is guaranteed Solid Silver Plated French Gray Finish and the latest design. Write today for sample and 3 plans that will fill your house to capacity.
UNITED STATES FACTORIES CO. — MANUFACTURERS 40 Dearborn Street, Chicago

A WELL-KNOWN AND EXPERIENCED

PRODUCER

With a splendid record of successes that have won the highest approval of Exchanges, Exhibitors, Press and Public, and who has built up several profitable businesses, desires to connect with an alert and progressive moving picture plant. Advertiser could take entire control of the producing end, including the writing, revision and editing of scenarios. He also holds the rights of a non-infringing camera, and could, if required, introduce capital.

W. B. L., care of Moving Picture World

DON'T BLAME YOUR SINGER

How can you expect them to do a song justice, when it arrives each evening from your film exchange, just in time for your opening programme? We will ship an entire week's supply in one consignment, thus enabling your singer to rehearse each song thoroughly. Time lost in transit not charged for. Rate, 25c. per set.

CHICAGO SONG SLIDE EXCHANGE
Sixth Floor, Portland Block
107 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.
Dept. 1

WHY SEND TO EUROPE FOR

FILM PERFORATING DIES

When we can make them for you?
High-class repairing and alterations on Foreign Machines.

THE A. DEWES COMPANY
249 Centre Street, NEW YORK
'Phone, 2351 Spring

"The Art of Writing Scenarios"
By WILLIAM LORD WRIGHT
A TEXT BOOK FOR BEGINNERS
Price $1 Postpaid

GILES R. WARREN, well-known Scenario Editor with several prominent concerns, says: "I recommend its use to all beginners. By far the best work of its kind I have ever seen."

Another Scenario Editor says: "Shall cheerfully recommend it whenever opportunity offers."

PICTURE PLAY MANUSCRIPT CRITICIZED and available markets suggested by a successful author. A charge of $1 for manuscript up to and including 1,000 words.

Scenario Instruction Publishing Company
BELLEFONTAINE, OHIO

GENRE MOTION SLIDES

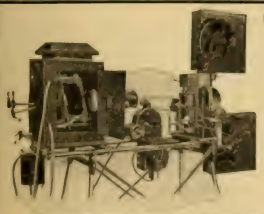
We cannot convince you we have a Motion Slide by writing or talking

BUT

We have sold every theatre man we have shown it to.

A NOVELTY NOW—A NECESSITY SHORTLY

GENRE TRANSPARENCY CO.
507 North Clark Street Chicago, Ill.



THE "STANDARD"

The Machine That Gives Results

FULLY GUARANTEED

Have you ever seen a machine with a perfect CHAIN DRIVE TAKE-UP? The "Standard" has it. Adjust the locknut and you have an even steady tension at all times. No belts to slip.

AMERICAN MOVING PICTURE MACHINE COMPANY
101 BEEKMAN STREET - - - - - NEW YORK

See What They Say About

SILVO KURTAIN KOAT

Pottsville, Pa., Dec. 8, '10.

Please ship C. O. D. one can of Kurtain Koat, as I have used the other can and found it to be the greatest thing I ever saw.

Kansas City, Mo., Dec. 17, '10

We have examined Mr. ———'s curtain and have nothing but praise for the results in comparison to other curtains.

$6.00

and following directions will give you the same results as above. One can covers 350 square feet. Order from your exchange or C. O. D.

KURTAIN KOAT CO.

2109 W. LAKE STREET CHICAGO, ILL.

The Cincinnati-Buckeye Film Company

$100,000.00 incorporation, operating the CINCINNATI FILM EXCHANGE, 315 W. 4th Street, Cincinnati, Ohio, and the BUCKEYE FILM PROJECTING COMPANY, 309 Arcade Building, Dayton, Ohio. Biggest Independent Film Renting Concern in the UNITED STATES today. BUYING almost the entire Independent Output. Reference: SALES COMPANY, 111 E. 14th Street, New York. If you are looking for a real Film Service, drop us a line.

The Cincinnati-Buckeye Film Co.

315-317 W. Fourth St. CINCINNATI, OHIO

309-321 Arcade Building DAYTON, OHIO

ENTERTAIN YOUR PATRONS WITH

The Regina
Mandolin Orchestrion

THE music furnished by this wonderful instrument is alone worth the price of admission to your show. It will draw the crowds and hold them as no other musical attraction can do. It is operated by spring motor or by electric motor, as desired, and plays upon piano strings by means of vibrating hammers, making most delightful music which combines the effects of piano, mandolin, violin and organ.

It is furnished either with or without a nickel-in-the-slot attachment and when equipped to play on the insertion of a coin has proved to be a most successful and profitable investment for use in public places.

The Regina Mandolin Orchestrion is fully guaranteed and is sold at a reasonable price. Easy terms of payment can be arranged.

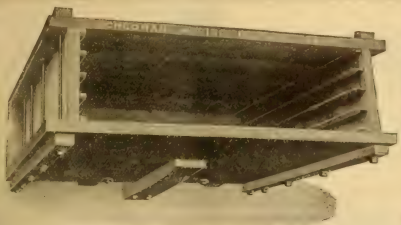
If you are contemplating the purchase of a musical instrument, send for full description of the Regina Mandolin Orchestrion with prices and terms.

THE REGINA COMPANY

Broadway and 17th St., New York 215 Wabash Ave., Chicago

MANUFACTURERS OF

REGINA MUSIC BOXES
REGINA MANDOLIN ORCHESTRIONS
REGINA HEXAPHONES
REGINA PNEUMATIC CLEANERS



Corcoran Moving Picture Tanks

Develop your films to perfection. Save Time and Reduce Your Expenses by using a "Corcoran Film Development Tank." All up-to-date houses are now installing the "Corcoran System."

SEND FOR PRICE LIST No. 4.

A. J. CORCORAN, Inc.
No. 15 John Street - - - N. Y. City

READY FOR DELIVERY—Moving Picture World
BOUND VOLUME No. 7
July to December, 1910
TWO DOLLARS, EACH, $2.00 Express charges collect

H. F. HOFFMAN

Lecturer of Special Releases
New York City and Vicinity
Care MOVING PICTURE WORLD
Telephone 1344 Gramercy

¶ Put in our Easels and Poster Frames and watch your attendance grow.

¶ We make mechanical attractions, Electric signs, or anything special in the theatrical line. ¶ Ideas developed—Low Prices—Best Work—DON'T DELAY but write to-day.

THE NEWMAN MFG. CO.
717-719 Sycamore St., Cincinnati, O.

EXHIBITORS
DON'T PAY FOR POSTERS

No doubt you have been notified by your Chicago exchange that you must pay for Posters. We furnish all Posters absolutely free of charge.

We are Headquarters for Moving Picture Machines of all makes, such as, Powers, Edison, Motiograph, Standard, etc. We also handle all parts and supplies pertaining to the Moving Picture business.

Write for our proposition on the following feature films:

Frontier-Days in Cheyenne Original Wolgast-Nelson Fight
Original Nelson-Gans Fight
Custer's Last Stand
U. S. Military Tournament
Knights Templar Conclave
Reproduction Johnson-Jeffries Fight

CHICAGO FILM EXCHANGE
Chicago, Ill. Omaha, Nebr.

United States Film Brokers and Importers

41 Union Square West NEW YORK CITY
Broadway and 17th St.

Second-hand Independent Films, all makes, 60 and 90 days old

The largest dealers in new and second-hand Association and Independent Films in the United States.

SECOND-HAND FILM
$5.00 per reel upwards

NEW FILM
CAMERAPHONE FILM
new, with two sets records

All goods shipped subject to examination and partial acceptance on receipt of deposit covering express charges.

Complete lists sent free upon request

THE ENTERPRISE MODEL B

Portable Calcium Gas Outfit

is the only Substitute for Electricity for projecting Motion Picture or Stereopticon Views and is the

Only Satisfactory Portable Outfit

because it operates by WATER PRESSURE, IS CONSTANT, REGULAR AND RELIABLE and has no complicated spring valves to corrode, choke up and otherwise get out of order. Is patented.

"OXONE" in SQUARE CAKES is most Satisfactory for the production of Oxygen Gas. Send for particulars.

For Sale by Dealers.

Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co. MANUFACTURERS AND SALES AGENTS 564 and 572 W. Randolph Street, CHICAGO

Annual Subscription Moving Picture World $2.00

SPECIAL ROLL TICKETS

The Big Ticket. Any Printing Any Colors

5,000	$1.25	20,000	$4.00	80,000	$7.50
10,000	$2.50	25,000	$5.00	100,000	$10.00

Get the Samples Stock Tickets, 6 Cents

NATIONAL TICKET COMPANY - - - Shamokin, Pa.

FOLDING CHAIRS

For Moving Picture Shows, Grand Stands, Assembly Halls, etc. In sections if wanted.

Write for Catalog No. 2

The Kauffman Manufacturing Co.
ASHLAND, OHIO

OPERA CHAIRS

FOR EVERY PURPOSE
1,000 STYLES

ESTABLISHED 1865
WRITE FOR CAT. No. 31

The A. H. Andrews Co.
174-176 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.
Branches in all leading cities

CHEAP
STEEL FRAME THEATRE CHAIRS
ABSOLUTELY NON-BREAKABLE

Suitable for small Theatres and Moving Picture Shows. We carry these chairs in stock and can ship immediately.

Second Hand Chairs
Also seating for Out-of-door use.

Address Dept. W.

STEEL FURNITURE CO., GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.
New York Office: 150 Fifth Avenue
Boston Office: 224 Congress Street, Boston, Mass.

The Automatic Theatre Chair

It is a friend to the public.
It advertises your theatre and makes your business grow.
It folds automatically and can be revolving, stationary or self righting.
It is the only sanitary chair.
It is a space-saver, life-saver and money-saver.
It is the world's greatest theatre Chair.
If you have not seen our latest models, investigate.
Write today for circular A.

THE HARDESTY MFG. CO
Canal Dover, Ohio, U. S. A.

FILMS FOR SALE. 50 Reels of Films
$8 to $16 per Reel
Second-hand one pin Edison machine. $100.00
Mayer Silverman, 105 4th Ave., Pittsburg, Pa.

Opera and Assembly Chairs

Most popular priced chairs on the market for picture show use.

Prompt Shipments. Write for Catalogue

PEABODY SCHOOL FURNITURE CO.
North Manchester - - Indiana
New York Agents: ROBERT J. EHLERS CO, Lexington Ave. and 43d St. - New York, N. Y.

The Independent Film Exchange of Pittsburg, Pa.

The Pioneer Independent Exchange of Western Pennsylvania buying the output of the Sales Company.

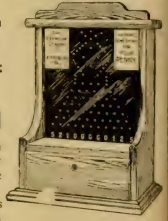
We have a few choice runs that we can let out at reasonable prices. Write us.

INDEPENDENT FILM EXCHANGE, Inc.
A. S. DAVIS, Manager
415 Ferry Street, PITTSBURG, PA.

WE WANT

ONE THOUSAND

Moving Picture Men



to operate PREMIUM pin machines and get rich, or if already so, to get more wealth. Why not you? PREMIUM pin machines have become an institution in every candy store. By placing a machine in your retailer's store you will monopolize his trade and squeeze out competition.

Mr. Flint of Mo. writes: "Kindly accept thanks for introducing me to a gold mine."

Ten machines will support you. Fifty machines operated will prove a mortgage lifter to you.

We make them out of Oak or Metal.

Percentage of winners arranged so that from every twenty dollars deposited in the machine twelve dollars will be your profit. If so advised, will make it still more.

Write to-day for exclusive territory to

PREMIUM VENDING COMPANY
56-58 WALNUT ST. PITTSBURG, PA.

Uniforms
Stylish
Nobby
Cheap

Coat and Pants like cut $11\frac{1}{2}$ as low as $7.50. Caps, $1.00.

Send for our catalogue of Uniforms and Caps, containing lots of cloth and prices before ordering elsewhere.

R. W. STOCKLEY & CO.
810 West Walnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.
Mfrs. of Uniforms and Equipments

OPERA CHAIRS

The Latest in Seats | GET OUR PRICES Before You Buy Largest Variety Lowest Prices | The Best in Seats

GEO. W. BENNETT
744 West 5th Street
CINCINNATI OHIO

Announcement Slides
Advertising Slides
Songs Illustrated
THREE STAR SLIDE CO.
Rooms 523-4
225 Dearborn Street :: Chicago, Ills.

THE MOVING PICTURE HOUSES have begun to realize the worth of the MORTIMER FILM CLEANER
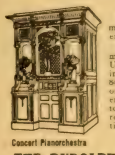
The Operator is taking an interest in this little wonder of the Moving Picture World.
Send for the Booklet.
Mortimer Film Cleaning Co.
Fidelity Bldg. Portland, Maine

UNIFORMS AND CAPS FOR Moving Picture Theatres

Catalogues, Samples and Prices for the Asking

James H. Hirsch & Co.
208 East Jackson Boulevard
CHICAGO.

WURLITZER
Automatic Musical Instruments



Concert Pianorchestra

They do the work of expert musicians and reduce your operating expenses.

Wurlitzer is the world's largest manufacturer. We supply the U. S. Government with musical instruments. Write for big, new 84-page catalogue showing the only complete line of self-players, from a small electric piano to an automatic orchestra representing 35 musicians. Easy time payments.

THE RUDOLPH WURLITZER CO.

CINCINNATI, 117 to 121 E. 4th; NEW YORK, 25 and 27 W. 32d (bet. B'way and 5th Ave.); CHICAGO, 266 and 268 Wabash Ave.; PHILADELPHIA, 1835 Chestnut; ST. LOUIS, 912 Pine; CLEVELAND, 206 Prospect Ave. S. E.; COLUMBUS, O., 57 E. Main.

Xylophones, Orchestra Bells, Chimes, Forks, etc. Send for free illustrated catalogue.

J. C. DEAGAN
3800-3810 N. Clark St., Chicago, Ill.

Moving Picture Pianists

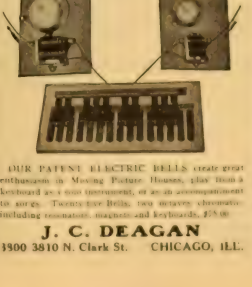
Are you "working up" your pictures? If not, why not? If so, you want some good melodramatic music. Send for free sample page of "Orpheum Collection of Moving Picture Music." Now being used and praised by many of the best houses in the country.

PRICE 75 CENTS

Also latest cue music (series 1910) for 10 parts and piano, $1.00.

1-4 discount on both numbers.

CLARENCE E. SINN
1501 Sedgwick St CHICAGO ILL.



OUR PATENT ELECTRIC BELLS create great enthusiasm in Moving Picture Houses, play from a keyboard as a solo instrument, or as an accompaniment to organ. Twenty-two Bells, two octaves chromatic, including resonators, magnets and keyboards, $75.00

J. C. DEAGAN
3800 3810 N. Clark St. CHICAGO, ILL.

NEW SLIDES
For the following Songs — JUST OUT

When the trees are dressed in crimson and in gold.
King Chanticleer.
Killarney, my Home o'er the Sea.
Dancing Starlight.
Broncho Nell.
For Killarney and You.
My Country Has First Call.
Mandy Lou.
Dolores.
The Best Place of All.
The Moon Swings Low
Springtime Brings Roses and You.
You're the Sweetest Girl in All This World To Me.
Moonlight, Dear.
We've Kept the Golden Rule.
If Your Heart knew a Heart Like Mine.
Be My Sweetheart.
I Get So Lonesome for You.
I'm a Married Man.

De WITT C. WHEELER
120 W. 31st St. New York City

Correspondence Course. Special rates to the trade. Send for free illustrated catalogue.

School class meets every morning and afternoon, with F. H. Richardson of Chicago as chief instructor. Evening classes meet every Monday, Wednesday and Friday. We positively guarantee you a $15 position.

We have a Powers' Cameragraph No. 5 in A-1 condition for $85.00 and an Edison Exhibition Model Machine for $60.00.

We carry a largeline of electrical supplies and furnish everything for the theatre.

F. C. TAYLOR
49 West 28th Street New York City
Phone 1405 Madison Square

FILMS FOR RENT
New Films High Class Service
The Pioneer House, With 8 Years' Experience and $250,000.00 Back Of It
Write Today for Terms
EUGENE CLINE
57 and 59 Dearborn St., Chicago

BIO CARBONS

INSIST ON GETTING THEM.

Nearly every important Film Exchange and Supply Dealer can furnish them.
Most of them are glad to do so, because BIO Carbons invariably convince the user of their superiority.

If your dealer tries to palm off something "just as good," remember, "there's a reason."

As the BIO Carbon is made and sold with a single eye to quality, we cannot hope to obtain the coöperation of the dealer to whom price is everything.

Look up the BIO dealers in your town. You will find them the straightest, squarest men in the business—not because they handle BIO Carbons, but because it takes a straight, square man to resist the lure of price and stand for quality—first, last, and all the time.

Buy a sample package of BIO Carbons today. Give them every test you know of. Test them for burning life especially. You will find that they last from 25% to 40% longer than any other carbons.

You can pay 10% more for BIO Carbons and still save 15% to 25%, besides getting a whiter, steadier light.

You will remember the quality long after you forget the price.

Charles L. Kiewert Company

Largest importers of Flaming Arc Lamps and Carbons in America

39 Cortlandt St., New York

190 Fremont St., San Francisco, Cal.
58 Plymouth Court, Chicago, Ill.
114 Huron St., Milwaukee, Wis.
309 Carson St., Pittsburg, Pa.
15th & Pine Sts., St. Louis, Mo.

CALCIUM GAS

Compressed in drums ready for operation for Moving Picture Shows where electricity cannot be had. Absolutely pure gas. Prompt shipments, freight or express.

WRITE FOR OUR TERMS

Complete stock of repair parts for machines and supplies.

ERKER BROS. OPTICAL CO.
604 Olive St., St. Louis, Mo.

The F. A. Film Cement

IT STICKS

Positively guaranteed to work on any film. It don't crack, dry up, or leave any coating on the emulsion; is fire-proof, and only requires about one-half as much as others.

Ask your Exchange for it.

Single bottle - - - 25 cents
Six bottles by express - - $1.00

Send for our complete list of Film Announcement Titles

French American Producing and Manufacturing Co.
918 Madison St., CHICAGO, ILL.

The Day Metalo Screen

Increases brilliancy 30 to 50 per cent. Waterproof and rollable. The latest discovery. Inexpensive. Complete instructions and formula by mail, $2.00.

J. W. WALLINGFORD
"The Gables," Eureka Springs, Ark.

GET YOUR FILM SERVICE FROM A HOUSE THAT IS BUYING THE OUTPUT OF THE SALES COMPANY.
WE DO. WRITE US FOR TERMS, STATING WHAT YOU NEED.

Special Bookings
BRITT-NELSON FIGHT. 5 Reels.

HUDSON FILM CO.
138 East 14th St. New York, N. Y.
Tel. 3812 Stuyvesant
"NEVER CLOSED"

FILMS FOR SALE

after sixty or ninety days of release. Also commercial in excellent condition at reasonable prices

M. YSSEL
973 N. 7th Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

THE KODAGRAPH

A "STANDARD" MOVING PICTURE MACHINE FOR THE HOME

The only machine in the world showing a picture by a dry battery. A new system of reflection, and a specially made 4 c/p Tungsten Lamp, in conjunction with a patented reflector, projecting a clear five feet, 100 c/p picture. Price $7.50, including film. Send for circular.

HOME MOTION PICTURE CO.
Hartford Bldg., 41 Union Sq. West
NEW YORK CITY

Save Tickets

AND

Eliminate Choppers

at the entrance to every Theatre and Amusement Place

GET THE COUNT WITH

JONES DUPLEX CHECK GATE

and you GET all the money

Ask us to send you further details

JONES CHANGE REGISTER CO.
INCORPORATED

18 BROADWAY NEW YORK CITY

WASHINGTON

Father of the U. S. A.
Paramount Patriot
Paramount General
Paramount Stickler
for Truth, Honesty, Integrity
and SQUARE DEALS made INDEPENDENCE
the
PARAMOUNT ISSUE

We bear
WASHINGTON'S great name and emulate
WASHINGTON'S shining virtues

We give A SQUARE DEAL to all

So wire, write or give us a call

WASHINGTON

Paramount Film Co.

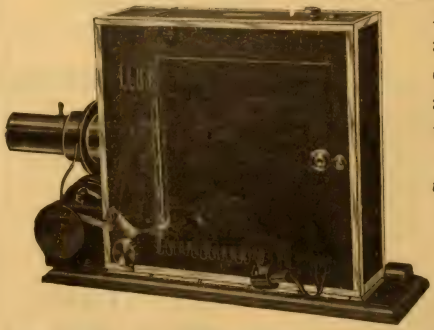
G. H. WALKER, Mgr.

428 Ninth Street, N. W. Washington, D. C.

UP TO THE MINUTE EVERY MINUTE

THE ADVERTOGRAPH

FOR YOUR BUSINESS



An automatic window advertising machine, carrying twenty slides, and requires no operator or attention.

Write for full details and territorial privileges.

The Home Moving Picture Machine no toy, operates with three dry batteries, or 110 volts. Uses STANDARD FILM and is the only practical moving picture machine for HOME use. Nothing dangerous in its construction or operation. A free demonstration any time you're in the neighborhood.

OUR PRICE $6.25

Write for descriptive catalogue

HARRY A. MACKIE

853 Broadway New York City

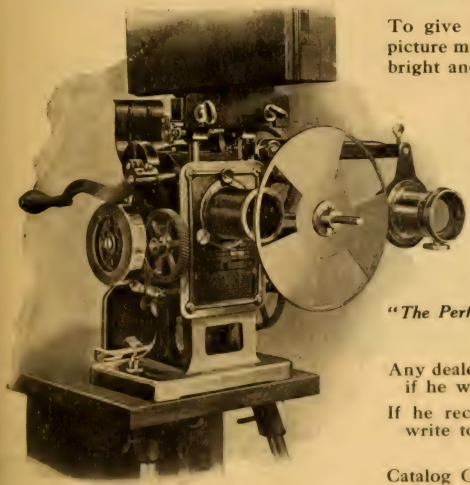
Vol. 8, No. 8 February 25, 1911 Price, 10 Cents

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD
THE ORGAN OF THE PHOTOPLAY AND ALLIED INTERESTS
NEW YORK

SATISFACTION

That is what the purchaser of a moving picture machine has a right to expect and what he ought to demand:



To give SATISFACTION a moving picture machine MUST Project steady, bright and flickerless pictures;

Run easily and quietly, and stand the grind of long service without breakdowns.

There is ONE—and ONLY one machine that is guaranteed to give this sort of satisfaction—

Power's No. 6

"The Perfect Motion Picture Machine."

Any dealer can supply you with one—if he wants to.

If he recommends another machine, write to us.

Catalog G, tells all about our goods.

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY

For thirteen years the leading makers of motion picture machines

115-117 Nassau Street New York

STILL Demanding STILL Demanding STILL Demanding

THE THANHOUSER WO-A-WEEK?

RELEASED TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 28th

Hail "The Thanhouser Kid," Detective!

THE LITTLE MOTHER

is the very latest "Thanhouser Kid" feature and all the picture-going kids in town will implore their parents to take 'em to your show if you show your "Thanhouser Kid To-day" sign the day you show this reel. The boys and girls of to-day are the men and women of to-morrow. With the youth of to-day favorably disposed toward the moving picture, look to a long life for the business. Get the kids impressed RIGHT by giving them PICTURES THAT ARE RIGHT. Especially strive to convince them that justice wins out in the end, and that knavery doesn't go for much these days, as this reel well brings out.

No. 189. Code Word, Lither.

"STAGE STRUCK"

Released Friday, March 3rd

A Heart-To-Heart Reel-Talk

Stage Struck

Is another Thanhouser moral-pointer—you see we constantly BACK UP our belief that the motion picture can send forth a reforming message as effectively as the pulpit. Here you have a frail, tenderly-reared little girl, who attempts the stage by a devious route—the runaway route. Understand that she is upright in thought and conduct, that she is not a "little wild"—merely a little ambitious. But she was not intended for the hardships that were sure to be her's, and are sure to be the others who may follow in her footsteps, and it is there that you have your moral at its best. The reel may save some heart aches. Be sure to show it. No. 190. Code Word, Stage.

The Thanhauser News the "Exhibitor's Guide," sent FREE OF CHARGE to all who can show connection with the Moving Picture business. Drop a card to PUBLISHER, THANHOUSER NEWS, NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y.

The Thanhouser Photoframe consisting of portraits of the famous Thanhouser "Stock," framed in solid oak, mission finish, 34 inches in width and 44 inches in depth, with glass and easel (6 feet high) GOES TO YOU FOR $3.50 with order. This is the prize outfit that tickled-to-death exhibitors the country over are calling THE GREATEST LOBBY-DISPLAY BARGAIN EVER KNOWN.

For System's Sake address Art Dept.

THANHOUSER COMPANY

NEW ROCHELLE NEW YORK

"The Die Is Cast."

Mr. Exhibitor, did you ever hear of a scaramouch?

You certainly have met him.

In business he is known as a "four-flusher." The trouble with his kind is that you RESPECT him until you finally see his bluff called, then you realize how foolish you were to pay him homage.

The gigantic bluff of some people who tried to tell you that they are the only ones entitled to make Moving Pictures has been called. See Moving Picture World, Feb. 18th, page 356, showing withdrawal of Injunction against "Gaumont Type of Camera."

By sticking together the Independents have met, beaten and exposed their bluff.

Now, do they still command your respect as they did before you knew that they didn't have a leg to stand on? There is only one answer you can give, and that is, to call at once for this

UNEXCELLED PROGRAM

EVERY MONDAY

AMERICAN—American Film Manufacturing Company
ECLAIR—Eclair Film Company
IMP—Independent Moving Pictures Company
YANKEE—Yankee Film Company

EVERY TUESDAY

BISON—New York Motion Picture Company
POWERS—The Powers Company
THANHOUSER—Thanhouser Company

EVERY WEDNESDAY

AMBROSIO—New York Motion Picture Company
ATLAS—Atlas Film Company
CHAMPION—The Champion Film Company
NESTOR—David Horsley
RELIANCE—Carlton Laboratories

EVERY THURSDAY

AMERICAN—American Film Manufacturing Company
IMP—Independent Moving Pictures Company
ITALA—New York Motion Picture Company
REX—Rex Moving Picture Mfg. Company

EVERY FRIDAY

BISON—New York Motion Picture Company
LUX—R. Prieur
SOLAX—Solax Company
THANHOUSER—Thanhouser Company
YANKEE—Yankee Film Co.

EVERY SATURDAY

CAPITAL—Capital Film Co.
GREAT NORTHERN—Great Northern Film Co.
ITALA—New York Motion Picture Company
POWERS—The Powers Company
RELIANCE—Carlton Laboratories

List of BUYING EXCHANGES, February 25th, 1911

All others offering these brands for rent can supply only dupes or worn-out subjects

ALABAMA.
Dixie Film Co., 503 Chamber of Commerce Bldg., Birmingham.

CALIFORNIA.
California Film Exchange, 1065 Mission St., San Francisco.
Miles Brothers, 790 Turk St., San Francisco.

CANADA.
Applegath, L. J. & Sons, 145 Yonge St., Toronto, Ont.
Canadian Film Exchange, Calgary, Alberta.
Gaumont Company, 154 St. Catherine St., Montreal, Que.
Great Western Film Co., Kennedy Bldg., Winnipeg, Man.

COLORADO.
W. H. Swanson Film Exchange, 301 Railroad Bldg., Denver.
Co-operative Ind. Film Co., Barclay Block, Denver.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.
Paramount Film Exchange, 428 Ninth St., N. W., Washington.
B. & W. Film Exchange, 22 1st Intnt Building Washington.

GEORGIA.
Consolidated Film Exchange, Rhodes Bldg., Atlanta.

ILLINOIS.
Anti-Trust Film Co., 79 South Clark St., Chicago.
Globe Film Service, 107 East Madison St., Chicago.
H. & H. Film Service Co., 48 Jackson Blvd., Chicago.
Laemmle Film Service, 196 Lake St., Chicago.
Standard Film Exchange, 155 East Washington St., Chicago.

INDIANA.
Central Film Service Co., 119 North Illinois St., Indianapolis.

KANSAS.
Wichita Film and Supply Co., 220 North Market St., Wichita.

LOUISIANA.
Dixie Film Co., 720 Maison Blanche Bldg., New Orleans.

MARYLAND.
B. & W. Film Exchange, 412 East Baltimore St., Baltimore.
Consolidated Amusement Co., 28 West Lexington St., Baltimore.

MASSACHUSETTS.
Boston Film Rental Co., 885 Washington St., Boston.
W. E. Greene Film Exchange, 220 Tremont St., Boston.

MICHIGAN.
Michigan Film and Supply Co., 1106 Union Trust Bldg., Detroit.

MINNESOTA.
Laemmle Film Service, 409 Sykes St., Minneapolis.

MISSOURI.
J. W. Morgan, 1310 Walnut St., Kansas City.
Swanson-Crawford Film Co., Century Bldg., St. Louis.

NEBRASKA.
Laemmle Film Service, 1517 Farnam St., Omaha.

NEW YORK STATE.
Albany Film Exchange, 418 Broadway, Albany.
Victor Film Service, 30 Church St., Buffalo.

NEW YORK CITY.
Empire Film Exchange, 150 East 14th St., City.
Great Eastern Film Exchange, 23 East 14th St., City.
Hudson Film Exchange, 138 East 14th St., City.
Peerless Film Exchange, 94 Fifth Ave., City.
Wm. Steiner Film Exchange, 110 Fourth Ave., City.

OHIO.
Cincinnati-Buckeye Film Co., 309 Arcade Bldg., Dayton.
Cincinnati-Buckeye Film Co., 315 West 4th St., Cincinnati.
Toledo Film Exchange, 319 Superior St., Toledo.
Victor Film Service, Prospect and Huron Sts., Cleveland.

OKLAHOMA.
United Motion Picture Co., 132 Main St., Oklahoma City.

OREGON.
Ind. Western Film Exchange, Sweetland Bldg., Portland.

PENNSYLVANIA.
Eagle Film Exchange, 127 South 8th St., Pittsburg.
Ind. Film Exchange, 435 Ferry St., Pittsburg.
Philadelphia Film Exchange, 954 Arch St., Philadelphia.
Philadelphia Projecting Co., 40 North 9th St., Philadelphia.
Pittsburg Photo Film Co., 412 Penn St., Pittsburg.
Swanson Film Exchange Co., 538 Spruce St., Philadelphia.

TEXAS.
Texas Film Exchange, 311 Elm St., Dallas.

UTAH.
Co-operative Ind. Film Co., 320 Atlas Block, Salt Lake City.

WASHINGTON.
Pacific Film Exchange, Globe Bldg., Seattle.

WISCONSIN.
Western Film Exchange, 507 Enterprise Bldg., Milwaukee.

Motion Picture Distributing & Sales Co., 111 E. 14th St., N. Y. City

A GOOD THING, LIKE A GOOD STORY, IS WORTH REPEATING.

"A MANLY MAN."

(RELEASED MONDAY, FEBRUARY 27.)

"All the world loves a lover," and a manly man appeals to all that is good in the most of us. A young civil engineer leaves his sweetheart in the States and goes to the Philippines on duty. He is loved by a Filipino maiden, who nurses him back to life and health when he is stricken with a fever and is deserted by his American comrades. Out of gratitude he marries the native girl and when his sweetheart arrives from America he chooses between love and duty and is loyal to the faithful woman who has borne him a child—a manly man of the right sort. The tropical settings are beautiful. A strong drama with heart appeal, in which "Little Mary" appears at her best in the role of the Filipino girl. By all means get this one.

"THE DYNAMITERS."

(RELEASED THURSDAY, MARCH 2.)

A talking jag involves Jenkins, a clubman, in all sorts of difficulties. He becomes a labor agitator and is initiated into the secrets of a society of avengers. By lot he is chosen as the instrument to right their wrongs by the bomb route. He staggers home with the infernal machine and, sleeping off the debauch, finds himself with a dangerous mission to perform. He tries to lose the annihilator, but is unsuccessful, until an intelligent dog comes to his aid and solves the difficulty in an unique manner. Here is a comedy your patrons will surely enjoy.

"ARMY MANEUVERS IN CUBA."

(RELEASED THURSDAY, MARCH 2.)

This is an elaborate picture photographing the Cuban army in holiday array in celebrating a fete-day anniversary. The native soldiery passes in review before the superior officers and heads of the administration, regiment after regiment, cavalry and artillery wheeling into line, an imposing pageant, taken at Camp Columbia. The picture is an intensely interesting one from a scenic as well as an educational standpoint. Secure the "Army Maneuvers" by applying to your exchange early. It is a picture you can feature.

Independent Moving Pictures Co. of America
102 W. 101st St., N. Y. Carl Laemmle, Pres.
All "Imp" Films Sold Through the Sales Co.

EXHIBITORS, READ THIS:

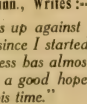
United States Post Office

FAN MOUNTAIN TOWNSHIP — EMMA COUNTY, ARIZONA

DARLINGTON, WYO., June 3, 1911

Chicago Film Exchange
Gentlemen.—
Enclosed find $2.00 for one week's rental the service is great. I was got better in my life thanks very much. The song slide service is certainly great. In fact everything could not be better. Business great.
Yours Respy
Chester Wright
P S Please send price list on parts for Edison Kinetoscope" also carbons
C. W.

Now after reading, slip us your order and be happy.
Chicago Film Exchange,
Chicago. Omaha. Denver. Salt Lake.



S. P. Mace, Gem Theatre, Park Rapids, Minn., Writes:—

"I was up against it all the time, but since I started with you my business has almost doubled and have a good hope to be a winner this time."

These are the kind of letters I am getting day after day—week after week—month after month—for nearly five years. Here's the reason. No other concern in the film-renting business delivers films in as GOOD and CLEAN a condition as I do. None lives up to promises as I do. None are as painstaking. None as prompt. None as ready to right a wrong. In addition to all this, I am the largest buyer of films. Is it any wonder then that I am

The biggest and best film renter in the world

SLIP ME A LETTER

CARL LAEMMLE, President

The Laemmle Film Service

196-198 Lake Street, Chicago

OTHER OFFICES

Omaha, Neb. Minneapolis, Minn.

BEGINNING
WEDNESDAY, MARCH 8th
WE WILL RELEASE

2-Solax-2
EVERY WEEK
WEDNESDAY and FRIDAY

Eventually You Will Get Them---WHY NOT NOW

FRIDAY, FEB. 24th
LOVE'S TEST
(Drama)
A most interesting and remarkable test of a woman's affection for her husband.

FRIDAY, MARCH 3rd
A COSTLY PLEDGE
(Comedy)
John Martin signs the pledge. Wait until you see what happens to him.

WED., MARCH 8th
OUT OF THE ARCTIC
(Drama)
A thrilling story of adventure in the far north.

Solax Company
147 Fourth Avenue = = = = NEW YORK

EVERY FRIDAY THE WORLD'S BEST—BAR NONE EVERY FRIDAY

LUX FILMS
INDEPENDENT EXHIBITORS

GEORGE WASHINGTON THOUGHT INDEPENDENCE WORTH FIGHTING FOR. IF YOU cannot get it otherwise, we believe you ought to fight for Lux every week. It will pay you.

Released, February 24th, 1911

A CHILD'S PRAYER
DRAMA—534 Feet
A short dramatic, touching in its simplicity and directness. Will reach the innermost heart chords.

MATILDA CHASED
COMIC—354 Feet
A short, bustling comedy that will change the tears to laughter. Ridiculously funny.

A Split Reel of Quality and Variety for the Best Programs.
SEE OTHER PAGES FOR SYNOPSES AND PAST RELEASES

GET LUX

R. PRIEUR
10 East 15th Street 'Phone, 3427 Stuyvesant New York City
Sold only through the Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company

SCENE FROM "HIS GREAT DUTY"

GREAT NORTHERN

SUPREME IN ITS FIELD

Release for Saturday, February 18th,

THE LIFE OF A MUSCHIK

This film with the aid of an excellent plot gives a very clear conception of the daily life of the oppressed Russian peasant.

THE FALSE ALARM

A Rattling Good Comedy Film

Release for Saturday, February 25th,

His Great Duty

(Enacted by Actors of the Royal Theatre of Copenhagen)

A Magnificent Feature Production! Gorgeous Scenes! Exquisite Tinting and Toning Photography Clear as Crystal

Order this film from your exchange NOW. Don't let the other fellow get ahead of you.
ALL FIRST-CLASS INDEPENDENT EXCHANGES HANDLE OUR PRODUCT

GreatNorthern Film Co. 7 E. 14th Street NEW YORK

SOLD ONLY THROUGH SALES CO.

ECLAIR FILMS

ECLAIR FILMS AMERICA

THE FILMS OF PICTORIAL QUALITY

RELEASE OF MARCH 6th

"King Philip the Fair and the Templars"

975 FEET

A striking Drama of genuine interest. Perfectly adapted, thoroughly well interpreted and of unexcelled pictorial quality.

THE FILMS of PICTORIAL QUALITY, Combining PERFECT PHOTOGRAPHY with POPULAR PLAYS

ECLAIR FILM COMPANY

NEW YORK: 31 East 27th St. CHICAGO: 35 East Randolph St.

Champ Success

"The Old Man and Jim"

Released, Feb. 22nd, 1911. Author, Jas. Whitcomb Riley.

"Stick around" exhibitors, keep your fingers itchy for this reel of March 1st.

"The Talk of the Continent"

Don't leave your exchange-man until you see his written order for that film. By all means show it to your patrons.

THE CHAMP STAMP

"A Western Girl's Choice"

It is only occasionally that you will see one of those noted true western productions of Frederic Remington, but this reel contains dozens of them.

Champion Film Co.

MARK M. DINTENFASS, Gen'l Mgr. :: 12 East 15th St., New York City

W. E. GREENE FILM EXCHANGE, Inc.

The Oldest and Largest Independent Film Exchange in New England

The House of Quality and Satisfaction

MR. EXHIBITOR :

If you are desirous of finding out how to improve your present service and increase your daily attendance call and have a confidential chat with us. If you are unable to call, drop us a line.

W. E. Greene Film Exchange

INCORPORATED

228 Tremont Street, Boston, Mass.

Telephone 3790 Oxford

Talk is Cheap So is Hot Air

We don't want to give either, but we want to give you Samples of

"Arco-B" Biograph Carbons

If you are not already a user you will then become one.

Each package and each Carbon to be genuine must be marked "ARCO-B"

L. E. FRORUP & CO.

SOLE IMPORTERS

Headquarters for all kinds of Carbons

232-234 Greenwich St., New York

The Truth About the Pole

A SUPERB picture of thrilling dramatic interest, revealing heretofore undisclosed facts regarding the World Famous Controversy, presented by a cast of competent artists, with

Dr. Frederick A. Cook

Himself Playing the Leading Role

Dr. Cook Says:

"The Moving Picture you have made is a magnificent representation of accurate facts shown in dramatic form. I consented to personally appear in the picture because it tells a story I want every American to see."

This picture has been the headliner this week at Hammerstein's Manhattan Opera House, the leading vaudeville theatre of the country and has set New York agog.

Now Booking State Rights and Special Engagements

Magnificent Posters, Lobby Displays, and Literature Liberally Distributed

For Terms and Further Information Write or Wire

NORTH POLE PICTURE CO., Flushing, New York

Moving Picture World

THE WORLD PHOTOGRAPHIC PUBLISHING COMPANY - 125 E. 23d Street, NEW YORK
(Beach Building) Telephone call, 1344 Gramercy

SUBSCRIPTION: $2.00 per year. Post free in the United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands. Canada $2.50. Foreign Countries, $3.00. Post Paid.

ADVERTISING RATES: Whole page, $60.00; half page, $30.00; quarter page, $15.00; eighth page, $7.50; one inch (3⅜ in wide), $3.00; one inch (2¼ in. wide), $2.00; classified (no display), 3 cents per word.
TIME DISCOUNTS: 10% one months order, 15% six months, 20% twelve months.

WESTERN OFFICE: 160 Washington Street, (Post Building, Chicago). Telephone, Main 3145.

Entered at the General Post Office in New York City as Second-Class Matter.

Vol. 8 FEBRUARY 25, 1911 No. 8

Clouds in the Picture

We were talking moving picture making this week with several men interested in the use of the camera out of doors for scenic purposes. One of them showed us some strips of films of open landscapes, with trees, cattle, rivers, etc. A noticeable quality in these films was the presence of strongly marked clouds. It is so rarely that we see clouds in a moving picture, that we are moved to devote a short article to the subject.

Casting our memories back over the inspection of a very large number of outdoor moving pictures, we find that it is rarely, indeed that clouds are visible. There are, of course, two reasons for this. First of them is, that the clouds were not present in the sky when the pictures were taken; the other is, of course, that if the clouds were present, they were not developed out of the negative film, and therefore do not show in the positive.

Yet, how wonderfully beautiful clouds look in a moving picture when they are present! Let us consider the analogous case of the still photograph. At one time, the landscape photographer was content to have the sky part of his photograph, represented by white paper. Nowadays, no photographer worth his salt takes or rather prints a photograph from which the clouds are absent. If he does not get the clouds in the negative, he prints them in. Cloud negatives, we may say, are articles of commerce. The amateur photographer, especially, delights in getting cloud effects in his photographs.

Now, you cannot very well print in clouds in a moving picture. But if they are present in the sky, when the negative is being exposed, there are ways of making it tolerably certain that clouds will develop up. The use of a very small stop in the lens is one way. This, as it were, brings the clouds into focus, and if a very small stop is used, the clouds will probably develop up in the picture.

Then, there is another way. You can use a yellow screen in front of the lens. The use of the yellow screen is to depress the action of the blue of the sky on the film, and to let the yellow clouds affect the film. The result in developing being to make the picture in the cloud part look less like bare white by introducing clouds in the proper place.

A third way is to use orthochromatic film and a yellow screen. This brings out all the tone values in the picture, and the clouds, therefore, will be rendered in the negative. But the use of orthochromatized film and the yellow screen, is not yet general in this country; nor is it always practicable, simply because the exposure is thereby slowed. Again, if a screen be used on the plain film, it must be of a very light tint otherwise it again will make the picture underexposed. But it is probably done in parts of Europe, where the light is so actinic.

Then, again, a small stop is not always practical. Moving pictures require to be taken at comparatively great rapidity. But there are times and circumstances when either of these methods can be adopted. Anyhow they are perfectly practicable. Above all things there are the clouds in the sky and they look better in the picture than bare film. Indeed, they go to make up a part of the picture.

As we have over and over again pleaded for the presentation of moving pictures in the most pictorial form, we put in a plea to the photographers who are responsible for the negative to always endeavor, when practicable, while taking outdoor scenes, to secure clouds in the negatives. Cloud studies by themselves in photographs are interesting. Many of the great painters make the clouds in their pictures almost the dominant parts in those pictures. They are things of beauty, and joys forever. If they were more frequently present in moving pictures, the latter, we think would still further progress in public favor.

We believe that the French makers, the Eclair Company and the Gaumont, use orthochromatized films, and screens for their cloud pictures. This is one reason why those pictures are of such high pictorial quality. We look to the progressive American makers to get down to the use of orthochromatic films, and color screens, (or as they are known here, ray filters) for producing truthfulness of effect in their negatives.

In many cases, the clouds in a negative are lost by hasty development. Slow development with a diluted developer is favorable to bringing out clouds in a picture, that is if they have impressed themselves on the film. Development of moving picture negatives, however, is mostly of a hurried mechanical kind. It is probably for this reason that clouds in the negatives are so often lost.

"The Arctic Trust"

Dr. Cook in the Moving Picture

By Thomas Bedding, F. R. P. S.

This week at the Manhattan Opera House, West 34th Street, New York City, Dr. F. A. Cook, whose name is associated with polar exploration, is addressing large vaudeville audiences. It is the fashion nowadays for everybody who is anybody, or who has done things, or nearly done things, to go into vaudeville. Mr. Morris, of the American Music Hall, secured the Wellman Crew. Mr. Hammerstein has secured Dr. Cook. Wellman and his party nearly crossed the Atlantic in their airship; Dr. Cook, according to his unfriendly critics, nearly, but not quite, got to the north polar axis.

Getting Possession of the Records.

The Doctor, when he made his appearance on the Manhattan stage, delivered a written address which might be summed up as a somewhat caustic attack upon Mr. Peary and his assistants in polar exploration, and the reiteration of his own belief and conviction that he discovered the Pole. But of evidence and proofs, I am bound to say the address was entirely deficient. It struck me, as a disinterested listener, that it has been the utterance of a man who was laboring under some real or imaginary persecution, and who appealed to his audience to take his word and to treat him with fair play. The Doctor was applauded. He is not a particularly good or convincing speaker; were it not that his name was associated with polar discovery, alleged or otherwise, he would hardly prove a drawing card in a vaudeville house.

But the principal part of Dr. Cook's act, if I may so call it, consisted in the pictures—the moving pictures. These, it is to be inferred, were made somewhere in the neighborhood of New York City. They illustrated the somewhat nefarious doings of a mysterious body, called The Arctic Trust. Here is the story briefly told: The Arctic Trust, consisting of a number of wise old gentlemen, gather that their little game is being menaced by Dr. Cook. The trust's man, presumably Peary, hold a monopoly of polar exploration, and the credit and profit arising therefrom. When the trust learns that Dr. Cook is about to spoil that game, the trust—wicked person—resolves to thwart him. So what does the trust do? By the instrumentality of the "Roosevelt," it obtains possession of Dr. Cook's records in the hut at Etah. Cook is deprived of the possession of these, and a minion of the trust called Murphy is placed in possession of them. Mr. Whitney is inclined to stand by Cook, but the wicked Commander of the "Roosevelt" gets Whitney out of the way. And so there, to this day, are the records of Dr. Cook in the hands of his enemies. Still, virtue triumphs, for the concluding part of the picture shows Dr. Cook actually at the Pole, waving the Stars and Stripes, and surrounded by some of his faithful esquimaux.

Of course everybody is familiar with Dr. Cook's history, after his return to the United States by way of Copenhagen. Nothing was said, however, about this part of the history by Dr. Cook in his address; nor was it suggested in any of the pictures. The latter only concern us of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD. Certainly the film is a very cleverly made-up one, well acted by the wicked members of the trust, by Mr. Whitney, by Mr. Murphy, by the Commander of the "Roosevelt" and by the subordinate characters. One scene shows the interior of a bank at Tacoma, where Barril is bribed by a handful of dollar bills to swear that Dr. Cook never scaled Mt. McKinley. As I have said, the pictures are very well made, though the rapidity with which some of the photographs waltzed about the screen was a trifle disconcerting.

Leaving the question whether Dr. Cook is or is not an injured man and viewing the act, simply as an act, I should say that it would vastly interest any audience. For example: You have the picturesque personality of Dr. Cook telling his own story, or just so much of it as he could condense into a short address, and then you have these pictures claiming to have historical accuracy. Whether there is such a thing as an Arctic trust remains to be proved. Whether the Commander of the "Roosevelt" and Mr. Murphy were the nefarious persons they are represented to be is also open to discussion. In short, whether this story of the Arctic trust and its misdoings is true wholly or in part, is legitimately open to speculation. The fact remains that the audience at the Manhattan Opera House was much interested in Dr. Cook and the pictures illustrating his adventures and that probably other audiences will show an equal amount of interest in both the Doctor and the pictures.

The Arctic Trust in Session.

The subject was well introduced by a brief address by Wilbert Melville. I note that the daily papers hardly treat Dr. Cook's appearance in vaudeville quite seriously. One of them unkindly refers to the pictures as depicting Dr. Cook's "alleged" adventures. Another paper, the "New York Times," refers to Dr. Cook's claim as the discoverer of the North Pole as having been found to be "baseless." Nevertheless, with all this, after the reception given to the Doctor and his pictures at the Manhattan Opera House, there is still a great deal of money in Dr. Cook, and I should think, a great deal of money in these very cleverly made moving pictures of his adventures.

Dr. Cook in Polar Costume.

The pictures, it may be said were made by Mr. Wilbert Melville, the well-known producer of the Solax Company. They are to be put on the market by the North Pole Picture Company. Presumably at first, they will be shown on the vaudeville circuit of the country, after which State rights of them will be sold, so that they will find their way into the ordinary moving picture houses, not only of the United States, but all parts of the world.

In justice to Dr. Cook, it should be noted on his own authority (1): That he is not receiving payment for his lectures at the Manhattan Opera House; (2): That he, himself, chooses the medium of the moving picture for presenting his story to the public. It is his opinion that the moving picture offers the best possible way of offsetting what he alleges to be his unfair treatment in the newspapers. In conclusion from the point of view of the moving picture theatre exhibitor, this film of the Arctic Trust that has been woven around Dr. Cook's adventures, will, in our opinion, prove a powerful attraction for a long time to come.

The Open Market

On all sides we hear just now remarks as to the imminent opening of the market in the business of moving picture making. Under present conditions, as the intelligent reader is aware, the market on both sides of it, is virtually closed to any would-be new entrant into it. Ordinarily speaking, there is no room on either the Licensed or the Independent side for any new manufacturer. We say ordinarily speaking advisedly. And by that we mean that admission to either side can only be obtained by means that are in themselves extraordinary. That is to say, there must be great weight of money and great ability in respect of the business, artistic and technical conditions to insure success. Several articles have of late appeared both in our own pages and elsewhere, dealing with the business aspects of the starting of a moving picture plant. To cope with existing competition, a great deal of capital is required. The business has arrived at that pitch that it is quite useless for anybody, unless having at command hundreds of thousands of dollars, to think of starting in. Of course, we mean in respect of gaining a footing in the manufacturing field. At a guess, we should say that it would cost an ambitious manufacturer to-day, starting in afresh, at least $150,000 before he got his first picture on the screen. And we assume that the quality of the latter would be in quality equal to the best that has been up to the present shown in the moving picture theatres in this country.

Economically, therefore, the open market is closed to all, but those with well-lined wallets. Granting that man and money are ready to enter the moving picture field, what are the arguments for or against their admission? Taking the latter first, the only objections that can be urged against new competition are, namely, that the field is already well equipped by existing manufacturers. Qualitatively the existing manufacturers are quite competent to supply the demand; therefore the admission of new manufacturers would diminish the output of those already in the game. The laws of supply and demand govern this aspect of the situation.

So far, so good. But this aspect of the matter, in our opinion, and in the opinion of many well-wishers of the picture is of lesser importance. The arguments for the admission of new manufacturers into the field are few, but unanswerable. There are not enough good manufacturers of moving pictures to-day. We wish to discuss this question in the broad, rather than in the partisan spirit. The MOVING PICTURE WORLD, as we have said times out of number, is not a partisan publication. If we take the entire list of manufacturers of moving pictures in the United States and examine their claims to presence in the business on the score of quality of product, we are forced to the conclusion that many of them are not doing the picture justice. There are manufacturers on the Licensed side who, if they had to depend upon quality alone, for the sale of their films, would be out of business in a very few weeks. Everybody knows this; everybody is saying so. The same observation applies to the Independent side. On that side of the business, there are even a greater number of manufacturers whose products are so mediocre that they do not, can not and could not, make their way onto the moving picture screen by sheer force of merit. On the one side, the organization of the Patents Company; on the other, that of the Sales Company, assures sales for pictures which are notoriously not good enough for public exhibition in the present stage of moving picture manufacturing.

Here then, to our minds, lies the strongest possible argument for the opening of the market to high-class pictures by whomsoever made. It is, in fact, as the MOVING PICTURE WORLD pointed out over two years ago, a question of quality. If, therefore, it is possible to open the market by the admission of new manufacturers whose pictures are of a quality equal to or superior to the best that are offered through the two existing organizations, it seems to us that the general position would be strengthened. The open market, therefore, would operate upon the business as a whole.

Here we are discussing the question in its broad general aspects. To be more particular, we have data which indicate, if not exactly the formation of a third party, at any rate a desire on the part of men of money, intelligence and enterprise, to have a cut into the game. These men, so far as we can learn, are animated by a desire to compete with existing manufacturers on the only safe and sure grounds—that of quality. It seems to us, therefore, that on these grounds alone, that of improvement of quality, an open market for the moving picture is to be advocated.

Lassoing Wild Animals in Africa

The Famous Buffalo Jones Pictures

WHEN the Roosevelt pictures were released, the demand for them, the reader will perhaps remember, was very great indeed. It amounted to a wild clamor for that popular subject. But it seems that after the clamor was over and the exhibitors had been given their chance to exhibit those reels, there was great disappointment felt by many exhibitors throughout the land. Many of them frankly expressed their disappointment through these columns, and some went so far as to call the Roosevelt series a lemon of very choice vintage. The Moving Picture World, and numbers of exhibitors, held the opposite view; that the Roosevelt pictures were a remarkable series of pictures, all things considered, by which we mean, of course, the difficulty of making negatives in the heart of Africa under the most adverse conditions, but what the moving picture man sees in a picture the audience sometimes does not.

Ever since the Roosevelt pictures (and the imitation Roosevelt pictures) were shown, exhibitors all over the land have been very skeptical about hunting pictures; especially anything that claims to be an African hunting picture. They were so disappointed with the Roosevelt pictures that they have looked with suspicion ever since upon anything of the kind pertaining to Africa. This is a very regretable state of affairs, because it is responsible for putting a damper upon the efforts of a very worthy man, and one of the greatest hunters the world has ever known. In other words, Buffalo Jones is really the man to suffer for the disappointment caused by the Roosevelt reels. Exhibitors have been very backward in booking the Buffalo Jones reels, and in so doing they are missing, without exception, the greatest hunting pictures that the world has ever seen.

Between the Roosevelt pictures and the Buffalo Jones pictures, there is as much difference as there is between day and night, the difference being in favor of the latter. Or, better still, to use Colonel Roosevelt's own words, the exploits of Buffalo Jones make his own efforts look like "thirty cents," and we, who write this article, do not see where we can improve upon Colonel Roosevelt's opinion in the least.

We journeyed one evening this week to the Pastime Theater at 110 Fifth Avenue, New York City, which was the first house in New York City to show the pictures. The manager, Mr. Samuel H. Trigter, was the first exhibitor who had the courage to book the reels without seeing them. His pleased face at the end of the evening was the best indication of their merit. As Mr. Trigter remarked to us: "I took the picture on that long chance. Sunday was the release day, and nobody wanted it until I came along and took it the following Wednesday. I can only say that it is the most remarkable picture that I ever saw in my life. I can scarcely believe even now that such a thing is possible. Anything that I can say further in praise of the Buffalo Jones pictures, I would gladly say it. The pictures are better in every way than the Roosevelt pictures. The photography, on the whole, is excellent, clear, bright and distinct."

The excitement at times is almost hair raising, as these three American cowboys perform their wonderful stunts with the lasso; especially the taking of the lioness and the rhino. Those of our readers who exhibited the Roosevelt pictures realized that in that series the Colonel himself was the only real feature. We never got a glimpse of the Colonel shooting an animal; nor did we get a look at any of his animals until they were dead. Roosevelt himself was really the only attraction to the picture. Without him, there would have been a riot if any one had dared to show the picture. But in this picture of Buffalo Jones, we see the animals captured right out in the open in good sunlight, and there is absolutely no chance of a fake.

These reels have been condensed into 2,000 feet of interesting film from the original 9,000 feet that were developed and brought to this country. The best parts only have been taken to make up the picture, and, on the whole, it is very satisfactory and the photography is a hundred per cent. better than that of the Roosevelt series, which was taken by the same photographer, Mr. Cherry Kearton.

For the benefit of our readers who are interested in showing this picture, we will give the scenes in detail, describing them impartially and exactly as they appeared, without any attempt at exaggeration whatever.

PART I.

Scene 1.—Expedition Starting from Narobi, British East Africa, for the March to the Big Game Country, Showing Several African Hunting Parties; Several Bullock Wagons, and the Three American Cowboys, Colonel Charles J. Jones and the Messrs. Means and Loveless. Loveless was the lariat expert of the three; Means was the man of iron nerve who stalked the game, and Buffalo Jones, the brains of the expedition, and who laid out the plan of attack and directed it through to completion. We see these three men in the first scene riding abreast through the streets of Narobi on their trusted American horses, leading into the big game country American dogs. They ride directly by the camera in close focus, and this first scene received genuine cheers of enthusiasm from young Americans and red-blooded adults present, who dearly love the American cowboy.

Scene 2.—Ox Team Crossing a Drift, or a dried river bed. Much of the paraphernalia was carried in bullock wagons, drawn by zebus. Much of the paraphernalia used by Colonel Jones in this expedition was the same as that used by Colonel Roosevelt before him. There are no roads Idventurers sitting down to their try, and get a good idea in this second scene of the difficulty of transporting baggage overland to the interior.

Scene 3.—Camp scenes in the big-game country, showing the dinner table, and the American assorted by their large pack of dinner.

Scene 4.—Lassoing a Wart-Hog or Wild Boar. This animal is about the size of a large pig, but a very dangerous animal, with tusks as sharp as bayonets and capable of disemboweling a horse at one stroke. We see a good clean piece of rope work in this picture, and also see Mr. Wart-Hog dragged along and thoroughly roped before being turned loose.

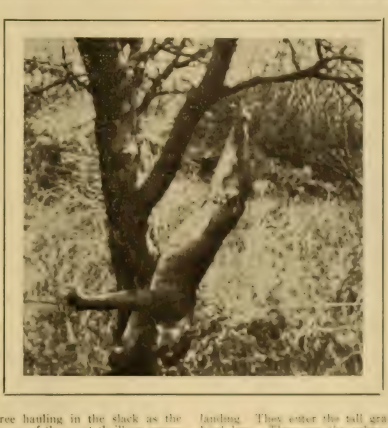
Scene 5.—Capturing Hartebeests, an old one and a young one. The Hartebeest is supposed to be the swiftest animal in the world, but, according to Buffalo Jones, there is no animal that can outrun a fleet American race horse. At the beginning of the picture we see the Hartebeests running, and they go so fast that they look like a lot of rubber balls bouncing along. The roping of these two antelopes is a clean, scientific piece of work that shows very clearly.

Scene 6.—Bucking Broncho and Eland. This scene furnishes a little comedy. After the Eland had been roped and tied to the saddle of the broncho, the broncho got frightened and began to buck. The way Mr. Broncho bucks is certainly refreshing, but it is not enjoyed by the poor Eland, who is helpless at the other end of the rope and is being jerked about by the bucking broncho in a very uncomfortable way. This is a good lively scene and very laughable.

Scene 7.—Giraffe Lassoed for the First Time. We see the giraffe trying to make a get-away before he is roped. Then we see him roped and tied to a tree. Later he is turned loose, as are all the animals caught by Mr. Jones, and makes another very fast get-away.

Scene 8.—Lassoing a Rhinoceros. This picture is more exciting than any bull-fight scene that ever occurred. It may be that an angry bull can kill a man or horse just as dead as a rhino can do it, but it hardly seems possible. There is something so fearful about a charging rhinoceros that it makes one's hair stand on end when he comes running at full speed. Our good American cowboys in this scene resemble the picadors in a bull-fight, in their hair-breadth escapes from the onrushes of the enraged rhino. Little by little we see his legs tangled in ropes, and the brave Means standing by the tree hauling in the slack as the rhino is made a captive. This is one of the most thrilling scenes in the picture.



Scene 9.—Sports In Camp to Celebrate the Capture of the Rhinoceros. In this picture we see the natives engaged in wrestling matches and showing other feats of strength to celebrate the prowess of the great Buffalo Jones, who by this time has become an immortal in their eyes. By this time also his name has gone far and wide amongst the natives of the dark continent, and he is indeed looked upon as a superman. There is some comedy in this picture, as we observe the cowboys riding the African oxen, which are some "buckers" themselves. The African natives like to imitate the American hunters, and we see some of them trying to ride the bucking zebus and the manner in which some of them hit the ground is very laughable.

Scene 10.—The reel ends with a camp fire at night and a weird dance by the natives. They dance all night round this fire singing a savage endless melancholy chant, which must be put to by the pianist.

PART II

Scene 1.—Zebras lassoed and ridden by a cowboy two minutes after capture, a very clever piece of work, plainly visible and well photographed.

Scene 2.—Capture of a Serval Cat, a large and dangerous sort of wildcat. This is perhaps the cleanest exhibition of roping in the series. We get an excellent view of pursuer and animal. We see the rope plainly as it goes through the air, settling directly over Mr. Serval Cat. We see him when he gets at his rope's end, and his hind feet go up in the air, tied together with infallable accuracy by Mr. Loveless, one of the truest lariat throwers the world has ever known. You may talk about your Christy Mathewsons and Russel Fords, and others whose reputations are based upon accuracy of throwing, but if you do not say that the lariat work of Mr. Loveless is the greatest thing you ever saw in the throwing line, we are very much mistaken.

Scene 3.—Lassoing a Cheeta, or hunting leopard, so called because it runs very fast and is very game. We see the Cheeta roped first by one leg and then by another until he is all snarled up, showing how a wild animal is handled without gloves. Mr. Cheeta is carried off to camp, a good deal after the fashion of an undershirt on a clothes line.

Scene 4.—Capture of a Full Grown Lioness. The balance of the reel deals with this thrilling adventure which, as an example of American nerve, is unparalleled in the history of the world. We see these three brave men start out unattended to drive the lioness from her lair. This being done she is harassed for hours and hours until she finally loses her nerve. It looks like a big, dangerous game of tag, but the lioness is always "it," and never for one moment does she get a chance to tag anyone—but she comes mighty close to it a couple of times. One of the lariats is passed over the branch of a tree, when the time comes for landing. They enter the tall grass and catch her by one of the hind legs. Those on the other end of the lasso then pull her over the tree and she is neatly strung up, as will be seen in the accompanying cut. More lariats are thrown at her until all of her feet are securely tied.

Scene 5.—Tying, Muzzling and Tying Claws.—In this scene we get a glimpse of the scientific way of muzzling a dangerous beast, and we also observe the claws being pinioned by Colonel Jones.

Scene 6.—Sledging the Lioness to Camp. When the lioness is muzzled and thoroughly tied she is placed in a helpless condition upon a drag or sledge made of branches and dragged into camp by horses.

Scene 7.—Giving her water in her exhausted state. It is necessary to give the lioness water to keep her from perishing. This is done by using a small Dutch oven with a rope on each side, and it is saving many times her royal majesty who refuses to drink, but tries to eat the iron oven.

(Continued on page 433.)

Philadelphia Review

By G. P. Von Harleman.

The Nixon Theater, 52d and Market Streets, is without comparison the most elaborate ten, twenty, and thirty-cent house in Philadelphia. The Nixon was opened Nov. 21, at an approximate cost of a quarter of a million dollars. The theater is operated by the Greater Philadelphia Amusement Company, Fred G. Nixon-Nirdlinger and Thomas M. Love, managers. The Nixon is an imposing structure of a real pleasing design built by John D. Allen, architect, and Raymond Kaff, contractor. The house has a seating capacity of nineteen hundred and is absolutely fireproof. The equipment is most luxurious all through, and no cost seems to have been spared in making the theater as attractive, commodious, and modernized as possible. A most distinguishing feature is the arrangement of the amphitheater, which has considerable incline, giving full justice to any seat in the house. There is also an exceptionally large and attractive lobby. I had the pleasure to meet Mr. J. J. Leopold, business manager, a very pleasant gentleman who showed me all over the place and also gave me a few facts in regard to the management of the house. The Nixon features the vaudeville and the attractions are booked on their own circuit. The Nixon-Nirdlinger Circuit—embracing a number of theaters, four of which are in the city of Philadelphia. "We run six acts of vaudeville," said Mr. Leopold, "and open and close with pictures." Many of our attractions are from the American Music Hal, of New York City, and we pay as high as a thousand dollars for a feature act. This week we have among other attractions 'Nana'—the famous dancer—and next week we have other acts of international prominence. We don't feature the picture, and don't call our place a picture theater."

Exterior Nixon's Theatre, Philadelphia.

I didn't have the opportunity to see the pictures, but I was informed by other parties that it would be an insult to the moving picture business to call the Nixon a moving picture theater. Kindly remember, Mr. ten, twenty, and thirty-cent vaudeville manager, that the moving picture was the creator of the ten, twenty-cent house, and that the low-priced vaudeville of old was a very shabby affair. There is absolutely no decline in the public's interest in the moving pictures, for the time present, and the silent drama is just as popular as ever, and a very large majority of theatergoing people will favor the vaudeville theater that shows the best pictures. The exhibitors in the neighborhood are very much pleased with the attitude of the Nixon in regard to the pictures and profit by a competition that otherwise should be killing.

Across the street from the Nixon is a curious little playhouse—"The Midget Bijou." J. A. Shoneman is proprietor and manager. Mr. Shoneman does not like strangers that come in and ask particulars in regard to his place. Even under the cloak of the Moving Picture World might hide the pestering agent for a film service, that always will offer tu cut his competitors' rate, no matter how many times it has been cut before. This practice is the curse of the business for exchanges as well as exhibitor. Sometimes a film renter will almost give his service away for the satisfaction of "cutting the throat" of a competitor, but generally the exchange will try to get even on the commercial run with a customer that won't pay a fair price for his service. It is on the commercial run a film renter makes his money. It takes quite a few trips for the first run reel before it pays expenses, but when it gets a few months old and down on the 50 cent scale every round it makes with a few hundred other brothers in toil is all velvet to the film renter. There are many kinds of commercial stuff; from the youngster of four weeks to the patriarch of so many years—reels that used to be all rainstorms but now in the days of expert film renovating are merely faded photographs of irregular relation to the supposed subject. This kind of junk generally is the bargain for the exhibitor that's only looking out for a cheap film service. His patrons usually don't appreciate any bargains and sooner or later it will be the "to rent" sign on the battlefield of misplaced economy. If other exhibitors would follow Mr. Shoneman's suit, and stick to the exchange that is trying to give them a fair service, at a fair price they would do much better than fall for every solicitor that comes along and bids for a "two-spot" less.

When Mr. Shoneman perceived that the humble representative of the World had no design whatever on his film service, he became the most engaging and accomodating gentleman. We walked all over the place and had quite a little talk—Mr. Shoneman and I. Mr. Shoneman is quite a picture enthusiast and strong believer in the value of the motion pictures as an attraction. "Couldn't pay me a thousand dollars to put on any vaudeville," he said. "Five-cent theatres can't afford it. If I was going to make any alterations at all in my program it would be more pictures. I used to run vaudeville, though, when I first opened this place three years ago, and I declare it was something unique—midgets, all kinds of midgets, and midget vaudeville. People were crazy about it at first and I kept it up as long as they would stand for it; now I do not even run an illustrated song, pictures and pictures only, and as good pictures as are obtainable. That's what my patrons want and I have my little place crowded all the time."

The Midget Bijou is a solid brick and concreate buildiing absolutely fireproof, with iron beams across the ceiling strong enough to hold a ten-story building. The little theatre costs about $12,000 and is very neat and thoroughly equipped, having a seating capacity of 277. The ushers were dressed in gold-braided uniforms, and the general appearance and management of the place gave the most favorable impression. The pictures were well projected and accompanied by suitable music.

There was one thing I missed however, and I told Mr. Shoneman so—the sound effects to the pictures. To get a full set of appropriate sound effects is only a small item of expense, and it certainly gives a realistic touch to the photoplay if intelligently manipulated. A feature of the Midget Bijou, I think, is the double lighting system for the auditorium: should a fuse blow and the lamps on the lighting circuit go out, all the manager has to do is to turn a switch that will instantly light a reserve set of gas burners mounted in the same fixtures.

My next house of inquisitive pursuit was the Fifty-second Street Theatre. The building is of unfinished brick, with white trimmings, and outside of the theatre also embracing a dance hall and pool room. The auditorium seats a thousand and is a very barn-like affair of absolutely no design. A very peculiar arrangement was the asbestos operating booth, that was suspended in the air, presumably fastened to the ceiling and the wall behind. The auditorium is well inclined, giving full advantage to every seat and no posts to obstruct the view. There was a first run Biograph on and it was admiringly projected. The machine used was a Motiograph and I was informed by the management that particular stress was laid on exhibiting a good picture. The film service is furnished by the Electric Theatre Supply Company, and five acts of vaudeville by Chas. G. Krauss, local representative for the United Booking Offices. The Fifty-second Street Theatre was opened on June, 1910, and is operated by the Fifty-second Street Theatre Company. Mr. John L. Barrett is the president. The theatre has fifteen exits which should be appreciated in case of panic.

The Lincoln Theater at Forty-ninth and Woodland avenue is the latest amusement enterprise in West Philadelphia. The theater was opened Monday, February 6th, at a cost of $75,000. The house has a seating capacity of 1,000 and quite elaborate in equipment. Four acts of vaudeville are furnished by Earl M. Metzo, local agent, and four reels of pictures by the Lubin Film Service. The manager is H. W. Eamiss.

* * *

Market street offered a few gratifying surprises. The general appearance and management of the Market street houses has been vastly improved since my last visit. They seem to look cleaner both inside and outside, and have neatly framed posters in the lobbies. Better attention was given to the projection, and the machines run at normal speed, except Saturday, of course, when, as in other big places, the pictures have to be run through at a break-neck speed in order to get the crowds moving.

I didn't notice any phonograph this time at The Family. I went in just the same to have a chat with Mr. Bradfield, the accommodating and capable manager. My attention was attracted to a most beautiful Gaumont picture—a scene from France or Switzerland. The pictures were well projected and supported by appropriate music and sound effects. Mr. Bradfield told me the house was catering to the best class of patronage, and the big majority were steady customers—friends of the moving pictures, mostly business people in the office buildings around. The Family runs two first run licensed films furnished by The Electric Theater Supply Company; also illustrated songs. No vaudeville whatever. In fact, none of the five-cent theaters on Market Street, I am glad to state, uses any vaudeville; some houses not even illustrated songs.

The Bijou Dream is an Independent house, a few doors from The Family, and operated by Messrs. Beavers (father and son). I had the pleasure to meet Mr. Beavers, Jr.—a very pleasant and congenial young fellow. Mr. Beaver has the autoimatic safety theater of Philadelphia. In case of accident in the operating booth, or panic of any kind, there are a number of switches all along the walls of the auditorium in reach of anybody. A turn of a switch will instantly throw off the projecting current, turn on the house lights and automatically open the exit doors. The projecting machine cannot be started before the switch is turned on again. It is unnecessary to comment on the merits of such an invention, and exhibitors will be glad to hear that Mr. Beaver intends to introduce his device before the trade at large in the very near future. The Bijou Dream is equipped with a motor generating set, manufactured by the Helios Manufacturing Company, to produce the projecting current. The machine has now been in use for less than six months, says Mr. Beaver, "and I would hate to do without it. Outside of the saving in my light bill, it produces a more uniform current, and, of course, a steadier, brighter and steady light than I could get from the mains."

Interior Nixon's Theatre, Philadelphia.

The Savoy, the licensed house next door, had also very good pictures. I saw another Gaumont film here of romantic Venice—"Morning His Last Love." The story in itself was of slight interest, but the scenery and the coloring was something one of the ordinary and really exquisite. There was also a Vitagraph comic, "Going Some," which surprised me rather astonishing feats of a female automobilist. I sure

(Continued on page 417.)

From a study of the position of the moving picture in the educational world to-day, as far as particulars may be gleaned from newspapers and magazines, it is apparent that the cinematograph has already become an established factor as an instrument of necessary value in teaching. In the Western parts of the United States and in Australia, there is (judging from their newspapers) already a well defined plan for using the illustrative film in every department of study to which it is applicable.

It is interesting to note that in these sections, where the cinematograph is thus leading the way, there is great proof of its peculiar adaptability in supplying many of the features of educational work, possible only in the more populous portions of the country, where a larger number of teachers and a more varied curriculum is obtainable. In exactly the same way in which many of these extensive communities have been able to jump from the oil lamp to the electric light, never having known the privilege of gas, so they pass from the more primitive country school methods to the use of the greatest scientific agency of the age.

* * *

It is very interesting when reading the opinions of the press and the published reports of school authorities, to note the many and varied ideas as to just where and how the moving picture can best be applied in general school work. In some instances a beginning in the kindergarten stages is advocated, in others the fourth grade is considered early enough; while others would defer its uses to the manual training and high schools. If, judging from these suggestions, the moving picture is adaptable to each grade, why debate where to begin its use? The cinematograph is too important to be a "pet scheme" or "hobby" of any particular man or men. There is no doubt it will begin at the bottom, or very foundation of all educational work, and, continuing through all stages to the topmost heights, will know no stopping place, but will be universal in its scope of illustrative advantages.

* * *

Another interesting discussion is going on as to the subjects for which the cinematograph is most immediately adaptive, history, geography, mechanical and scientific subjects are each given preference; here, again, it should be protested that time is wasted in localizing the scope and application of the moving picture. The cinematograph is too big to be either specialized or classified, it holds within itself the power to cover any range and will be able to do anything usually done by blackboard, stereopticon or any other method or combination of methods.

* * *

It is not prophesying to predict the effect of any cause any more than to say that nature will flourish under the sun's power, knowledge will increase and grow wherever the light of the cinematograph carries upon its rays that which the human eye can receive irrespective of age or subject.

AN ENGLISH TRIBUTE TO THE CINEMATOGRAPH IN THE UNITED STATES.

The "Bioscope," one of the leading English papers devoted to the moving picture, is weekly publishing a series of articles entitled "Education by Cinematograph." While these articles are ably written and very thorough, they are, perhaps, too minute in detail, covering more ground than is actually necessary, unless intended as a "course of instruction" to educational authorities, in which case they may be very useful. It is especially worthy of note, that the writer of these articles, in advocating a more thorough use of the cinematograph in the English schools, declares it as necessary if they intend "to keep pace with our enlightened neighbors on the other side of the water," meaning, of course, the United States. It is interesting to note that THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD seems to have been the first devoted to cinematography to press the claim of education upon its readers, and through them to the world at large; there is no doubt we are but on the fringe of a great work in thisparticular branch of learning.

EDUCATION BY MACHINE.

Machinery is going to do everything except think. It seems as though the time was rapidly drawing near when the mind of man will alone be left to him free from mechanical harness. In a recent publication there appears the suggestion that "as long as new apparatuses are being invented every day those who like to imagine what the future will bring forth can finish the imaginary picture of machine education!" Another authority suggests that "it begins to look as if the schools of the future may change their text books into machines." That these views are not too extreme may be gathered from the fact that music and languages are often taught by aid of the phonograph, and while it is unreasonable to suppose the passing of the human teacher, it is, nevertheless, true we are rapidly passing into an age when teaching will be largely aided by the splendid inventions of the times, of which, perhaps, the last and greatest of them all is the cinematograph.

DIFFICULTIES.

Already difficulties are appearing in the path of progress, educational demands are ahead of the supplies, school authorities, wishing to use the moving pictures, are already complaining both of the lack of films of those subjects already advertised, as also the lack of proper films in subjects supposedly ready for school work. Difficulties exist only to be overcome; it seems, however, that educational cinematography will have to be a special branch of the film manufacturer's are. Large firms exist for the sole purpose of supplying schools with all the necessary present-day text books and appliances. In New York a large and prosperous firm has for years devoted itself to educational stereopticon work, but at present no firm has come to the front to fill this great demand for educational films. Almost all film makers are "dabbling" in the required films; some might with advantage continue, and others, with equal advantage, might stop just where they are; there is no doubt that this is a field in itself, deserving to be well and worthily filled. Any firm devoting itself to these requirements will, while proving the same commercially profitable, become benefactors to the coming generation.

MOVING ABOUT AMONG MOVING PICTURES.

The world moves! The world is a picture, therefore every portion of the world is a moving, living picture, people travel about and around the world to see its great changes, its scenery and its people. In like manner people are now going to the moving pictures; not aimlessly as of yore, but with a definite purpose and with positive expectations. The public at large has been educated and there are few indeed who do not now understand many of the intricacies of the new art of cinematography even to the extent of a fair and capable criticism; one has only to listen to the comments audible in any moving picture theater to become convinced that people have an intelligent conception of that which is brought before them, and a former state of open-mouthed wonder has become the present state of practical and artistic comprehension. This argues well for the future, as people ask for what they want and usually get what they ask for. At the present time the writer finds from an actual and thorough experience that the demand is great for solid non-frivolous plays, an entire elimination of the dime novel series or the penny dreadfuls; religious and serious subjects are eagerly anticipated and well received; intelligent comics, funny without being foolish, lively without being ridiculous, as genuine amusement given. Another interesting feature lies with the children and young people who are true and interesting gauges of any exhibition, so that exhibition can learn much from the opinion of their young patrons. The writer contended through these columns some months ago, that a moral crusade or manufactured censorship was not necessary to derive out anything objectionable among moving pictures; believing that a cultured public would prove equal to the task; that this has proved to be the case is now an established fact, so that "all along the line" there is a decided advance in the "taste and fancy" of a liberal public patronage.

A. D. R., Philadelphia, Pa., says: "Kindly send me list of dramatic and other music. I am thinking of getting a player piano and want to look up about music first. Any advice you can offer will be thankfully received."

Mechanical instruments are advertised in these pages. A letter to the manufacturers would undoubtedly bring you all the information you want in regard to the matter. Perhaps some of the many managers who are using player pianos or other kinds of mechanical music can give you some pointers out of their own experience. A list of the required music has been sent.

Miss G. B., Neenah, Wis.: "I have been reading your articles in the Moving Picture World with much interest. Will you kindly send me a list of 'Hurries' and other dramatic music?"

The request has been complied with.

A breezy letter, signed J. R. Westgate (no address given) says in part: "I have been traveling around considerably of late, and never fail to take in the moving pictures when the opportunity offers itself. The different methods of playing to the pictures used in houses employing good and passable music is interesting, to say the least. Some (especially orchestras) play a concert programme regardless of the pictures. Others try to fit the picture only in spots—that is, where the dramatic situations are very pronounced. Others, again, work up the dramatic pictures only and play nothing in the comedies. (I should think the picture would fall rather flat. C. E. S.) Although I like orchestra music in pictures when it is played as it should be, I found that on the average the best 'working up' of pictures was done in houses employing piano, or piano and drums only. Now, I am an orchestra musician, though not a professional, and though I have never played in a picture house I don't see why an orchestra should not give as satisfactory a performance as the piano player, providing the members thereof will only take the same pains as the aforesaid piano player. Can't you say something to stir them up?"

I think our correspondent has hit the nail right on the head when he said: "If they will only take the same pains as the aforesaid piano player." This is not the first report I have heard in substantiation of the above complaint. It is very evident that the "aforesaids" are taking the most pains and getting the results, too. This emphatically is not as it should be. I am also an advocate of the orchestra in the picture house when "it plays as it should." There is no question that a pianist, if he knows his business, can follow all the movements of a picture more easily than can an orchestra. It is more flexible, in that he has only his own mood to follow, and is not handicapped by having to drag around the weight of a number of others who depend on the leader for every change or shade. This often entails stops and "breaks" in the music which the piano player is seldom guilty of. Definite pauses or "holes" in the music are apt to let a picture fall down in the particular spot where it should be held up, and it is probably to avoid this that some work up their pictures "in spots," as you put it, by most likely using scenes or other "filling" stuff for the body of their work, and, with a few melodramatic numbers memorized, can change in the more essential parts without perceptible breaks. But, where such a method might be the easiest way out of it, the orchestra which stops with this is not doing itself justice. I know that an orchestra whose members are willing to take the pains can give a good account of itself. They may not follow every movement on the screen so faithfully as some of the best pianists do, but the result, in its way, can be just as satisfactory as the piano alone. The orchestral coloring and shading made possible by the use of various instruments can be made to fully compensate for any loss of effect the pianist obtains by changing every few bars according to the requirements of the picture. Of course, the latter method is the ideal way, and though I admit it is not observed very closely by orchestras, as a general rule, I still maintain that it is not impossible providing you have the right kind of an orchestra whose members are willing to take pains. Another thing that must be borne in mind is the fact that until very recently very few moving picture theaters employed an orchestra. The business of accompanying pictures has been almost entirely in the hands of pianists, and the knowledge and experience required for this work is, with few exceptions, confined to them. Now that the orchestra is beginning to find favor, the recruits must naturally come from those who are lacking in this experience. And there is a "routine" born only of experience which is just as essential in this business as in any other. Heretofore, the better class of orchestral players have regarded picture work as a rather trivial affair—something quite below their dignity—and when an occasional engagement did come their way they thought a concert programme the only thing worthy of their talents. They are waking up to the fact here and there that it really requires some talent to properly accompany a picture, and that it is worth all the care and thought they want to put into it. However, the game hasn't reached its full development as yet, and there is no telling what the future has in store for us. I am optimistic enough to believe that the next few years will bring some remarkable changes for the better—and "the aforesaid piano player" is going to be largely instrumental in bringing it about.

The "themetic" proposition again. Roy C. writes: "I have been reading your letters with much more interest, and want to say a word regarding the themetic system, as proposed by P. C. H. Hummel. My experience is that you cannot often work up a picture in that way. Maybe I am at fault, but it seems that most of the pictures I get do not permit of any one particular theme which you can give to each character and play it whenever he or she appears, as the situations are apt to vary so much that the music does not fit in more cases out of ten. So I stay to the situations instead of to the characters, and it works out more satisfactorily. At least, it does so in my case. Perhaps I have not got the right idea in this matter, and if so I should be glad to have you show me where I am wrong."

Candidly, that is about my experience, too. I have been working along the "central theme" idea, which I believe is not quite the same thing; that is, it differs in details. The story itself gives a line of the character or movements to predominate. Sometimes the leading character may furnish the key, but more often it is their situations which really govern the matter. You are following along the lines which I have advocated from the beginning. First, find the motive, or central idea of the story. Is it pathetic, tragic, love or otherwise? This of course suggests itself in the situations. If you have a straight melodrama, which is usually sensational, there is little opportunity to use one recurrent theme throughout. More often we find it calls for a string of "hurries," "plaintives," etc., etc., with little or no connection so far as their thematic possibilities go. Perhaps some character may be of a sufficiently pathetic nature to call for a theme, or that nature running through their scenes, but here again, the scene dominates. Best all scenes are not built along these lines. "Auld Robin Gray" for example has a well defined motive running throughout. Of course, here a dramatization of the song as was a natural sequence that the song should be the picture. There was a central theme or motive to all popular songs that have been made into pictures whereby a connected dramatic motive would suggest a recurrence of the accompaniment motive. You will probably say, "But you are really getting on the situations more in these." That may be true in a sense. But, after all, the characters and situations are so much a part and parcel of one another that we cannot regard one as separate from the other. I said my readers differed as to what rather than to substance from the one advocated by Bro. Hummel. Perhaps some other reader has an opinion in the matter.

LEGALLY DEAD (Tube)

1. Rome. (Waltz theme) ... through four scenes to ...
2. "Five Year Later." Then waltz song for piano solo.
3. N. B.—The music shown on the reverse is entitled "Mr. Sweetheart's Favorite Waltz." Play that if you have it.
She goes a few bars more, then ... till change.
4. Mysterious till change, then ... till change.
5. Agitato till the orphan asks ... then subdue ... tions of their sad ... and her ... sion.
6. Plaintive till ... "Seven years after ..."
7. Same waltz as No. 2. Piano solo. ... piano ... to ... tore.
8. Agitato (dramatic) till change.
9. Plaintive till the ... (it would be well to ... more than piano at ... business), then ...
10. Lively waltz to finish.

In music for "The Slave's Revolt," given last week, read "Theatrical dance" instead of "Fantastic."

The Mercury Arc Rectifier

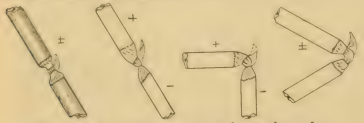
Henry Phelps Gage, Ithaca, N. Y.

Moving picture operators often ask, "Why does direct current give so much better light than alternating current?" or "They have only alternating current in our city, I am not satisfied with the results and the current bills are very high, what is the best I can do with it?" Recently I went to Schenectady to watch some tests the General Electric Company were making on their new mercury arc rectifier to answer these questions.

Everybody knows that in showing moving pictures it is necessary to have a very bright light, and that the arc lamp is the only one which is bright enough to give good results in a large hall. In general, to get a 15-foot picture, which would do for a 75-foot room, would require about 3,000 candle power. Our problem then is to get this 3,000 candle power as cheaply as possible. Using alternating current in the usual type of lamp it would take 40 amperes, but if we could have direct current it would take only 12 amperes to get the same light. Now, as far as the light goes, it does not make much difference whether we get this direct current from a dynamo or whether we get it from a mercury arc rectifier.

Without saying more in a general way, I will tell what tests were made by the General Electric Company and what they show. The candle power of various arc lamps was measured in the direction of the axis of the lantern; that is, towards the screen.

First, an alternating current lamp with ⅝-inch cored carbons, such as are used in most moving picture outfits, was tested with currents from 20 to 60 amperes (Fig. 1).



Figs. 1-2-3-4- Arrangement of lamp electrodes.

Second, the same kind of lamp except that direct current was used. The upper carbon was positive. Great care was used to hold the position of the carbons as is shown (in Fig. 2), so the crater or bright spot faced in the direction of the screen. This is the best way to operate a direct current lamp because it gives the most light. If the arc is too short the lower carbon shades part of the crater and a good deal of light is lost.

Third, the same as 2, except that direct current was supplied by a mercury arc rectifier.

Measurements were also made on a "right angle" arc lamp. (Fig. 3.)

The lamp shown in Fig. 4 is often used for alternating current, but no tests were made with it.

RESULTS.

The results of these experiments are given in the tables below and also in the form of curves. The tables show the current used, the kilowatts drawn from a 110-volt line, and the candle power of the arc. The curves show the same thing graphically.

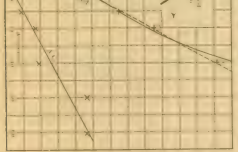


Fig. 5—Relation between Current and Light in Inclined Electrode Lamp.

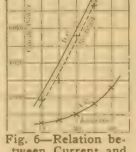

Fig. 6—Relation between Current and Light in Right Angle Lamp.

Fig. 5 shows the candle power with different currents and the usual arrangement of inclined carbons. Fig. 6 is the same thing for the "right angle" lamp. Figs. 6 and 7 show the kilowatts drawn from the line for different candle powers.

In Fig. 7 the bottom curve shows the power drawn from the line with alternating current and resistance. The next, when using direct current 110 volts and resistance. The third alternating current and an economy transformer. The fourth alternating supply and the mercury arc rectifier. The top curve shows the power consumed at the arc with direct current and shows what might be done if we had apparatus which was 100 per cent. efficient.

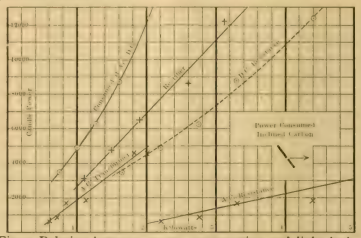

Fig. 7 Relation between power consumption and light in inclined electrode lamp.

The cost of operating the lamp depends not upon the current (amperes) used, but on the power (kilowatts) drawn from the line. Let us look at Fig. 7 and see how much it will cost to get the 3,000 candle power necessary for a good picture, supposing the price of electricity to be 10 cents a kilowatt-hour. If we use alternating current and a resistance frame, it will take 5 kilowatts and cost 50 cents an hour. If we use alternating current with an economy transformer, it will take 1.4 kilowatts and cost 14 cents an hour. Direct current will cost the same. If we use a mercury arc rectifier connected to an alternating current supply we will need only 1.1 kilowatts and it will cost 11 cents an hour, a saving of 3 cents an hour or 25 per cent. over any other kind of device.

Watching the behavior of the arc while making these tests showed that the direct current arc (using rectifier or dynamo) gave a much steadier light than the alternating current arc. With alternating current the carbons are held close together and the lower carbon often casts a shadow. With direct current the carbons can be held apart as in Fig. 2, so the lower carbon casts no shadow at all. Moreover, as is seen in Fig. 5, one can get more light from direct current than from alternating. An arc lamp will not work well on more than 40 amperes, so if we push the lamp to its limit we can get 12,000 candle power with direct current and only about 4,000 candle power with alternating current.

Fig. 8-Relation between power consumption and light in right angle lamp.

The General Electric Company has been to considerable trouble and expense to make these tests, a fuller account of which will be found in the Electrical World, October 13, 1910, under "Arc Lamps for Projection." The cuts were loaned by the Electrical World.

SUMMARY.

Direct current gives a much steadier light than alternating current.

When only alternating current is to be had, direct current can be gotten from it by the use of a mercury arc rectifier.

The cost of current may be reduced by using an economy transformer in place of resistance, or, better yet, by using a mercury arc rectifier.

TABLE I. ALTERNATING CURRENT, INCLINED CARBONS.

Line kilowatts with

Amperes.	Resistance.	Transformer 96% efficient.	Candle Power.
20	2.2	.58	620
30	3.3	.83	1,700
40	4.4	1.13	1,830
60	6.6	2.00	4,650

30 volts at the arc.

		Right-angle Carbons.
10	1.1	.45	590
20	2.2	.96	1,050
30	3.3	1.670	2,450

50 volts at the arc.

TABLE II. DIRECT CURRENT, INCLINED CARBON.

Amperes.	Line Kilowatts.	Candle Power.
15	1.65	3,490
20	2.2	4,900
30	3.3	8,750
40	4.4	12,350

51 volts at the arc.

	Right-Angle Carbons.
10	1.1	2,300
20	2.2	6,230
30	3.3	10,150

56 volts at the arc.

TABLE III. RECTIFIER, INCLINED CARBONS.

Amperes at Arc.	Line Kilowatts.	Candle Power.
15	1.1	3,100
20	1.50	4,720
30	2.6	8,000
40	3.1	12,150

Arc voltage, 55 volts.

		Right Angle Carbons.
10	.85	1,900
20	1.5	5,600
30	2.6	9,450

Arc voltage, 57 volts.

TABLE IV. POWER DRAWN FROM THE LINE FOR DIFFERENT LIGHTS, USING INCLINED CARBON LAMP.

	Kilowatts
	Direct	Alternating Current.
Candle Power.	Current.	Transformer.	Resist.	Rectifier.
1,000	...	.6	2.7	...
2,000	1.1	1.1	3.8	.8
2,500	1.3	1.3	4.3	.9
3,000	1.4	1.4	5.0	1.1
4,000	1.9	1.7	5.8	1.3

TABLE V. LIGHT GIVEN FOR DIFFERENT POWER CONSUMPTION.

Kilowatts.	Candle Power.
1	2,000	2,200	.....	3,200
1.5	3,000	3,400	.....	4,800
2	4,300	4,800	500	6,900
3	7,300	.....	1,300	11,000
4	11,000	.....	2,200	.....
5	.....	.....	3,100	.....

The "G. E. Economy Arc" transformer has an efficiency of 96 per cent. and a reasonably good "power factor."

Using direct current 110 volts, with resistance, the efficiency is about 50 per cent. 55 volts are used at the arc and the other 55 volts are wasted in the rheostat.

The Mercury Arc Rectifier has an efficiency of 70 per cent. and a "power factor" of 80 per cent.

As a rough approximation one can assume that the inclined carbon lamp will give 200 candle power per ampere with direct current, and 60 candle power with alternating current. This value will not hold except for about 2,500 candle power.

MOVING PICTURE LEGISLATION

By C. H. Kerr

House of Representatives, Topeka, Kan.

The moving picture business is undergoing some changes that are more than interesting, especially in the fire it has undergone in the shape of adverse criticism on the part of the Hearst dailies, and publications of general circulation that have seen fit to name the Bowery Picture Show of New York City as the average example of a modern show. This adverse criticism has gone over the land and is now being evidenced in the various bills that are up before the state legislatures for the regulation of such shows.

As a member of the Kansas Legislature I have had an opportunity to observe one of these bills and enclose you a copy of the bill as it was presented and as it was finally passed, after I had succeeded in getting it amended, and it may pass the other body in this way.

The trouble is that the moving picture is not understood by the public in general and sometimes not by the manager of the picture show. Few of them realize that when a great moral lesson is produced right and wrong must be contrasted, that the stronger the wrong is depicted the clearer the right will stand out in contrast herewith.

There was but little argument on the floor of the House during the passage of the bill. I make a good, strong plea for the working man's theatre, the poor man's show, and succeeded in convincing even the author of the bill that he was working serious injustice upon those who wanted to be fair with the public, and wanted to do good rather than injury to the children who patronized their shows. As the bill now stands any burden that it may bear is shifted from the little operator of the show to the film manufacturer through his rental agency where any blame, if blame there be, belongs. The enforcement of the law is placed in the hands of the city mayor where he can meet local conditions as he may see fit, as there are occasional managers who do need suppression on general principles, and the law gives the mayor of the town sufficient authority to close a show that is not properly operated.

I hope to see the day when moving pictures will be in every schoolhouse and every church in the land, and that day can be hastened by such people as Pathe Freres, who should separate the high class scenic productions, the fine educational subjects and the grand classics that they are capable of producing from the dull comedies and foolish French dramas, which are based upon ideas of morals absolutely unknown in this country.

The following is the act referred to and which will shortly be enforced in the State of Kansas. It will be noticed that the bill holds the manufacturer or renter liable to the exhibitor for damages if films are furnished which he is not permitted to show:—

As originally presented:

AN ACT

To prohibit the public exhibition of any criminal or indecent pictures, and prescribing the punishment therefor.

Be it enacted by the Legislature of the State of Kansas:

Section 1. It shall be unlawful for any person or persons or corporation, directly or indirectly, to publicly show, display or exhibit, or cause or permit to be publicly shown, displayed or exhibited, any of the following pictures showing, indicating or suggesting acquittal or pardon by the commission of any crime or misdemeanor, or the avoidance or punishment of homicide by wife.

Sec. 2. Any person or persons or corporation violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine of not less than ten hundred dollars nor more than one hundred dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail not less than thirty days nor more than six months, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

Sec. 3. This act shall take effect and be in force from and after its publication in the official state paper.

As amended and adopted:

AN ACT

To prohibit the public exhibition of any criminal or indecent pictures and prescribing the punishment therefor.

Be it enacted by the Legislature of the State of Kansas:

Section 1. It shall be unlawful for any person or persons or corporation, directly or indirectly, to publicly show, display or exhibit, or cause or permit to be publicly shown, displayed or exhibited, any of the following pictures showing, indicating or suggesting acquittal or pardon by the commission of any crime or misdemeanor, or the avoidance or punishment of homicide by wife, that portion of the bill that is italicized. Any town or city or any person or persons injured by the commission of the acts named in this act shall be entitled to recover from the owner or agent of the building or premises in which such exhibition is made or from the owner or agent of the picture or picture machine used in the display of such pictures all damages sustained by the public either

Any person or corporation violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine of not less than [illegible] dollars nor more than [illegible] dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail not less than [illegible] days nor more than [illegible] months, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

Sec. 3. This act shall take effect and be in force from and after its publication in the official state paper.

Why have controversie on technical questions? As a matter of common sense what does the "arc" amount to in the eyes of the exhibitor, or an audience? All the patrons of a picture house want is a good reproduction of a picture. The successful manager has that point of view, to gain it he employs an OPERATOR. If he engages anything else he loses money. The man who employs an operator who first starts to run a machine and then corresponds with the trade journals for points as to how to run the machine is a fool. May I add that the operator is a knave?

* * *

Why all this discussion about the "arc?" The brains of the men engaged in it are needed in other quarters. Every hour of their time is in demand. Why should they be required to delve into authorities, rack their experience, and put pages upon pages through the press for the enlightenment of some people who know nothing about the business, will not spend money, but hope to qualify themselves by a subscription of a dollar or two a year?

* * *

I have read and studied the discussion, and I feel that already the combatant theorists have given gratis what it has cost each of them much time and money to learn. I will not attempt to intimate which of the theorists is correct, because neither have been to see me and I believe a decision would be worth something. Nor do I invite a visit. Let those who seek the information pluck the fruit as they select the tree.

* * *

My point is this: A trade journal is devoted to that trade—or should be. It is not a correspondence school. All, or most, operators will in time run up against a problem. The best of them have done it. I know of many. But if left to their own resources—and they know their business—they will give the show and hold their job. I do not think that experts should be drawn into controversies for the benefit of novices—and the country is full of them.

* * *

I know of a case of a man who was a motorman on a trolley service in a remote town. He mingled with moving picture machine operators to get points on the projecting machine. The operators were naturally jealous of new comers. They shielded the apparatus. But they talked, and the seeker got the benefit of it. Would you believe me? That motorman is now an authority on projecting machines! He can tell one from the other blindfolded. Give him a chance to "pass his hand over" and he will tell you, in an instant, the make of the machine and the trouble.

* * *

Why these schools for perfection of operators? Take some of the professors and find out where they started and what they have done. Good fellows, to be sure, but whence comes their knowledge? Not from experience! They know, as you and I know, that there are thousands of young men who, enchanted by the moving picture business, will give up a high school course, yea! a college education to learn to run a machine and get in the limelight.

* * *

I was interested the other day by reading the comments of a Brooklyn, N. Y., Judge of the Supreme Court, I believe it was, wherein he stated that he would not attempt to condemn moving pictures; that they had come to stay and he believed they were the product of thought that would be almost everlasting source of entertainment and instruction to the people. I think I recall not the name of the Judge. Dike, I believe it was, but any reader of the Moving Picture World can easily verify my quotation. "But," said the Judge, "I condemn any methods, such as are used by cheap houses to lead young girls astray." Amen! say I. The purification of the motion picture business has been, and is, the most difficult task of those most interested in it. It was this aim that brought about the organization and operation of the National Board of Censors. I take my hat off. It is upon this sheet that Licensed and Independent pictures are reflected without prejudice, the strongest evidence of an effort to conform with the laws of the land and decency.

* * *

The remarks of the Judge I referred to were not uncalled for. There are too many places of the kind he points out in existence, and yet it is not the fault of the places. The managers of them bring on the disrepute by employing youths to whose character they are indifferent. The one exception I take to the whole thing is that the vigilance exercised over the moving picture theater is not applied to the regular theaters. Ushers are promoters of crime and in such places to as great an extent as door tenders and others in picture houses; stage hands are none the less culcable. I could go higher up, but it would be no justification. The fact is plain and clear. The manager of every picture house should be held personally responsible for the help he employs. If a bank clerk makes a mistake the bank is held responsible. While a picture houses may not be a bank, the conditions are the same. Too many managers wink at flirtations for the nickels or dimes that come in at the door, and they should pay for the winks.

* * *

And this brings me to the recent articles I was sorry to see in my favorite moving picture publication, wherein it was stated that the pictures were losing their hold upon the public. Let me say right here that the pictures are stronger today than ever, and are growing every day where they are properly handled. Poor pictures are like a bad play; poor reproductions are synonymous with poor productions. The fault is not with the pictures, but with the places, the managements and the handling.

* * *

And at this point I recall the "arc" discussion. The audience knows and cares nothing about the arc. It wants its money's worth. The care of the manager is his audience. The "arc" is all right. What is wanted is a proper man to handle it, and if the right money is paid the handling will be looked after. The trouble is that too many men think they are smart. They engage a good operator and then have one of their smart sons watch him. In the course of three or four weeks the young hopeful goes to his sire and says "Fadder, it's easy." The father enthusiastically asks "Can you do it, Issy?" Of course, you know the answer, and the good man loses his job. Issy starts in and somehow he fails to produce the goods his predecessor handed out. He tells his father-manager the trouble and, as a result, a letter is written to the two dollar per annum benefactor. Then Hallberg and Richardson grind out what they would not give privately for $50.00, get on bad terms with each other, and create havoc generally.

* * *

Anybody who knows anything about the moving picture business must know that the pictures reflect the cardinal principle. The figures in the pictures do not speak—at least they cannot be heard by the audience, all tributaries to their interest should be guided on the same lines. Many inquiries sent in are not bona fide. By this I mean they are sent in by outsiders who seek to get a line and not assistance, therefore, the more prolonged the discussion on any particular subject, the more somebody who is really not entitled to it is getting for nothing.

"IMP'S" BALL A BIG SUCCESS.

The ball given by the employees of the Independent Moving Pictures Company of America, at the Leslie rooms Saturday night, February 11, was one of those pleasurable affairs that go to engender a better feeling among coworkers. Edward Roskam, Jack Cohn, Doretta McDonald and Daisy Pollack had charge of the arrangements, ably assisted by others. The music was by MacArthur's orchestra, from the music house of Laemmle and during the intermissions the latest song hits were sung by Edward Doer and William Arthur, including the $2,000 prize song, "I'll Change the Thorns to Roses." Jack Cohn was floor manager, and there wasn't a dull moment. The grand march was led by Mr. and Mrs. Carl Laemmle, and the rays of spot lights heightened the effect. The ball was largely attended, quite a number being present from the Thanhauser Company. A great many moving picture celebrities mingled with the crowd and the first effort of the "Imps" in the way of a ball was a pronounced success.

The "Imp" employees present were: Edward Roskam, Doretta McDonald, Harry Zellar, Jack Cohn, Rene Bardet, Eugene Gaudio, J. Solzer, Bert Siebel, Henry Klotz, Harvey Willstumpf, Ed Williams, Daisy Pollack, Irene Brogan, Myra Calhahan, Julius Bernheim, Harold Wilkins, Robert De Vide.

THE VITAGRAPH DINNER.

Raub's Restaurant, Brooklyn, was the scene of the dinner given on Saturday evening, February 11, by the Vitagraph Company of America to its employees. Last year this function was held in the studio, at Elm avenue, but it was found that the interception of the kind of festival in the well-ordered Vitabusiness, because too much time was taken up in getting things graph studio meant some interruption to the resumption of into order again "after the ball." So, businesslike as ever, and in all things, the company decided this year to select a public restaurant as the scene of the reunion.

Certainly last Saturday's reunion was unique in one respect. Making our way to Raub's at or about the time specified, we found ourselves a solitary unit almost submerged in a perfect sea of Vitagraph personalities and individualities. The company numbered hundreds. Raub's seemed to be besieged by hordes of enthusiastic picture people. We use the phrase "picture people" advisedly. Here were all classes engaged in the making of the picture, from the omnipotent stage director, or producer, down to the humble girl engaged in the cleaning of the completed negative.

The principal personalities of the Vitagraph Company took their places at the head of the table of honor. There were present Mr. W. T. Rock, President, and Mrs. Rock, and Mr. and Mrs. Blackton. "W. T. R." looked, as he always does—in the pink of health and happiness. But the responsibilities of the great Vitagraph undertaking seemed to us to have reduced Mr. Blackton to that interesting stage, when a little rest is needed. We gathered that he is about to take this much needed rest and change in Florida. Mr. Per contra A. E. Smith, treasurer of the company, lately returned from Europe, was full of Vitagraph energy. He and his co-directors were indefatigable in looking after the comfort of their guests.

Of all the famous Vitagraph personalities present we can hardly afford place to give a list. Suffice it to say, that we met such well known and commanding figures as Florence Turner, Director Thompson, Charles Kent and representatives of the office, producing and technical staffs. When Mr. Blackton took his seat the entire assemblage broke out into a frantic display of headgears, illustrated in the accompanying photograph, whilst the air of the banquet hall shrieked with whistles. The great gathering just let themselves go in pure enjoyment. After the dinner there follower an entertainment contributed to by many well-known artists. This was interspersed by the exhibition of current Vitagraph releases, amongst which, "A Tale of Two Cities," a recent masterpiece, was prominent.

A popular guest at the dinner was the great Vitagraph dog Jean. The press was represented by Mr. Thomas Bedding, F. R. P. S. (Moving Picture World) and Mr. Doré Hoffman (Film Index), little brother of our own H. F.

The banquet room was prettily decorated with flags and the entertainment and dance was watched from the galleries by many visitors, amongst whom ladies were conspicuous.

A stranger being present at this banquet would have had cause to feel legitimate astonishment. Subsequent to the dinner we mentioned to some friends that we had been present at a dinner given by a moving picture company to its several hundred employees. The astonishment of our friend was great, that there was in existence a moving picture manufacturing concern which numbered its employees by the hundreds. But even so, the fact that the Vitagraph Company has such a large, prosperous and enthusiastic staff working for it, is indicative of two things: One, the success and prosperity of the company itself; and, two, the enormous extent of the moving picture business.

We desire to congratulate the Vitagraph Company and its staff upon the success of the dinner, and the success which the company itself has won by sheer hard work and merit

BALTIMORE BRIEFS.

When asked what picture he considered the greatest picture ever shown during the year of 1910, Mr. Philip Sheck, of the Pearce and Sheck Enterprises, said that he saw so many good ones that he could not tell which was the greatest, but said that the "Home of the Seal," released by the Edison Company January 11, 1911, was the greatest, in his estimation, of the new year.

To relieve the monotony of the long wait between the acts of the regular stage drama, Manager Charles S. Anderson, who recently took charge of the Savoy Theater, in this city, has introduced motion pictures and illustrated songs. The idea, which is new and novel to the theater-going public of this city, meets with their sincere approval Vitagraph Banquet—Raub's Restaurant, Brooklyn, N. Y., February 11.

LONDON LETTER.

London, England, January 30, 1911.

London producers do not take kindly to exhibitions. There have been several attempts here to organize such undertakings, but the responses have not been sufficient to warrant expenditure on the project. This is due to a great extent to the fact that "Film Land," as it is known here, consists of a very limited area in the heart of the most accessible position of the great city. With one or two exceptions a visitor could make the round of the principal manufacturers of films and cinematographic appliances in a day comfortably. Hence, very little purpose would be served by getting all connected with the trade under one roof for say, a week. I say this, assuming, of course, that any exhibition here would be a purely British, and not an international one in its character.

On the other hand, I should say that if American houses connected with this growing industry were to assure anyone here of their interest in such a matter, in a practical manner, that is, by taking space at an exhibition to be held during some month when Americans usually cross the "herring pond" for their holidays, they would make enough to pay their expenses and take a bit back with them.

The Englishman is not nearly so conservative as he is painted. Free trade has caused him to look with favor upon the productions of other countries, provided, they are better than those of his own, or equally good at a cheaper rate. And why should the cinematograph trade have to go to Turin for an exhibition on international lines? Surely London, which boasts of being the market-place of the world, is good enough for the purpose, especially when one considers that everyone comes to the English capital at some time or other, either on pleasure or business, or both combined.

And, speaking of the Turin exhibition, reminds me that the function will be inaugurated on April 20, and that among the attractions is to be an international competition of moving pictures, with prizes of 25,000 francs for artistic and 5,000 and 3,000 francs, respectively, for educational and scientific pictures, respectively, together with an international conference of cinematograph traders. Readers of your paper desiring further information should write to the Commission Execution dell 'Esposisione di Turin

So keen has become the craze for motion pictures in this country that some of the seaside hotels are installing complete equipments for their display. Of course, this is all for the good of the industry, from a manufacturing point of view, but how exhibitors in the localities affected will take this new form of competition I do not know. I hold the opinion, however, that the more the public appetite is whetted the greater will be their enthusiasm for the moving picture, and after witnessing this kind of entertainment during their vacation—provided, of course, the pictures are projected by a skilled operator—they will probably become patrons of the electric theater.

I would warn buyers and renters in America to be very careful in placing orders for films depicting the coronation of King George V. When the late King Edward was crowned complaints as to faked pictures were numerous and bitter. I learn that elaborate arrangements are being made for faking coronation films again this year. The whole thing is to be produced very carefully, but, of course, it will be like Hamlet without the ghost. The film of the actual ceremony will be very easy to obtain, and the American section have the remedy against imposition in their own hands, by placing their orders with reliable firms in London. Forewarned is forearmed, and now that I have exposed this trickery there is no reason why your readers should fall into the trap. Protests against this faking of current events cannot be too forcible. Once let the public imagine that this kind of film is not genuine and you breed in them a spirit of distrust that will do incalculable harm to the picture industry. In this country the patrons of the picture theater like to think that they are witnessing actual representations of events. They are induced to visit the theater on that assumption and they ought not to be defrauded.

They say you must go abroad to hear news concerning your own country, therefore I may be pardoned for giving you a little bit of information from the United States Consul General at Moscow who reports that the cinematograph is so popular in Russia that the most insignificant towns and villages even in the most remote districts are well provided with them, and new electrical theaters are being opened daily in the provinces. In Moscow alone there are about eighty cinematograph theaters and approximately the same number in St. Petersburg. After this who shall say that even darkest Russia is coming into the van of civilization.

A. E. Taylor.

A GREAT HELP TO THE OPERATOR.

One of the greatest difficulties encountered in the projection of moving pictures is in the management of the arc.

It is of the greatest importance that the "crater" be kept at all times squarely facing the condenser, and that the tip of the lower carbon never be permitted to get in the way of the light from the upper. A very slight difference in the setting of the carbons will make an enormous difference in the behaviour of the arc, especially on alternating current.

It is utterly useless to attempt to improve the performance of the arc through the use of transformers or current-saving devices. These can only reduce the amount of current wasted, and under equal conditions as regards arc voltage and current, have absolutely no effect whatever on the quality of the light. It is true, that if a poorly-designed rheostat be replaced by a well-designed transformer, a better light will be secured, but the same result would have been obtained by the use of a properly designed rheostat.

A properly-designed transformer will effect on alternating current, a great saving in current, and is very valuable for this purpose, but cannot influence in any way the behaviour of the arc.

To obtain the best results from the projection arc lamp, it is necessary, first of all, that the position of the "crater" on the upper carbon be maintained in a proper position with relation to the tip of the lower carbon, and the condenser.

The operator should be sure that at all times the "crater" of the upper carbon squarely faces the condenser and that no portion of the lower carbon stands in the way of the light from the upper. This is just as necessary on alternating as on direct current. Some operators attempt to obtain light from both the upper and lower carbons on the condenser, but it is easily seen that getting light from two sources is bound to produce a double picture on the screen, the edges of which will slightly overlap and produce poor "definition." While this plan produces a greater amount of light, its effect on the clearness of the picture is so injurious that the best authorities now agree that only one "crater" should be exposed toward the condenser.

Perhaps the most difficult part of handling the arc is in keeping the tip of the lower carbon out of the way of the light from the upper. This is especially troublesome when a very short, low voltage arc is used, such as is necessary with extremely soft carbons. Under these circumstances the carbons are very apt to "freeze," by the building up of a "teat" between them. This trouble is so frequent that hundreds of operators believe that the occasional filing of the carbons to remove "teats" is a necessary evil. This is entirely wrong. The formation of a teat is absolutely positive indication that the arc voltage furnished by the rheostat or transformer is entirely too low.

In case the carbons cannot be continuously operated without filing, the rheostat or economizer should be replaced by properly designed apparatus. This trouble may occasionally be obviated by the use of very soft carbons, which however are so inferior in efficiency and color of light as compared to the high voltage carbon that their use cannot be considered economical under any circumstances.

The greatest difficulty in managing the arc lies in its intense brilliancy. It is impossible for the human eye to look directly into it for any appreciable length of time without suffering injuries which, while not at once apparent, will surely manifest themselves in the course of time.

The ruby glass in the door of the lamp house is meant to obviate this trouble, but is open to several objections. In the first place, it shows only those parts of the arc in which red rays are plentiful. The view of the arc thus obtained is not sharply defined or accurate, and by no means clear enough to enable the operator to really judge intelligently of what is going on in the arc.

It is quite necessary that the operator be able to distinguish clearly the outlines of the "crater" and the hot carbon tips without discomfort to the eyes. For this purpose the "BIO" Arc Screen is becoming popular with operators all over the country.

This device of the Kiewert Co. gives a clear and accurate image of the arc showing all parts in their true relations, and enables the operator to obtain an accurate control over the arc which is impossible by any other means now available.

The device is small and easily attached to any lamp-house and the makers state that all operators who have tried this Screen express themselves as very highly pleased with the results.

THE SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA EXHIBITORS' CONVENTION.

By Richard V. Spencer.

The first annual convention of the Southern California Exhibitors' Association, for both Association and Independent exhibitors, was recently held in Long Beach, Cal., on Jan. 31 and Feb. 1. Poor weather conditions and a lack of proper preliminary advertising kept many of the local exhibitors from attending the meeting. This, coupled with the fact that many of the Los Angeles exhibitors could not spare the time to journey to Long Beach and attend sessions, limited the attendance somewhat. Mr. S. F. DuRee, a Long Beach exhibitor, through whose efforts the convention movement was launched, was unanimously elected the permanent chairman of the association, and Mr. Jerry Ewers, a Glendora exhibitor, was elected secretary. Informal addresses were made by many of the exhibitors present urging a permanent organization. Many of the Southern California exhibitors are dissatisfied with their film service, Licensed as well as Independent, and many of the addresses dwelt upon the necessity of the correction of the evil.

Exchanges.

Many of the suburban exhibitors criticised the methods of the Los Angeles exchanges in holding certain reels of desirable films at auction instead of having a stated rental value regardless of subject or producer. Suburban exhibitors running old releases also complained of the lack of subject titles of certain old run films.

Posters.

Poor poster service was discussed with various suggestions for improvement along that line. The exhibitors speaking upon the subject said that money is often turned away from the box office by posters dealing with crime subjects, deathbed scenes, and other illustrations of a gruesome nature.

Adverse Legislation.

The local exhibitors are beginning to realize the importance of co-operating to fight legislation against picture theaters, when such ordinances and laws become unduly restrictive, and unwarranted by conditions. Recently there was passed an ordinance by the Los Angeles City Council ordering all seats and seat rows to be screwed or hooked to the floor. This ordinance was criticised by some of the exhibitors present on the ground that it prevented proper sweeping of the floor, which in turn created an unsanitary condition of the theater. The Pasadena Censorship rules were cited as an example. In Pasadena the chief of police acts as official censor. It is his duty to visit every picture show and view the films before they are shown to the public. Pasadena absolutely refuses to allow a moving picture "drama" of any kind to be shown, although the censor graciously permits the exhibitors to show scenics, industrials, and certain comedies! And this in a modern city of 30,000 intelligent (?) people! The exhibitors were informed that similar restrictions obtained in many other parts of the United States, though few regulations were so stringent. Is it any wonder, then, that dissatisfaction among exhibitors is becoming National in scope?

An Open Film Market.

The open market received little attention at this gathering. Some of the exhibitors, however, advocate it. They complain that they cannot want Westernes, or Indian pictures when they are not to be obtained in exchange, but which they could obtain from the Sales company, were there an open market to choose from, or vice versa according to their exchange affiliations.

Discovering Patrons' Wishes.

Great interest was manifested among exhibitors to discover the kind of pictures their patrons wished to be shown. Mr. DuRee told of a balloting method that he had tried with success. Patrons were given ballots on which they were to vote for the best picture in their estimation, and were asked to make suggestions that would guide the management in providing for their wants. The result was that stories with clean-cut plots, strictly moral, well directed, and with good photography, were the most in demand. The themes most in demand were those of clean, really good, comedies, dramas of heart interest (without being suggestive, or morbid) scenics and industrials. Mr. DuRee then addressed the audience and asked them if they would like certain pictures returned for another showing after a lapse of several months and the result was a request to return those reels that had been especially popular. Silk convention badges were distributed to exhibitors through the courtesy of Mr. Edwin H. Flagg, of the Flagg Scenic Company, of Los Angeles. The officials and directors of the California Motion Picture Manufacturing Company attended the convention, and listened closely to the suggestions affecting producers. The exhibitors have decided to make the organization permanent. A publicity committee was appointed and the chairman has ordered an important meeting, to be held in Los Angeles, March 1. In the meantime the publicity committee will agitate the matter and corral all exhibitors that were absent at the Long Beach Convention, and will try and have them present at the Los Angeles meeting, as well as local producers and exchange men. Those exhibitors who are interested in the movement to better their condition and protection are urged to get into communication with S. F. DuRee, Ilaco Theater, Long Beach, or Jerry Ewers, Glendora, Cal. Both Licensed and Independent exhibitors are urged to act, as this movement is no way sectional, but is a movement to better the condition of all exhibitors, irrespective of exchange affiliations.

LOS ANGELES NOTES.

By Richard V. Spencer,
Coast Correspondent of the "World."

California.—The California Motion Picture Manufacturing Company have adopted an arrowhead trademark similar to the one made famous by the Salt Lake R. R. Co. Some eighty miles from Los Angeles, near the city of San Bernardino, there exists an odd rock formation in a mountain ravine. This formation is in the shape of a huge arrowhead, as white, and against the dark mountainside the landmark can be seen for miles. In the copyrighted trademark, the arrowhead will be surrounded by a double circle with the lettering "Arrowhead Films." The arrowhead will appear in white with a dark background, and white lettering in the outer circle. The company is located on the ocean front. They have bought a large launch and are soon to go on a whaling trip. Whales are plentiful off the Southern coast this year, and are comparatively tame, permitting close photography. Later the company intend to take local sea bird life in an educational film that will be among the first released by the new company. The recent bad weather has delayed the company's work in making pictures, but now that the skies have cleared they will work overtime to lay in a stock of productions, which will be released weekly after a number have been completed.

Biograph.—Mr. Powers, and twenty members of the Biograph company have been working at Redondo, a nearby beach resort, for the past week on a comedy soon to be released, entitled, "Cured." Redondo is one of the prettiest beach resorts on the South coast. Appearing in the film will be the famous tropical gardens of the Hotel Redondo, and scenes along the busy waterfront. One member of the company will undergo a trying experience, in which he will be pushed off the pleasure pier while in a wheeled invalid's chair. Although he will alight on the sand below, instead of the ocean, as will appear in the picture, even at that, to make the drop and escape without breaking any bones would be almost impossible to any but an experienced moving picture player or athlete. The citizens of the beach town turned out in force to watch the free show of the taking of the exterior scenes.

Dorothy Bernard, well known in the local theatrical colony, and on Broadway where she has appeared in eastern legitimate successes, has become one of the most talked about motion picture actresses in the world. Miss Bernard has lately been appearing with the Biograph Company and is referred to as being "the supreme pantomimist of the moving picture world." Miss Bernard is the daughter of William Bernard, the stage director of the Belasco Theater Stock Company, a local stock company, nationally famous for its splendid dramatic portrayals, and as a producing house for new American plays. It was upon this stage and at the Belasco Theater, another famous local stock house, that Miss Bernard received her early training. None of her successors have equalled her in the portrayal of child parts. Later she passed into ingenue roles with the same strong success as a number of her roles having been exquisite characterizations long remembered on the local Rialto. Later she went East, where David Belasco saw her work and is credited with the assertion that she was one of the most promising young actresses that he had seen in years. The Biograph Company then became interested in her work and engaged her to play ingenue leads, with great success. Miss Bernard is one of the three local players of international motion picture fame. The other two are Mr. Hobart Bosworth, playing leads for the Selig Coast Company, and Miss Florence Barker playing leads with the American Biograph Company. Mr. Bosworth previous to his joining the Selig forces, for years played leads with the local theatrical Stock Company. Miss Barker, previous to her joining the Biograph forces, played leads at a local stock house with great success.

Bison To Build Large Plant.—Mr. A. Kessell, an official of the New York Motion Picture Company, of New York City, recently arrived in the city accompanied by his wife. Mr. Kessell will remain until spring in the hope that the mild climate will benefit his health and that of his wife. While here he is looking over the interests of his company. The present Bison studio is inadequate and it is the intention of the company to build a large plant to take care of their growing business.

Pathe.—Mr. Young Deer, the local Pathe director, has turned to acting for a change from directing. He is soon to be seen on the screen in the leading role of The Kid in "The Kid," a thrilling Pathe Western soon to be released.

To Take War Pictures.—Manager Duhem, of The California Motion Picture Manufacturing Company, accompanied by a Spanish interpreter, left on the 7th for Jaurez, Mexico, where he will take moving pictures of the Mexican Revolution being fought out in the vicinity. He will take camp life scenes, and actual battle scenes if they can be secured. He will leave Jaurez with the Federal troops in their march across Northern Mexico to Mexicalli, and thence to Tia Juana, near the American city of San Diego. As quickly as the films are taken they will be returned here, developed, printed, and placed with the exchanges for exhibition locally.

BOSTON.

The Back Bay Theater, 102 Dartmouth Street, corner Columbus Avenue, will reopen Thursday, February 16, at 2 p. m., after being "dark" for two months. As was previously noted in these columns under the name of the "New Back Bay Theater," the house will present the triangle of moving pictures, illustrated songs and vaudeville. The performances will be: Afternoons, 1.30 to 5 p. m.; evenings, 7 to 10.30 p. m. Admission, 10 cents.

The Palace Theatre, H. I. Mosher, general manager, has again placed advertisements in the theatrical columns of the daily papers. The Palace plays Independent pictures and vaudeville.

The Passion Play, given by Burton Holmes at Trement Temple proved unusually successful, and an added performance was presented.

The new National Theater, which was supposed to be ready for the initial opening in October is still dark. This house, seating 4,000 people, and costing approximately $200,000, has been unfortunate in having serious trouble with the rear wall. Water is also said to be flowing into the house. The Gordon Bros. Amusement Company, of Worcester, Mass., originally started the house, but before the theater was built the lease was taken over by Mr. B. F. Keith. Now that the National has had so much trouble with its rear wall, it is not known whether Mr. Keith will continue in possession or not. At present, a day and a night watchman are about the only people on the premises. Seats, booths and every auxiliary to the show were in their places in October. No intimation has been given as to when the house will be ready, and great silence prevails as regards any particulars of the house.

The World's New England representative dropped into the Savoy Theater, Washington Street, not long ago. The young lady selling the tickets was so busy reading that we were forced to speak to gain her attention. However, as the ticket-seller was reading The Moving Picture World the incident was somewhat excusable. HENRY.

NEW ENGLAND NOTES.

The World's New England representative attended the performance given at the Premier Theater, Washington Street, Boston, Friday evening, February 10. A liberal show of Independent pictures and illustrated songs was offered to a fairly large audience. The operator throws a spotlight on the singer as the final chorus is being sung, and the effect is pleasing.

Both pianist and drummer did their share in working up the effects, and made a creditable exhibition. The whole show ran smoothly, with everything quiet and as it should be. The projection, we are glad to note, was excellent. The whole programme of pictures was good, and the performance was a credit to both the Premier and the Sales Company. The photography of some of the American-made films might have been clearer and more clean-cut. The abundance of good comedy matter was highly pleasing.

The Mirror Screen has been installed in the Casino Theater, Providence, R. I., by Manager Royce. One reel of pictures is exhibited on the screen as a feature, while the remainder of the films are flashed on the ordinary screen. The Mirror Screen is on rollers and can be removed as desired. Manager Royce reports the innovation to be a big success.

The new 'Scenic Temple, Pawtucket, R. I., the latest acquisition of Mr. William Bradstreet, the moving picture magnate, which was due to be opened February 11, was not quite completed on that day. The opening will be announced shortly.

Messrs. Delmore & True, of Boston, opened their new moving picture and vaudeville house Saturday, February 11. The house will show licensed pictures, and vaudeville. This house makes the second one to be opened this season by these men, as they also operate the opera house, Rockland, Mass. The Dover theater will be operated daily, with one matinee and two evening performances. Messrs. Delmore & True have constructed a spot light called the "Trudell," which is in use in many New England picture theaters.

Mr. Nathan Brown, the popular manager of the Broadway Theater, Everett, Mass., met with an accident while adjusting some advertising matter in his lobby, and is now about with his arm in a sling. The Broadway plays independent pictures and vaudeville to packed houses. The house has no immediate competition.

The Princess Theater, Marlboro, Mass., has obtained a license for Sunday night concerts owing to the efforts of Manager Harry Campbell.

Unionville, Conn., has a new moving picture theater run by Mr. Harry Gale of Winsted, Conn.

Mr. Thomas Lucas, proprietor and manager of the Star Theater, Newport, R. I., is still agitating for Sunday night performances. The Star, on and after February 13, charges 5 cents to matinee performances, with the evening show at the usual 10 cent rate.

The Cambridge Theater, Cambridge, Mass., had its initial performance Monday, February 6. Mr. M. D. Flattery succeeded in obtaining a license for the house, although some of the local clergy put up protests. The house is presenting moving pictures and vaudeville, with an entire change of programme Monday and Thursday. The house will give two performances daily—one matinee and one evening show. Saturday and holidays the shows will be run continuously. Admission prices are 10, 20 and 30 cents. Marcus Loew, who is running the Orpheum, Boston, has charge of the vaudeville end of the house.

HENRY.

IN THE MISSISSIPPI VALLEY.

The Bright Light Motion Picture Company of Chicago, has been incorporated with capital stock of $2,000 to deal in and operate moving picture machines. The incorporators are M. Cortelyou, J. C. Elias and H. A. Robinson.

LaGrill & Middleton, who operate a photoplay theater at Muscatine, Iowa, will open a theater in Sterling, Ill.

Frank Logan of Macomb, Ill., has sold the Gem Theater in that city to Joseph Blume of that city. Blume also owns a photoplay house at Monmouth, Ill.

The International Exhibit Company of Chicago, has been incorporated with a capital stock of $2,500, as a general amusement and theatrical business. The incorporators are Robert L. Hunter, George F. R. Cummerow and Thomas A. Hogan.

The Columbia Opera House of Clinton, Ill., has been incorporated with capital stock of $25,000. The incorporators are, B. F. Wasson, Arthur F. Miller and Warren S. Savely.

The Texas Film Exchange of Dallas, Tex., has increased its capital stock from $5,000 to $50,000.

Dreamland, Bushnell, Ill., has removed from the Russler Building to the Korn Block.

William Frohwitter used a five piece orchestra in opening his moving picture shows at the Grand Opera House, Beardstown, Ill.

Taking their cue from the successful musical show, Ellis & Lough, proprietors of the Electric Theater at Fairbury, Ill., featured their performance on the 100ist night.

A handsome oak and leather seat around the lobby is a feature of the Majestic Theater at Belvidere, Ill., which has opened after a general remodeling. The lobby has been redecorated.

Will Englert, owner of the Bijou Theater, at Iowa City, Iowa, will build a new vaudeville house to cost $30,000. Including the gallery, it will seat 1,500 persons.

Martin Moran, of Lockport, Ill., will open a ten-cent moving picture show at Plainfield, Ill.

E. L. Reel is building a two story building at Fremont, Tex., the upper part to be used for an opera house. The structure will be of concrete, enhancing its safety for moving pictures.

Ray Taylor, of Galesburg, Ill., has purchased the Grand Theater, a photoplay house at 425 East Main Street, in that city.

The Advance Motion Picture Company has been incorporated at Chicago, with capital stock of $2,000, to own and operate moving picture shows.

Officials of the State Hospital for Insane at Fulton, Mo., have asked the Missouri State Legislature for an appropriation of $500 to allow the installation of a moving picture outfit for the benefit of the patients. F. H. M.

Letters to the Editor

The World Photographic Publishing Co.,
125 East 23d Street, New York, N. Y.
Gentlemen:—

Enclosed you will find a photo showing how we display the descriptive circulars sent us by the manufacturers. This is a brass show case fastened on the pilasters, the card with the words "Now Being Shown, Admission 5c," is a stock card, and all that it is necessary to do is to change the circulars. I find that these cases stop quite a few people, who pass inside after reading same.

Yours truly,

MAX STEARN.

Brass Poster Showcase Used By Max Stern.

PENNSYLVANIA EXHIBITORS READ THIS.

Editors, Moving Picture World:

As a regular reader of your periodical, and a "pro" rather than a "con" of the moving picture theater, permit me to correct what seems to me a misrepresentation (as to the attitude of Pennsylvania's legislators towards moving pictures and the "kid business") in the leading article in the current number (February 10) of your paper.

You say that "the legislators of Pennsylvania have been potentially obnoxious in the hair-splitting laws that they have recently enacted." As a matter of fact, there is no State law in Pennsylvania regulating the "kid business" in respect to moving picture theaters. The only legislation extant such theaters has respect to booths of fire and electric proof construction, and affording proper ventilation thereof, to enclose moving picture machines; and to adequate aisles and exits.

The inequity of the provision requiring three aisles, each four feet in width, as per the law now in force, regardless of the size of the room used as a moving picture theater, is likely to be modified by the Legislature now in session. The Department of Factory Inspection had a bill introduced which provides for aisles varying in number and width according to the width of the room and the seating depth thereof. This measure will, if passed and approved, protect both the patrons and the owners of a moving picture theater. It will, however, forbid for such purposes a space less than twenty feet in width, a provision which, we think, will commend itself to your good judgment.

The above answers your Reading, Pa., correspondent's letter in your February 18 issue. C. V. HAZZELL.

Department of Factory Inspection—Harrisburg, Pa. [illegible], 1911.

* * *

PHILADELPHIA REVIEW.

(Continued from page 407.)

did imagine that a cow could act the broncho so natural.

"The business in Philadelphia is good," said Mr. Schwalbe, of the Electric Theater Supply Company. I don't doubt it in the case of Mr. Schwalbe. The Electric Supply Company has always been a model conducted exchange, and Mr. Schwalbe, a popular and capable manager.

The Independents are getting a substantial share of the business in Philadelphia. It looks that way to me by the number of theaters that are running Independent films. The Eagle Film Exchange is the pioneer of the Independent cause in this town, and conducts a considerable business. I generally make my headquarters at the Eagle, they are old friends of mine—Graff and Sachsenmeier.

Lewis M. Swaab and the General Film Company had a few rounds last week, and the Independents were quite elated at the plucky fight of Mr. Swaab and the good impression his cause had made upon the court. The final decision is not at hand so far, but each side is confident of a successful issue.

Geo. W. Bradenburg did some advertising (last in the Moving Picture World), and the campaign was quite extensive, if not expensive. It was in a daily paper, and, of course, to stimulate local trade. 26 insertions at a dollar a throw. The result was one letter (one), and the party wanted to buy slightly used film, 1,000 feet (one thousand), for the consideration of 1 cent per foot. George does not think he will patronize the daily papers any more, so look out for his advertisement in the Moving Picture World.

Tom Bible is "Man About Town" in the Quaker City. What he does not know about everything and everybody would not fill a vest pocket library. Tom is the walking encyclopedia of useful information in the city of Philadelphia and vicinity, and a rare treasure for an inquisitive scribe like myself.

There seems to be no limit to the activities in the picture and vaudeville business in Old Quaker Town. There are over a dozen theaters recently opened worth about $10,000 a piece, and several more under construction.

The Liberty Theater is a magnificent new house on Broad and Columbia Avenue, recently opened, seating 2,100. Pictures and vaudeville. Admission 10 and 20 cents. The Jumbo, Front and Gerard Avenue is another large theater of the 10 and 20 cent variety. The house seats about 1,500 and was opened a few weeks ago. The Manheim Palace is another new house on Germantown Avenue. The Great Northern Theater Company will open a house on Kensington Avenue and Lehigh. The Moving Pictures Company of America will erect another splendid house on Market Street, seating 1,000. On Thirteenth and Locust Streets will be another new theater. Hopkins and Mulloren are in progress.

A Scene from "A Western Girl's Choice."

The Moving Picture Play

As Distinctive from the One Reel Drama.

By H. F. Hoffman.

The picture play, as distinctive from the one-reel playlet, is bound to come, because it is logical and possible. We have already passed through the first stages of it in the production of Pathe's Passion Play and Jean Valjean, and Uncle Tom's Cabin. These, while complete in themselves, however, are not what could be called picture plays in the fullest sense of the word. The Passion Play is the most complete story of any length that has ever been made on film. L'Arlesienne was one of the first fiction subjects to be done in two reels, and latterly we have had Jean Valjean in four and Uncle Tom's Cabin in three reels.

These are a beginning; a start in the right direction, but they are wordless plays and therefore do not come up to the fullest conception of the subject in hand. The complete play in moving pictures would be an amplification of the present practice of living people talking behind the screen. By this means it will be readily seen that two men and two women behind a screen would be able to take the place of the entire troupe of actors which at present it is necessary to transport from city to city in order to render a theatrical play. The picture plays that we know as such are purely pantomimic. They do not rely on words of any kind, and for that reason must always remain limited. In order, then, for the picture to expand to its utmost limits, it will be necessary to overstep the bounds of pantomime and enter into the field of elocution.

I know exactly how this idea strikes the average exhibitor who has had his experience with the so-called "talking pictures." If he feels as I do about it, there will be a cold chill run up and down his spine at the very mention of "talking pictures." But is this the fault of the main idea or is it the fault of the talker behind the screen? In my time I have listened to many picture talkers and the principal objection to them can be summed up in one word—ignorance.

As a rule, the picture talkers have been persons who are more conspicuous for their nerve than for their talent. They are mostly of a class who are willing to "take a crack at anything" so long as there is a little ready money in it. I do not blame them in the least for getting whatever they can out of it; they are more to be pitied than censured. However, the majority lack every requirement for the position they fill. Their language is a mixture of the pavement and mock heroics. They know little of the rules of grammar and less of the laws of elocution or voice culture. The salary they get for it would be an insult to any well-trained elocutionist. Add to this the fact that the pictures they talk about are not adapted to that work and you have the reasons why the talking picture has missed its mark. But put a few real elocutionists behind the screen and give them a decent salary and you will see the talking picture come to the front with a new vigor.

Now as to the picture play proper. My idea is a four or five-act play, following the manuscript word for word. Take the play of Uncle Tom's Cabin as an example, because it is the one play that never seems to lose its perennial vitality. It has the opportunity for local color that no theater could give. To do it right, the whole troupe should be sent to Shelbyville, Ky., where the first acts would be taken to show the world the very spot that Mrs. Stowe had in mind when she wrote the book. This would stamp the production with authority and realism.

The play should be acted there, word for word, according to the script, with the direct object in view of having those words repeated as the picture appeared upon the screen. This would involve certain periods of comparative inaction during the long speeches, but if the words were spoken with the proper dramatic effect and by competent elocutionists they would hold the audience well enough.

When we have finished with Shelbyville, we take Uncle Tom "down the river," and here is the chance to present to the world with vivid reality the levee scenes, dancing darkies, negro life, and the broad Mississippi itself. Arriving at New Orleans we would give the audience a glimpse of that city and then proceed with the second part of the play in graphic detail.

The more I think of it the more I see the possibilities and theatrical economy of it all. I can see the art of playwriting revolutionized and freed from the limitations of stage requirements. I can see famous authors entering the field of moving pictures unhampered by stage mechanism. I can see John Drew, William Gillette, Dorothy Donnelly or Sarah Bernhart working at their art while they sit at home, done forever with one-night stands, while they still receive royalties for their work, just the same as does the author of a famous book that is read everywhere. The famous actor need not appear night after night to do the same thing over. While age and ills or even death come on apace the money would still come marching home.

Good plays and good stars are not sufficient in number to supply the demands of the country. If it were not for moving pictures a lot of theaters in this country would be closed for a week or more at a time very frequently. With the repertoire craze practically dead there are not sufficient taveling companies to constantly supply any theaters except those in the large cities. The latter of course must be supplied, and the suburban cities and towns have to wait.

People who have read about successful plays want to see them with the well known stars who act the plays in the large cities. They are no longer content with the assurance that a play will be competently acted by people whose names are not announced by the press agents. These second companies oftentimes are just about as good as the No. 1 companies, but the public cannot be induced to believe it. The consequence is that they largely stay away from No. 2 and No. 3 troupes, and only a percentage of these traveling companies make much money for themselves or for local managers. With the big stars ordered to remain most of the time in the large cities, with only a limited annual output of successful plays, and a still smaller yearly addition to the list of successful star players, the suburban playgoer finds in the pictures and vaudeville his best and only chance for theatrical entertainment on a majority of the nights of the theatrical season.

To film such a play, presented by real actors, and rehearse the speaking parts might mean an outlay of $10,000 for the first production; but if done right and three or four companies started out with it to tour the country, it would keep the promoter busy counting money for the rest of his life. The big profits of course would come from the No. 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8 and 9 companies that could be put out by simply making another print from the original negative and rehearsing four more actors.

THE YELLOW PERIL.

Some of the exhibitors were unfamiliar with this question. On East First street, Los Angeles, the Japanese are already in control of three five-cent moving-picture theatres. Several times they have tried to buy leases in the business district, and also on the Strand at Long Beach, and other suburban cities. The Japanese, as every Westerner knows, are cooperative to extremes. They now control more than half the pool halls in Los Angeles, and now that they have entered the moving-picture field their appearance in this business has been viewed with alarm by local American exhibitors.

AMERICAN FILM MANUFACTURING CO.

The American Film Exchange, of Chicago, insituted proceedings some time ago to obtain temporary injunction prohibiting the use of the incorporated name, "American Film Manufacturing Co." In a hearing this week before Judge Cooper, we understand the motion for a temporary injunction was quashed, and the judge refused the complainant's request. This decision confirms the right of the "Flying A" to their now well-known name.

MISSIONARY WORK SHOWN BY FILMS.

The West Side Christian Church, Springfield, Ill., recently used motion pictures to show the work done by missionaries in Thibet.

PICTURE PERSONALITIES.

Henry Belmar.

We reproduce herewith portrait of Mr. Henry Belmar, the new producer of the Powers Company, manufacturers of the Powers Picture Plays. Mr. Belmar comes to his new position well qualified by long experience in the dramatic field in all its branches.

He has had experience as an actor, author and manager, covering a period of thirty years. Mr. Belmar starred for several seasons in the well-known drama, "The Pavements of Paris." He has also been the owner and manager of theaters in New York, Chicago, Detroit, Boston and Philadelphia. He is the author of over 150 dramas, comedies and short sketches for vaudeville. At one time he toured the United States and Great Britain, supporting the late Ada Grey, one of the best emotional actresses on the stage during her time.

Mr. Belmar starred in the moving picture business when it first came into vogue, and has kept in touch with it ever since. Surely a man who has put in thirty years' time in the various branches of dramatic work, is fitted by every known right, to be a producer of moving pictures. The trouble has been that there are not more men responsible for film production who have had the same wide experiences. In fact, it is difficult to understand how any man can set up claims for himself as a producer of moving picture plays who has not had previous experience in the dramatic field. There are many men, however, who never had any connection with dramatic work in their lives before they began directing moving picture plays.

The World wishes Mr. Belmar every success in his new environment and work. There is every reason why he should succeed and every reason why we wish he should succeed. A great pity of it all, is, that there are not more men like him in the producing end of the moving picture business.

THE ART OF WRITING SCENARIOS.

By William Lord Wright. Author of "Twixt Loyalty and Love," "Simon Kenton," etc., etc., Published by The Scenario Instruction Publishing Co., Bellefontaine, Ohio. Price $1.

In a very interesting series of articles published in our pages last month Mr. G. R. Craw told the aspiring scenario author how to write scenarios. Those articles have been favorably commented upon as being of great practical value. Now comes Mr. W. Lord Wright with a little book of about 30 pages which still further adds to our knowledge of a subject that has perplexed many would-be moving picture authors, namely, how to set about work; how to study the technique; how, in fact, to prepare goods suitable for the market.

Mr. Wright, who is a successful scenario writer, first of all points out what is in demand by moving picture makers. Then he indicates what is not wanted. After reviewing the function of the scenario editor, he gives some of his own experiences, his failures and his successes. Then, we come to some practical advice. He tells the author how and where to market the completed scenario; how it should be written and presented, winding up by printing a sample scenario as a guide. Finally, he points out the value of action in this branch of dramatic work, and takes the view that though unlicensed, the moving picture scenario writer may some day come into his own as the way of politics, turns and fortune, and we hope he will though we think the agreeable state of things is a long way off.

Meanwhile, we welcome Mr. Wright's little book just as we welcomed Mr. Craw's articles. These things relieve us of some responsibility. We are often asked how a scenario should be written; where it should be marketed and how much money there is in it. Mr. Wright answers all these questions for us. We invite all our readers who are interested in the construction of dramatic work, to get a copy of his book and study the formula that he gives. Of course, it is one thing to give a formula for a moving picture scenario, or play, or a novel. These things may be delivered to managers technically correct in every detail and yet lacking the one essential which no book on earth can teach: the selection of a theme which will get over. She is the divine afflatus referred to long ago by the author of the phrase: Poeta nascitur non fit: The poet is born, not made. So we believe is the scenario writer. Still, for the benefit of those who are not born and who think they can be made, Mr. Wright's book should be of great value. It will sell well on account of that. It may have a negative value, too, in that it may possibly act as a deterrent to many people who think they can write scenarios and cannot realize their unfitness for the work. There are two or three books extant, and they have run through numerous editions on how to write plays. It is not on record that any playwright who succeeded during the last quarter of a century, traces any of his success to these manuals, which, perhaps, have been instrumental in diminishing the output of unsuitable plays. It is no easy thing to write a good play; it is no easy thing to write a good scenario. So we hope that Mr. Wright's book will encourage the aspirant who aspires to some reasonable hope of success, will discourage those who have no fitness for this form of work. There are too many of the latter kind in the moving picture field to-day.

THE ALABASTRA THEATER.

A New Thing in Moving Pictures.

We witnessed a demonstration late this week of Alabastra, the latest thing in moving pictures to come to us from Germany, where several of the very best ideas in moving pictures have come from. We should like to have had more space to devote to extolling Alabastra, but our inspection was made at the very latest moment before going to press, and we fear that what is said here will scarcely cover the matter, as it really should be noticed.

Briefly stated, Alabastra is a combination of cinematograph and theater, or in other words, moving picture actors and painted scenery working in combination. It is being marketed in America by the Vitascope Co. of 10 East 15th St., New York. We were ushered before a miniature theater, a tiny stage, with full scenic effects, resembling a finished model for some large pantomimic scenic effect. The scenery is in proportion to the theater, and is hand painted by scenic artists, and it is before this scenery that the Alabastra actors do their work. They also appear in miniature and are about a foot high, which is in proportion to the rest of the arrangement. They are projected from behind, but what the picture rests upon, we do not know, for therein lies the secret of Alabastra.

There is absolutely no screen to be seen upon which a picture could be projected either from behind or in front, and yet we see these tiny actors going about their parts on a well-lighted, little stage, and we are frank to confess that it had us guessing.

At present, the pictures are plastic, that is to say, they appear as animated white statues. The effect of these whitened figures is very pleasing, but ter those who would rather have the actors colored to harmonize with the scenery, it is only a matter of detail to have the films colored.

It is the intention of the Vitascope people to install these miniature theaters in moving picture houses, and on vaudeville stages, having them behind the regular moving picture curtain, which is raised while the Alabastra performance is going on. The scenery for each different play will accompany the reel from theater to theater. The effect of this new creation is very pretty. The light is soft and the colors of the scenery are laid on with the hand of a true artist.

We predict a great success for this new innovation; especially with the ladies and children, for as everybody knows, there is nothing that pleases a child any more than a tiny theater, even with puppets for actors. But with Alabastra actors, this new creation will be a revelation.

As remarked at the beginning, we reviewed the Alabastra Theater at the very last moment and, therefore, are unable to do it justice on such short notice, owing to lack of available space to the present date.

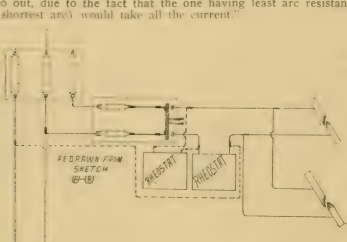
CHAUTAUQUA ASSEMBLY TO BUY MACHINE.

Directors of the Piney Chautauqua Assembly, one of the oldest institutions of the kind in the United States, will purchase a moving picture machine and the best films possible and be shown each afternoon and evening. Serious and educational subjects will be featured. The grounds are located on the Mississippi river near Hamilton, Ill., and the place is a favorite resort for St. Louisans.

The Powers Company desire to announce to the trade that the title of their release of February 18th, originally advertised as "Dixie Southern Skies," has been changed to "Beneath Southern Skies." Exchanges and exhibitors are requested to correct their lists accordingly.

A Correction.—Have you ever felt like murdering some one? That feeling is no stranger to the man who writes for publication, usually in connection with the man who makes the paper up. (Hoffman is the guilty man in this case and he admits it.)

Week before last I replied to Rhode Island, heading same, "Mistaken Ideas" (see page 363, Feb. 18 issue). When I came to look the drawing over carefully, at proof reading time, however, I discovered that I had been careless and had answered wrong. I marked the item to be held over one week (which was done), and proceeded to correct it by scratching out everything after the first sentence of the answer, inserting the following instead: "The connection would not work at all since the instant you brought the carbons of either lamp together you would establish a dead short-circuit between the two outside wires. But anyhow, even were this not so your lamps would not burn together. As soon as you lighted one the other would go out, due to the fact that the one having least arc resistance (shortest arc) would take all the current."



But alas and alack! The correction was set in type all right—BUT the type was not put in, and the article ran as first written. Hence the dark, deadly thoughts which, inasmuch as the paper goes through the mails, cannot be expressed. I know my readers will condone a mistake and accept an honest apology, but in these days of professional mud-slinging, the mistake in last week's issue will no doubt be lit upon by a certain "electrical expert" like a bee lights on a posey.

Condenser Lenses.—Peoria, Ill., writes: "My equipment consists of a Powers No. 5, Kleine Optical lens, Motiograph lamp, Ft. Wayne 220 volt, 60-cycle compensarc, 8½ condensers front and rear, 56 feet throw, picture 13½ feet, No. 4 asbestos wires to lamp, No. 5 stranded rubber covered lead wires. Volt test at arc 37 and ampere test at arc 60. I have used all combinations of condensers from 6½ to 9½ and find I get the best light and spot with two 8½ lenses, but cannot get a clear white light on the picture. I have used Bio, Arco, Electra and Projector carbons. What is my trouble?"

Really, Peoria, I can only answer your question in one way; and that is: I do not know. If you are throwing only 56 feet with a 13 foot picture it would seem that you might get better results with shorter focal length condensers. However, you say you have tried them, and apparently about everything else. Possibly you are not setting your carbons right. I would suggest you angle your lamp the same as for direct current and set carbons practically the same, giving the lower carbon a little less advancement. With this set you must be very careful not to get the lower carbon too far ahead or its tip will form in such a way as to be in front of the upper creator. Please describe just what the effect is on the screen and how you have set your carbons. It may be then I can offer you some suggestion, but until you do this I am afraid I cannot. If any of our readers can offer anything of value to Peoria, let them come forward.

A Dispute.—Massachusetts (name of town suppressed by request), submits the following: "I am projecting a picture 16x19, 85 feet throw, with a perpendicular drop of 32 feet 6 inches. The assertion has been made that I should get as good a picture as is projected in another, smaller theater where the throw is 45 feet and the picture 8x10, the machine setting level and square with the screen. The small house in question is using 60 amperes through a coil, while I am only getting 45 on the 60 ampere notch of a Ft. Wayne compensarc. I use a 4½ in. Gunlach lens. What condenser should I use for my throw? I claim it to be impractical to throw as good picture under conditions in this house as can be projected in the smaller theater. Kindly inform me if I am wrong."

You should use two 7½ in. condensers of a good grade. With a very carefully selected lens, it would be possible to get a fairly good picture, though it would be of the "keystone" variety; that is to say, wider at the bottom than at the top. With the ordinary stock lens you would not be likely to have as sharp definition all over the picture as could be had with the machine set level with and an equal distance from the screen. On the other hand, the man with the 45 feet throw would not be likely to have as good a grade lens as yours if his picture was the same size. His theater, however, is much smaller than yours, and as a matter of fact, if they are both stock lenses, there is not, or should not be much difference in the two lenses, so far as quality goes, each being of about the same focal length. Therefore, the man in the small house should (other things being equal and taking into consideration the fact that you are using 45 amperes and he 60, and the further fact that you are covering 304 sq. ft. with light whereas he is covering only 80 sq. ft.) have a fair picture, more brilliant, and in every way better than you can get under the conditions in your theater. I would suggest, however, that you can materially improve matters by securing a specially selected high grade objective lens and boosting your amperage. In considering the above let it be understood that a long focal length lens is usually of much higher quality than is a short one.

Bad Sprocket Teeth.—Mr. Chas. Catt, proprietor Electric Theater, Niles, Mich., writes: "I notice considerable trouble in condensing lens breakage. I have been running more than two years with the same condenser lenses I started with. Am using rheostat and get a good light. My light bill is about the same as where they have compensarcs. I use ⅝ in. cored carbons below and ½ in. above; Powers No. 5 machine. I put in a new star and sprocket recently and the film seems to snap and catch in passing over the sprocket. The machine runs perfectly quiet without the film, and with it if I leave the gate open. I am unable to locate the trouble."

Evidently you are using a very weak current, or you could not use the same condenser two years, since with heavy amperage its surface would long since have been roughened, even though the lens remained unbroken. This probably accounts for the fact that your light bills are little more than where a transformer is used. I presume you are projecting rather a small picture and handle your light very carefully. It is a fact that some men are able to get the same curtain brilliancy with a considerably less current consumption than others, even though all be first class, experienced operators whose work is, in other respects, above criticism. As to the sprocket, if you will examine its teeth with a magnifying glass (a condenser lens will do), you will probably find that one corner of them is rough, due to failure to buff off the wire edges turned by the milling machine. Either this, or the teeth are under-cut (which certainly could not be with a new sprocket), or else through some blunder the teeth have been milled too large. Unquestionably there is something wrong with that sprocket, and I would suggest that you take the matter up with the party from whom it was purchased, demanding a new one in its place; returning the old one, of course, for inspection.

Editor Bumped.—Mr. A. E. Kirk, Galveston, Tex., writes: "On page 133, January 21st issue, Washington, D. C., introduces himself as the originator of the 'Light Ray Argument.' In one way he cannot be forgiven for that, but in another we should all be thankful to him because the argument brought forth a promise from the Bosch & Lomb people of an article on lenses, which I personally have been anxiously awaiting. Hope they have not forgotten about it. There is one statement in particular in his letter, referring to the 'Torn Title' being caused by too rapid starting of the machine, that looks reasonable to me. In your answer you say he is entirely mistaken, citing the fact that the film 'stops dead still and starts again sixteen times every second when running at normal speed.' It is now your turn to be 'entirely mistaken,' for are not the tension springs and upper loop designed to accomplish that very thing? All the intermittent sprocket does when it pulls the film sixteen times every second is to pull down the slacked loop past the tension springs, resulting in practically no strain whatever on the film. But when the crank is suddenly started the upper sprocket has to suddenly start the upper reel, revolving and the film between the lower reel and the lower take-up sprocket is brought under a great strain, the two spindles almost working against each other. I trust you will take this correction in good spirit."

As regards the article referred to, I understand it is in the course of preparation. As to the other matter, I am always willing to be corrected if I am wrong, and I am willing to say that you are partly right—to the extent at least that there is a little jerk when the upper reel is started. I do not think though, Friend Kirk, that it would make any material difference either below and above whether the machine was started slowly or fast, since in any event the strain on the upper film would not amount to much and the slack should all be taken out of the film leading into the take-up when threading. You would be surprised to know the number of pounds strain there is on the teeth of the intermittent sprocket when it starts the film. That strain is sufficient to cut away the teeth of the sprocket, which are made of steel, in a comparatively short time, although the strain is distributed over about eight teeth. The purpose of the tension spring is merely to keep the piece of film between the two loops and hold it stationary. Space forbids an extended dissertation on this subject, though I would like to go into it at some length. I think, however, Mr. Kirk, if you study that proposition a little more you will conclude that my statement in reply to Washington was not very far from right after all.

Several Things.—Iowa (name of town suppressed by request), writes: "This is my first year as a subscriber to the Moving Picture World and I am certainly satisfied with what I am getting for my money. We run licensed films, three changes of three films a night; no vaudeville. I spend from four to five hours each change patching the films and have but few stops during the shows. I have run as much as three months without a single stop. Our pictures are clear and steady. We use a Standard American machine. Can you tell me the reason a cracked condenser shows in the stereo and not in the moving picture? I have discovered that by placing a ruby glass with a purple, or between purple and blue glass I can look at my carbons without straining the eyes. Before starting the show I get my film exactly in focus by turning on the light and snapping the fire shutter up and down. There is no danger in this, as it is only open the fraction of a second, while throwing the title on the screen."

I think, Iowa, you must mean three changes of three films per week instead of per night. The careful work in repairing the films is highly creditable. Did your exchange do its duty, there would be no necessity for that four or five hours' labor, but exchanges do not, or at least they very seldom perform their duty in keeping films in condition. The condenser crack shows in the stereo, and in motion pictures because in the former the slide is right up against the condenser, while in the latter the film is a foot or more away. The object illuminated is known as the "focal plane" and when the focal plane is right up against the condenser lens any imperfection such as a crack will show. But when the focal plane is some distance away, it does not. A ruby and grass green glass serve the same purpose as does the ruby and purple. Snapping the fire shutter to focus the film is not to be commended. It would be all right with a very careful man, but with a man anyway inclined to be careless, it might easily lead to serious trouble.

From Northland.—Mr. F. C. Rice, Granby, Quebec, writes: "A few lines of appreciation for the good work accomplished by the Trouble Department and The World. My connection with projection dates back eight years, at which period it was a hobby, but of late years it has become my business. I have discovered that by glueing a piece of black paper over the perforated shutter on an Edison one-pin machine the picture is much improved. The machine was an Edison Exhibition converted six months ago and has been in constant use every day since, with about $7 for repairs. I put new steel idler rollers on my machine and had trouble losing lower loop. I promptly put the rubber roller back on the take-up sprocket and the trouble stopped. I also had difficulty with the picture out of focus in the center. I only cleaned my lenses twice a week. Noticed your remarks and proceeded to clean my lens every day, and that trouble has disappeared. Doubtless due to a speck of grease or oil. We are using a 6 h.p. Fairbanks-Morse gasoline engine, running a 4½ k.w. 110 volt dynamo. Our pictures are certainly A No. 1, being pronounced in that class by visitors from other cities. My connections are so made that we can switch to city current by merely throwing a double throw switch, should our engine break down, a thing that has only happened once in a year. Engine and dynamo give us little trouble and run without attention in a small building attached to the theater. I take great care to have the engine and dynamo in A No. 1 condition before starting up, however."

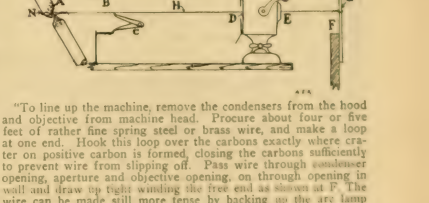
Friend Rice's letter contains other interesting things and I should like to have published it in full. The week is only half over, however, and there are thirty letters at hand, so that I am perforce obliged to "boil 'em down." The information concerning the light plant will be of much interest to our readers. I am sure. The letter, however, speaks for itself and requires little comment.

Like Handbook.—Mr. J. L. Fraser, Maricopa, Calif., orders a Handbook sent to Tim O'Connor, Bakersfield, Calif., and writes: "I taught this young man to operate and told him of your valuable Handbook and he has had me order this copy. I have played the picture game eight years. I like your work in the Trouble Department and read it carefully every week. Perhaps sometime I will tell you some of my experiences and views on operating."

Glad to have your experiences and views at any time, Neighbor Fraser. The sooner the better. We, of course, feel pleased that you like the work of the Department.

Lining the Machine.—Mr. Albert E. Kirk, Galveston, Tex., contributes the following: "Here is an arrangement for bringing the arc lamp, condensers, aperture plate and objective lens in one accurate straight line with respect to each other. It is, or should be, a well known fact, that the very best results can only be obtained with any projection apparatus when the various parts composing its optical system are in one direct line or axis. Many of the complaints made by operators of "ghosts," unevenly illuminated screens, shadows, blurrs, distortions, etc., can be traced to this cause. The method here given is purely a mechanical one, and is infallible.

"In the drawing A is the arc lamp, B the circular opening in the lamp house for supporting the condensers, but with the condensers removed. D the aperture plate of the machine, E the front plate with the objective removed, F opening in wall of booth, C shows method of applying calipers.



"To line up the machine, remove the condensers from the hood and objective from machine head. Procure about four or five feet of rather fine spring steel or brass wire, and make a loop at one end. Hook this loop over the carbons exactly where crater on positive carbon is formed, closing the carbons sufficiently to prevent wire from slipping off. Pass wire through condenser opening, aperture and objective opening, on through opening in wall and draw up tight winding the free end as shown at F. The wire can be made still more tense by backing up the arc lamp a little by means of its focusing screw provided for that purpose. Now, by means of rule or calipers, center wire in objective opening at E, sliding stock I up, down or sideways until accomplished. The tension on the wire should prevent the stock F from slipping out of place. Next, centre the wire at B, raising or lowering arc lamp to accomplish this. It may be necessary to adjust both B and I somewhat to gain the best results. When satisfied that B and E are absolutely centred, examine aperture opening, and if everything is O. K. the wire should pass accurately through its center, as may be tested with the calipers. Most likely, though, this will show "out," in which case the machine head should be moved bodily until all openings are directly central with respect to arc lamp. No attention should be paid to opening in wall of booth, as that has nothing to do with lining up of the machine itself. It is a known about how to space the carbons are drawn when running the lamp regularly, a small notch could be filed in the upper carbon at N, directly opposite the centre to hold the loop in the wire, and then the carbons drawn apart to their working distance when making all the above measurements."

We thank Neighbor Kirk cordially for submitting the excellent sketch and article. The matter has already been dealt with in the columns, but Neighbor Kirk's drawing and explanation make it very much more clear. We trust we may be favored with other articles from his pen in the near future. Would suggest leaving objective lens barrel in the head, merely removing the two lens factors.

NESTOR

"Rarely Equalled—Never

IF IT'S A NESTOR IT'S GOOD!

Celebrate the Birthday of the "HIS FATHER'S

Released Wednesday, February 2

"Always A Feature!"

Read This Letter!

February 5th, 1911

Dear Sirs:—

I write to compliment you on your recent releases. Nestor stands first in the production of western pictures, for the workmanship is fine, the parts are acted by great professional players, and the scenery is gorgeous and in keeping with the story. I have heard lots of praise bestowed upon Nestor Films, and it is well deserved, for your pictures never have silly chases nor other foolish tommyrot; are without a flicker, steady and clear and always a feature wherever shown. My advice to Exhibitors is, "Fight for Nestor Films and get every release. They are the guiding star and box-office-receipts-producer of the picture business.

Yours truly, JOHN POTTER,
13 S. Race St., Springfield, Ohio

Just one of the many scene Father's House." A pictur satisfying that you will be Get "His Father's House"

BOOK NOW! "In The Commissioned Ranks" For Release Wednesday, March 8th, 1911

"The Profe

A Delicious

DAVID HORSLEY, German Savings B

FILMS

passed—Often Imitated"

NESTOR FILMS — MADE BY DAVID HORSLEY

r of Our Country by Getting 'S HOUSE"

—A Celebration 998 Feet Long

IT PAYS TO GET Nestor Films!

...o-camatic jewel "His ...stand so delightfully ...t it ...th pleased patrons.

...ldst 1911 ...Romance" ...dy-rama

"TWO PRESS COMMENTS"

"IN THE COMMISSIONED RANKS" is not a tragic picture. It is a sad one, however, and contains a lesson to army wives and husbands, who should see it by all means. And having seen it, we are sure that they will never neglect their children thereafter.

The picture is exceedingly well acted. It is the best-acted picture of the Nestor brand that we have ever seen. It is nicely toned and tinted, tastefully arranged, interesting, logical and dignified all the way through. — Moving Picture World, Feb. 11th, 1911.

"IN THE COMMISSIONED RANKS" is a very good picture, showing up and disclosing army life and customs. The story is heart-touching, but the end is such as will please the audience. A noticeable feature of this film is the good work accomplished by the General, the new leading man for the Nestor Company.—The Billboard, Feb. 4th, 1911

For Release Wednesday, March 8th, 1911 "In The Commissioned Ranks" GET IT!

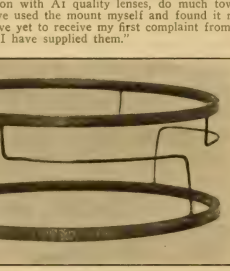
...ilding, 4th Avenue and 14th Street, New York

Careless Camera Operators.—Mr. Geo. Brennan, Shenandoah, Pa., writes: "Received Handbook and am well pleased with it. Consider it worth more than the money I paid for it, as I have already gained valuable information from its pages. I am using an Edison one-pin machine and always had trouble with my carbons until I received the Handbook, and found the right way to set them. I have noticed in one of your late releases a letter from Washington, D. C., complaining of carelessness on the part of camera operators. I also wish to enter a protest in this respect. The camera operator should be very careful, since carelessness on his part makes it impossible for the operator to do good work. Particularly are several of the independent manufacturers at fault in this matter. Will you kindly inform me as to whether a short arc or a long one consumes the most juice? I find the arc I am now using, a rather long one, to give the best light; but an out-of-town electrician claims a short arc to be the most economical. I differ with him. who is right?"

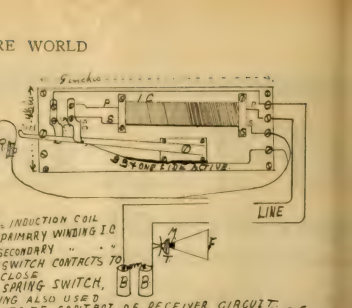
I am, of course, glad you have found the Handbook of value, Friend Brennan. I agree with you that camera operators should be very, very careful in their work, since, as you say, carelessness on their part will largely neutralize any effort the operator may make to secure good results on the screen. As to the arc, the shorter it is the greater number of amperes will be consumed, since shortening the arc has the effect of lessening the resistance. If your arc is too long it will cause an undue flaming of the carbons. If it is short enough to cause the arc to "sing" (I speak of D. C. now) there will be a largely added current consumption without any material increase of light.

Condenser Mounts.—Mr. Percy Rayment, Motion Picture Commission Agent, Edmonton, Alta, Can., crosses the line with the following: "I have noticed frequent complaints of condenser breakage and the many remedies suggested. In my opinion much of it is caused by the use of a cheap quality of condenser, which will not withstand the extremely rapid and uneven contraction and expansion. Also, the construction of the regular condenser mount itself does not allow sufficient room for expansion, and at the same time hold the condensing lenses parallel. I enclose pictures and explanation of the condenser mount which will do much to improve matters; and, further, since it has no thread, but, instead, a spring clip, when a lens does break, it can be replaced much more quickly than in the old style, where it is sometimes necessary to make file cuts in the ring in order to unscrew it. I believe that while such a mount is here shown would not entirely obviate the trouble, it would, in conjunction with At quality lenses, do much toward lessening it. I have used the mount myself and found it most satisfactory, and have yet to receive my first complaint from the exhibitor to whom I have supplied them."



The mount spoken of appears to very closely resemble the round holder used by the Powers people and others, except that the lenses are held apart by two rings and a peculiar form of spring shown in the cut. Aside from the fact that there is no screw to remove to get the lens out, the mount seems to be about the same thing as has been used by a number of manufacturers in this country. The spacing spring, however, appears to be a distinct improvement. These forms of condenser mount have, however, largely given way to the square box arrangement with a door on one side. This latter has been found to be more convenient and to serve every purpose as well or better than the round metal holder. I thoroughly agree with Friend Rice as regards the quality of lens having considerable to do with excessive breakage.

Telephone.—Mr. H. A. Moyer, Waverly, Ia., contributes the following: "For two years I have read The Moving Picture World and above all, the pages devoted to the Trouble Department. The operator's Handbook is fine. I have been asked by operators in near-by towns if a telephone could be installed in such manner as to allow the operator to better hear



6 inches
IC
P
S
HR
SC
B B LINE
IC= INDUCTION COIL
P= PRIMARY WINDING OF IC
S= SECONDARY " "
SC= SWITCH CONTACTS TO CLOSE
SS= SPRING SWITCH, SPRING ALSO USED AS OUTSIDE CONTACT OF RECEIVER CIRCUIT
SH= SWITCH HOOK. HR= HEAD RECEIVER OF TYPE SUITABLE FOR OPERATOR'S USE.
B-B= BATTERIES. M= COMMON PHONE MOUTH-PIECE. T= TRANSMITTER. F= PAPER FUNNEL.
PUT ON BLOCK OF WOOD 4½ × 9".

the singer, and thus run the song slides correctly. Enclosed find sketch of one I made myself. It is cheap, gives perfect satisfaction and any one can make it."

We thank you cordially, Friend Moyer, for your words of appreciation as well as for the telephone sketch. I would suggest, however, that you might add considerably to it by giving the number of turns and size of wire used on primary and secondary coils. Is the secondary wound tight over the primary? Also, what kind of a core? The sketch is excellent, and with the additional information suggested I am sure will be of great value.

Some Questions.—Mr. T. A. Kimmel, Cairo, Ill., orders Handbook and writes: "Will you please tell me what size condensing lenses will give the best results for a 13 foot picture on a 57-foot throw? What is the right size wire for terminals for from 35 to 55 amperes? Can you recommend the H. & H. bronze sheel carbons (flat side) for A. C.? Also, please give me the proper angle to set carbons in Powers lamp for A. C. current. I saw an article on 'Jackass Music.' It was most excellent, and it has been my experience that music of that variety is dished up in a great many 5-cent shows."

I will answer your condenser query in this way. Neighbor Kimmel: Get two 7½ and one 6½ condensers. Try the two 7½ first and then one 6½ and one 7½, and use whichever gives the best results. For 55 amperes, you will require a No. 5 wire. It is rated at 54 amperes, but the one additional ampere would do no damage. Of course, you might use No. 6 asbestos covered to your lamps, since No. 6 is rated at 65 amperes, weather proof. But I believe it would pay you to install No. 5 if you can procure it readily. You will find the wire table on Page 15, of the Handbook. I am not acquainted with the H. & H. bronze sheel carbons. As a general proposition, however, I am not a believer in flat side carbons. I have never been able to observe any material benefit derived from their use. On pages 82 to 91, inclusive, of the Handbook, you will find full instructions on carbon setting, both A. C. and D. C., with illustrations on Pages 87 and 88.

Lamps in Series.—Mr. Jesse C. Long, Rochester, N. Y., writes again and says: "We now operate two 100 watt Tungsten lights while the picture runs. Instead of this, could we not run the two wires of the circuit down opposite sides of the room and connect them with five series of three 25 volt 8 c. p. lamps to the series, the five series being in multiple with each other, thus covering the whole room? How would the current consumption now on these lamps, compare with the two 100 watt lights now in use? An electrician here, who is supposed to know his business tells me that one 8 c. p. lamp consumes as much current as one 100 watt lamp. I should like to know your verdict in this matter."

Five series of these lamps would make a total of 15 lamps. One 100 watt Tungsten consumes approximately one ampere, hence, two would consume two amperes. One 8 c. p. lamp consumes approximately one-fourth ampere (I speak of 110 volt lamps), and 15 would consume ¾ x 15, or about twice the current used by the two Tungstens. These figures are not exact, but are correct enough for practical purposes. You could run the series and run them in multiple, as you propose, but it would require more current than you now use, as shown above. You would get a much better light distribution with the small lamps. In the above I have assumed that you have 110 volt current.

"THE SIGN OF THE FLYING A"

AMERICAN RELEASES

TWO REELS EACH WEEK

Monday and Thursday

Release Monday, February 20th

"The College Spendthrift"

A dramatic exposition of youthful folly and its inevitable harvest of regret. A film your audience will like.

Length, approximately, 990 feet

Release Thursday, February 23d

'Strategy"

A film that tells a tragic story leading to a thrilling climax and ending in a situation that is truly laughable and funny.

Length, approximately, 980 feet

Release Monday, February 27th

"The Sheriff's Sweetheart"
"The Silence System"

"The Sheriff's Sweetheart" is real Western, dramatic and intensely interesting. The Arizona backgrounds are beautiful. "The Silence System" a short comedy replete with funny situations.

Length respectively 800 feet and 200 feet

Release Thursday, March 2nd

"College Chums"

A dramatic story of a college love affair and its sequel. A clean, original, well-acted picture.

Length, approximately, 975 feet

ALL Independent Exchanges Buy AMERICAN FILMS

AMERICAN FILM MANUFACTURING CO.

Bank Floor, Ashland Block, Chicago, Ill.

START ON A SOUND BASIS

Get a machine that can DO the work—and do it now—and to-morrow—and for a good long time to come. Let the idea about the original machine go BE MODERN—UP-TO-DATE GET MACHINE WISE by installing the modern machine—THE MOTIOGRAPH.

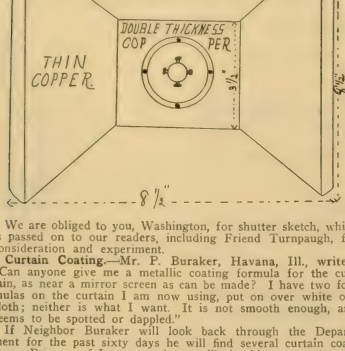
This is the day of progress. Time keeps on coming and going—and old fashioned machines must be replaced with THE MOTIOGRAPH THE MOST DURABLE—SIMPLE—ACCESSIBLE Motion Picture Machine on the market—and THE MACHINE THAT PROJECTS THE BEST PICTURE.

Manufactured and Jobbed by

ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MFG. CO., 564-572 West Randolph Street, Chicago, Ill.

AGENTS IN ALL PRINCIPAL CITIES

Two Wing Shutter.—Washington, D. C., writes: "I see Mr. Turnpaugh, Ft. Worth, Tex., has trouble with his three-wing shutter. I enclose sketch showing how I made a two-wing shutter for my No. 6, thus overcoming the same trouble. I cut the shutter out of a sheet of thin copper 8½ inches long by 4½ wide, soldered an extra piece around the hub to strengthen it. Both blades are the same size. I have used it for about two months and get a clear, flickerless picture."



We are obliged to you, Washington, for shutter sketch, which is passed on to our readers, including Friend Turnpaugh, for consideration and experiment.

Curtain Coating.—Mr. P. Buraker, Havana, Ill., writes: "Can anyone give me a metallic coating formula for the curtain, as near a mirror screen as can be made? I have two formulas on the curtain I am now using, put on over white oilcloth; neither is what I want. It is not smooth enough, and seems to be spotted or dappled."

If Neighbor Buraker will look back through the Department for the past sixty days he will find several curtain coatings. Page 77, of January 14 issue, will give him two. Anyone who feels able to help in this matter will kindly send the receipt through the Department or to Brother Buraker direct, or both.

Curtain Coating Again.—Chicopee Falls, Mass., encloses check for Handbook and writes: "I read every word of the Trouble Department and find many very helpful ideas. Can you tell me a coating for a curtain which will not crack or fall off when it is lifted up. By that I mean gathered by ropes and pulled up to the top of the stage for vaudeville acts."

I am afraid I do not know such a preparation. That is to say, a preparation elastic enough to allow of a curtain being all crumpled up, as I take it you means yours will be. I refer the matter, however, to our readers, in case anyone feels able to offer advice on the subject. Flat white paint would be as near as I could come to it.

Special Films.—From Mr. E. E. Claytor, Para, Brazil, comes the following: "I am a subscriber to The World, and certainly appreciate the Trouble Department. Through it I have learned many things. I wish to know if there have ever been films made of the following comic operas, etc.? If so, can you secure a copy or reel of each? The desired subjects are as follows: Merry Widow (Viuda Alegre); Dream Waltz (Sueno de un Valz); The Dollar Princess (Princesa de los Dollars); Nina Mimida, La Viuda mas Alegra, Chantecler, Geisha, The Chocolate Soldier (Soldado de Chocolate); Count of Luxenburg (Conde de Luxenburgo); Republica del Amor; Metodo Gonite. Please answer as soon as possible."

I shall do the best I can for you in this matter, Neighbor Claytor, but I am afraid I won't have time to give it the personal attention it deserves. I will, however, immediately refer it to various film makers.

Likes THE WORLD.—Mr. Harris N. Ensign, Los Angeles, Cal., writes ordering a Handbook, and says: "I am a constant reader of The Moving Picture World, as I also am of other papers pertaining to the moving picture business, but in my estimation The World has got it over them all."

Many thanks, Neighbor Ensign. Comments unnecessary.

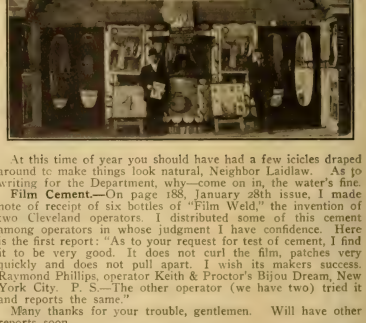
Doing Well.—Mr. E. H. Hill, Winnipeg, Man., Canada, writes, ordering a Handbook, and says: "Trouble Department is very helpful. Moving picture business is certainly on the increase here. We have some very nice houses, all doing well."

Please let us have a little more detailed information concerning moving picture affairs in your city, Neighbor Hill.

Trouble.—King's Mill, Ohio, orders a handbook and writes: "Am using Edison Improved Ex. Mod. machine. Have 8 x 10 foot picture, 35 foot throw. Use two 7½ inch condensers. Have ghost in picture as follows: Small dark spot in centre and entire lower portion of screen shadowy up to almost its centre on edges, but not so high in centre. There is clear space between central spot and upper edge of lower shadow. Have tried moving lamp house back and forward, and have carefully inspected the projection lens. Can you help me?"

Try two 6½ condensers, also one 7½ and one 6½. You have a very short focal length objective lens. Be sure the center of your condensing lens is level with the center of your aperture. I am inclined to think you are using a lamp house made for a machine with an aperture located at different height than that of the Edison Model B. Be sure your lenses (condensing and objective) are square with each other, and in exact line with each other. Be sure the light does not strike on the edge of the opening in the operating room wall. In one of these things I think you will find your trouble. If not, write again.

Will Write.—Mr. Chas. Laillaw, Toronto, Can., writes: "Here is a photo of our theater, the 'Queen's Palace.' Note Yours Truly standing by the 'income window' holding a copy of MOVING PICTURE WORLD. Will write for the Department soon."



At this time of year you should have had a few icicles draped around to make things look natural, Neighbor Laidlaw. As to writing for the Department, why—come on in, the water's fine.

Film Cement.—On page 188, January 28th issue, I made note of receipt of six bottles of "Film Weld," the invention of two Cleveland operators. I distributed some of this cement among operators in whose judgment I have confidence. Here is the first report: "As to your request for test of cement, I find it to be very good. It does not curl the film, patches very quickly and does not pull apart. I wish its makers success. Raymond Phillips, operator Keith & Proctor's Bijou Dream, New York City. P. S.—The other operator (we have two) tried it and reports the same."

Many thanks for your trouble, gentlemen. Will have other reports soon.

A Bundle of Them.—Princeton, N. J., asks the following questions: "(1) On Page 8, of the Handbook, when you say that 110 volts divided by 3 ohms gives 36⅔ amperes, is that the amperage at the arc? (2) Also the one, same page, about the 220 volts: Isn't that the ohms of the arc and rheostat both together? 3) Also the one about the 30 x 3: Isn't the 90 the line voltage, or is it the voltage at the arc? (4) Also, where is says that 30x110 equals 3,300 watts; is that the way to find the wattage consumed from line and at arc together? (5) I would like to know how to find the voltage across the arc and the voltage wasted? (6) Would like to know how to find the amperes taken from line and at arc? (7) Would like to know how to get wattage taken from line and at arc separate? (8) Would like to know how to get resistance of arc and rheostat separate? (9) How may I find the c. p. of an arc lamp? (10) Do you think it necessary to operate in glasses? Can a good light be produced in very dense, smoked glasses?

"Enclosed find sketch of screwdriver which, if made heavy enough, will be found convenient in handling small machine screws, such as those in the aperture plate. I am much pleased with the Handbook. I have read it through and through."

I am very glad you have sprung this, Princeton. Shortly after the Handbook was out I saw there was need of correction on pages 8 and 9. Like every new work, the Handbook contains some errors, but, for a first edition, and a pioneer work of its kind, I believe I need not blush for what the book contains. Your questions—1, 2 and 3—may be disposed of as follows: The way it is stated on page 8, of the Handbook, contemplates combining the resistance of the arc and rheostat. The formula on page 9 should read and all those having Handbooks will please add the -45 to the formula, as above indicated. The 45 represents the voltage drop at the arc, or the arc resistance. The problem contained in your first question is wrong. It is wrong in the Handbook in that it should have read "3 ohms in the rheostat and arc combined." The arc resistance varies with the length of the arc, but for figuring we take a resistance equal to a drop of 45 volts. This will be approximately correct for D. C., but will be somewhat too high for A. C., owing to the fact that a much shorter arc is carried with A. C. than with D. C. The rules are, on this account, only approximate, but they will be close enough for ordinary practice. (4) Means wattage consumed from the line, including both arc and resistance consumption. (5) You may find the voltage across the arc by attaching one pole of a voltmeter of known correctness to the binding post of the lamp and the other pole to the other lamp binding post. The difference between the arc voltage and the line voltage represents the power wasted in the resistance. (6) With rheostatic resistance cut one of the wires and hook in an ammeter anywhere on the lamp circuit. If a transformer is used, hook in the ammeter ahead of the transformer for line amperage and the other side for arc amperage. (7) Don't understand, unless you mean to separate the arc consumption and rheostat consumption. If so, multiply the arc voltage by the amperage and then multiply the amperage again by the difference between the arc and line voltage. (8) You can only do this accurately when the exact arc voltage is known. Taking 45 as the constant, it becomes a simple problem, provided you know the exact amperage. Suppose you are pulling 25 amperes on a 45 volt arc drop, line voltage 110. What is the resistance of the rheostat? 110- 45 equals 65, which, divided by the amperage (25) equals 2⅗ ohms in the rheostat. The total resistance (not taking the line resistance into account) is 110 divided by 25, or 4⅖ ohms; therefore, the arc resistance would be the difference between 4⅖ and 2⅗ ohms, or 1⅘ ohms. (9) Look back through back numbers of the Department. You will find this matter dealt with. I have a long article on this subject, written by a California correspondent, awaiting space for publication. (10) I don't think I quite understand what you are driving at. Many thanks for the screwdriver sketch, though magnetizing an ordinary screwdriver is, I believe, better.

$$\frac{V - 45}{A} - \frac{}{6}$$

Machine Trouble.—Attica, Ind., orders a Handbook and writes: "I have a new Powers No. 6 on my old No. 5 stand, in same position as No. 5 head stood. Cannot get clear picture. I am using the same lenses, etc. The picture is out of focus principally on the left, though I can change this to either side or top or bottom, or center of curtain, by adjusting three screws holding the threaded ring in which the objective lens screws. I have a 60 foot throw; picture, 9 by 13. What condensers are best? What effect have the little pits burned in the condensing lens by flying particles fro mthe arc—effect on the picture, I mean?"

Use one 6½ and one 7½, or two 7½ condensing lenses, whichever gives the best results. The little pits burned in the glass by the incandescent particles of carbon roughen the lens and injure the illumination of the picture, to some extent. If the lens is badly roughened the effect is quite noticeable on loss of illumination, and will show plainly in clear stereo slides. Apparently you haven't got the ring which holds the objective lens adjusted right. In this week or next week's paper will appear a sketch illustrating the method of lining up the lens, aperatures, condensers, etc.

Approved Lamps.—New York City writes, inquiring whether or not the Bureau of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity have condemned arc lamps having a knuckle in the carbon arms, by means of which the arms can be tilted at various angles. I know of no such action by the department, nor do I believe that any such ruling has been made. In fact, such a ruling would cause about four out of five, if not a greater percentage, of the lamps now in use to be discarded. In other words, it would cause a loss of more than $1000 to theater owners of the city.

Low Wages.—Indiana writes as follows: "Things are not as they should be in this neck of the woods, from the operator's point of view, at least. In most of the small towns around here the highest salaries seem to be about $25, and from that down as low as $7 a day, or rather, night. These conditions are helped along by the schoolboys operating 1 or 2 machines nights and Saturdays. They work cheap, and of course their work is cheap. I have been in electrical work for ten years and am a member of the I. B. E. W. (International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers). Allow me to congratulate you on your Handbook."

I have suppressed the name of the town because it is a small place. Naming the town would probably identify the writer, which might cause him annoyance. Sorry to hear that conditions are such over in Hoosierdom. Let's hope they'll improve in the very near future. But before they do, the schoolboy game will have to be commuted, as will also the desert a night operator.

Three Wing Shutter.—Mr. Jos. Sirrani, Gem Theater, Carbondale, Pa., writes: "I am trying to make a three-wing shutter for a Powers No. 5 machine. Please give me the diameter of shutter and dimensions of wings. My throw is 60 feet, 12 by 15 picture. What size condensers should I use?"

You should use two 7½ in. or one 7½ and one 6½ in., whichever gives the best results. On Page 869, October 8, 1910, issue, you will find photograph of a Powers three wing shutter installed by Mr. O. H. Craig, operator Lyceum Theater, Seattle, Wash. If you haven't this copy of The Moving Picture World you can procure same by sending 10 cents in stamps to the office of The Moving Picture World. No doubt Neighbor Craig will supply you with the necessary dimensions of the shutter if you enclose stamps. In fact, I would suggest that any of the readers who know what the proper dimensions of the desired shutter is should send same directly to Mr Sirrani. If I am not mistaken, the same shutter used on the Powers No. 6 serves the purpose on the Powers No. 5.

Letters Laid Over.—Owing to lack of space, several letters are unavoidably laid over until next week. Sorry, gentlemen, but it cannot be helped.

Vitagraph Play. Important to Managers: On Feb. 21, 23 and 25 respectively the Vitagraph Company will release one reel of film, the three together making a complete dramatization of Charles Dickens' great work "A Tale of Two Cities." The reels will be 1004, 1013 and 904 feet in length, or a total of 3921 feet. I have not seen this release or rather these releases but taking the uniform excellence of the Vitagraph product into consideration we may assume they are excellent photographically and otherwise.

Now Mr. Manager for the love of Mike DON'T run these reels separately. Wait until all are released and run them together as a complete play. Make a feature of it and advertise a few days in advance that these so disposed may read or re-read the book, thus adding largely to the pleasure of the show. In your advertisements advise patrons to glance through the book and refresh their memories.

In this I believe you are given a slight foretaste of what will be the nature of the photoplay. I believe the time is not far off when complete plays of five, six or seven reels will be the regular thing, rather than the naively. The Vitagraph Company have done a commendable act in making the release dates so close together. As a matter of fact and a matter of common sense, however, the three reels should be released at the same time.

DR. COOK'S OWN STORY.

In reference to the article on another page, dealing with Dr. Cook's lecture and the moving picture illustrating his polar adventures, which is to be released by the North Pole Picture Company, we draw the attention of the reader to the fact that Hampton's Magazine is printing a series of articles entitled, "Dr. Cook's Own Story." The first and second of these articles appeared in the January and February issues of Hampton's. Carrying the undaunted reader from Copenhagen to "Dr. Cook's Own Story," that on the face of it, he journeys on an exceedingly good ride in substantiation of his claims to have reached the Pole. He places little stress upon scientific "proofs," but, in the first of his articles, draws the reasonable conclusion that, having reached a spot on the top of the world where the sun casts the shadow of a man of equal length during the entire twenty-four hours, this was the point of the polar axis. As the moving picture "The Arctic Trail," referred to elsewhere, will undoubtedly interest any exhibiting readers from miles on, it will be well for those to get access to Hampton's Magazine, so that Dr. Cook's written story may be intermingled with the more dramatic narrative of the picture.

Memphis, Tenn. The Metric Sale Motion Picture Company is in process of incorporation in this city and will be located at 141 S. Court Avenue. They propose dealing in machines, accessories, films and theatrical supplies, for sale and for rent, and will also manufacture specially designed posters and advertising and entertainment slides.

MARCH OF PROGRESS.

Some old fogies claim that the coming of the machine has ruined many industries and is still putting many men out of work. Their argument is that even on the farm they have thrashing machines doing the work of three men.

All this is true in one sense, but these men who want to oppose the march of progress should use a little common sense and realize that while a thrashing machine can do the work of three men, the manufacture of said thrashing machines give employment to many more men.

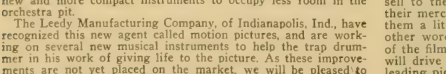
This is the same in every line. Many persons who pay a nickel per day to see motion pictures do not realize how many men, women and children are employed in the making of the little pictures that move on the screen, and surely the moving pictures have given more employment to men and women than the thrashing machine has taken away from the farm.

While no one can say exactly how many persons are now employed by this new cinematographic invention, we can state that motion pictures are giving work and the daily bread to many men working on buildings, decorations, theater chairs and supplies, cameras, perforators, printers, projective machines, raw materials, chemicals, costumes, scenarios, etc.

The above list is a very small one, as many other industries are profiting by the motion pictures and by manufacturing goods for the theaters they give more work to the men chased from the farm by the apparition of the thrashing machine. The musical instrument manufacturers are included in this list, as the request for good music and sound effects to show the pictures has given a new boom to the manufacturers and, as the work is progressing, many of these manufacturers use their brains to invent new and more compact instruments to occupy less room in the orchestra pit.

The Leedy Manufacturing Company, of Indianapolis, Ind., have recognized this new agent called motion pictures, and are working on several new musical instruments to help the trap drummer in his work of giving life to the picture. As these improvements are not yet placed on the market, we will be pleased to describe them in course of time.

The following cut shows the folding stand of the Leedy Manufacturing Company for their concert grand xylophone.



The Leedy Manufacturing Company have just completed a new re-enforced concrete addition to their factory on Palmer Street for the purpose of adding a very important department, the one of making their own drum heads. It is a known fact that the drummers have experienced considerable trouble in securing a first-class drum head, and to overcome these troubles the Leedy Manufacturing Company decided to spare no money to provide the best plant, employ experienced help and secure the very best material.

Mr. J. C. Deagan, of Chicago, has not been slow to recognize this new factor; his electric bells and his church chimes have made a great hit and are in great demand, as no well-equipped moving picture theater would be without these accessories to good music for the pictures.

The Rudolph Wurlitzer Company, of Cincinnati, Ohio, is another illustration of the fact that motion pictures have created a great demand for musical instruments and consequently have given work to many men and women. The Wurlitzer Company employ an army of good mechanics to manufacture their automatic musical instruments. When we consider the large sums of money paid for these very popular automatic musical instruments, we come to the conclusion that motion pictures are here to stay and give employment to many men who have been driven away from the farm by the terrible thrashing machine.

The same can be said of many other industries, and of late we have seen several manufacturers of office chairs go into the making of opera chairs, a line heretofore left to only a few manufacturers. The Superior Manufacturing Company, of Muskegon, Mich., well known for their church and lodge furniture, are now offering a fine line of opera chairs.

If we wish to consider still more industries, we will find that men in general have no reason to kick, as, while the machines have been taking away the daily bread of a few, on another hand the advent of the machine has created new industries and is giving good employment to many others. Let us keep an eye on the march of progress and not look backward at what our grandfathers were doing.

J. M. B.

OPEN LETTER TO OHIO EXHIBITORS.

Gentlemen: I have secured for you a copy of the bill that is to be presented to the Ohio Legislature. You will notice the wording of this bill: "Picture shows or exhibition using films composed of any inflammable, combustible, or explosive substance or material for the projection of such moving pictures, shall be fined not less than $50.00 and not more than five hundred dollars, etc." Now this is the meat in the cocoanut. Every exhibitor knows that there have been more fires from licensed films than from those of the Independent organization. Furthermore, the big fire in Cincinnati and the big film fire in Pittsburg were both licensed film exchanges, and if there ever has been a fire in the Independent film exchanges I have not heard of it.

The fact in my opinion is that if they could get this bill passed through the Legislature in Ohio it would also be railroaded through in other States. Consequently they would simply run behind what they claim they have a patent on, and force every picture exhibitor in the United States to use licensed films. It would seem that the Licensed Film Trust's main object now is to force every licensed exchange in the United States to sell out to them for a small amount of money to be paid in instalments and a small amount of stock in their large trust stock company. In other words they force licensed film exchanges to sell to them and take money in installments as they make it in the business, and by this means in a few months they will own all of the licensed exchanges, and it has not cost them a dollar, and they have simply given the former owners of the exchanges a small amount of stock in a great big trust stock company.

As soon as they accomplish this, the plan I am led to believe, is that they will proceed then to force the exhibitors who own the best picture shows throughout the country to sell to them at their own price, as the exhibitor will be at their mercy, and they will pay them in installments and give them a little of their great big Trust Company's stock. In other words, it would seem that their plan is to absorb all of the film exchanges by force through State legislation that will drive all competitors out of the business and absorb all leading picture houses and control the business absolutely.

Not satisfied with the $2.00 a week unjust license from every exhibitor in the United States using their films, they want to take everything away from the exhibitor and his employees, and leave them without a business and without a cent if possible. If the exhibitors throughout the United States do not rouse themselves to the necessity of a strong and vigorous national organization they will find that their commercial freedom has been entirely absorbed by the Picture Trust. The only thing that now stands between the exhibitors and absolute financial destruction is the Independent picture people that the Trust is trying to put out of business through unjust, unfair and underhanded legislation. Herewith is attached a draft of the bill.

Yours very truly,

M. A. Neff,
President, Ohio Exhibitors League.

Cincinnati, February 8th.

A Bill

To Amend Sec. 4652 of the General Code, Relating to the Use of Buildings for Public Assemblage, and Penalties against Owner or Person Having Control of Same.

Be it enacted by the General Assembly of the State of Ohio:

Section 1. That Sec. 4652 of the General Code be amended to read as follows:

Section 4652. Whoever, being the owner or having control as an officer, agent, or otherwise, of any opera house, hall, theatre, church school house, college, academy, seminary, infirmary, sanitarium, children's home, hospital, medical institute, asylum, or other building used for the assemblage or betterment of people, in a municipal corporation, county or township in this State, permits it to be used when any door affording exit therefrom is locked or barred, or opens inwardly, when the place is not provided with ample means for the safe and speedy egress of the persons who may be there assembled, when sufficient water and proper means to extinguish any fire which may occur therein, or when the proper certificate provided for in this chapter has not been issued, or is not in full force, or whoever conducts or permits to be conducted therein any moving picture show or exhibition using films composed of any inflammable, combustible, or explosive substance or material for the projection of such moving pictures, shall be fined not less than fifty dollars, and not more than five hundred dollars, and ten dollars additional for each day or night such building is permitted to be used after such conviction is had and until changes, alterations or additions have been made sufficient to warrant the issuing of a certificate by the chief inspector of workshops and factories.

National Film Mfg. & Leasing Co.

INCORPORATED

12 East 15th Street :: New York, U. S. A.

OFFICERS

A. S. Royal, President - - A. J. Clapham, Treasurer
J. S. Young, Vice-President - - L. J. Rosett, Secretary

DIRECTORS

I. W. Ullmann, A. S. Royal, H. Revier, J. S. Young, A. J. Clapham, A. G. Whyte, L. J. Rosett

Controlling patents covering every branch of the Moving Picture Art

EXCHANGES

Write for our Plans and Program

EXHIBITORS

Send in your name for our mailing list

LICENSED.

"Two Valentines" (Edison).—A rather unique film, presenting a curious mixup when Valentines exactly alike produce the wrong impression when received. But Cupid understands how to arrange these tangled love affairs and straightens this out so happily that all idea of difficulty vanishes. There are many laughs, some pathos and many tugs at the heart strings all of which tend to make the picture interesting. Acting and photography are alike satisfactory and the audience testified warmly to their appreciation of the story.

"The Sister" (Kalem).—A rather pretty story from the Southern Stock Company which brings Cinderella down to date. And, as in the old story, Cinderella is favored by the fairies and wins the great prize. It is clearly told, Miss Gautier, putting much real feeling into her delineation of the ill-fated girl, mourning because she was banished from the ball, but is rewarded by winning the young man she wanted. Not much drama, but an interesting story.

"Legally Dead" (Pathe).—Probably true under the law, but yet the story does no particular good in the telling, with the marital mixup that will be certain to create a false impression. Moreover, the improbability of the man finding his way through a mountain after being buried by a premature blast is too much for the average audience to swallow. It seems too unlikely to be considered as anything like fact. To be sure, the ending is pleasant enough, but it is through a too devious way to reach it.

"On the Border of the Forest" (Urban).—An admirable piece of work mechanically, but the story is no better, or, perhaps, no worse, than the average tale of this character. It deals with the old swashbuckling days, when they stole women and imprisoned them in out-of-the-way castles for a pastime. The freebooter meets his just deserts, which is the most pleasing part of the story. Pictorially, the film is beyond the average.

"Canadian Iron Center, Port Arthur" (Urban).—A well-executed picture of an industrial character, representing this well-known iron center and giving a fair impression of the town's importance.

"His First Commission" (Edison).—A touching story of Lincoln, somewhat out of the ordinary, emphasizing a side of his character but little understood, or even known. It is not dramatic, but because it forcibly illustrates a characteristic of his which everyone appreciates, it is more than ordinarily attractive. As a release suitable for the season of his birthday, it could not be improved. The characterizations are reasonably accurate and they are of the kind that touches the heart, making one feel as tender as it is possible to be.

"The Broken Trail" (Kalem).—A subject which starts with an Indian raid and the wiping out of a settler's family, excepting two baby boys. Years afterward they meet again, and a love attachment causes jealousy which almost leads to murder and does cause the loss of reason in one. It is melodramatic in the extreme. The deception about the trail could be condoned, but the allowing one brother to wander away bereft of reason is scarcely the proper ending for a story of that character. It would be much better to send him away in full mental powers, and the film would be improved by making that change.

"The Missing Bride" (Pathe).—A well-prepared picture, giving a good idea of the efficiency of the Chilian Army. It is exactly what its name indicates.

"The League of Mercy" (Vitagraph).—A sermon on the screen in which one dispicable scamp who ruined a girl and deserted her is afterward confronted by the evidence of his own perfidy and receives his just deserts. The pathos in pictures of this character is real. The film is much too truthful for the comfort of the average person. And perhaps in its absolute plainness lies its chief strength.

"The Bad Man's Downfall" (Essanay).—Another Western drama, with the bad man, the winsome girl and the avenging gentleman who rescues the girl from the bad man's unwelcome attentions, and ultimately gets her himself. It is the same Western idea, developed in a different way, perhaps, only monotonous because so many others have carried out substantially the same thing. Nothing can be said against the actors, and the staging is satisfactory, but it is a repetition of what has been done before which becomes, in time, uninteresting. Besides, this type of Westerner has disappeared, and in his place has come a prosperous individual whose opulence precludes any possibility of his reverting to the old cowpunching days. The West is still breezy, but it is not rough.

"Napoleon in 1814" (Gaumont).—Like all of this firm's films, dealing with French history, this one is attractive and affords a pleasant view of the character of Napoleon. It is a detailed account of a scene in which he pardoned a mother for attempting to kill him because she thought her son had been killed in the wars. The principal interest centers around the army, and the battle scenes, together with the figure of Napoleon, which is always interesting. The workmanship on the film is admirable and it deserves commendation for this glimpse of a phase of character not often accorded to the first Napoleon.

"Autumn Leaves" (Gaumont).—A delightful series of views of the parti-colored foliage of autumn, including the leaves when they actually assume the richest and most varied tints. It is a bit of nature, seen in her most gorgeous decorations.

"Silver Leaf's Heart" (Pathe).—Another Indian subject, in which the gratitude of an Indian girl is made the basis for a lively and somewhat interesting conflict between the Indians and the white settler. There is a thrilling running fight, with one horse carrying three, and while the reproduction is as good as might be, the difficulty lies in the selection of the subject. The time has passed when these things occur in America, though a few of them are interesting and even instructive, because they are, in a sense, historical.

"At the White Man's Door" (Vitagraph).—An Indian picture, affording opportunity for the development of the elemental passions of revenge, cruelty, rage and jealousy. The story is well told. The use of the poisoned arrow, with the administering of the antidote, is well worked out, even to the last scene, where the Indian maiden uses the arrow upon herself. This is a type of Indian picture different from the wild-west type, which is apparently the most popular thing in many localities throughout the country. There is much of pathos here and the dramatic impulses which are associated with unrequited love. It is better than the average and deserves commendation for its departure from the usual thing in Indian pictures.

"Priscilla's Engagement Kiss" (Biograph).—A bright comedy telling the story of how hearts and flowers finally won in a contest with doctors and germs, though at one time it looked very much as though the latter would be successful. The love tale is lively, not improbable and the action of the persons interested is quite in harmony with the subject. The green-eyed-god, Jealousy plays a somewhat important part in the drama and there are other incidents which will amuse. For example, the scene where the crank doctor disinfects the man's hand before shaking hands and that other where he prepares to disinfect the girl's lips before he kisses her. This act of his is the turning point of the play and after that the former lover has a look in. It is all lively and interesting and holds the attention of the audience without a break.

"The Petticoat Sheriff" (Lubin).—A comedy in which the possibility of a woman's election as sheriff is dealt with. Perhaps the suffragettes will declare that this is a travesty upon the possibility, but whether it is or not, it is interesting and lively enough to keep the audience interested. Surely some of the suffragettes would not give up so easily, but all women are not suffragettes, even though they may believe in them, and it may be assumed that the producer selected one of that sort as the heroine of his play. The conception is good and much fun is scattered through the film.

"Tony, the Greaser" (Melies).—A Mexican love story, with a good fight as a part of it. The principal interest will lie in the scenery, which is good, and well photographed. The acting is in harmony with the subject, but the picture is only another of a long line of Western films, few of which have contained distinctive features.

"Thelma" (Selig).—A love story, the scene of which is laid in the Norse country and is made distinctive by two typical characters, the old man and his daughter, Thelma. The scenery will attract because it is out of the ordinary, including the midnight sun and other novel features of that latitude. The actors have caught the spirit of the piece and the people it represents, and have produced them with sympathy and fidelity.

"What Shall We Do With Our Old?" (Biograph).—It would be well if all those state legislatures which are struggling with the question of old age pensions could see this picture. It tells the story of the neglect and cold hearted indifference with which the aged worker is treated more graphically than could be put in words. The old carpenter's lot is not exaggerated, nor, indeed, is it a single instance. Quite the contrary. It is the common experience of those unfortunate enough to arrive at old age without sufficient savings to carry them through to the end. A realization of what is here illustrated has caused England to pass an old age pension law which distributes $30,000,000 annually to the aged men and women who have borne the heat and burden of the day and now require assistance. This picture should be shown from one end of the land to the other. Its graphic story should be told to the million that they may understand what actually occurs over and over again. This film needs no criticism. It is too near the truth for that. It tells its own story and it brings to mind numerous similar instances within the limited range of every individual.

"The Show Girl's Stratagem" (Lubin).—A rather interesting story of the clever way a show girl averted a domestic tragedy, was herself adjudged guilty and turned away from the house where she was visiting. It is one of those simple little tales that carry much of heart interest, without being essentially dramatic. The parts are well played and the photography is clear and the picture runs smooth. It is satisfactory without rising to heights which will make a lasting impression upon an audience.

"Betty's Apprenticeship" (Pathe).—Undoubtedly almost any audience will laugh heartily at this picture. It consists of the madcap pranks of this girl comedian and develops some funny situations. The disposition to make a rough house of it is not to be commended.

"Pineapple Cannery in China" (Pathe).—A beautifully colored industrial picture, representing an industry not well understood in this country. The best picture is the first, showing the pineapples in all their rich colorings. The whole picture is informative, however, and it a desirable addition to the list of industrials, not numerous recently.

"The Survival of the Fittest" (Selig.)—The story of a circus. A show girl with two lovers, and a dancing bear. It begins in Italy, with one lover cast off and the other accepted against the girl's will, and ends in New York, with the accepted lover thrown out and the old one accepted. There is a thrill when the girl is attacked by lions, from which she is bravely rescued by her former lover. And then all is peace and happiness with them. Apparently the audience liked it. They plainly showed their liking and a faint murmur of applause ran around the audience when the young man rescued his sweetheart from her dangerous predicament.

"The Rajah" (Edison).—Founded upon the popular English drama of the same name. The interest centers about the young man, apparently languid, but in reality a lion. This is proved on two dramatic occasions, and the girl, who at first repudiated her guardian, finds at the end that he is a remarkable man, and that under his seemingly indifferent exterior lies something which excites admiration in all who come in contact with him. He settles a serious strike and then faces without tremor the loaded revolver of a man who has sworn to kill him, ultimately sending the man away. The photoplay is a character worth seeing. Moreover, no expense has been spared in the elaborate staging and settings. It would be difficult to conceive anything more sumptuous than some of the scenes.

"Getting Sister Married" (Essanay).—A domestic comedy centering around a sister whom the young people must see married before they, too, can be permitted to wed. And after repeated attempts it is discovered through the arousing of the real jealousy in the man's heart that she has been married not six months. As a Valentine release it is a success. It has considerable humor mixed up in it, and the absurdities which develop as the film runs are sufficient to keep the audience laughing all the time.

"The Reformation of the Suffragettes" (Gaumont).—They excite some humor in attempting to get along without men, but, ultimately, are compelled to admit that the unfortunate masculines are necessary to their existence.

"Landmarks of Avignon, France" (Gaumont).—A beautiful outdoor picture, illustrating the landmarks of this old Rhone city, with some buildings going back four or five hundred years. The work is admirably done, and the scenes are artistically interpreted.

"Consuming Love" (Vitagraph).—A Valentine story acted by children, which represents in a more or less travestied form the consuming passion which is frequently avowed by older persons. The avowal here is genuine in one instance, but the other two permit their appetites to get the better of their generosity and they are punished for their failure to show their love.

INDEPENDENT.

"The Transgressor" (Nestor).—The good book says: "The way of the transgressor is hard." This picture is a dramatic illustration of this assertion. The transgressor suffers everything a man can, even to renouncing his own daughter, after which he returns to prison and gives himself up. The story is well told. The photography as usual with the Nestor, is striking, while the acting is satisfactory. Altogether it is a good film and one that is certain to hold the attention of any audience. The sympathy is with the unfortunate man who turns away from his own daughter and returns to prison, convinced that he will wreck her happiness if he does otherwise.

"At Double Trouble Ranch" (Champion).—A family mixup, somewhat humorous, based upon the terrible tempers which two of the family possess. The inter-marrying is the result of a determination to prevent difficulty of this sort by mating different tempers, but when the explosion comes it freezes a change. The men afterward become humble and obedient and presumably all live happily ever after.

"Tweedledum as a Detective" (Ambrosio).—A lively comedy showing the comedian in a variety of amusing situations and not a few difficulties. His escape from them also furnishes amusement. The picture is funny and does not fail in its purpose to make the audience laugh.

"The Savoy Cavalry" (Ambrosio).—An excellent outdoor illustration of these well known troops. The work is well done and the maneuvers are interesting.

"Kelly, U. S. A." (Atlas).—He liked the army well enough, only the appointment of official correspondent of which Dan was not exactly the consummation of the ennobling impressions he had of the army's work. But two attempts to escape from this thralldom were frustrated and after the last one, the alternative was so severe that he conceived a sudden affection for the army and it would be impossible to entice him away from it now. This story is admirably worked out and keeps the audience in good humor throughout the length of the film.

"The School Ma'am Courage" (Reliance).—A homely subject, but the picture is worked out dramatically and with a fidelity to the truth which maintains the interest without flagging. The play is worked up carefully, and the requirements of such a drama are followed with the close attention which is lacking in some instances. The Reliance players add to their another success in this, making a simple, but strong, story into an exceptionally attractive photoplay. While there may be weak places, the whole picture is kept up to a high standard of merit.

'A Trip Through Mexico' (Powers).—A scenic picture of value, presenting varied scenes of Mexican life accurately and interestingly. The photography is admirable, while the selection of viewpoints betokens the artist.

"Found Again" (Great Northern).—A well acted and dramatic story of theatrical life which will please with its accurate presentation of the real life about the footlights. A glamour attaches to everything which has to do with the theater, which might lead one to take the life there envied, and therefore, more or less misunderstood. It fully sustains the reputation of the Great Northern's home actors and producer showing alike in the excellence of the work.

"The Orphan's Friend" (Lux).—A touching little story of a motherless child, his devotion to a stray dog and how the grandfather's heart was ultimately softened. Then the child was permitted to keep his dog and they all lived happy ever afterward.

"That Horse Did Run" (Lux).—A smashing comedy which has some amusing situations. The distraction which follows the escape of the horse through the country, accounting on it. A horse running amuck goes enough of its own impetus, if there are not others to help. This film is a worthy successor to the well known "Runaway Horse" of Pathe.

"Mixed Pets" (Selig).—A domestic story of interest showing complications which arise when a baby and a dog get into the same house, when mother and family succumb. But the ending is pleasant enough when the baby and the dog are both adopted by others.

"The Norwood Necklace" (Thanhouser).—A detective story, presenting a complication which baffles a trained policeman, but was unraveled and the guilty person brought to justice by a lawyer's clerk. Like all detective stories it is prepared to magnify the exploits of one particular party and it does this to good advantage. The acting is good, the photography is clear and there is no complaint to make about the handling of the story itself.

"Was She Justified?" (Yankee).—A story which might have been taken from some of the morbid unpleasantness of Poe or De Maupassant. Maybe the logical thing to do was for the woman to kill herself after her years of deception was unveiled. But there are some things which seem incomplete. What became of the girl whom she was undeavoring to save from a terrible fate? Was she, too, cast off by the irate husband, or was she allowed to remain while the foster mother was sent out into the world and probably to her death? The answer to the question asked in the title might well be that she was justified if she had such a husband as that. There is strength to it, and because it is out of the ordinary it cannot fail to attract, but a majority of those who see it will be likely to ask these same questions.

"A Half Breed's Plan" (Bison).—A lively Western play, based upon the attempt of a half-breed to rob a young man of $10,000. The photography in the first part is poor. In some of the scenes, the blacks and whites are so strong that all detail is lost and the two colors stand out with a glare like snow and absolute blackness. The riding is sensational and gives evidence of a degree of perfection in plains horsemanship that is thrilling in its movement and apparent danger. The riding of the girl would be hard to equal. Toward the middle of the film the photography is better and the pictures possess some semblance of tonal quality and a number of picturesque scenes are shown. But this is supposed to happen on the plains, apparently a considerable distance from any important settlement, yet one scene represents a park-like roadway, so hard and well-cared for that the horses' hoofs raise no dust as they gallop. Later, the return is made to roads more typically Western in their characteristics. The running fight between the cowboys and Indians, in which the money is discovered, is thrilling enough to satisfy the most ardent wild-west fans. If the poor photography in the first portion of the film were made better, the picure would be attractive all through.

"Clouds and Ice Fields" (Ambrosio).—This is one of the most striking mountain views seen in years. The clouds drifting over the summits of the Alps; the climbs up their snowy sides, and the sensational places in which the picture was taken, make it a remarkable film. Yet it seemed poor and somewhat weak when first seen. Few mountain pictures have ever expressed the grandeur and rugged beauty of snow-covered peaks, from which jagged rocks project better than this. Even the pictures in which the drifting clouds obscure the mountains are clear and convey the impression of majesty and gigantic size. But the public is supposed not to like this kind of a picture. So we are told by men who make wild-west pictures and "mellow-drammers."

"Holland Cheese" (Hepwex).—A well photographed picture representing the handling of Holland cheese, preparing and shipping to market, with a view of the market day. The principal interest will gather around the interesting Dutch scenes which seem odd to American eyes. Most of the photography is clear, but there are places where rapid movement caused some blurring. Otherwise the film is worthy praise as a short, but interesting industrial.

"Nature Studies" (Williamson).—A series of views of different species of water and moorland fowl, which are clearly photographed and represent the patient labor of many weeks. Some of the birds are so shy it is almost impossible to get within gun shot of them, making it all the more marvelous that a camera man could get them within range of his machine.

"The Little Avenger" (Reliance).—A story of the police, with all the oft-repeated and (when acted) dramatic scenes connected with the receipt of hush money from disorderly houses. There is an episode of breaking an officer and sending him home disgraced. It affords Miss Marion Leonard, in the character of an unfortunate girl, whom the policeman's wife befriended and took her home when arrested, an opportunity to do some clever acting, even for her. In a series of dramatic scenes she succeeds in obtaining the evidence which exposes a politician and his policeman tool, but is shot herself in the melee and dies soon after being carried home, while the chief of police comes and restores the badge to the young officer. All this is admirably worked out, with a directness in the story and clarity in the acting which leave nothing to be desired. The photography suffers in some scenes, though not enough to seriously impair the picture. Probably the exigencies of dramatic art require the death of the heroine of this play, but it would please the audience much better if the requirements were set aside temporarily and the young woman was permitted to live. She might have been wounded and carried home and the fact that she was willing to give her life for those who befriended her, would be plainly apparent without the necessity of her death. It would complete a circle of happiness which would compensate for any disturbance of artistic necessities if she were allowed to live after risking and accomplishing so much.

"Foolshead at the Cinematograph" (Itala).—If one may judge from some of the films now being turned out by this house the principal actor in these so-called comedies must be in the producing end. This picture, with its fake destruction of property and all the foolishness which leads up to it, is too nonsensical to be accorded a place on a program. The comments around the writer in a New York audience were all so emphatic against it that managers should be careful about including such senseless productions in their programs.

"The Mirror" (Imp).—A love story filled with amusing complications, but the contest is won by Dick because he believes that all is fair in love and manages to circumvent the fates which often decree otherwise. The fortune teller prescribed the mirror test for the girl and Dick saw to it that the test was in his favor. There are other complications, but they have little influence upon the main theme of the play. The idea is a good one and admirably worked out, offering opportunities for some good acting and artistic scenes. No manager will make a mistake if he includes this in his program.

"When the Cat's Away" (Imp).—The idea of this film is not new, but it is worked out somewhat differently and ends rather boisterously. For a servant to let the apartment when the owners are away has been done before, but to have a hair-pulling, clutch result is a different ending that is altogether humorous. And the servant? He gets his in being compelled to return the month's rent and also departs with a good deal of celerity.

"On the Instalment Plan" (American).—A comedy presenting in somewhat graphic form the difficulties which beset individuals who purchase upon this plan. There is a good degree of fun in it and the audience laughs more than heartily most of the way through.

"Too Much Aunt" (American).—Apparently one may have too much of anything and in this instance the individual is afflicted with too much aunt, a difficulty apparently as disturbing as too much of anything might be.

"John Milton" (Itala).—What its name indicates and reproduced to good advantage by the actors and the operator. One may acquire a more graphic knowledge of the subject than could be obtained by reading. The picture somehow seems to bring the man before one and show him as he was something which is impossible in reading.

"A Quiet Evening at Home" (American).—A lively comedy, somewhat permeated with the slap stick brand of fun, but sufficiently interesting to keep the audience laughing throughout. Probably not many men ever had such an unusual and perhaps impossible experience as befell George, but nevertheless the telling of his experiences creates a good deal of laughter and affords opportunity for the development of numerous very funny situations.

"Mr. Faddleaway is on Strike" (Eclair).—While this film is supposed to be a comedy, it must be admitted that it is something more than that. There is a suggestion in the fun which indicates the other side of the strike question and might, if sufficiently developed, exert a considerable influence upon the men who are so frequently responsible for strikes. The funny part shows Mr. Faddleaway objecting to performing the tasks which were allotted to him about the house and proclaiming in a loud voice that striking is bad business. The climax is reached when they all return to work.

"The Elixir of Bravery" (Eclair).—Mr. Coward is a funny character, but he reaches his limit when, under the influence of an elixir prepared by a friendly chemist he challenges a man to a duel. The way he wins it constitutes the most humorous portion of the narrative.

"Her Darkest Hour" (Imp).—Details at some length the trials of a girl forced to seek her own living and the insults to which she may be subjected. Not all girls have this experience, but many have, and this film tells the story only too graphically. The ending is better, since it shows the girl rewarded with the love of a noble man. Not all are thus satisfactorily treated, however, and therein lies the suggestion which may go out and assist in creating a beneficial sentiment against this sort of thing. The acting is well done and there is a realism about the entire picture which lifts it out of the rut in which the ordinary picture moves forward.

"Condemned to Death" (Yankee).—The picture opens with a damatic scene, when a jury renders its verdict of murder upon circumstantial evidence alone. Then comes the working out of the remainder of the story by which the real murderer is brought to justice. It requires twenty-five scenes and upwards of fifty people to tell this story. It must be admitted that this crowds the stage somewhat and there are times when the narrative could be improved by the elimination of some of the people who help to tell it; yet this weakness is not so apparent as it has been in some instances. In the main the story is direct and the actors perform only necessary parts in the telling of it.

"For Her Sake" (Thanhouser).—A war story that is different, in that it has a simple and direct theme and is without much of the panoply and show of war. The central thought is the change it makes when two enemies are brought together over the dead body of a mutually loved one. This is what happens in the picture, and it displays the fact of war in its true colors. Assisting her lover to escape the girl is hit by the shot of the sentry, and when the men go to arrest the fugitive they desist. They find him bending over the dead body of his fiancee. This is the simple story, yet it is told with a directness and strength that is irresistible, and develops a feeling of pity, as well as interest, in the minds of the audience. The acting and setting are in harmony with the subject. It would be hard to create anything better of the type.

"An Unforeseen Complication" (Powers).—A humorous story depicting the curious results when two mesmerized spirits which leave the bodies get mixed upon the return. This mistake accounts for the peculiar actions of the dignified professor and the equally absurd dignity of the previously wild-cat student. It is not only humorous, but offers interesting suggestions of occult character which are startling when followed to their logical conclusion.

"A Deputy's Honor" (Bison).—A western story which has much of the life and atmosphere of the plains. A picture which will attract those who like Western films. The photography is clear and the acting is convincing. The story is wrought out with care as to details and presents in some ways a distinct advance over some the same firm has put out heretofore.

LASSOING WILD ANIMALS.

(Continued from page 404.)

Scene 8—Arrival of Cage and Start for Narobi, 100 miles distant. We see the shifting cage dumped off the ox wagon alongside of Mrs. Lion, who is tied to a stump. She is then pulled inside of the cage by a rope that goes through it and out of the back into the hands of many natives.

Scene 9—Placing cage upon the train about to start for Narobi.

Scene 10—Triumphal procession through the streets of Narobi. By this time the fame of the mighty hunter has gone broadcast throughout the land. Colonel Jones received a proclamation from Abyssinia inviting him to come and be their king and promising him, if he will do so, all the camels in Abyssinia. But the Colonel could not see the proposition with a spyglass.

The reverence of the African natives for Colonel Jones, after his capture of the lion, was that with which savages would reverence a son of the Almighty. He will go down for years in their legends, as the Great White Hunter, who conquered the dreaded lion and demonstrated the superiority of man over beast.

Colonel Jones was present at this exhibition and received an artist, and as the pictures went through he was as much excited as anyone in the audience. He was introduced by Mr. H. P. Hoffman, of the Moving Picture World, who lectured the tech nical points, which added much to the effect.

Rhino Tangled Up, But Still Very Dangerous.

When we reviewed the Roosevelt pictures in the issue of April 8th we laid special stress upon the value of a good lecturer to accompany any series of pictures, such as an African hunt. There are so many points which can be brought out that the extra sum expended upon a lecturer who knows the subject is the most judicious investment that can be made.

In the opinion of those who have seen it, including the manager of the Pastime Theater, "Lassoing Wild Animals in Africa" is the greatest cowboy picture that has ever been produced. It is genuine, absolutely devoid of fake of any kind, and will be one of the most impressive series ever exhibited, if it is handled in the right way. Pictures like these need working up, no matter how good they are, and if managers will take our tip, they will find the Buffalo Jones series well worth whatever it costs.

GENRE MOTION SLIDES.

Genre Motion Slides are the talk of the town. On Thursday and Friday these slides were shown at the Boston Theater and greatly amused the audience, as they are decidedly a novelty.

The young lady with her big merry widow hat, bowing and smiling at the antics of the poor little men, sitting behind her, did more to induce the ladies of the audience to remove their display of millinery than any other announcement slide ever did. The young girl and the young man sitting on the same bench and stealing a kiss caused a lot of merriment.

The well known H. & H. Film Service have secured the exclusive rights for Chicago and according to rumors, they cannot get the new slides quick enough to fill all their orders.

The Genre Motion Slides will prove the greatest advertising medium, as the public likes to see something move. The advertisement of the "Dutch Cleanser" would fall flat if the arm of the old woman was not shown in the action of beating the carpet. The Genre Motion Slides will show these very actions and give life to the advertisement. J. M. B.

Prices Reduced

ON

"Business Bringing" ADVERTISING

The B. B. SIGN CO., Cleveland

LARGEST DISTRIBUTORS OF THEATRICAL SIGNS IN THE WORLD

Now offer their

3x12 ft. Cloth DISPLAY BANNERS

FOR EITHER LICENSED OR INDEPENDENT SUBJECTS at the following prices

6 BANNERS PER WEEK $5.75 PREPAID TO ANY POINT EAST OF MISSISSIPPI RIVER

$6.50 to points west of the Mississippi (FORMER PRICE $8.00 PLUS CHARGES)

SINGLE BANNERS, postpaid (in U. S.) $1.15 each (FORMER PRICE $1.40 EACH)

Ready for shipment 7 to 10 days before release date. Send us maker's name and date of release—we do the rest.

EXTRA!

We want to make and quote on our SPECIAL DISPLAY BANNERS FOR VAUDEVILLE ACTS, ANNOUNCEMENTS, SPECIAL RELEASES or SLIDES, Etc.

Prices: each ..... 12 ft. $1.50, 15 ft. $1.75, 18 ft. $2.00. Other sizes on proportion. Postage: 1 banner 15 cts.

Remember these are heavily cloth banners and are made on fine sheeting with full lines and have stood the severest test. Send us your order and we will ship same day.

SPECIAL PRICES

one quantities, we guarantee to duplicate at same rate.

TERMS: Cash WITH ORDER

Write for our free list of leading theatre supplies, Slides, Etc., Etc.

STORIES OF THE FILMS

BIOGRAPH.

HIS DAUGHTER.—An inordinate desire for drink made this man the beast he is, for his early life must have been exemplary, or he could not have been the father of a girl of such fine character. A miner, he had made some money, but instead of preserving a future for himself and child, Mary, practiced a code of living undoubtable friends (?). In short he becomes a worthless drunkard, shunning his companions and being inhospitable in the village. On the other hand, his old neighbor, John Whittier has been more providident and saved his earnings to provide a future for his son William. William and Mary have grown up together and have been sweethearts from earliest childhood; although not really engaged, there is a tacit understanding between the two. William is leaving for college where he is to pass his last year in his medical studies, to return at the end of this season a full fledged medical doctor. It is at this parting that their betrothal takes place, he promising to return and make her his wife. This is the happiest moment of her life, despite the thought that they are to be separated for a long school session. This dream of happiness has a rude awakening at the appearance of her boastful father demanding money for drink. However, she is ever hopeful and when later she receives a letter from William informing her of his early return, she is beside herself with joy. Hastening to William's father she finds he has a letter stating that the boy will return with a bride. The old man is counting his savings, figuring that the money will start him up in business in good shape. The letter received by the father contained a photograph of the boy in his graduation clothes. Of this the old man is very proud and hastens out to show it to his friends in the village, in his haste he falls and injures himself. This accident necessitates a visit to a doctor so she takes him in and cares for him there. The old man's first thought on his return and his insists upon going back, but Mary, realizing that it would prove disastrous for him to make the journey in his condition, persuades him to get in bed and bring it to him. To this he consents, and she leaves at the same time sending for medical aid for the injured man. She then goes to get the money she meets her father, who guessing the contents of the bag, his cupidity is aroused and he plans to get it. Following her to the village he peers through the window and sees her hide it under the mattress of her bed. Waiting till she evolves a scheme. Securing the coat and hat of his chum, whom he somewhat resembles, he masks his face with a handkerchief, effects an entrance through the window and is about to make off with his loot when surprised by his daughter with a pistol. She swoons at the loss of blood but cut at the point of the gun. Intending to take him to the lock-up, of course, considering him her father's chum. On the way they are met by William, who has just alighted from the train and he, tearing the mask from the supposed identity of the thief. What a blow this is to the poor girl, and seeing the money safe in the old man's hand; she, broken by the shock, makes a desperate attempt to leave the place. William, however, will not blame her for her father's deed and hastens after her to renew and put into effect the promises he made before leaving for college, realizing that she needs his protection now more than ever.

THE DIAMOND STAR.—John Wilson's growing indifference towards his wife causes her to ask for a raise when he arrives home on this particular evening, after an afternoon with the boys, in an intoxicated condition. A quarrel ensues between and they separate, but to avoid scandal decide to reside in the same house, occupying different apartments. Fractious little wife to do as he pleases, and suffering somewhat from the result of his hasty step, for he soon realizes that he goes into the circle of the smart set and is fascinated by the belle. This fair charmer being possessed of a host of admirers, has developed a desire for special attentions to him, making him the favored one. He is destined to become a regular attendant at her house parties. Mrs. Wilson tires of this while on a pitiful secret visit to his rooms during his absence and hears the woman call him up by telephone, she picking up the receiver in answer to the ring. A few days later he is especially honored by a dinner given to him by the belle, but falling into his habitual indifference he forgets all about it. The lady in a huff calls him up by 'phone reprimanding him for his neglect. To make reparation for this slight he promises to give her the most beautiful diamond star obtainable, for which he has heard her express a wish. He gets the star and prepares to send it, enclosing a card reading: "Accept this little token offering and let us be friends again Jack." He places this in his desk drawer to send to the lady that evening. Meanwhile, she alone and heart-crushed in profound dangerous diversion by an oldtime suitor, who on this day calls to take her auto riding. Wilson sees from his apartment the man leaving his wife's rooms and becomes jealous, which jealousy clouts his vision. Recalling his love for his wife and appreciating his own contemptible actions, he is torn with distress. At his office he cannot work, for his mind is ever on his apparently lost love. A little girl next door, having the run of the Wilson apartments, enters John's room and finds the diamond star which she playfully rummages about the room, and innocently takes it to Mrs. Wilson. She upon reading the card naturally thinks it is intended for her and rises to her occasion, hurrying to her husband's apartment to thank him. He having just arrived from the office, astounded but happy that the star although misgiven, is the result of a reconciliation.

ESSANAY.

GETTING SISTER MARRIED.—Paul Harvey is in love with pretty Margaret Cameron, but the match is objected to by Margaret's father, who states that they cannot get married until Margaret's eldest sister Jane is happily wedded. Jane is a spinster and always wears pants behind in style of dress, so to Paul and Margaret it seems little likely of their ever getting married. However, they have not observed that Senor Vachor, the music teacher to the Misses Cameron is sweet on Jane and Rosita, one of the girls, is unlikely Jane on one of his bachelor club friends, does not consider the Senor in the running at all. Paul first tries to get Jane interested in him as soon as this latter sees Jane's old-fashionedness, he makes love to her get several dates from her unless others and after all have failed the young people give up in despair. But as the last suitor is pleading his case the music teacher returns and in his jealousy makes the revelation that Jane and he have been secretly wedded for the past six months and the only reason they have not told for fear of disapproval of Jane's father. Of course, this makes the Senor the favorite with Paul and the happy quartette seek the parental blessing. Needless to say, father congratulates them and if Paul and any suitor can get the one poor suitor who had made the Senor jealous.

THE CATTLEMAN'S DAUGHTER.—Old Jim Brown, a cattleman, has for a friend a pretty daughter Gladys, who is loved by young Frank Carpenter, then foreman of the ranch. Brown objects to the match, having other plans mapped out to marry Gladys off to a rich mine owner, seeing in this alliance the opportunity for social advancement for the old man himself. Director Proctor, the miner, makes his plea, but is rejected by Gladys, who reciprocates the love Carpenter, entering at this time, makes a confession of his love for his employer's daughter and after a dramatic scene, Carpenter is ordered off the ranch her that for her ungratefulness never to call him father again. The girl, with all confidence in her lover, pledges herself to him, and father's honor, preferring love in the hoved to unhappiness in the millionaire's mansion. A year goes by and Gladys falls ill with a raging fever. To crown this climax of misfortune young Carpenter loses his position, his accumulated money is all spent and or to purchase medicine is in the depths of despair. His wife grows continually worse and the nurse, who is taking care of the sufferer, grabs, informs the young man that unless help is obtained Gladys will surely die. In desperation Carpenter goes to see his father-in-law, but before even having an opportunity to explain what he wants is driven from the heartless old miser. Heartily discouraged and determined to obtain money by any means, Carpenter returns to Brown's office and finding him safe makes away with the safe, but unluckily leaves one of his gloves on the top of the strong box. Brown returns and identifies the robber by the glove, quickly spurred he summons the sheriff and a posse and all ride out to Carpenter's home. Later in apprehending him, before he is taken away, Gladys, who has heard the noise, arises from her bed and staggers out into the room, which looks upon the pale ghost of his daughter and remorse and pity strike into his bitter heart. In the end he forgives his son-in-law for the THEFT, and begs Gladys and Carpenter for forgiveness.

GAUMONT.

THE PLOT THAT FAILED.—An outlaw, marked with the "Fleur de Lis" (the symbol which was branded upon the shoulder of every French criminal), making his way incognito through the country accompanied by his sister, is royally entertained at an hospitable herd.

He makes love to the lord's daughter, and plans to do away with his rival in her affections. His scheme fails. He then arranges a duel with the man he would have assassinated. His sister is so hurt by his evil plans that she forsakes his true social position and makes it impossible for him to accomplish his designs.

LECTURES IN CHEMISTRY.—Showing in full detail the formation of numerous products into crystals. Processes which really require hours are shown within a few moments' time.

THE REFORMATION OF THE SUFFRAGETTES.—Because their husbands enjoy the gentle art of fibbing, the women of the village vow vengeance and ostracize all their husbands.

After many ludicrous experiences attempting to do without the tyrant men, they find it impossible and rejoice in the return of their erstwhile hated oppressors.

SAUL AND DAVID.—9. And Saul eyed David from that day and forward.

10. And it came to pass on the morrow that the evil spirit from God came upon Saul * * * and there was a javelin in Saul's hand.

11. And Saul cast the javelin, for he said, I will smite David even to the wall with it. And David avoided out of his presence twice.

AT THE END OF THE ROAD.—in which two contestants for a fortune followed their quest the wagden and captured through the efforts of a victim's sister. They manage to pass some of their coins upon a young news-agent. He is arrested while spending the money. While he is in custody, the sister throws them to their workshop, has them captured and proves her brother's innocence.

LUBIN.

THE TEST.—Flo was an assistant in a fashionable library, receiving a small salary which she devoted to the support of herself and her mother and to dress accordingly. She had two devoted admirers, Harry and Dick whom she had met at the library. Neither of them knew where she lived as she was afraid they might despise her humble home. One day, her mother came to the library with the aged father of one of the monthly charges, an invalid girl. The girl was in need of medicine and as Flo's mother had no money, she had brought the man to the library. Flo went to ask in advance from the head librarian. As she was returning, she saw Dick, who took the old people for two of Flo's friends, and gave them Flo immediately came to their rescue and informed Dick that one of the supposed beggars was her own mother. As the two old folks were leaving the library, Harry, seeing that they were in great trouble, and also suspecting that the man was due to the invalid girl and in other ways did all he could for Flo's charges. When Flo discovered what Harry had done, she thanked her admirer toward him and allowed him to call at her home. She soon found that her humble surroundings had no effect whatever on his admiration and love for her. They soon became engaged. Harry insisted that she should leave the library and had the pleasure of showing her resignation and announcing their engagement to Dick when that young man called to see Flo at her home in addition to her mother.

GETTING EVEN.—Joe Clayton found his steak like sole leather and refused to pay for it. However, the proprietor with the aid of a couple of waiters, persuaded Joe to give up the bill. He made a large sandwich sign painted, reading, "Free Meals Today at Guy's Lunch Room" and hired a man to carry it around the streets. Joe's wife's flirtations was soon doing a rushing business and the proprietor was figuring on renting a larger building, when Joe had the sign taken from him, out without paying. Then he caught sight of the sign and knew that Joe had succeeded in "Getting Even."

SCHULTZ HAS THE SMALL-POX.—There was plenty of trouble when the teutonic expressman got his "p's" and "b's" mixed.

A whole barrel of fun in this one. Poor Schultz didn't know what made everybody run away from him because he had the small box, but Schultz was pronouncing it "schmall pox" all the time Mrs. Jones, Mr. Jones, clerks, customers, policeman—all give Schultz a wide berth. Finally the doctors corralled him and explanations followed.

MELIES.

BILLY AND HIS PAL.—Boys will be boys and every boy wants to be hero as would any grown-up man he would like to be when he grows up. Jim, the cowpuncher is Billy's idea of what a man ought to be and he becomes the faithful admirer and pal.

Madge is the "angel" of the ranch and there is not one of the cowboys who would not lay down his life for her. Jim loves her and she is not averse to his attentions. This arouses the jealousy of a presumptous Mexican who attempts to embrace Madge and is quickly knocked down and set by Jim.

The Mexican plots revenge and his villainy is overheard by Billy. He notifies Madge and she rallies the cowboys together and tells them of the assistance of Jim who has been captured by the Mexican and his gang who are preparing to kill him.

Madge and her friends arrive in the knick of time to save Jim from being crushed to death by a rock which the fiends are about to hurl upon him from the precipice above.

A running battle between the cowboys and the Mexicans takes place and soon the would-be murderers are captured.

Madge then unbosoms Jim's bonds. When he is free he clasps her to his breast. Billy puts in an appearance and, when Madge tells Jim that he boy saved him, Jim grasps his hand and Billy is the happiest boy in all Texas.

SELIG.

THE PADRE.—It is in the early days of California. Father Sebastian, trudging his way on foot from the Mission, his attention is attracted to the wail of an infant coming from the crest of a ridge. He finds the body of a Spanish woman-

URBAN ECLIPSE.

VITAGRAPH.

EDISON.

Independent Film Stories.

THANHOUSER.

FOR WASHINGTON.—We all know of Washington's remarkable feat in crossing the Delaware River at Trenton with half of his command, surprising the Hessians and making them its prisoners, but how advance word of helplessness of his enemy reached the great general has ever been a matter of much mystery.

The bearer of the message was the very Patriot Maid here portrayed, who, with her American scout sweetheart severely wounded severely disguises herself, takes her lover's message to Washington and lends her countrymen to the house where the Hessian officers, whom she had before this plied with drink, are lying in drunken sleep.

Through her aid, Washington reaches the Hessian headquarters. Is admitted by the wounded scout, and the enemy awoke to find the American flag flying over them and the American army in full possession of their camp, the victors in one of the most bloodless yet decisive struggles of the Revolution.

The humanity of the Patriot Maid is perhaps best shown in her reception of the Hessian officers when they enter Trenton and select her home for their headquarters. Having uttered the sight of a red coat, she nevertheless treats their attentions with diplomacy, showing merely reserve and not resentment.

By her conduct she completely disarms any suspicions the Hessians may have entertained as to her loyalty, and they willingly allow her to set before them the intoxicating cup—and even compliment her on the superior brew as they drain it. Certainly, if woman is senseless, there are exceptions to the rule, and the Patriot Maid is an admirable one.

A NEWSBOY HERO.—John Bailey is a struggling young workman, but he is fond of drink. His conduct is long a source of sorrow to his wife, but her prayers and entreaties are disregarded. Finally the climax comes when John returns home one evening and is so much under the influence of liquor that he strikes his wife. Believing that life is unbearable, the woman takes her child and goes out into the world, preferring even death to further mistreatment and humiliation.

The woman and helpless child, with no refuge in sight, wander around in the snow, and finally fall exhausted into the sleep that precedes death. Fortunately for them, Jim Sands, a crippled newsboy, sees their plight, goes to their assistance and takes them into his poor little home. When they prepare to start out again, Jim offers to share his all with them and they remain until the mother can obtain some other refuge.

Jack, in the meantime, has hunted vainly for his wife and child, and a newspaper story of the death of a woman and child in the storm convinces him that May and Marie are the victims. Remorseful, he decides that he has no right to live, and plans to drown himself. He is saved from this crime by Jim, and a Salvation Army band, that is holding services nearby, offer to care for him. He realizes that the one thing to do to atone for his fault, is to live a manly, useful life rather than to seek suicide, the refuge of the weak.

Jim by accident learns of the relationship that exists between May and Jack and brings them together. They are reunited and Jack promises to be in the future what he should have been in the past, a husband who puts home and family above everything else in the world.

AMERICAN.

IN THE LAND OF CACTUS.—A young engineer, employed in running claim lines, is in love with the daughter of the mayor of Red Cloud. He has been told by the girl's father to make good before proposing marriage and the gratification of the young people's love depends upon the possibility of the engineer's discovery of a good job.

A railroad magnate visits Red Cloud to investigate the possibilities of running a road through the town. Duke Foster, the outlaw, plans to abduct the magnate and hold him for a big ransom. He is enabled to carry out his plan while the magnate is being entertained at a picnic in the foothills. The magnate and the girl are strolling a short distance from the picknickers when the Duke and his gang fall upon them and carry them away.

The young engineer, watching his sweetheart through a pair of field glasses, sees the abduction. He rides back to the picnic and spreads the alarm. The men are unarmed, so it is necessary to ride back to town to form a posse.

The Duke has ridden in the hills. The young engineer discovers the hiding place, fights with the gang and throws him from the cliff. The body falls into the camp of the outlaws, precipitates a battle, during which the magnate and the girl are freed. The young engineer is wounded in a hand to hand fight with the Duke and is saved from death by the girl, who threatens the Duke with a forty-four. The windup is fast and exciting and the conclusion is the magnate's choosing the young engineer to build the new road and the union of the lovers.

This story abounds in thrilling situations. The grandeur of the natural setting coupled with the action and interest in the story will no doubt mark this film as being something unusual.

Our western films have already attained a reputation second to none in the United States and we confidently predict for this feature exceptional popularity.

In the scene where the guard of the bandit's hiding place is thrown from the cliff we depict a situation that it will be hard for our esteemed competitors to rival.

Released Tuesday, Feb. 28

The Call of the Heart

Comedy Drama

"Cast thy bread upon the water" is the foundation of this play. Action to make your blood tingle and enough comedy to change that lump in your throat to a chuckle. The kind of a story that pleases your patrons.

2 Each Week 2

Powers Picture Plays

TUESDAY EVERY SATURDAY

Released Saturday, March 4

Home, Sweet Home

DRAMA

You can imagine the beautiful theme of a story written around this expression. The Director and Stock Co. have done their best in this Play as they felt every move. Synopsis elsewhere.

Have you requested your exchange to book Come Back to Erin

Do so and drop us a line for extra posters. FEATURE IT BIG.

The Powers Co.

241st St. and Richardson Ave.

New York City

THE COLLEGE SPENDTHRIFT.—He was the only son of his mother and she was a widow. The boy was the apple of his mother's eye, and mother-like she had lavished on him the majority of the meager resources at her command, and has gone to the extent of mortgaging her home to pay the boy's expenses through college. He is thoughtless and in no measure appreciates her struggle and the sacrifices she is making for him. He is a "prince of good fellows" and squanders the money that is scraping for in riotous living. After graduation, he needs more money to enable him to take a position offered him in the west. The home is mortgaged to the limit. The widow raises the necessary funds by realizing on what jewelry she has left and thus equipped, he goes west, promising his mother as he says goodby, that he will write often. In new scenes and with new interests, he soon forgets his promise, and the loving, praying mother at home is only an occasional memory.

The mother at home, alone, struggles for a year, is turned out of her home and as other years go past, becomes poorer and poorer and, after many heart rending struggles, finally ends in the poor house.

Meanwhile, the son, having prospered greatly in the west, one day comes across a photo of his mother and is brought to a startling realization of his badness. Filled with remorse for his conduct, he starts east and commences a search for his mother. After many failures and much suffering of mind, he finds and rescues her from the poor house, and the two of them start for the new home in the west, never to part again.

POWERS.

WHAT WOULD YOU DO?—Jim Wilson receives an invitation to attend a reception and he in turn invites his sweetheart, Elizabeth McHenry, to go with him. On his way home from the office he stops at the florists and orders a bouquet sent to his apartment. Shortly after arriving at his rooms his tailor sends his evening trousers which have been pressed and at the same time the flowers arrive. Jim calls a messenger and instructs him to deliver the flowers at Bessie's home. The boy mistakes the tailor's box for the florist's package and Jim pens a short note requesting Bessie to wear these at the affair. Imagine her horror and indignation when upon opening the package she finds Jim's trousers. Jim in the meanime discovers the mistake and endeavors to catch the messenger but of course he is against him. He arrives at Bessie's house, tries to explain and, well, funnier things happen.

ACROSS THE MEXICAN BORDER.—Ruis, an old Mexican greaser wishes to sell his daughter in marriage to Jose, a young Mexican who is deeply in love with her. She repulses his advances and defies her father, refusing to have anything to do with Jose as she is deeply in love with Jack Armstrong, an American soldier. Jose, noticing the infatuation of the girl for the American, tries in various ways to do away with him but he is outwitted at every turn and caught in his own trap, he decides that life is more sweet to him than the girl. Love will find a way and they cross the Mexican border to live in the country of the free.

REX.

A HEROINE OF '76".—General Washington, riding towards headquarters, is overtaken by a severe snowstorm and forced to seek shelter at a wayside tavern. Shortly before his arrival, a party of British soldiers had visited the tavern and posted a placard offering a bountiful reward for the capture of Washington, dead or alive.

Upon his entrance, he is recognized by the description and a plot is arranged to assassinate him. It falls to the lot of the tavern keeper to do the deed. His daughter, a staunch and loyal patriot, overhears their conversation and determines to save Washington's life. Through a ruse, she causes him to change his room and herself takes possession of the one he vacates, and after a silent prayer, she retires.

At midnight, the plotters urge the tavern keeper to begin the murderous assault, and climbing the stairs, he enters the room occupied by his daughter, and after a moment that is like an eternity, he leaves the room, trembling, penitent, afraid to think, fearful of memories. He sits brooding by the fireplace all night. Remorse—remorse—it tugs at his heart strings. It points an accusing finger at him. He suffers on until weary and exhausted, he falls asleep. At daybreak, Washington debouches the stairs and arouses the sleeper, who imagines Washington a spirit. The most terrible punishment of murder is the memory of it. Washington departs and the tavern keeper begins to believe the happenings of the night were but a horrible dream, but a glance at the knife upon the floor covered with blood, convinces him of the realism of the events—convinces him, and arouses him from a fit of horror. At this moment, his daughter, clinging to the banisters, staggers down the stairs, totters and falls dying in her father's arms. A glance at her breast discloses a red stain and he realizes he has unwittingly killed his own child.

This little heroine sacrificed her life at the shrine of liberty and as such her memory is hallowed.

NESTOR.

HIS FATHER'S HOUSE.—Being thrown upon her own resources without a practical knowledge, Nina had gladly accepted Mrs. Allen's offer to assist her in her duties as housekeeper for Carter Sheldon and his son Jack. She forfeits the love of the gentlemen girl, and knew that under her care she would be safe and happy.

Jack also pitied the orphan, and pity ripened into love, but here, Carter Sheldon interfered. Believing until he was had gone so far that Vanessa trip, he discharged the girl, and then, although Jack pleaded for his assortment upon his father's return, reunited them. Jack must loose between them, and Jack chose—Nina!

Five years had passed since her marriage when Nina was stricken with yellow fever, and fearful lest little Charles should catch it, the mother of her child left to Nance Sheldon, a friend of the nurse. But the whole town was placed under quarantine, and long ere Nina had recovered or Jack returned to care for the little one, Nance had jumped quarantine, and though they searched diligently for two years, no trace of either had been found.

Nance had not prospered during those two years, and her hunger for the love of her child grew radually sharper. Had she not still cherished faint hope that Charles's parent would turn up reward her, she would have killed the child t on the street, but as it was she contented erself with blows, or sending the "hateful brat" supperless to bed.

Charles, however, had made friends with an old gentleman, who passed their steps on his way business, and finding the child so unhappy, and mself so lonely, he paid Nance handsomely, then ispired the little one as his own.

But scarcely had Charles become accustomed to r new home than a fresh joy awaited her. Jack had at last gotten trace of Nance, and from her learned that his child had been adopted by Carter Sheldon.

Impatiently he hurried to his father's house, where, this time he did not ask in vain for his wife. This time, little Charles was there to plead for her mama, and all was well.

SOLAX.

LOVE'S TEST.—Margaret Golden, a winsome and wealthy maid, is sought by many suitors, but has given her heart and the promise of her hand to Harold Elliot, who is herself in love with Harold and consequently jealous of the existing friendliness between our and Margaret, contrives to raise a doubt in Margaret's mind as to the disinterestedness of Harold's love for her and she decides to put him to the test. She writes a letter to Harold telling him she has something important to tell him.

The letter is given to Anne, with whom Margaret makes her home. She Anne tries to dissuade her from what she regards as a very foolish move—for Margaret need not fear that she intends to tell Harold that she has lost her fortune in telling of Margaret's mind the Aunt wanders Harold and tells him of Margaret's plan. Harold as at last indignant, but finally regards the matter as a joke and determines to just Margaret back in her own coin.

He listens to her sad tale and then proceeds to tell her that he too has lost his fortune. As they are both poor no one can see no reason why they should not marry at once and as Margaret is finally in a position to refuse this she accepts and they marry and start for their new home in poverty too.

The scenes which follow show the new couple amid novel and strange surroundings. Poor Margaret, entirely unfamiliar with house work, tries hard but her efforts are unsuccessful failures. Harold hurts to, and his efforts to instruct Margaret in the gentle art of housekeeping give the girl a fit of nervous prostration.

Finally both of them reach a point where forbearance has ceased to be a virtue and they even decide to confess to the other. Then they are happy in the knowledge of each other's love as proven by test—a fact, then depart for their home, the former bidding a hearty adieu to "our poor widow" and we can't find them at Monte's where seated at a table gesturing with good things they are busily engaged in making up for lost time—the past forgetting and by the past forgot.

IMP.

ARMY MANOEUVRES IN CUBA.—The occasion is the recent celebration of the independence of Cuba. The soldiers appear in dress uniform in front a glittering, bewildering spectacle. The soldiers were plainly dressed on the days chosen as camp evolutions. A beautiful spectacle of soldiers in their real settings, the barracks plainly visible in the distance.

The military precision the pageant is a thrilling spectacle, regiment after regiment, cavalry and artillery, passing in review before the commander-in-chief. The troops are splendidly uniformed. The manoeuvres demonstrate that the colored soldiers of Cuba is a splendid one, and is capable of coping with a like number on the field of battle, should the occasion require.

After the military demonstration, the non-commissioned officers and officers of the regiment and officials of Havana and officers of the visiting ships passing before the reviewing officers. Following the chief executive of the island in his carriage, the carriage of his address suggesting that the prosperity of the country under the auspices of independence that has created since they were freed from Spanish oppression by the humane time of the United States.

THE DYNAMITERS.—Showing a child with one a humorous experience with a stick of dynamite, temporarily before its parents return. He is handling the fuse from a match as it is being carefully removed when the stick explodes, blowing the fuse to pieces. The child is thrown to the floor by the force of the explosion. The explosion of the stick causes considerable damage to the furniture in the room. The child is not injured, but is badly frightened. The explosion of the stick causes considerable damage to the furniture in the room. The child is not injured, but is badly frightened. The explosion of the stick causes considerable damage to the furniture in the room. The child is not injured, but is badly frightened.

THEATRICAL ARCHITECT

We not only make Plans and build
Theatres and Vaudeville Houses
We also build
MOVING PICTURE THEATRES
We have built over 60 Theatres the last 5 years which are all ORIGINAL in Construction, Design and Decorations destruction. In despair it is sent where it is rescued by him to an extravagant dog. Happy Hooligan—the well meaning one—does all he can to extricate himself from the difficulties. He passes the wandering bandits to the quartering of the pugilists and succeeds in the end in disposal the bomb below. The dog does not mourn—he knew that they make a can for it.

The dismantle explosive wrecking the surrounding territory and leaving—escapes with his cloth-ing lost, but consciousness intact.

A MANLY MAN.—Norman Dungay, a civil engineer in the employ of the United States government, loves Elinor Wallace and they are happy in their plighted troth. Dungay is ordered to the Philippines to take charge of some important work, and takes an affectionate farewell of his sweetheart to whom he promises to be faithful.

We see him arrive at his destination and take in the tropical surroundings. The young engineer is red blooded and manly. He finds time hanging heavy on his hands owing to his absence. He finds it to Lola, a beautiful Filipino girl with Japanese form and handsome face. She gives him a passing glance and then becomes indifferent. He seeks the girl, and she is not averse to the attentions of the handsome young man from the states.

Perro, her lover, takes in the situation, which leads to feud for the possession of Lola and Duncan meet and the love affair is progressing beyond his fondest expectations.

Returning from his foray into the swamps one day, Duncan is stricken with the deadly fever. He is overcome and his condition is severe. Fearing the contagion Lola sends him and, bravering the ravages of the disease, assists him away. This episode is witnessed by the disappointed lover, who curses them, hoping his fickle sweetheart and her lover will both succumb to the dread fever.

We see Lola nursing Duncan back to life and health, faithful in her duties as nurse, and glorious in her satisfaction of saving the life of the man whom she loves with all the passion of the Latin women. Duncan, slowly regaining his strength and we see him emerge from the hut supported by the faithful Lola. He is seated out of doors, when Perro appears and is surprised to see him alive. Stung to desperation in his jealous, Perro steals up and is about to plunge a knife into Duncan's back, when the girl throws herself upon him, wrests the knife from his grasp and sends it spinning into the jungle. Perro and Duncan grapple, when a priest providently makes his appearance and Perro desists with an abject apology. In a few words the situation is explained to the man of God, who with a keen discernment of right, inquires of the young engineer as to his intentions toward the young girl. He sternly insists that honorable union can be the only result of their intimacy. Duncan protests and then his better nature asserts itself, and he assents to a marriage. The ceremony is performed.

Later, Duncan, in the full uniform of Filipino, is seated in his yard. His boy, the result of the marriage, comes to him. An American appears and questions Petro, who is evidently a native. The stranger inquires for Duncan and Petro, alert, his jealousy having not abated by the marriage of Duncan and Lola, points to Duncan. There is a recognition. Duncan is pleased to welcome his friend. He is informed that the stranger is sweetheart whom he left in the states. Is outside the gate. Duncan is overjoyed. Elinor runs to him and there is a happy reunion. He is holding her in his arms when Lola approaches, terrified at the sight. She understands and quietly makes her way to Duncan's side. He sees her and is racked with conflicting emotions. His wife and sweetheart—which? Sorrowfully he breaks the intelligence to Elinor, who stands aghast. She understands. The woman he has sworn to love and cherish holds out her arms to the girl. To whom he plighted his troth, assumes the same attitude. Is less demonstrative. Duncan mournfully walks away and Duncan seats himself in anguish and then takes Lola in his arms and she is supremely happy and Duncan is confronted a manly man.

LUX.

A CHILD'S PRAYER.—A struggling composer, whose talent is as yet unrecognized, receives a notice from his landlord to the effect that unless he can pay his rent he will have to go. Very much alarmed, the composer takes up his latest score, and bidding farewell to his wife and child, goes out—hoping that at last Fortune will smile upon him. He attempts to interview a well-known director of music, but without success, and at length returns home. Hopelessly he tosses his score on the table, and, resting his head on his arm, falls asleep. His little girl enters, carrying her doll, and falling on her knees, says her prayers. Then, catching up the score, she hastens out. Entering the director's office, she is at first refused admittance, but the great man himself enters and listens to her story. So touched is he by her appeals that he instructs his secretary to give the girl a check, and escort her home. This is done, and the child's prayer turns sorrow into gladness.

MATILDA CHASED.—A party of sandwichmen commence their daily task, and wander through the streets, bearing their boards. Suddenly one of them, the leader, perceives in the distance a girl accompanied by a young man bearing a car, and, crying "Here's an girl!" he sets off in pursuit, followed by all the other sandwichmen, who, now commence a chase. Out and furious, Matilda and her young man, quite unaware of their pursuers, enjoy themselves to their hearts' content, when the sandwichmen, nearly dropping from fatigue, follow on behind. At length the leader catches up to the couple, and catching Matilda by the arm, pulls her round. She no sooner hasses as he realizes that it is the wrong girl he has been chasing, while Matilda and her sweetheart heartily endorse his "take it out" of him in a very vacant fashion.

ECLAIR.

KING PHILIP THE FAIR AND THE TEMPLARS.—King Philip the Fair is much annoyed; he has received a letter from Philip Nogaret, Grand Master of the order of the Knights Templar, stating that the Supreme Council of the Templars have refused his request to be admitted into the order. The King complains to the Chief Inquisitor that he has been insulted by the Order of the Templars, and also that a spirit of revolt exists that the Templars have been guilty of crimes against God and the Church.

The matter reaches the Pope, who issues a bull giving King Philip the Fair authority to punish the Templars, if in his opinion they have been guilty of such crimes. Jacques Morlay, accordingly, is arrested, and being tortured confesses to crimes of which he cannot be guilty. On these confessions he is condemned to be burned alive. On the eve of the execution Philip sends word to the King, saying—"King, before this year is ended we two shall meet in the presence of God Almighty!"

Gloomy thoughts beset the King's mind—neither day nor night can he keep out of his consciousness the dying words of his victim. The ring he hears continually. In order to forget them, the King decides to go out hunting. In vain. But the words follow him—he rides faster and faster in order to get away from them, but without avail, and finally his horse overthrows the King, mortally wounding his majesty. The King is overtaken by some noblemen and carried to a nearby castle, and as he lies there delirious the King sees the majestic figure of the dead Morlay ringing the bell, and hears him say before God.

ALL FOR GOLD.—The rush for gold was on and many there were who flocked to Nome in search of the yellow metal. Among them was Tom Stuart, who left a wife and young daughter behind, back East.

The girl fell in love with the son of a rich broker, and when he informed his father that he loved the girl, the old man was afraid of gossip followed and the boy was warned never to see the girl. However, love knows no obstacles, and the young couple were soon married and passed the West shortly after, the girl writing her father in advance of their coming.

Meanwhile, there was trouble in the gold mining camp and Tom Stuart was daily missing small portions of his accumulations. Where it went he could not guess, but suspicion pointed strongly to Jose, a Mexican roustabout. Tom's partner was unmarried and had just left a sure-free, happy life.

When the newly-married couple from the East reached the Nome region they were tired and worn out. They sought shelter in the very cave where Tom Stuart's partner was concealed and presently discovered the treasure. Of course, they filled their pockets and journeyed to the camp. Tom Stuart discovered the loss that had befallen and followed the camp to action. Jose, the suspect, was dragged to the nearest tree and was about to lose his life, for he confessed to the crime, when the broker's son learned of the commotion and appeared on the scene in time to exclaim away the guilt of Jose.

Father and daughter met for the first time in three long years, and Tom accepted his new son-in-law in good faith, in spite of his innocent episode, which almost caused a tragedy.

Some time later the happy and prosperous couple returned to the East, just in time to save a ruined broker from suicide. A father's forgiveness followed, of course.

YANKEE.

THE ABDUCTION OF PARSON JONES.—Who kidnapped the parson? The town was thrown into confusion by the sudden disappearance of Rev. Jones, and though detailed mention is made as to sees as to whether or not he eloped with the pretty girl whose photo was found on the floor of his study, with an endearing message inscribed on the back.

And if you were to glance through the list of those booked for passage on the S. S. Steamlet, bound for the West Indies, you would not find the name of Parson Jones, even though something seemed you to be was on board.

It would be a shame to expose the plot before you see the film.

GREAT NORTHERN.

HIS GREAT DUTY.—Yvonne accepts one of two lovers, but the man she accepts is entangled in another love affair. He decides to break off the secret entanglement, and does so, in spite of the entreaties of the woman. Afterwards she is taken to the hospital with her child, and on her death bed sends a note to her former admirer to come to see her. After much hesitation and a terrible inward struggle he goes. Before she dies, the woman he has wronged consumes their child to his care, and, after closing her eyes, he bears the infant homeward to his bride, to whom he tells the whole story. She forgives all, and treats the child with every kindness.

CHAMPION.

A WESTERN GIRL'S CHOICE.—Dora Maxwell resides with her parents on their extensive ranch in the valley of the Rio Grande, in the Mimbo Mountains. Returning from a break canter, Dora is confronted with a great surprise in the presence from the east of her uncle and a strange young man.

Receiving a letter from her aunt, through its presentation by her uncle, Dora discovers that the young stranger is destined to be her future husband, and her aunt also invites her to come east with the two men when they return. In accordance with the wishes of her deceased mother, Dora's aunt is desirous of inviting the girl to visit New York.

The attractiveness of the young eastern millionaire is evident, and Dora for the money forgets your Milton and spends her time in the company of Richard Moore. She soon meets with an opportunity to compare the worth of the two men, and that is when Moore is about to abduct Dora, peeler to the other, she dares no longer hesitate in her choice.

In aid to her decision to refuse her aunt's kind invitation, is a dream she has of supposed eastern civilization. The humiliation suffered through the cowardice of Moore, compared with the bravery of Logan, ends the false infatuation she experienced. Her mind made returns, she regained and discomfited, without having remained at the ranch over a day.

Writing a courteous letter of refusal to her aunt, Dora placed it in the hands of her astonished uncle, and then, with the two visitors in the room, gets into her riding habit, and meeting Milton at the front door, both ranter off with laughter and love in the winter's air.

RELIANCE.

SOULS COURAGEOUS.—Isabel Bradford, an orphan, lives with her guardian, Colonel Bradford, Ina and Marie, 18 and 19 years old, respectively, and her brother Harry, aged 16. Harry and his grandfather are devoted to each other. Ina meets a wounded volunteer carrying a message to the American general that the British are preparing to attack. She undertakes to carry the message and after a trying experience reaches the American camp and gives the advance news of the enemy. In the meantime the British have attacked the settlement and a pair of drunken soldiers enter the Bradford home and, after making advances upon Isabel, Capt. Burton, a British officer, comes upon the scene and, after a brief scuffle with emotion as she thanks the dashing officer, and he in turn is smitten with her charms. Later another detachment of soldiers make an attack and Isabel barricades the heavy door and fires the guns which her step sister loads, as she is used as a battering ram and the door torn down. At that instant Capt. Burton arrives, and, pistol in hand, holds them at bay and upbraids them for their attack upon a woman. The American soldiers come up on the run and the British are defeated. Isabel makes her escape behind cull of he offers his sword to Isabel in token of surrender, but she refuses it, and then gives it back to him, but she refuses because he is fighting against her flag. He will not turn against his country, as a compensation is offered by which he agrees to fight neither for nor against the American flag, and he breaks his sword across his knee, winning Isabel's hand as a civilian.

BISON.

THE WARRIOR'S SQUAW.—A purely Indian story. With a battle scene between Sioux and Pawnees. A Sioux warrior is badly wounded and discovered by a Pawnee maiden, who, as was customary among the red men, contemplates ending his life. His bravery in the face of death wins her admiration and she bandages his wounds and helps him to escape. The two fall in love, and the girl's tribe is informed by a disappointed suitor of the affair between them. They flee to cape to the Sioux camp and the pursuing Pawnees are furiously attacked and defeated.

AMBROSIO.

THE DEMON.—The Spirit of Evil, driven out of Heaven, flies to the mountains of Caucasus, and determines to conquer the soul of Tamara, a beautiful princess. The demon causes the death of her lover and soon begins to exert an irresistible influence on Tamara, who hides in a convent to escape him. The Demon descends in the night and forcing his way past an Angel who seeks to stay him, takes Tamara, powerless to resist, in his arms. As he kisses her the touch of his poisonous lips cause her to fall lifeless, and the Demon is foiled.

AMONG THE EXHIBITORS.

Boston, Mass.—The Springfield Theater Company is contemplating the erection of a new moving picture theater at the corner of East Court Street and Dewlight.

Asbury Park, N. J.—The Music Hall on Tenth avenue will open under the management of a large theatrical syndicate as a moving picture and vaudeville theater.

Keithsburg, Ill.—Mr. George Frick, purchased the Gem Motion Picture Theater here.

Salt Lake City, Utah.—The Orpheus said to be Salt Lake's newest and largest moving picture theatre, has opened. The new house is located at 261 Main street in the heart of the business district, and is said to be a model from all standpoints. The seating capacity is 650.

Sioux Falls, S. D.—Mr. John Bieggen has purchased the interest of Will H. Lyon in the Majestic Theater.

Fort Worth, Texas.—Improvements amounting to $15,000 are being made on the building formerly occupied by the Wells-Fargo Express Company at 708-710 Main street where a modern moving picture show will open in six weeks under the management of Mr. Edward H. Phillips.

Gaining, N. Y.—Mr. Vastis Naplolotis, who contested a moving picture theater here for the past four years has sold out and will erect another in Greenwich, Conn.

Springfield, Ill.—A Jacksonville Theatrical Company is making arrangements to open a moving picture theatre in the Hirseimer store room, next west of the Brunswick Cigar Store.

Leighton, Penn.—Mr. J. A. Hofman has leased the Lyric Picture Theatre from Messrs. Swartz and Koch.

Brenham, Texas.—Mr. Clark, who has been running a moving picture show in the Graber building has moved into the Dwyer Block on Main street. Mr. H. C. Quentin will open a new show in the building formerly occupied by Mr. Clark.

Philadelphia, Penn.—Permits were issued to Mr. Samuel Schultz, contractor, to transform the building at 747 and 753 South 3rd street for Mr. B. Miller which will cost about $12,000.

Wheeling, W. Va.—The Nickelodeon established on Main street. Mr. H. C. Quentin will open a new show in the building formerly occupied by Mr. Clark.

Brattleboro, Vt.—Mr. August Gunzinger, sold the Eric Motion Picture Theater to Messrs. Arthur Wood and Frank Main.

Pittsfield, Mass.—Mr. George H. Bissell has been granted a license to operate a moving picture theater.

Utica, N. Y.—The Lyric Moving Picture Company has taken over the Lyric Theater in Catlettsburg and are having it remodeled and enlarged.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Plans have been arranged for the erection of a high class moving picture palace on Dekalb avenue, between Broadway and Bushwick avenues.

Jacksonville, Fla.—The handsome new Savoy Motion Picture Theater, which for some time has been under course of construction has at last been completed and opened its doors to the public last night, and was crowded from the time of the opening until it closed. This theater is located at the northeast corner of Main and Forsyth streets and is a large seating capacity. The Savoy Amusement Company are the proprietors.

Manchester N. H.—A new moving picture theater is opened in the Columbia Hall.

Chicago, Ill.—The Motorgraphic Supply Company, capital $25,000. Directors Louis A. Berger, Victor Thomas and Samuel Block.

St. Louis, Mo.—The Carraglen Amusement Co. capital $100,000. Directors James B. Carraglen, Thomas C. Montgomery, and John H. Boogher.

Wabash, Miss.—W. R. Chamberlain has decided to open a new moving picture theater here.

Batavia, Ohio.—Mr. G. Tallman has leased the Sunderland Theater here.

Clarksville, Mo.—Charles Fern is making arrangements to open a new moving picture theater here.

Salem, Ill.—C. Morrow has purchased the moving picture theater of J. H. Brinkerhoff.

Altoona, Pa.—Mr. J. C. Keith is making arrangements to start a new moving picture show here.

Elizabeth City, N. C.—H. T. Greenleaf, Jr., is considering the erection of a new moving picture theater here.

Hamilton, Ohio.—William Gordon is making arrangements to erect a $50,000 theater at the corner of Third and Broadway.

Sioux City, Iowa.—S. E. Dunn is preparing to open a new vaudeville and moving picture theater at 310 Jackson st.

Oakland, Cal.—The Idora Park Co., has secured a permit for the erection of a moving picture theater on Telegraph avenue.

Shanon, Pa.—Mr. Asa A. Weimer can give information regarding the establishment of a new moving picture theater here.

Baltimore, Md.—A. Lowther Forest, Hoffman Bldg., has plans under way for the erection of a new Hippodrome.

St. Louis, Mo.—The Middleton Theater Company will expend about $35,000 for improvements to their theater.

Fullerton, Cal.—Mrs. Browning is having plans and specifications drawn for the erection of a new moving picture theater here.

Pueblo, Col.—W. S. Hoel is making arrangements to open a new moving picture theater here.

Tschaysan, Iowa.—Mr. Beckwith has purchased the interest of his partner Mr. Cleveland in the moving picture theater business here and is now sole owner.

Cleveland, Ohio.—C. F. Schroeder is having plans drawn for the erection of a new theater to be located at 7709 Lake ave.

Milwaukee, Wis.—Architect P. M. Christianson is preparing plans for the erection of a new moving picture theater to be located at the corner Greenfield and Eleventh avenues.

Denver, Col.—The Iris Amusement Company has purchased the property at 1716 Curtis street, as a site for a new moving picture theater.

New York City.—The Old Clinton street Court House, between Grand and Broome streets, has been converted into a moving picture and vaudeville theater.

Dayton, Ohio.—Mr. Henry A. Limbert, is making arrangements for the erection of a new moving picture theater at the corner of Richard and Medlure streets.

Cedar Falls, Iowa.—The Majestic Theater here has been purchased by Mr. Charles O'Connel.

Iowa City, Iowa.—Mr. William Englist is planning the erection of a new moving picture theater here.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Mr. Louis Beckenbus has secured a permit for the erection of a new moving picture theater at 969 Bellevue street.

Norfolk, Va.—Mr Bonne is making arrangements to open a new moving theater on Main street.

Adrian, Mich.—Mr. H. D. Frost is making arrangements to open a new moving picture theater here.

Cincinnati, Ohio.—Mr Isaac Frankel has purchased the property at 139 West Sixth Street and will remodel it into a moving picture theater, which will be worth about $40,000.

Racine, Wis.—The Orpheum Theater, under the management of Edward Westlung has removed to its new quarters in a building on Geneva and Pine Streets.

Muscatine, Iowa.—Mr. W. H. Englert, lessee of the Hilton Theater, has taken under advisement a proposition to build a vaudeville theater here. The Hilton to be a moving picture house only.

Ornamental
Theatres
PLASTER RELIEF DECORATIONS
Theatres Designed Everywhere
Write for Illustrated Theatre Catalog. Send us Sizes of Theatre for Special Designs
The Decorators Supply Co.
2549 Archer Avenue :: CHICAGO, ILL.

Bellaire, W. Va.—A new moving picture theater is being planned for the Braubach & Wimmer Building on Union Street for M. Hall.

New York City.—Plans have been filed for the conversion of the building on 86th Street, near Third Avenue, into a $5,000 moving picture theater for W. Bonker Cockran.

Boston, Mass.—Three petitions for a license to operate a moving picture and vaudeville show in the chapel building formerly occupied by the West Somerville Congregational Church on Day Street have been refused by the Mayor of Somerville.

Burlington, Iowa.—Mr. George Hitch has purchased the Gem Theater here and is now doing an excellent business.

Ocean Grove, N. J.—Howard Stryker was fined $15 for running a moving picture theater at Asbury Highlands without a license.

Beverly, Mass.—Work has already commenced on the construction of the New Lyric Theater on Cabot Street on the Butterick House property. Owners, the Atlantic and Burnham Buildings, and in less than two months it is expected that the theater will be completed and ready to receive audiences.

San Jose, Cal.—J. C. Crume has recently purchased a half interest in the Crume theatre. This leaves Mr. Crume sole owner of it by the purchase of Mr. Thomas H. Bedford.

Lewiston, Pa.—The New moving picture theater owned by D. Ingold at the southwest corner of the public square has opened auspiciously.

New York City.—The Queens Theatre Company, capital $5,000, Directors Joseph Fredericks, Charles Fredericks and Henry W. Jones.

New York City.—Interborough Improvement Company, capital $5,000, Directors Joseph A. Stagnone, Charles Bruno and Thomas D. Mascali.

Philadelphia, Pa.—The Broad Street Theatre Company, capital $5,000, Directors J. Fred Zimmerman, Fred M. Nixon and Thomas Lyle.

Rochester, N. Y.—The Regent Theatre Company, capital $5,000, Directors William Barnard, James H. Wemmett and Herbert H. Reaves.

Milwaukee, Wis.—The Bijou Theatre Company, capital $5,000, Directors Walter C. Dalbolt, F. G. Asmus and H. M. Comstock.

Licensed Release Dates

BIOGRAPH.

Feb. 2—Three Sisters (Dr.) 997
Feb. 6—Heart Beats of Long Ago (Dr.) 997
Feb. 9—Priscilla's Engagement Kiss (Com.) 997
Feb. 13—What Shall We Do With Our Old? (Dr.) 994
Feb. 16—Fisher Folks (Dr.) 998
Feb. 20—The Diamond Star (Dr.) 998
Feb. 23—His Daughter (Dr.) 997

EDISON.

Jan. 31—The Try Out (Dr.) 995
Feb. 1—Bumptious (Com.) 995
Feb. 3—Selling Old Master (Dr.) 995
Feb. 7—The Doctor (Dr.) 1000
Feb. 8—Two Valentines (Com.) 1000
Feb. 10—His First Comission (Dr.) 990
Feb. 14—The Rajah (Dr.) 1000
Feb. 15—The Ransom of Red Chief (Dr.) 1000
Feb. 17—A Stage Romance (Dr.) 995
Feb. 21—The Rival Sculptors (Dr.) 990
Feb. 22—Mr. Bumptious, Detective (Com.) 990
Feb. 24—The Price of Victory (Dr.) 1000
Feb. 28—The Iron Master (Dr.) 1000

ESSANAY.

Feb. 4—Carmenita, The Faithful (Dr.) 995
Feb. 7—A Woman's Voice (Com.) 586
Feb. 11—Ten Words For Twenty-five Cents (Com.) 425
Feb. 11—The Bad Man's Downfall (Dr.) 1000
Feb. 14—Getting Sister Off (Com.) 1000
Feb. 18—Cattleman's Daughter (Dr.) 1000
Feb. 21—Their Wedding Gift (Com.) 580
Feb. 21—Just as the Clock Struck Nine (Com.) 412
Feb. 25—The Outlaw and the Child (W. Dr.) 1000

GAUMONT.

G. Kleine.

Feb. 18—Saul and David (Bib.) 128
Feb. 18—At the End of the Road (Dr.) 836
Feb. 21—The Plot That Failed (Dr.) 815
Feb. 21—Pictures In Chemistry (Sc.) 175
Feb. 25—Paganini and the Countess Beatrice (Dr.) 998
Feb. 28—Matrimonial Epidemic (Com.) 815
Feb. 28—Lafont and Polin' Last Flight (Sc.) 185
Mar. 4—The Tramp's Find (Dr.) 680
Mar. 4—Forbidden Cigarettes (Com.) 335

KALEM.

Jan. 25—The Secret of the Still (Dr.) 950
Jan. 27—Puritans and Indians (Dr.) 970
Feb. 1—The Sheriff's Sister (Dr.) 1000
Feb. 3—The Trail of the Pomas Charm (Dr.) 1005
Feb. 8—Little Sister (Dr.) 970
Feb. 10—The Broken Trail (Dr.) 1000
Feb. 15—Grandmother's War Story (Dr.) 975
Feb. 17—The Lost Children (Dr.) 1000
Feb. 22—The Open Road (Dr.) 995
Feb. 24—Priscilla and the Pequot (Dr.) 925

LUBIN.

Jan. 30—His Bogus Uncle (Com.) 1000
Feb. 2—Age vs. Youth (Dr.) 1000
Feb. 6—A Double Elopement (Dr.) 990
Feb. 9—The Petticoat Sheriff (Com.) 1000
Feb. 13—The Show-Girl's Stratagem (Dr.) 1000
Feb. 16—Getting Even (Com.) 600
Feb. 16—Schultz Has the Smallpox (Com.) 400
Feb. 20—The Test (Dr.) 1000
Feb. 23—Dobbs the Boarder 1000
Feb. 27—Man's Diplomacy 1000
Mar. 2—Woman's Curiosity 400
Mar. 2—Father's Birthday Ring 600

MELIES.

Jan. 19—Changing Cooks (Com.) 980
Jan. 28—How Mary Met the Compunchers (Dr.) 980
Feb. 2—Only a Sister (Dr.) 980
Feb. 9—Tony the Greaser (Dr.) 980
Feb. 16—Billy and His Pal (Dr.) 1000
Feb. 23—My Parisie Flower (W. Com.) 980

PATHE.

Feb. 15—A Western Courtship (Dr.) 715
Feb. 15—The Axolotl (Indus.) 266
Feb. 17—Whiffle's Dentist (Com.) 498
Feb. 17—A Boy's Wit (Dr.) 462
Feb. 18—Lieut. Scott's Narrow Escape (Dr.) 984
Feb. 20—A Soldier (Dr.) 761
Feb. 20—A Buffalo Hunt (Sc.) 236
Feb. 22—Hubby's Troubles (Com.) 672
Feb. 22—Indo-China—Province of Laos (Sc.) 321
Feb. 24—Who Killed Max (Com.) 680
Feb. 24—An Escape of Gas (Com.) 302
Feb. 25—The Changeling (Dr.) 1000

SELIG.

Feb. 2—The Curse of the Red Man (Dr.) ....
Feb. 6—Too Much Mother-In-Law (Com.) ....
Feb. 9—Thelma (Dr.) ....
Feb. 13—The Survival of the Fittest (Dr.) 1000
Feb. 16—The Buccaneers (Dr.) 1000
Feb. 20—The Padre (Dr.) ....
Feb. 23—The Seminole's Sacrifice (Dr.) ....
Feb. 27—The Eye of Conscience (Dr.) ....

URBAN-ECLIPSE.

(G. Kleine.)

Feb. 8—On the Border of the Forest (Dr.) 895
Feb. 8—Canadian Iron Center, Port Arthur, Ontario (Scenic) 110
Feb. 15—Catherine Howard (Dr.) 1065
Feb. 22—The Golden Sickle (Dr.) 892
Feb. 22—Feiling a Smokestack (Sc.) 113

VITAGRAPH.

Feb. 4—A Queen for a Day (Com.) ....
Feb. 7—The Deluge (Dr.) 978
Feb. 10—The League of Mercy (Dr.) ....
Feb. 11—At the White Man's Door (Dr.) ....
Feb. 14—Consuming Love (Dr.) ....
Feb. 17—When the Light Waned (Dr.) ....
Feb. 18—The New Stenographer (Com.) ....
Feb. 21—A Tale of Two Cities. (Part 1.) (Dr.) 1014
Feb. 24—A Tale of Two Cities. (Part 2.) (Dr.) 1013
Feb. 25—A Tale of Two Cities. (Part 3.) (Dr.) 994

A "W" before the words drama or a comedy specifies that it is a Western drama or a comedy.

THIS WEEK'S PROGRAM OF LICENSED FILMS.

Monday, February 20.

Biograph—The Diamond Star (Dr.) 998
Lubin—The Test (Dr.) 1000
Pathe—A Soldier (Dr.) 761
Pathe—A Buffalo Hunt (Sc.) 236
Selig—The Padre (Dr.) 1000

Tuesday, February 21.

Edison—The Rival Sculptors (Dr.) 990
Essanay—Their Wedding Gift (Com.) 580
Essanay—Just as the Clock Struck Nine (Com) 412
Gaumont—The Plot that Failed (Dr.) 815
Gaumont—Pictures in Chemistry (Sc.) 175
Vitagraph—A Tale of Two Cities. (Part 1). (Dr.) 1014

Wednesday, February 22.

Edison—Mr. Bumptious, Detective (Com.) 990
Kalem—The Open Road (Dr.) 995
Pathe—Hubby's Troubles (Com.) 672
Pathe—Indo-China—Province of Laos (Sc.) 321
Urban—The Golden Sickle (Dr.) 892
Urban—Feiling a Smokestack (Sc.) 113

Thursday, February 23.

Biograph—His Daughter (Dr.) 997
Lubin—Dobbs the Boarder (Com.) 1000
Melies—My Prairie Flower (W. Com.) 980
Selig—The Seminole's Sacrifice (Dr.) ....

Friday, February 24.

Edison—The Price of Victory (Dr.) 1000
Pathe—Who Killed Max (Com.) 680
Pathe—An Escape of Gas (Com.) 302
Kalem—Priscilla and the Pequot (Dr.) 925
Vitagraph—A Tale of Two Cities. (Part 2.) (Dr.) 1013

Saturday, February 25.

Essanay—The Outlaw and the Child (W. Dr.) ..1000
Gaumont—Paganini and the Countess Beatrice (Dr.) 998
Pathe—The Changeling (Dr.) 1000
Vitagraph—A Tale of Two Cities. (Part 3.) (Dr.) 994

Classified Advertisements

[Classified advertisements, three cents per word, cash with order; 50 cents minimum; postage stamps accepted.]

SITUATIONS WANTED.

SITUATION WANTED.—Singer of ability and experience, wants a position at once. Will make good and go anywhere. Best of reference. Address, R. P. FOURNIER, Dreamland Theater, Keene, N. H.

SITUATION WANTED.—At liberty, A-1 lady singer and piano player. Experienced. Best of references. Address, MISS BERTHA ROCKWELL, Box 1080, Watertown, Conn.

SITUATION WANTED.—Sign painter, used to moving picture advertising, wants position with a good moving picture house. Thoroughly experienced. Can make good flash. Has been in employ of one moving picture house for the last six years. Strictly sober and reliable. Address, S. P., care Moving Picture World.

THEATER FOR SALE.

FOR SALE.—Moving picture theater, the only picture house in a town of 5,000 population, seating capacity, 400. Good location, best reasons for selling. Address, S. A. M., care of Moving Picture World.

FOR SALE.—A profitable Moving Picture and Vaudeville Theater in Grand Forks, North Dakota. Reason for selling, death in family. Write for particulars. A UNIQUE THEATER BEAUTIFUL, Grand Forks, N. Dak.

FOR SALE—Moving picture theater in a Massachusetts town of 10,000 to 12,000. Best location in the town, on the main street and at an important transfer point. Seats 700, all on ground floor. T. & D. M., care Moving Picture World.

FOR SALE—One of the largest Moving Picture and Vaudeville Theaters in Washington, D. C. P. O. Box 279, Washington, D. C.

EQUIPMENT FOR SALE.

FOR SALE.—Bargain: new Edison moving picture outfit. HUTCHENS, Jeweler, Yadkinville, N. C.

FOR SALE.—Powers Rheostat, $5.00. Current Saver, $25.00; cost $50.00. Good film, $10.00 per reel. Would buy a picture house where there is no opposition. Address, CHAS. RAY, Greenport, N. Y.

FOR SALE—I will sell my new Edison Exhibition Style Machine complete for $100.00. Never been used. T. Mitchell, 4024 Lexington Street, Chicago, Ill.

FOR SALE.—Electric sign, lettered on both sides. 5c Vaudette 5c continuous show. For dimensions and price, address, H. F. FOWSER, Vaudette Theater, Lansing, Mich.

FOR SALE.—Powers' and American machine. Machine parts. Repairing. Supplies. The "B" Co., 209 Broadway, Albany, N. Y.

MISCELLANEOUS.

WANTED.—To buy, Pathe Passion Play; Selig or Nestor reel "On the Little Big Horn"; Selig reel "Hunting Big Game in Africa," and "James Boys in Missouri." Will buy other feature western pictures. Address, X. care of Moving Picture World.

WANTED.—Moving Picture Show in town of 4,000 or more, must be good. State all in first letter. H. CLOW, Potsdam, N. Y.

PROPERTY OWNER in desirable Bronx location has fair proposition for experienced moving picture man with some cash. Address, T. C. J., care of Moving Picture World.

HAND COLORED SLIDES made from any clipping, photo negative. Finest work guaranteed. fifty cents, excellent for vaudeville artists. any lettering included. Photo Specialty Co., Keeseville, N. Y.

ADVERTISING SLIDES AS A SOURCE OF REVENUE
We are placing slides for large National Advertisers and would like to add your house to our list.
INDEPENDENT ADVERTISING COMPANY, Inc.
141 West 45th Street, New York

Have You Tried the Acme?
IT'S the only place in New York where you get a square deal and get what you pay for.
We can furnish any class of service you desire and ship anywhere
Send for prices.
ACME FILM CO., Inc.
12 East 15th Street New York

Experienced PROFESSIONAL TALENT for Moving Pictures
Best Singers, Pianists, Trap Drummers, etc.
Let us book your house for the season.
The agency with the system.
AMERICAN THEATRICAL SINGERS AGENCY
59 Dearborn Street Chicago, Ill.
BILLIARD CAMPBELL, Mgr.
E. B. BIGELOW, Special Agent.

IT DRAWS THE CROWD
Music Is What You Want
See this midget, yet powerful folding organ, adaptable to any occasion, sweet, rich and full tone. Built strong and durable. It is a big helper.
Send for full description.
BILHORN BROS.
152 Lake St., Chicago, Ill.

Want to save MONEY?
Send for Cut Rate list of Supplies and Parts
National M. P. Supply Co.
199 3rd Ave., N. Y.

NEW FIELD BIG MONEY EASY WORK
Why don't you think up plots for Motion Picture plays? It's easy, pays up to $50 a week for good work. Men and women. We teach you and help sell plots. Demand unlimited. Send for particulars.
ASS'D M. P. SCHOOLS
908 Chicago Opera House Bldg. CHICAGO

For Sale, Cheap
Two complete No. 5 Power's Machines in A-1 condition
CARR & SCHAD
READING, PA.

Great Reduction
Motion Picture Machines $35 up.
Accessories, Supplies etc.
Parlor Passion Play the new Low price
Send for Supplement 33 containing many Bargains
Harbach & Co. 809 Filbert St., Phila. Pa.

Incandescent Lamps
For Theatres, Parks and Shows
Clear, 6 Cents Colored, 7 Cents
SAFETY ELECTRIC CO.
15 Michigan Ave., Chicago, Ill.

Film Titles, 3 feet, 25 cents
Announcements, 10c. per foot
GUNBY BROS.
199 Third Ave. New York

Sound Effects
In Picture Machine Theaters it is very essential that the imitations and sound effects are of the kind that can be depended upon. We make only practical and serviceable imitations that will give the exact reproduction of the original. We also manufacture Chimes, Tympani, Bells, Xylophones, Drums and accessories
LEEDY MANUFACTURING COMPANY
1055 E. Palmer St., INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

Opera Chairs
The Strongest Made
Most Attractive Designs
PERMANENTLY NOISELESS
Moreover our chair used 3 to 1 of all others combined
There Are Reasons
Large stocks constantly on hand, and we can make prompt shipments of rush orders
Write for Catalog V
American Seating Company
215 Wabash Avenue CHICAGO 19 West 18th Street NEW YORK
BOSTON PHILADELPHIA PITTSBURGH

UNIFORMS
FOR
USHERS, DOORMEN, &c.
We are originators of style and design
Catalogue "M" is ready
The Big House With Little Prices
RUSSELL UNIFORM COMPANY
128 W. 36th Street
NEW YORK
Five doors west of Broadway

Independent Release Dates

AMERICAN.

Feb. 9—On the Installment Plan (Com.).....500
Feb. 9—Too Much Aunt (Com.).....430
Feb. 13—A Quiet Evening at Home (Com.)....1000
Feb. 16—In the Land of Cactus (Dr.).....1000
Feb. 20—The College Sweethirtift (Dr.).....900
Feb. 23—Strategy (Dr.).....980
Feb. 27—The Sheriff's Sweetheart (W. Dr.)...880
Feb. 27—The Silence System (Com.).....200
Mar. 2—College Chums (Dr.).....975
Mar. 6—Hypnotizing a Hypnotist (Com.).....615
Mar. 6—Memories (Dr.).....375
Mar. 9—The Rich and the Poor (Dr.).....1000

ATLAS.

Jan. 25—Irish Hearts (Dr.).....
Feb. 1—His Great Sacrifice (Dr.).....
Feb. 8—Kelly, U. S. A. (Dr.).....
Feb. 15—Coals of Fire.....

CHAMPION.

Feb. 1—Judged by Higher Power (Dr.).....
Feb. 8—At Double Trouble Ranch (Dr.).....950
Feb. 15—Her Three Proposals (Com.).....960
Feb. 22—The Old Man and Jim (Dr.).....950
Mar. 1—A Western Girl's Choice (Dr.).....950

COLUMBIA.

Dec. 24—The Cattlemen's Feud (Dr.).....
Dec. 31—Trapped (Dr.).....
Jan. 7—Queen of the Prairies (Dr.).....

ECLAIR.

Feb. 13—Mr. Faddleaway in on Strike (Com.)..522
Feb. 13—The Elixir of Bravery 424
Feb. 20—The Heart of a Warrior (Dr.).....683
Feb. 20—Hospital for Small Animals (Spec.)....286
Feb. 27—"Punch" (Dr.).....595
Feb. 27—Beware of the Bomb (Com.).....370
Mar. 6—King Phillip The Fair and the Templars (Dr.).....975

GREAT NORTHERN.

Feb. 4—The Criminal Chief's Capture.....
Feb. 11—Found Again (Dr.).....
Feb. 18—The Life of a Muscbik.....
Feb. 18—The False Alarm.....286
Feb. 25—His Great Duty (Dr.).....

IMP.

Feb. 9—The Mirror (Com.).....500
Feb. 9—When the Cat's Away (Com.).....500
Feb. 13—Her Darkest Hour (Dr.).....1000
Feb. 16—The Convert (Dr.).....1000
Feb. 16—Pictureland 1000
Feb. 23—Artful Kate (Dr.).....1000
Feb. 27—A Manly Man (Dr.).....1000
Mar. 2—Army Manoeuvres in Cuba (Edc.)....500
Mar. 2—The Dynamiters (Com.).....500

LUX.

Feb. 3—Back to the Old Homestead (Dr.).....944
Feb. 10—The Orphan's Friend (Dr.).....711
Feb. 10—That Horse Did Run (Com.).....272
Feb. 17—Bronco Bill, the Brave Cowboy (Dr.)..639
Feb. 17—Matilda Lovestruck (Com.).....272
Feb. 24—A Child's Prayer (Dr.).....534
Feb. 24—Matilda Chased (Com.).....854

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO.
(Bison.)

Feb. 7—The Half Breed's Plan.....
Feb. 10—The Salted Mine (Dr.).....
Feb. 14—A Deputy's Honor.....
Feb. 17—A Warrior's Squaw (Dr.).....
Feb. 21—The War of a Red Man (Dr.).....
Feb. 24—Fate of Joe Dorr (Dr.).....

ITALA.
(By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

Feb. 9—John Milton (Dr.).....
Feb. 11—Foolshead at the Kinematograph.....
Feb. 16—Fatal Charm.....
Feb. 18—Who Will Eat the Turkey?.....
Feb. 23—Little Souls.....770
Feb. 25—Foolshead Present .....
Feb. 29—Havana Cigar .....

AMBROSIO.
(By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

Feb. 1—Tweedledum Tries Winter Sports.....500
Feb. 1—The Return from Sea Side Bathing.....500
Feb. 8—The Savoy Cavalry.....500
Feb. 8—Tweedledum as a Detective.....500
Feb. 15—The Demon .....
(By N. Y. M. P. Co.)
Feb. 22—Redeeming Angel .....

NESTOR.

Jan. 25—The Man in 23 (Com.).....980
Feb. 1—The Bridal Trail (Dr.).....1000
Feb. 8—The Transgressor (Dr.).....1000
Feb. 15—The Light Beyond (Dr.).....1000
Feb. 22.—His Father's House (Dr.).....998
Mar. 1—The Professor's Romance (Com-Dr.)..990

POWERS PICTURE PLAYS.

Feb. 11—A Trip Through Mexico (Scenic)....
Feb. 14—An Unforeseen Complication (Com.)..
Feb. 18—Heavenly Southern Skies (Dr.).....
Feb. 21—What Would You Do (Com.).....
Feb. 25—Across the Mexican Border (Dr.)....
Feb. 28—The Call of the Heart (Dr.).....950
Mar. 4—Home Sweet Home (Dr.).....950

RELIANCE.

Feb. 1—A Brass Button.....900
Feb. 4—The Command From Galilee.....900
Feb. 8—The School Ma'am's Courage.....900
Feb. 11—The Little Avenger.....
Feb. 15—Three Men (Dr.).....
Feb. 18—Sonle Courageous.....
Feb. 22—A Plain Tale .....
Feb. 25—Ever The Accuser .....

REVIER.

Jan. 4—For Better Or Worse (Dr.).....
Jan. 11—The Goosecreek Claim (Dr.).....
Jan. 18—For the Child's Sake (Dr.).....500
Jan. 18—You Try It (Com.).....500

REX.

Feb. 16—A Heroine of '76 (Dr.).....910
Feb. 23—The Story of a Prayer Rug (Dr.).....

SOLAX COMPANY.

Feb. 3—Ring of Love (Com.).....
Feb. 10—Mixed Pets (Com.).....
Feb. 17—Corinne in Dollyland (Com.).....
Feb. 24—Love's Test (Dr.).....
Mar. 3—A Costly Pledge (Com.).....
Mar. 8—Out of the Arctic (Dr.).....

THANHOUSER.

Feb. 10—The Necklace (Dr.).....
Feb. 14—For Her Sake (Dr.).....
Feb. 17—Checkmate (Dr.).....
Feb. 21—For Washington (Dr.).....1000
Feb. 24—A Newsboy Hero (Dr.).....1000
Feb. 28—The Little Mother (Dr.).....
Mar. 3—Stage struck (Dr.).....

YANKEE.

Feb. 10—Was She Justified (Dr.).....
Feb. 13—Condemned to Death (Dr.).....
Feb. 17—Her Birthday Surprise (Com.).....
Feb. 20—A Life-Time Penance (Dr.).....
Feb. 24—The Woman Who Dared (Dr.).....
Feb. 27—All for Gold (Dr.).....
Mar. 3—The Abduction of Parson Jones (Com.)

A "W" before the words drama and comedy specifies that it is a Western drama or a comedy.

THIS WEEK'S PROGRAMME OF INDEPENDENT FILMS.

Monday, February 20.

American—The College Spendthrift (Dr.).....990
Eclair—The Heart of a Warrior (Dr.).....683
Eclair—Hospital for Small Animals (Spec.)...286
Imp—Pictureland 1000
Yankee—A Lifetime Penance (Dr.).....

Tuesday, February 21.

Bison—The Way of a Red Man (Dr.).....
Powers—What Would You Do? (Com.).....
Thanhouser—For Washington (Dr.) 1000

Wednesday, February 22.

Ambrosio—Redeeming Angel .....
Champion—The Old Man and Jim (Dr.).....950
Nestor—His Father's House (Dr.).....998
Reliance—A Plain Tale .....

Thursday, February 23.

American—Strategy (Dr.).....980
Imp—Artful Kate (Dr.) 1000
Itala—Little Souls 770
Rex—The Story of a Prayer Rug (Dr.).....

Friday, February 24.

Bison—Fate of Joe Dorr (Dr.).....
Lux—A Child's Prayer (Dr.).....534
Lux—Matilda Chased (Com.).....354
Solax—Love's Test (Dr.) .....
Thanhouser—A Newsboy Hero (Dr.).....1000
Yankee—The Woman Who Dared (Dr.).....

Saturday, February 25.

Great Northern—His Great Duty (Dr.).....
Itala—Foolshead Present .....
Itala—Havana Cigar .....
Powers—Across The Mexican Border (Dr.).....
Reliance—Ever The Accuser.....

FOR SALE 1,000 ft. reels of film, 90c. to 25c. ft. Moving picture theatres cheap; will buy same. Edison, Power's, Lubin new machines $100; used Motiograph, $200; Model B, gas outfits, $25; $65 electric reducers, $30; song sets, $1. Will trade new machines for old ones; will buy films, machines, Passion Play.
H. DAVIS, Watertown, Wis.

FOR SALE, CHEAP
A good combination Picture and Vaudeville Show in a booming Oklahoma city of 12,000 people. Seats 300 people; steam heat, inclined floor, good stage and scenery. Well decorated and handsomely lighted. New Power's five and a Mercury Arc Rectifier; also a handsome lobby. Well located on the main business street. Everything new.
Address 523 Washington Avenue CHICKASHA, OKLA.

MR. M. P. MAN:
EVERY DAY A BIG DAY
When you adopt the "Big Four" Receipt Plan. Hundreds of shows in all parts of the country are now using it. MAKING GOOD with everybody. NOT a costly gift or bungling contest scheme, but a LIVE, unique Ticket Manipulating Plan that will STIR THEM UP and keep them interested in YOUR Show. Let us tell you about the "Big Four" Crowd-Getter. Get "Busy-Ness." Write now. Address Dept. M-5.
Business Manufacturing Co.
FORT WAYNE, IND.

If you are in the Market for
SECOND HAND FILMS
Write to the largest and most reliable Dealers and Importers of these goods in the U. S.
International Film Traders
German Savings Bank Building
147 Fourth Avenue. NEW YORK CITY

EAGLE FILM EXCHANGE
WE BUY the entire output of the Independent manufacturers. Ask about our Three-locked reel system.
Posters free. Prompt service. Day and night service Write, wire or phone
143 NORTH EIGHTH STREET, PHILADELPHIA, PA

G. W. BRADENBURGH

CINEMATOGRAPH FILMS

233 North 8th Street ::: Philadelphia, Pa.

PHONE, MARKET 334

Cable:—Brad-Films Phila., Code:—A. B. C. 5th Edition

Bargain List A-1 Condition

Kean or the Prince and the Actor. (G. Northern) $35.
A Child's Judgment. (Imp.) $35.
Cheyenne's Love for Sioux. (Bison) $35.
Gounad's Ave Maria. (Ambrosio) $35.
The Woman Hater. (Powers) $35.
So Runs the Way. (Reliance) $35.
The Wild Flower and the Rose. (Thanhouser) $35.
The Revolving Door. (Imp.) $35.
A Windy Day—A Chosen Marksman. (Italia) $35.
Aspirations of Gerald & Percy. (Imp.) $35.
The Poor Student. (Imp.) $35.
Regeneration. (American) $35.
A Brave Western Girl. (Bison) $35.
The Big Drum—The Dog Keeper. (Italia) $35.
The Woodsman. (Nestor) $35.
A Plucky Western Kid. (Powers) $35.
Value Beyond Price. (Thanhouser) $35.
John Halifax. (Thanhouser) $35.
Rip Van Winkle. (Thanhouser) $35.
The Girl He Left Behind Him—The Iron-Clad Lover. (Thanhouser) $35.
In the Czar's Name. (Yankee) $35.
Western Justice. (Yankee) $35.
A Fight for Millions. (Yankee) $35.
All the above reels posters FREE.

Nero, The Burning of Rome. (Ambrosio) $20.
The Gamin—Sorry, Can't Stop. (Eclair) $20.
Son of the Wilderness. (Ambrosio) $20.
The Last of the Stuarts. (Cines) $20.
The Farmer's Son. (Italia) $20.
Delights of the Shoot. (Italia) $20.
The Time Lock Safe. (Imp.) $20.
Generosity of an Indian Chief—Colonel's Boot. (Eclair) $20.
Father's Baby Boy—Butcher's Bill. (Hepworth) $20.
Fighting Parson. (Nestor) $20.
Necklace of the Holy Virgin—A Beggar's Ride. (Eclair) $20.
A Daughter's Devotion. (Cines) $20.
Good for Evil. (Eclair) $20.
The White Jar. (Italia) $20.
The Convicting Shawl. (Duske) $20.
White Princess of the Tribe. (Champion) $20.
Legally Dead. (Powers) $20.
After the Fall of the Eagle—Theater of Phenomenos. $20.
From Kidnapper to Rescuer. (Eclair) $20.
Who Owns the Coat—Massinelle Loves the Ball. (Italia) $20.
The Bubble. (Italia) $20.
Lieutenant Rose. (Clarendon) $20.
Heir of Chavers Court Castle. (Eclair) $20.
A Game for Two. (Imp.) $20.
His Second Wife. (Imp.) $20.
Count of Monte Cristo. (Ambrosio) $20.
The Black Hand. (Pathe) $20.
Man in the Iron Mask. (Cines) $20.
Catherine, Duchess of Guina. (Italia) $20.
After Storm Comes Sunshine. (Hepworth) $20.
A Rural Romeo. (Imp.) $20.
The Governor's Daughter. (Thanhouser) $20.
The Little Hero of Holland. (Thanhouser) $20.
Boys' Half Holiday—Foolshead as Hero. (Italia) $20.

Films at Ten Dollars per Reel. (NO POSTERS.)

Love Wins at Last—The Would-Be Champion.
Child Benefactor.
Fight for Honor—Chase for a Bike.
Sheep with Six Feet.
Naval Gymnasium—Foolshead is Curious.
His Last Deserts—Warrior Bold.
Secret Service Woman.
A Telepathic Warning.
Chimney Sweeps Dream—Interrupted Rendevous.
New Sign of Globe Hotel—In Peru.
Manon Lescaut—How the Page Boy Cured the Flirt.
A Close Call.
Tyrant's Dream—An Enterprising Florist.
Beautiful Barcelona—New Burglar Alarm.
Spike's Last Battle.
Tempered With Mercy—In Love With a Picture Girl.
Cowboy and the Lieutenant.

Titles made on Eastman material, 9c. per foot. Any films not listed please make inquiries for, as the above is only a small part of our stock. All films are inspected by us before released, no scratched or worn out films offered. All films sent C. O. D., with privilege of examination on receipt of express charges. Agents wanted for

MR. OPERATOR

You Want to Make Some Extra Money

SO DO I

Write Me for Particulars at Once

Give me your exact voltage, cycles, make of machine, length of throw, size of picture and make of carbons. If you have a current saver, state make. I will do the rest. Address Department W.

J. H. HALLBERG
36 East 23d Street New York City

For Rent

1000 Reels of Film

$1.00 per day Each

WRITE IMMEDIATELY

Alamo Film Exchange

Maison Blanche Building, Canal and Dauphine Streets New Orleans, La.

You pay express charges both ways.

LIGHT EFFECTS

Everything Electrical for Theatres, Parks, Productions and Vaudeville Acts.

UNIVERSAL ELECTRIC STAGE LIGHTING CO.

Kliegl Bros.

1393-5 Broadway, New York City

Moving Picture Supplies

We are the largest dealers in Moving Picture Supplies and Machine Parts in the United States. We are also the largest jobbers of "Bio" and "Electra Pink Label" Carbons, and always carry a large stock for immediate delivery.

WRITE FOR LIST

American Moving Picture Supply Co.

110 Fourth Ave. New York City

CROWD YOUR HOUSE

GET BUSY

PICTURES OF FAMOUS

Schenk Trial

Be a Live Wire

GET THE MONEY

BEST EVER

Twenty-five Dollars Rental for Three Days.

Ten Dollars refunded on return of Pictures.

Lithographs, Posters, Banners, Announcement Slides and other Advertising matter.

Our Corps of Artists and Photographers, right on the ground, secured all interesting features of the trial.

This will not conflict with your present service, approved by all.

Immediate shipment on receipt of money order.

Pittsburg Film Exchange

America's Largest Film Renters

332 Third Ave., Pittsburg, Pa.

The Chautauqua Film Exchange

Get Ready to Use the BEST Service.
Releases Begin Soon

Write to-day for our list and terms

356 Dearborn Street - CHICAGO, ILL.

THE PHILADELPHIA FILM EXCHANGE, 934 Arch St., Philadelphia
The Largest Independent Exchange in the East. The house where you can get quality and a square deal. We buy the entire output of the Sales Company. A trial will convince you. Open day and night. Call, write or phone.
Baltimore Office 610 East Baltimore Street Baltimore, Md.

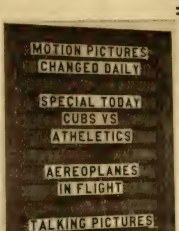
GUNDLACH
Projection Lenses
Will Improve Your Picture
make it sharper and increase the illumination
TO ORDER, give the height and width of the screen, width of picture wanted and distance from lens to center of screen. State make of machine.

A complete stock is carried by
NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY, New York
ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MFG. CO., Chicago
Every lens is sold subject to approval
Gundlach-Manhattan Optical Company
808 Clinton Ave., So. Rochester, N. Y.

SONG SLIDES
Non-Breakable—Non-Inflammable
Colored Song and Announcement Slides
Patent Applied For
Just the kind of a slide you have all been waiting for. Guaranteed against breaking from heat or the careless operator. Send for list. Made and sold only by the original inventors. None others genuine.
NORTH AMERICAN SLIDE CO., 143 North 8th Street PHILADELPHIA, PA.
SONG SLIDES

Annual Subscription to Moving Picture World $2.00 in U. S., Canada $2.50; Foreign Countries 3.00.

OPERATORS WANTED
Refer to back issues of M. P. World.
Improve your pictures.
Improved star, cam, arbor and sprocket, $12.00 (Powers, Edison, Motiograph, Lubin)
Above outfit will make any two-pin movement as good as one pin. Write to-day.
E. W. LAVEZZI, - - 3042 N. Ashland Ave. Chicago



SAVE MONEY
and use our Program Board
with Interchangeable Porcelain Letters
Make your own Program
You cannot afford to be without one.
Announcements quickly changed.
Prices and full particulars on application.
Agents Wanted.
THE CAMBRIDGE TILE MFG. CO.
COVINGTON, KY.

MOVING PICTURE EXHIBITORS
Do you buy your supplies where you can save the most money?
Through our system of buying and selling we can save you at least 40 per cent.
Is your name on our ledgers? If not, why not?
Reel Carrying Cases. Heavy metal, prettily oxidized with leather handle and straps. 3 reels, 1 reels, 4 reels, $1.35, $1.75, $2.50 each respectively.
Spot Lights. We guarantee this article to be second to none. Suits all focuses. Price complete, $34.00. Color Wheel to suit, $4.00.
Imported Condensors. Pure crystal white, 6¾ in. and 7¾ in. focus.
Lamps. A. No. 1. 60 cds. dozen. Magazine Rollers, etc.
Descriptive circulars sent upon receipt of your name and address.
ROYAL MOVING PICTURE SUPPLY CO. 1346 Moore St. Philadelphia

HENRY BELMAR
Dramatic Director
POWERS PICTURE PLAYS
Author and Producer of the following Photoplays:

The Cattle King of Arizona	The Call of the Heart
The Angel of His Dreams	A Gamble with Love
Beneath Southern Skies	Come Back to Erin

Can use short cast scenarios of every description.
HENRY BELMAR, 2779 Webster Ave., New York City

YANKEE FILMS
MONDAY, FEBRUARY 27,
"All for Gold"
A Western Drama
FRIDAY, MARCH 3,
The first of the World-Tour Series
"The Abduction of Parson Jones"
A Comedy on Land and Sea
YANKEE FILM CO.
344 East 32d St. New York City

THE ONE BEST SOUVENIR
S. R. O. EVERY NIGHT
5c. EACH
$5.00 Per Hundred

This beautiful Souvenir Spoon is guaranteed Solid Silver Plated French Gray Finish and the latest design Write today for sample and 3 plans that will fill your house to capacity.
UNITED STATES FACTORIES CO. MANUFACTURERS 40 Dearborn Street, Chicago

Corcoran Moving Picture Tanks

Develop your films to perfection. Save Time and Reduce Your Expenses by using a "Corcoran Film Development Tank." All up-to-date houses are now installing the "Corcoran System."

SEND FOR PRICE LIST No. 4.

A. J. CORCORAN, Inc.
No. 15 John Street - - - N. Y. City

Imitators will always trade on the reputation of the best

"AGFA METOL"

has many imitations, but none near enough to warrant your discarding "AGFA." Quality uniform and of a guaranteed chemical purity.

ASK

BERLIN ANILINE WORKS, 213-215 Water Street New York

LOUISE M. MARION'S
Great Novelty of
ILLUSTRATED POEMS
Patriotic and otherwise
Also her attractive comedy play

MONEY! MONEY!! MONEY!!! is a great drawing card for
THEATERS, CLUBS, ETC.
Terms reasonable
Operator furnished when desired
Attractive painted posters and slides made from life models supplied free of charge

LOUISE M. MARION
321 West 23d St. New York City

GENRE MOTION SLIDES

The Technical World and Popular Mechanics have seen fit to go thoroughly into details of the Genre Motion Slide and in the coming issues will be found unpaid, unbiased and explicit details of the most wonderful slide ever made. The aforesaid magazines appreciate the invention, consequently they do not want anything in return for their efforts to acquaint the public with the latest great discovery.

GENRE TRANSPARENCY CO.
507 North Clark Street Chicago, Ill.
Sole Manufacturers for the U. S.

THE "STANDARD"

The Machine That Gives Results

FULLY GUARANTEED

Another big advantage is our lamp and lamp-house. The former has more adjustments than any other on the market, insuring a perfect light at all times. The latter is larger, roomier, and, with a door on either side, top and back, more accessible. Condensers can be removed and replaced in one minute.

AMERICAN MOVING PICTURE MACHINE COMPANY
101 BEEKMAN STREET - - - - - NEW YORK

Model 1911 Lense Lamp

IT CAN NEVER BIND

For spot or Flood instantly

THE GLOBE ELECTRIC SPECIALTY COMPANY
363 West 42nd Street, New York City
Everything Electrical for the Theatre

H. F. HOFFMAN

Lecturer of Special Releases
New York City and Vicinity

Care Moving Picture World
Telephone 1344 Gramercy

Lecturing Buffalo Jones Pictures Now

READY FOR DELIVERY

Moving Picture World
BOUND VOLUME, No. 7.

July to December, 1910

TWO DOLLARS EACH, $2.00
Express charges collect

COMPENSARC

This Machine cuts 2/3 from your Light Bills

Mr. Manager

If you are on a 110 or 220 volt circuit and you are using a rheostat to reduce the voltage to 35 at the arc in your lamp, you are paying for 2/3 more "juice" than you are actually using. Can you afford to waste all this energy supplied from the line, over and above what you really need?

The Fort Wayne Compensarc saves all this waste by reducing the voltage without losing any: makes a clearer, whiter, steadier light, and eliminates all danger of fires caused by overheated rheostats.

We have a little 22 page booklet "Compensarc vs. Rheostat" that we want to send you. It will tell you plainly how you can make a big saving and a better light. Send us your name and address.

FORT WAYNE ELECTRIC WORKS
1402 Broadway
Fort Wayne, Indiana

Send TODAY for our FREE descriptive booklet

IN CORRESPONDING WITH ADVERTISERS, KINDLY MENTION MOVING PICTURE WORLD

MOVING PICTURE MACHINES

Stereopticons, Slides, Accessories

CHAS. M. STEBBINS
1028 Main St.
KANSAS CITY, MO.
Large Line of Edison Goods
Established 1899

"SILVERLIGHT"

Aluminum Motion Picture Curtain

Extraordinary Features Are: Permanent Brilliancy, Economy, Flexibility
Non-cracking, Safety, Strength. Send for circular
Ralph J. Golsen Supply Co. 84 Wabash Ave., Chicago

St. Patrick's Day SOUVENIRS

No. 1. Metal Shamrock, long pin	$ .75
No. 2. Silk Spun Shamrock, Fancy Gilt Harp	1.50
No. 3. Silk Bow Shamrock, Gilt Harp Pin, fancy	2.00
No. 4. Satin Ribbon Rosettes, 2 Colored Buttons	5.00
No. 5. Shamrock, Red Rose Center and Pin	1.15
No. 7. Large Fancy Silk Bow and Horseshoe Pin	2.00
No. 11. Cupid Harp Bow, Shamrock Spun Silk	2.00
Celluloid Button & Green Hat Any One Seen	.25
No. 21. Buttons and Streamers	2.00
Buttonhole Irish Flags, gross lots only	1.25

Large Catalogue FREE. Sample line $1.00.
No goods C. O. D. Money order must be in full.

NEWMAN MFG. CO., Cleveland, Ohio

DON'T BLAME YOUR SINGER

How can you expect them to do a song justice, when it arrives each evening from your film exchange, just in time for your opening programme? We will ship an entire week's supply in one consignment, thus enabling your singer to rehearse each song thoroughly. Time lost in transit not charged for. Rate, 25c. per set.

CHICAGO SONG SLIDE EXCHANGE
Sixth Floor, Portland Block
107 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.
Dept. 1

WHY SEND TO EUROPE FOR
FILM PERFORATING DIES

When we can make them for you?
High-class repairing and alterations on Foreign Machines.

THE A. DEWES COMPANY
249 Centre Street, NEW YORK
Phone, 2351 Spring

READY FOR DELIVERY—Moving Picture World
BOUND VOLUME No. 7
July to December, 1910
TWO DOLLARS, EACH, $2.00 Express charges collect

H. F. HOFFMAN
Lecturer of Special Releases
New York City and Vicinity
Care MOVING PICTURE WORLD
Telephone 2344 Gramercy

¶ Put in our Easels and Poster Frames and watch your attendance grow.

¶ We make mechanical attractions, Electric signs, or anything special in the theatrical line. ¶ Ideas developed—Low Prices — Best Work — DON'T DELAY but write to-day.

THE NEWMAN MFG. CO.
717-719 Sycamore St., Cincinnati, O.

The J. C. Coghlan Company
41 Union Square West NEW YORK CITY
Broadway and 17th St.

Second-hand Independent Films, all makes, 60 and 90 days old

The largest dealers in new and second-hand Association and Independent Films in the United States.

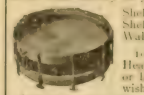
SECOND-HAND FILM
$5.00 per reel upwards
NEW FILM
CAMERAPHONE FILM
new, with two sets records

All goods shipped subject to examination and partial acceptance on receipt of deposit covering express charges.

Complete lists sent free upon request

NEW ENGLAND EXHIBITORS
Can furnish you high-grade service. Best film on the best terms and conditions.
Prompt operating Guaranteed.
THE PARK FILM COMPANY
1188 Main Street, Bridgeport, Conn.
W. M. Lovelton Prop.

Drummers
This high grade Orchestra Drum direct from factory to you for $10.00



Shell 9x14 Solid Maple
Shell 9x15 Rosewood or Walnut
10 Rods Kangaroo Heads Send U. S. Money or Express order. If you wish C.O.D. send sufficient to guarantee Express charges.
E. P. ZEIDLER DRUM CO. 1040 E. CLEVELAND OHIO

THE ENTERPRISE MODEL B
Portable Calcium Gas Outfit
is the only Substitute for Electricity for projecting Motion Picture or Stereopticon Views and is the Only Satisfactory Portable Outfit
because it operates by WATER PRESSURE, IS CONSTANT, REGULAR AND RELIABLE and has no complicated spring valves to corrode, choke up and otherwise get out of order. Is patented.
"OXONE" in SQUARE CAKES is most Satisfactory for the production of Oxygen Gas. Send for particulars.
For Sale by Dealers.
MANUFACTURERS AND SALES AGENTS
Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co. 564 and 572 W. Randolph Street, CHICAGO

Annual Subscription Moving Picture World $2.00

SPECIAL ROLL TICKETS
The Big Ticket. Any Printing Any Colors

5,000	$1.25	20,000	$4.60	80,000	$7.80
10,000	$2.60	25,000	$5.80	100,000	$10.90

Get the Samples Stock Tickets, 6 Cents
NATIONAL TICKET COMPANY - - - Shamokin, Pa.

FOLDING CHAIRS

For Moving Picture Shows, Grand Stands, Assembly Halls, etc. In sections if wanted.

Write for Catalog No. 2

The Kauffman Manufacturing Co.
ASHLAND, OHIO

OPERA CHAIRS

FOR EVERY PURPOSE
1,000 STYLES

ESTABLISHED 1865
WRITE FOR CAT. No. 31

The A. H. Andrews Co.
174-176 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.
Branches in all leading cities

CHEAP

STEEL FRAME
THEATRE CHAIRS
ABSOLUTELY
NON-BREAKABLE

Suitable for small Theatres and Moving Picture Shows. We carry these chairs in stock and can ship immediately.

Second Hand Chairs
Also seating for Out-of-door use.

Address
Dept. W.

STEEL FURNITURE CO., GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.
New York Office: 180 Fifth Avenue
Boston Office: 224 Congress Street, Boston, Mass.

The Automatic Theatre Chair

It is a friend to the public.
It advertises your theatre and makes your business grow.
It folds automatically and can be revolving, stationary or self righting.
It is the only sanitary chair.
It is a space-saver, life-saver and money-saver.
It is the world's greatest theatre Chair.
If you have not seen our latest models, investigate.
Write today for circular A.

THE HARDESTY MFG. CO
Canal Dover, Ohio, U. S. A.

FILMS FOR SALE. 50 Reels of Films
$8 to $16 per Reel
Second-hand one pin Edison machine, $100.00
Mayer Silverman, 105 4th Ave., Pittsburg, Pa.

Opera and Assembly Chairs

Most popular-priced chairs on the market for picture show use.
Prompt Shipments. Write for Catalogue
PEABODY SCHOOL FURNITURE CO.
North Manchester - - Indiana
New York Agents: ROBERT J. EHLERS CO.
Lexington Ave. and 43d St. - New York, N. Y.

The Independent Film Exchange
of Pittsburg, Pa.

The Pioneer Independent Exchange of Western Pennsylvania buying the output of the Sales Company.

We have a few choice runs that we can let out at reasonable prices. Write us.

INDEPENDENT FILM EXCHANGE, Inc.
A. S. DAVIS, Manager
415 Ferry Street, PITTSBURG, PA.

WE WANT

ONE THOUSAND

Moving Picture Men

to operate PREMIUM pin machines and get rich, or if already so, to get more wealth. Why not you? PREMIUM pin machines have become an institution in every candy store. By placing a machine in your retailer's store you will monopolize his trade and squeeze out competition.

Mr. Flint of Mo. writes: "Kindly accept thanks for introducing me to a gold mine."

Ten machines will support you. Fifty machines operated will prove a mortgage lifter to you.

We make them out of Oak or Metal.

Percentage of winners arranged so that from every twenty dollars deposited in the machine twelve dollars will be your profit. If so advised, will make it still more.

Write to-day for exclusive territory to

PREMIUM VENDING COMPANY
56-58 WALNUT ST. PITTSBURG, PA.

WE CAN HURRY

YOUR ORDER OUT. STAFFORD Chairs excell all others.

HEAVY FIVE PLY

seats and backs.

The last-forever kind, that you are using long after you have forgotten the price.

STEEL CHAIRS TOO

We carry several kinds of good chairs in stock, all guaranteed.

ASK FOR CATALOG 205

E. H. STAFFORD MFG. CO.
CHICAGO, ILL.

OPERA CHAIRS

The Latest in Seats	GET OUR PRICES Before You Buy — Largest Variety — Lowest Prices	The Best in Seats

GEO. W. BENNETT
744 West 5th Street
CINCINNATI OHIO

Announcement Slides
Advertising Slides
Songs Illustrated
THREE STAR SLIDE CO.
Rooms 523-4
225 Dearborn Street :: Chicago, Ills.

Three reasons why you should buy this machine now. 1st—Because it will save its cost in a few months. 2nd—Because it will increase the receipts. 3rd—Because it will last for years.

THE MORTIMER FILM CLEANER

Cleans quick. Dries more fast. Plenty of other things to say. Send for booklet.

FIDELITY BUILDING
Portland, Maine

UNIFORMS AND CAPS FOR Moving Picture Theatres

Catalogues, Samples and Prices for the Asking

James H. Hirsch & Co.
208 East Jackson Boulevard
CHICAGO.

WURLITZER
Automatic Musical Instruments

Concert Pianorchestra

They do the work of expert musicians and reduce your operating expenses.

Wurlitzer is the world's largest manufacturer. We supply the U. S. Government with musical instruments. Write for big new 84-page catalogue showing the only complete line of self-players, from a small electric piano to an automatic orchestra representing 35 musicians. Easy time payments.

THE RUDOLPH WURLITZER CO.

CINCINNATI, 117 to 121 E. 4th; NEW YORK, 25 and 27 W. 32d (bet. B'way and 5th Ave.); CHICAGO, 266 and 268 Wabash Ave.; PHILADELPHIA, 1835 Chestnut; ST. LOUIS, 912 Pine; CLEVELAND, 206 Prospect Ave. S. E.; COLUMBUS, O., 57 E. Main.

Xylophones, Orchestra Bells, Chimes, Forks, etc. Send for free illustrated catalogue.

J. C. DEAGAN
3800-3810 N. Clark St., Chicago, Ill.

Moving Picture Pianists

Are you "working up" your pictures? If not, why not? If so, you want some good, moonshamatic music. Send for free sample page of "Orpheum Collection of Moving Picture Music." Now being used and praised by many of the best houses in the country.

PRICE 75 CENTS

Also latest cue music (series 1909) for 10 parts and piano, $1.00.

1-4 discount on both numbers.

CLARENCE E. SINN
1501 Sedgwick St. CHICAGO, ILL.

OUR PATENT ELECTRIC BELLS create great enthusiasm in Moving Picture Houses. Look from a keyboard as a [illegible] to 26 [illegible] to order. Famous DeA Bells and chimes [illegible] including [illegible] and [illegible].

J. C. DEAGAN
3800-3810 N. Clark St. CHICAGO, ILL.

NEW SLIDES

For the following Songs—JUST OUT

My! What a Funny Little World This Is!
In Winter.
When the trees are dressed in crimson and in gold.
King Chanticleer.
Killarney, my Home o'er the Sea.
Dancing Starlight.
Broncho Nell.
For Killarney and You.
My Country Has First Call.
Mandy Lou.
Dolores.
The Best Place of All.
The Moon Swings Low
Springtime Brings Roses and You.
You're the Sweetest Girl in All This World To Me.
Moonlight, Dear.
We've Kept the Golden Rule.
If Your Heart knew a Heart Like Mine.
Be My Sweetheart.

De WITT C. WHEELER
120 W. 31st St. New York City

Correspondence Course. Special rates to the trade. Send for free illustrated catalogue.

School class meets every morning and afternoon, with F. H. Richardson of Chicago as chief instructor. Evening classes meet every Monday, Wednesday and Friday. We positively guarantee you a $25 position.

We have a Powers' Cameragraph No. 5 in A-1 condition for $85.00 and an Edison Exhibition Model Machine for $60.00.

We carry a large line of electrical supplies and furnish everything for the theatre.

F. C. TAYLOR
49 West 28th Street New York City
Phone 1405 Madison Square

FILMS FOR RENT

New Films High Class Service

The Pioneer House, With 8 Years' Experience and $250,000.00 Back Of It

If you're Doing Not Figuring

EUGENE CLINE
57 and 59 Dearborn St., Chicago

BIO CARBONS

INSIST ON GETTING THEM.

Nearly every important Film Exchange and Supply Dealer can furnish them.
Most of them are glad to do so, because BIO Carbons invariably convince the user of their superiority.

If your dealer tries to palm off something "just as good," remember, "there's a reason."

As the BIO Carbon is made and sold with a single eye to quality, we cannot hope to obtain the coöperation of the dealer to whom price is everything.

Look up the BIO dealers in your town. You will find them the straightest, squarest men in the business—not because they handle BIO Carbons, but because it takes a straight, square man to resist the lure of price and stand for quality—first, last, and all the time.

Buy a sample package of BIO Carbons today. Give them every test you know of. Test them for burning life especially. You will find that they last from 25% to 40% longer than any other carbons.

You can pay 10% more for BIO Carbons and still save 15% to 25%, besides getting a whiter, steadier light.

You will remember the quality long after you forget the price.

Charles L. Kiewert Company

Largest importers of Flaming Arc Lamps and Carbons in America

39 Cortlandt St., New York

190 Fremont St., San Francisco, Cal.
58 Plymouth Court, Chicago, Ill.
114 Huron St., Milwaukee, Wis.
309 Carson St., Pittsburg, Pa.
15th & Pine Sts., St. Louis, Mo.

CALCIUM GAS

Compressed in drums ready for operation for Moving Picture Shows where electricity cannot be had. Absolutely pure gas. Prompt shipments, freight or express.

WRITE FOR OUR TERMS

Complete stock of repair parts for machines and supplies.

ERKER BROS. OPTICAL CO.
604 Olive St., St Louis, Mo.

"TRANSPLENDENCY"

Produces the Brightest and Clearest Pictures You Ever Saw.

Is Less Current. Theatre Fully Illuminated During Projection. Send for Circular. Operators and Managers Wanted on Agents' Method saving commission.

THE BENJAMIN-GENTER CO.
Newburgh, N. Y.

Film Announcement Titles

Any of the following Announcements sent by mail upon receipt of price:

That's All. Good-Night—15 ft.
Hand Colored Trick Film..... $2.00
(Same Black and White) 1.50
Entire Change of Program To-morrow—10 ft.
Hand Colored 1.50
(Same Black and White) 1.00
We thank you for your patronage and ask you to call again—20 ft.
Hand Colored 3.00
(Same Black and White) 2.00
Next Show in Five Minutes—10 ft.
Hand Colored 1.50
(Same Black and White) 1.00
Will the Ladies Please Remove Their Hats so Others Can See? 20 ft.
Hand Colored, Trick Film - $3.00
(Same Black and White) - 2.00

Send for prices on our 1- to 5-Film Contract.

French American Producing and Manufacturing Co.
918 Madison St., CHICAGO, ILL.

10 Cent Show Souvenir

Full-Sized Tea Cup and Saucer

CUP, 3¾ x 2 in. SAUCER, 5⅜ in.

Thin transparent china, Japanese decoration. Give the out-at-once-show and announce that the saucer to match will be given at some future show. This keeps them coming. The best attendance booster ever.

Full Size, $3 per dozen. Small size, two per dozen

Samples of either mailed for 15c.

Cash deposit must accompany all C. O. D. orders

Catalog and attendance-increasing plans FREE

Takito, Ogawa & Co., 166 E. Lake St., Chicago

3363 SECOND HAND OPERA CHAIRS

GOOD AS NEW

SOME FULL UPHOLSTERED; SOME PART UPHOLSTERED; SOME VENEER AND SOME PORTABLES

WRITE AT ONCE LOCK BOX 332

Builders & Traders Exchange, Chamber of Commerce Building, Chicago, Ill.

Save Tickets

AND

Eliminate Choppers

at the entrance to every Theatre and Amusement Place

GET THE COUNT WITH

JONES DUPLEX CHECK GATE

and you GET all the money

Ask us to send you further details

JONES CHANGE REGISTER CO.
INCORPORATED
18 BROADWAY NEW YORK CITY

You May Get

REEL GOODS

At Any Film Exchange

BUT For The

Real Reel Goods

Deal With
The

WASHINGTON
Paramount Film Co.

G. H. WALKER, Mgr.

428 Ninth Street, N. W. Washington, D. C.

"Mirror Screens" Glass Curtains "Transparent Screens"

Daylight Pictures

Perspective and Clearness.

Rests the Eyes

New Process of Manufacturing makes them more perfect and more wonderful than ever.

We can tell you how to pay for one in two weeks by increased receipts.

CURTAIN OR WHITE WALL GLASS CURTAIN

Are you required to throw your picture from the rear?

Our new TRANSPARENT SCREEN has the world beat.

Nothing like it on the market.

Be the first in your city.

Like the "Mirror Screen" it is a Joy and Money Getter

Address all communications to

MOTION PICTURE SCREEN CO.

SHELBYVILLE, INDIANA

COME AND SEE

You are invited to visit my very modern demonstration room, equipped with an asbestos booth and mirror screen, where all apparatus is shown in actual use.

Asbestos Booths, Mirror Screens, Post Card Projectors, Home Moving Picture Machines, Edison Kinetoscopes, Single Stereopticon and dissolving Advertigraph Automatic Stereopticon, carrying 21 slides for window advertising, requires no operator or attention.

REPAIR DEPT.—GENUINE PARTS

HARRY A. MACKIE

853 BROADWAY NEW YORK CITY

CORNER 14th STREET

Vol. 8, No. 9 March 4, 1911 Price, 10 Cents

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD

THE ORGAN OF THE PHOTOPLAY AND ALLIED INTERESTS
NEW YORK

POWER'S—The Magic Name

Real, hard, practical advantages for the exhibitor are revealed in Power's Cameragraph No. 6. This may sound like fiction but the experience of fifteen hundred exhibitors proves beyond contradiction that Power's No. 6;—

Projects an absolutely steady picture without a trace of flicker.

Is the most substantially constructed projecting machine in the world (the only one absolutely guaranteed).

It runs smoother, quieter and longer than any other machine.

There are other reasons why you should use it, but aren't these enough?

Just think it over and you'll agree with us that it "Pays to Purchase a Power's." Full information cheerfully given.

Write us for Catalogue G.

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY

For thirteen years the leading makers of moving picture machines

115-117 Nassau Street New York

"ROBERT EMMET" IS COMING

STILL Asking STILL Asking STILL Asking STILL Asking

THE THANHOUSER FOR WO-A-WEEK?

RELEASED TUESDAY, MARCH 7

An Oddity That IS

THE MUMMY

will afford you about fifteen minutes of as brisk entertainment as anyone could wish for. It's something new in the line of trick film—it's a novelty in the way OF NOVELTIES. From the time the mummy pops out, alive, from her coffin, to her appearance at the altar as the "Egyptologist's" blushing bride you are given a series of funny surprises that will leave you in laughing bewilderment. But laugh your loudest! Don't you know one of the first missions of the motion picture is to GET YOU TO LAUGH? Then help the picture's mission!

No. 191. Code Word, Mum.

RELEASED FRIDAY MARCH 10

The Best "Bunco Story" in a Long While

THE SPIRIT HAND

had a grasp that was guaranteed to get the money for the sharpers behind it. Certainly it was the shrewdest get-rich-quick device that bunco steerers ever employed and you'll think it a pity that said steerers didn't put their brains to better use. The evolver of such a scheme as theirs, working on lawful and legitimate lines would be a Morgan or a Rockefeller in the natural order of things. But we are not advertising the get-rich-quick business. If the sharpers hadn't met Nemesis in the form of a mere pretty girl we shouldn't have made this mighty entertaining story public.

No. 192. Code Word, Spand.

The Thanhouser News the "Exhibitor's Guide," sent FREE OF CHARGE to all who can show connection with the Moving Picture business. Drop a card to PUBLISHER, THANHOUSER NEWS, NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y.

The Thanhouser Photoframe consisting of portraits of the famous Thanhouser "Stock," framed in solid oak, mission finish, 34 inches in width and 44 inches in depth, with glass and easel (6 feet high) GOES TO YOU FOR $3.50 with order. This is the prize outfit that tickled-to-death exhibitors the country over are calling THE GREATEST LOBBY-DISPLAY BARGAIN EVER KNOWN.

For System's Sake address Art Dept.

THANHOUSER COMPANY

NEW ROCHELLE NEW YORK

"ROBERT EMMET" IS COMING

MOTION PICTURE DISTRIBUTING AND SALES COMPANY

UNEXCELLED PROGRAM

EVERY MONDAY
AMERICAN—American Film Manufacturing Company
ECLAIR—Eclair Film Company
MP—Independent Moving Pictures Company
YANKEE—Yankee Film Company

EVERY TUESDAY
BISON—New York Motion Picture Company
POWERS—The Powers Company
THANHOUSER—Thanhouser Company

EVERY WEDNESDAY
AMBROSIO—New York Motion Picture Co.
ATLAS—Atlas Film Company
CHAMPION—The Champion Film Company
DAVESTOR—David Horsley
RELIANCE—Carlton Laboratories

EVERY THURSDAY
AMERICAN—American Film Manufacturing Company
MP—Independent Moving Pictures Co.
NESTOR—New York Motion Picture Company
NEX—Nex Moving Picture Mfg. Company

EVERY FRIDAY
BISON—New York Motion Picture Company
LUX—R. Prieur
SOLAX—Solax Company
THANHOUSER—Thanhouser Company
YANKEE—Yankee Film Co.

EVERY SATURDAY
CAPITAL—Capital Film Co.
GREATNORTHERN—Great Northern Film Co.
NESTOR—New York Motion Picture Company
POWERS—The Powers Company
RELIANCE—Carlton Laboratories

THE FALL OF THE "MIGHTY"

is an interesting chapter in the history of progress. These fallen "mighties" are usually self-constituted, self-appointed. They never consider that they must ultimately be subjected to the workings of the inexorable law of Rise and Fall, Growth and Decay. The courts of America are powerful influences, and they have told the self-appointed "mighties" of the picture business that they have shaped the destinies of the industry to the benefit of their own pockets long enough. It means INDEPENDENCE for the exhibitor. The bugaboo of patents has been given a severe jolt by the judiciary and we now again pursue our peaceful task of striving for still better quality. We have several more body blows for the tottering old Scarecrow, which we shall deliver if occasion demands.

To enjoy real INDEPENDENCE you must get this
Unexcelled Program

Motion Picture Distributing & Sales Company

111 E. 14th St., New York City

OUR FILMS

REACH EVERY PART OF THE WORLD!—ARE THEY REACHING YOU? IF NOT—TELL US WHY.

Release for Saturday, February 25th

HIS GREAT DUTY

(Enacted by Actors of the Royal Theatre of Copenhagen)

A Magnificent feature production. Gorgeous scenes Exquisite tinting and toning Photography clear as crystal. Order this film from your exchange NOW.

Release for Saturday, March 4th

THE RIVAL SERVANTS

A strong plot, good acting and photography are characteristics of this subject.

EXHIBITORS. By using Great Northern productions, you are sure to please your patrons

ALL FIRST CLASS INDEPENDENT EXCHANGES HANDLE OUR PRODUCT

GREAT NORTHERN FILM CO., 7 East 14th Street, New York
ALL FILMS SOLD THROUGH SALES CO.

MR. EXHIBITOR You've Got To Use Your Power!

You haven't the slightest idea how powerful you really are! You simply cannot imagine how much pressure you can bring to bear upon any film exchange you are dealing with.

FOR INSTANCE:

Suppose you are dealing with an exchange that does not give you TWO IMPS EVERY WEEK. You know in your heart that the Imp is head and shoulders above all other brands of films. You know you make more money with Imps than with any other kind. Very well, then! Instead of taking any old thing your exchange wants to hand you, why in the name of heaven don't you

Write To Your Exchange and Demand Two Imps Every Week

Yes, "demand" is the word! After getting half a dozen such letters from you—AND FROM SCORES OF OTHER EXHIBITORS—your exchange will be COMPELLED to give you what you are paying for! Don't forget to do your part. It is easy enough. Write today and demand TWO IMPS EVERY WEEK. Write tomorrow, next day, next day and next day till you get what you demand.

Is There Any Reason Why You Should'nt Have Two Imps Every Week?

Find out! Investigate! Use your thinking apparatus! Use your power!

"The Message in the Bottle"

(Release of March 9th) — "Made in Cuba"

Take our word for it — and do as we tell you — book this picture right off — book it for at least TWO days — if possible, for THREE — "nuff ced."

Message placed in bottle by shipwrecked officer and cast into the sea—his capture by Cannibals—made chief of the tribe—battle of the black hordes and the victorious return—finding of message floating in the sea by friends—wedding with Cannibal princess interrupted by arrival of rescuing party—officer mourned as dead restored to his sweetheart—departure from the island and grief of the dusky princess—thrilling story of land and sea—faithful scenic effects—with a tribe of genuine savages in cast.

"TRACKED"

(Release of March 6th)

Another Cuban story that you cannot afford to miss—A highly fascinating and interesting picture with tropical coloring. Forger from the States, is cared for by Cuban tobacco planter, while ill, and betrays his benefactor by abducting his wife, leaving a forged letter for the husband compromising the wife. The magnanimous manner in which the indignant planter gives the craven coward satisfaction—the sensational chase through the canebrakes and the subsequent intervention of the detective who rights the wrong—the reconcilliation of husband and wife—combine to make a strong and gripping drama with unique situations. Make a note of the date of the release on your calendar and follow this up with a letter to your exchange ordering "Tracked."

Independent Moving Pictures Co. of America

CARL LAEMMLE, President

102 West 101st Street, New York

ALL "IMP" FILMS SOLD THROUGH THE SALES COMPANY

SolaxSolaxSolaxSolaxSolaxSolaxSolaxSolaxSolaxSolax

Solax
TWOPERWEEK

WEDNESDAY & FRIDAY

Released Friday, March 3d

"A COSTLY PLEDGE"

(COMEDY—See Synopsis)

The First Wednesday Release is

"OUT OF THE ARCTIC"

(Drama—A WONDERFUL FILM)

The first attempt at the portrayal of the much talked-of subject of ARCTIC EXPLORATION. Vividly showing the dangers and privations endured by explorers in the Far North

Released March 8th

Characteristically Solax. Something different. Novel, Original and Interesting. You cannot afford to miss this Masterpiece and remember All Our Films Are Tinted And Toned Throughout.

Solax Company

147 Fourth Avenue - - - - NEW YORK

SolaxSolaxSolaxSolaxSolaxSolaxSolaxSolaxSolaxSolax

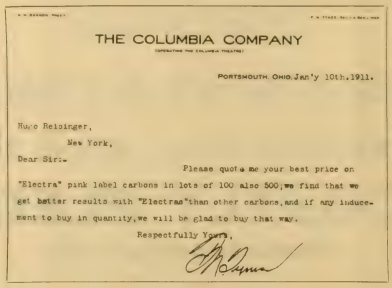
Why "Electra" Pink Label Carbons are used by 95 per cent. of the operators.



THE COLUMBIA COMPANY

PORTSMOUTH, OHIO, Jan'y 10th, 1911.

Hugo Reisinger,
New York,

Dear Sir:-

Please quote me your best price on "Electra" pink label carbons in lots of 100 also 500; we find that we get better results with "Electras" than other carbons, and if any inducement to buy in quantity, we will be glad to buy that way.

Respectfully Yours,

ELECTRA
·TRADE MARK·

ELECTRA
·TRADE MARK·

SOLE IMPORTER

Hugo Reisinger, 11 Broadway, New York

ECLAIR FILMS

ECLAIR FILMS AMERICA

THE FILMS OF PICTORIAL QUALITY

RELEASE OF MARCH 6th

"King Philip the Fair and the Templars"

975 FEET

One of the Greatest Features of the year—A Forceful Drama of Thrilling Interest ! ! ! Positively you can't afford to miss it ! ! !

THE FILMS of PICTORIAL QUALITY, Combining PERFECT PHOTOGRAPHY with POPULAR PLAYS

ECLAIR FILM COMPANY

NEW YORK: 31 East 27th St. CHICAGO: 35 East Randolph St.

FILM EXCHANGES NOTICE

24 Hour Service

Our plant is now complete and equipped to renovate two hundred reels a day.
We absolutely guarantee our process to remove scratches, eliminate dirt, preserves and resurfaces dull photography, leaving films moist and flexible.

A TRIAL IS ALL WE ASK

New York Film Renovating Co. 12 Union Square, E., N. Y.

(WE DO NOT RENT FILMS)

THURSDAY
MARCH 2nd
Rex
BY THE LIGHT OF THE MOON
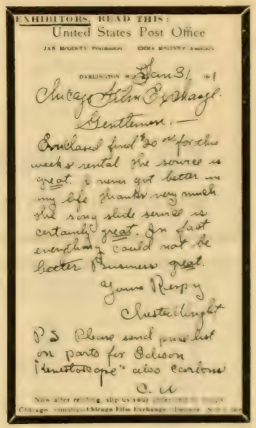
Released, Thursday, March 2nd is a picture which fully justifies us using the heaviest type this publication has with the strongest language that the most complete dictionary can furnish. But we realize that the picture itself is its greatest advertisement. So we are not going to say a great deal, but you will miss a good deal of genuine pleasure and money by failing to get this.
EXTRA—EXTRA
EXTRA-ORDINARY PRODUCTION!
A DISTINCT NOVELTY
A FILM WITH A STORY NOT TOLD IN THE ORDINARY WAY BY THE ORDINARY MEANS, BUT ONE CONVEYED IN SILHOUETTE FORM
"By The Light of the Moon"
Still another REX
Rex Motion Picture Manufacturing Co.
573-9 ELEVENTH AVE. NEW YORK
REX



EXHIBITORS, READ THIS!
United States Post Office
Darlington [illegible] Jan 31 1911
Chicago Film Exchange
Gentlemen.—
Enclosed find $20.00 for one week's rental. The service is great. I never got better in my life. Thanks very much. The long slide service is certainly great. In fact everything could not be better. Business good.
Yours Respy
Castle Light
P.S. Please send price list on parts for Edison "Kinetoscope" also cameras.
C. H.
Now after reading, slip on wrapper, put in stamps
Chicago Film Exchange Chicago, Ill.

Film Announcement Titles

Any of the following Announcements sent by mail upon receipt of price:

That's All. Good-Night—15 ft.
Hand Colored Trick Film	$3.00
(Same Black and White)	1.50
Notice Change of Program To-morrow—10 ft.
Hand Colored	1.50
(Same Black and White)	1.00
We thank you for your patronage and ask you to call again—20 ft.
Hand Colored	3.00
(Same Black and White)	2.00
Next Show in Five Minutes—10 ft.
Hand Colored	1.50
(Same Black and White)	1.00
Will the Ladies Please Remove Their Hats so Others Can See—20 ft.
Hand Colored, Trick Film -	$3.00
(Same Black and White) -	2.00

French American Producing and Manufacturing Co.
918 Madison St., CHICAGO, ILL.

Champion Evidence of Favor Towards Champs

A Filmed Episode

"THE VINDICATION OF JOHN"

Released March 8th, 1911

You will heave a sigh at the last foot of this reel for more of the same product.

THE CHAMP STAMP

This evidence was evinced in the mass of commendatory matter in our hands at present. You will read it shortly in our coming new booklet.

Champion Film Co.

MARK M. DINTENFASS, Gen'l Mgr. :: 12 East 15th St., New York City

EVERY FRIDAY THE WORLD'S BEST—BAR NONE EVERY FRIDAY

LUX FILMS

INDEPENDENT EXHIBITORS

Perfect Photography
Popular Programs
Pleased Patrons

Increased Income
Special Subjects
Variety and Value

Released, March 3rd, 1911

JACK'S LUCKY HORSESHOE
DRAMA—530 Feet
A gem that will win your audience by its very simplicity and rustic beauty.

ON THEIR HONEYMOON
COMEDY—440 Feet
A mean trick on the newly-weds, but your audience will be tickled just the same—that is—if you let them see it.

A Split Reel of Quality and Variety for the Best Programs.

GET LUX

SEE OTHER PAGES FOR SYNOPSES AND PAST RELEASES

R. PRIEUR

10 East 15th Street 'Phone, 3427 Stuyvesant New York City

Sold only through the Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company

Moving Picture World

THE WORLD PHOTOGRAPHIC PUBLISHING COMPANY • 125 E. 23d Street, NEW YORK
(Beach Building) Telephone call, 1344 Gramercy

SUBSCRIPTION: $2.00 per year. Post free in the United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands. Canada $2.50. Foreign Countries, $3.00. Post Paid.

ADVERTISING RATES: Whole page, $60.00; half page, $30.00; quarter page, $15.00; eighth page, $7.50; one inch (3½ in wide), $3.00; one inch (2¼ in. wide), $2.00; classified (no display), 3 cents per word.
TIME DISCOUNTS: 10% one months order, 15% six months, 20% twelve months.

WESTERN OFFICE: 160 Washington Street, (Post Building, Chicago). Telephone, Main 3145.

Entered at the General Post Office in New York City as Second-Class Matter.

Vol. 8 MARCH 4, 1911 No. 9

The Technique of the Picture

Improvements in the scientific side, or, as we prefer to call it, the technical aspect of moving picture making receive, as our readers are aware, the closest attention from the MOVING PICTURE WORLD. In the first editorial in the paper on January the 7th last, we briefly outlined our policy for the year. It was there stated that the paper stands for "the picture, its progress and its improvement." In pursuance of this policy, the reader will perceive that our editorial pages these last few weeks have dealt more largely than hitherto with the technical side of picture-making. It is to this branch of the work that we look for continuous improvement, and therefore we take every opportunity of publishing all the information on the subject that is available. For example: Amongst the subjects coming under this heading are, "Orthochromatic Films," "Multi-Focal Cameras," the very valuable articles on "The Technique of the Picture Play," "Cutting Off the Heat Rays," "Aerial Projection," "Exposing Moving Pictures Indoors," "Clouds in the Picture," etc., etc.

We think we are right in saying that these subjects have been dealt with for the first time in any moving picture publication. They evince, we hope, a distinct desire on our part to promote the technical progress of the picture. And by the technical progress we mean its photographic quality, both in respect of means for the exposing of the negative and its development, and the development and treatment of the positive.

It is astonishing to observe what little regard is paid, especially by the newer moving picture makers, to this side of the matter. In many respects the parallel between stationary photography and moving picture photography holds good. The former branch of work, some years ago, gave rise to the well-known gibe, "The fatal facility of the hand-camera." This meant, roughly, that a great deal of bad work was produced, simply because of the ease with which a button might be pressed, an exposure made, and a strip of film developed. Nowadays your snap-shotter, or hand-camera worker, endeavors to do the work carefully, and the result is that amateur photographs are, at the present time, generally speaking, better than they used to be.

We have noticed the same kind of thing in moving picture making. It looks so easy to fill the camera and turn the handle. It looks so easy to wind the exposed film round a drum, or a rectangular frame, and pass it through a developer. It is all, in a manner of speaking, so fatally easy. That is why so much inferior work is produced. Questions of accurate exposure, proper selection of subject, careful development and careful printing are subordinated to a desire to get out the picture and have something to release.

It is with a desire to instill into the minds of those responsible for the output of these pictures a keener regard for technical quality, that in this present volume we are manifesting every desire to assist in its improvement, by publishing anything which tends to simplify, and at the same time improve, moving picture apparatus, accessories, methods, and procedure.

It is still a reproach against American manufacturers that the French makers show a degree of care and finish in their work which is not seen in the work of the native manufacturers. We are doing our best in these pages to remove that reproach.

Unquestionably today greater attention is paid to the technical side of moving picture making than was paid a year or two ago. Still there is room for improvement. The elementary virtues of care, cleanliness, exactitude in manipulation, are not practised so often and so much as they might be. The public is beginning to distinguish good from bad photography in the pictures. We can quote some makes of film that are "always in bad" with the public on account of their inferior photography. A very good photograph of an inferior story will "get over" as we have remarked before, whereas a very poor photograph of a good story stands little chance of success.

Concerned in the technical side of moving picture making are hundreds, if not thousands, of workers, other than those at the heads of the various film-making companies. It is these whom we are desirous of interesting in this article. It is these upon whom we would impress the value of care in all the manipulations through which a film passes from the time when it enters the camera until it leaves the developing and washing solution. This is the whole ground of technique.

We propose in subsequent articles, from time to time, to deal with separate branches of our subject.

The Croaker and the Picture.

NO SET-BACK IN QUALITY.

Much has been said in these pages and elsewhere by recent writers as to an alleged decadence in quality of pictures by some of the leading manufacturers on the associated side. In fact, during the past few weeks our ears have been assailed by quite a storm of deprecatory criticism running something like this: "Biograph is not what it was;" "Selig is falling down;" "Somebody else is putting out punk," etc., etc., etc. Moreover, several writers have practically committed themselves to the statement that the pictures of today, generally speaking, are inferior to what they were two years ago.

Disproof of opinions or allegations of this kind is not easy. We desire, however, to place the fact on record that in our opinion there has been no such falling down in quality as is alleged. One afternoon recently, we went deliberately to a well-known moving picture house here in New York City for the purpose of looking at the day's releases, with as far as possible a mind detached from any prepossession whatsoever in respect of the qualitative position of the various manufacturers. We studied the Selig "Thelma," the Lubin "The Petticoat Sheriff," the Vitagraph "Society and the Man," the Kalem "The Trail of the Pomas Charm." The latter company possibly does not make so great an advance in respect of photographic quality as could be wished, but the Selig, Lubin and Vitagraph pictures could, in the general sense, hardly be improved upon. And that seemed to be the opinion of a large audience. "Thelma" was well, but quietly received. The broad, but nevertheless tender humor of the Lubin "The Petticoat Sheriff" fairly dragged applause out of a somewhat unimpressionable house, while the actor in "Society and the Man" scored a great personal triumph.

The photographic qualities of these three pictures are unquestionably good. On the whole, we are inclined to think that, as compared with two years ago, the quality of the moving picture that has been put out by the associated manufacturers today has wonderfully improved. Two years ago we can recall the fact that an Edison picture was practically a very feeble piece of narrative work. The film was full of chemico-photographic defects, light and dark marks, irregularity of developing action, weak and ineffective tone, reminding one of nothing so much as the first efforts of an amateur photographer. But look at the Edison picture now! Under the careful guidance of Mr. Plimpton, it has sprung into a leading position in respect of its fine dramatic and photographic qualities. Similarly the Lubin picture has made an equally great advance. The puerilities of "Green Apples" no longer mar the Vitagraphic work, while the Biograph still keeps the position that it made for itself eighteen months ago, and, generally speaking, marks of improvement are visible in the Gaumont and Pathe work.

Here and there we see a temporary setback or a fluctuation of quality. Here and there perhaps the story may not be all that can be desired. Now and then we touch banality. But on the whole, progress and advance are to be distinctly noted.

We write this short article for the purpose of offsetting much that has been written in condemnation of the present quality of the licensed product. There is a character in one of Dickens' books who is constantly lamenting "The good old times, the grand old times, the great old times," but this man never specified how or why the times that were, are better than the times that are. He was a croaker. They are croakers in the moving picture field. Some of them have pins in their hands. They have croaked; they are croaking over the qualitative decadence of the American-made moving picture. We hope that after this article we shall not hear any more of their croakings. We shall try as far as possible to exclude their croakings from these pages.

The Picture as a Civilizer.

A common topic of conversation amongst American film men at the present time is the approaching Coronation of King George the 5th of England. English coronations are comparatively rare. That of Edward the 7th, who died last year, took place in August, 1902. That of Victoria, who died in 1901, took place in the year 1838. William the 4th's Coronation took place earlier in the century. In all, therefore, there were only about four English Coronations in the 19th Century. So it will be seen that the event of which American film men are already talking, and which takes place in June next, is of not frequent occurrence.

It is curious to reflect that here in democratic or republican America, whatever you like to call it, interest in the approaching English Coronation is quite as great as it is in England itself. Wealthy Americans are already booking seats to view the procession. They are leasing houses, and even taking boxes for the Coronation Opera performances. Clearly, therefore, the approaching event is universally regarded as of first-rate significance from a spectacular point of view.

We have not the space to describe, nor have our readers the time to read, all that might be written in this paper about an English Coronation. Suffice it to say that outside the actual ceremony itself, of crowning the King in Westminister Abbey, a majestic church, known to all traveled Americans, the coronation year is made the occasion of a series of public festivities of indescribable magnificence. There are profuse public decorations illuminations; processions; banquets; great ceremonies individual celebrations in every city, town, village, not only throughout the British Isles, but throughout the British Empire. These, it may be said, extend over several weeks, thus giving fine opportunities for the making of both stationary photographs and moving picture photographs.

Of course supreme interest for the public is focalized on Coronation Day itself. The King and Queen, attended by their courtiers, go in procession from their Palace to Westminister Abbey, the scene of the Coronation, a distance according to the route selected, of perhaps two miles. Advantageous situations for the making of pictures can be had at reasonable rates. The leading British film makers will have their locations along the line of route, and so no doubt will most of the American film makers. Should the weather be fine there will be opportunities for making very interesting records of this unique event.

The actual Coronation itself takes place in the Great Abbey Church. There are 7,000 seats for persons to view the Coronation ceremony. If precedent be adhered to no photographer will be admitted to the Abbey, so that the probabilities are that a moving picture of the actual Coronation will not be made unless, of course, subterfuge, bribery or trickery be resorted to. But since every seat in the Abbey is numbered and allotted to a responsible individual drawn from the aristocracy or the many classes of those who have a right to be present, it will be seen that to smuggle in a moving picture camera, and to get near enough to the dimly lighted altar to make a photograph of what is taking place, will be a difficult thing to achieve even for a smart and daring American camera man.

What will probably happen is, that besides the artists and painters officially admitted to the Abbey to get sketches for projected oil paintings of the ceremony, a photographer or two will be allotted seats. Probably too, if the proper representations be made, a moving picture photographer may obtain a special permit. This is not impossible to obtain. All you want is a little "pull" with the English Court officers and you can do anything you like with them.

We are writing this article in the interests of the American moving picture business as a whole, because we would like to see this interesting Coronation Ceremony adequately represented on the moving picture screen in this country. As we have said it is within our knowledge that in London preparations have already been made to make moving pictures of the Coronation which takes place on June the 21st, next; that is, five months hence. There is, therefore, plenty of time for the alert American film maker to get busy and make his own arrangements for himself.

We may say that we are writing with personal knowledge of great Royal English processions. We took photographs of Queen Victoria's Jubilee in the year 1887; of her Diamond Jubilee in the year 1897 and of other Royal gatherings; so that we know something of the difficulties and possibilities of the work. If any of our manufacturing readers contemplate going to London and photographing the Coronation festivities, we will be very pleased to give them all the personal advice and assistance in our power.

Even so, the title of our article has hardly yet been realized in what we have so far written, namely, The Picture as a Civilizer. Civilization, of course, is a vast subject to treat of in respect of the picture, and we shall not attempt so onerous a task. We had in mind when writing of the imminent Coronation, the Diamond Jubilee festivities of the late Queen Victoria in London in the year 1897, when the moving picture was just beginning to be talked about. We witnessed that procession, being given a seat by Mr. Birt Acres, a pioneer in moving picture work, who took moving pictures of the procession; while we took ordinary still photographs. There were many moving pictures made that day, and inasmuch as London at that time was crowded with men of all nationalities, conditions and costumes, the distribution and the exhibition of the pictures then made diffused a wide knowledge of men and their habits in various parts of the world.

In the month of June in London peoples from all parts of the earth will be gathered to celebrate King George's Coronation. If the moving picture camera is, as of course it will be, generously used on that occasion, there will be obtained a wonderful series of pictures of International and Inter-communal life which will be of priceless value in disseminating that knowledge of each other which is the best basis of peace between individuals and communities.

The Rex First Release.

NOTABLE SUCCESS BY THE NEWEST INDEPENDENT MANUFACTURING COMPANY.

The stories of some first releases by manufacturers of moving pictures who have come into the business these last few years, would form tragic reading. And by the "stories" of the releases we do not mean the scenarios around which the pictures are made, but rather the incidents attending the publication of the pictures themselves. "Fools rush in where Angels fear to tread." To quote the immortal Jack Bunshy, "The bearing of this observation lies in the application of it." Some manufacturers have succeeded, notwithstanding the mediocre quality of their first releases; others have struggled to a second, or even a third or fourth release, and then have vanished or gone out of business. They have failed in the task of making moving pictures which the exchangeman would buy, and the exhibitor would put in his house. If we amplified this theme, we would print some very interesting narrative matter regarding the disappearance of over-ambitious film-makers. To us the failure of some of these people was apparent on their first releases. Charity, and a desire to stimulate them to do better work, impelled us to conceal our thoughts. But all this had better be relegated to the limbo of things that were. Let it be said, however, that there are still in the Independent manufacturing field more than one concern struggling against the inevitable,, as revealed by the qualities of their first releases. They are never destined to arrive.

Far different from the fate of these people who have mistaken their vocations, is that, we are convinced, of the Rex Motion Picture Company. To hasten to our point: this company strikes the note of permanent success in its first release, that of February 16th, "A Heroine of '76." For the benefit of others let us give our reasons for this opinion. In the first place, the company wisely restricted its initial outlay to what was really necessary without starving the picture. As we have many times pointed out, to make a moving picture which shall succeed with the exchanges, the exhibitors and the public, it is not necessary to out-Pathe or out-Selig. Where the scenery and photographic facilities are adequate, where you have a competent producer, it is really astonishing what highly attractive films you can make with comparatively simple accessories, and quite a limited company of performers.

We are not going to tell the reader what the outlay involved in the first Rex release was (this would not be fair to the guiding spirits of the concern), but it was comparatively small. The clever minds behind the company, determined that the plant should be put in order and the first picture releases for a given sum, a very moderate sum indeed, as modern moving picture making goes. And these astute people won out. They produced a remarkably good picture, of Ambrosio-like quality, which has captured the suffrages of the exchanges, and is bound in respect of its patriotic theme, to be popular all over the United States.

Who did the work? Probably the most efficient and proficient man in the moving picture making industry today. We allude to that Mr. Edward Porter, who was for years identified with the Edison Studio in the Bronx, more recently with the Defender Company, and is now with the Rex Company.

Mr. Porter is that rare quantity in moving picture circles, a picture man by instinct; he thinks, lives, talks, and, we believe, dreams about pictures. He fitted up his plant, writes or rather invents his own scenarios and—here, as to scenario writing, let us for a moment put a finger on our own phrase, "invent." Porter has the dramatic instinct. He probably writes very little in the academic sense, but he "invents" situations—"actor proof situations"—as they were called in our hearing one day this week. The result is that his pictures are crammed full of action and movement. They are the work, not of a literateur, but of a craftsman. In passing we may say that such master dramatists as Sardou, Pinero, Belasco, we believe, and others, work out their plays, as it were, dragramatically by models, etc., before writing anything. Porter, besides producing his own pictures, supervises the development of the negatives, the development of the positive and its tinting. The result of this devotedness, tenacity and application, is apparent in the elegantly made Rex first release which was referred to in our pages two weeks ago.

As to the story: Here, though we who wrote this are aliens, we can both appreciate and understand what was shown on the screen, absolutely without having to read a line. The "Father of this country" is staying at an Inn. Three gamblers discover his identity, and one of them is appointed to assassinate him. But this man's daughter gets wind of the plot, and in order to save Washington, assures that he shall occupy an apartment other than that originally assigned to him. She takes his place in the bed, and so poor Molly is stabbed. She survives her wound some hours. In the morning, Washington appears, pays his score to the man who thinks he has murdered him, and peacefully disappears. Then Molly drags herself downstairs and dies a tragic death in the arms of her father, who has killed her in mistake for George Washington. Pure tragedy! Acted all through with decision and conviction! Just five characters in this little play; Molly perfect in her action; Washington dignified in the little he has to do; the three gamblers realistically life-like in their passions. A series of admirably photographed interiors supply the background for this story—interiors showing the very perfection of photography in respect of light and shade and adequate contrast. Unquestionably, therefore, the Rex picture starts out well. If we are any judges of such matters this picture is the first of many successes by the company.

The company has been quietly working for several weeks, and occupy a large part of the old Cameraphone Building, where we, who write this article, formerly earned our daily bread. There is room for expansion, as the building has five stories. The stage remains pretty well as it was two years ago, though the light is given by shaded arc lamps instead of Cooper Hewitt tubes. A stock of negatives has been accumulated. On the occasion of our visit, a silhouette trick picture was being prepared.

Rex quality will, in our opinion, lead before long to a second release. The Moving Picture World is not in the habit of indulging in irrational superlatives, but it singles out the Rex picture as embodying the finest possible photographic technique, allied with a clear, convincing, dramatic story, perfectly acted. This is the kind of thing that is popular with moving picture audience all over the world.

COMMERCIALIZING THE EDUCATIONAL FILM.

The interest evinced in all parts of the world in educational films is distinctly on the increase. On the one hand we have evidence of a demand for the film for educational purposes; on the other there is a desire, we believe, to supply that demand; but, as a recent writer remarked, neither the demand nor the method of supply has as yet been properly organized. The latter condition of things, however, is in process of being remedied. Here, in New York City, we are told that a well-known firm of film dealers is busily engaged in adding to their business a new department which will handle all the educational films produced in various parts of the world and will shortly be in a position to supply that demand. We hope to give further particulars in future issues of the Moving Picture World. We have no doubt of the success of this company in its new venture. We, ourselves, are often asked for information as to where such and such a film, not of the regular releases, can be obtained. But we have been unable to give the information for the above reasons. There are a very large number of educational, scientific and industrial films made out the ordinary License and Independent manufacturers. If all these pictures could be brought to a common center, for distribution, an important public convenience would be provided. The marketing of educational films, therefore, on a large scale is desirable on many grounds, and will shortly be an accomplished fact.

Moving pictures the principal attraction at the New York "Child Welfare" Exhibit. First they kicked us in the slats; then they stole our thunder.

A DISASTROUS THEATRICAL SEASON.

By Robert Grau.

Although the optimists are holding out encouragement from the viewpoint that the last half of the theatrical season 1910-1911 will atone for what has been encountered up to now, the season will in its entirety go down in history as the most disastrous since the days when the field of the theater was regarded as the most precarious calling with which men of business could tempt fate.

All of the Herculean efforts made by a few intrepid and industrious managers twenty years ago, and which year by year had slowly removed the stigma which attached to theatricals, seem to have been obliterated as a result of a few months of senseless procedure on the part of those gentlemen who were openly proclaiming themselves as the only source of remedy by which the theatrical profession was to be rescued from the paws of the so-called theatrical syndicate.

The writer being far removed from all participation in the scene of turmoil, is at least without prejudice in his impressions, hence the recital here of his observations may be taken as representative of the conditions prevailing in the second decade of the twentieth century in this great land of ours.

Never—even in the days of pavement-offices and "rialto" methods of booking—have there been recorded so many failures, or as large a number of interrupted tours, as the first half of the present season has shown. In New York, where an effort is made to congregate in the theaters, the successes of a season, the situation is not so palpable, yet it is a fact that six theaters of a reputable character and considered to be of the very highest standing, have not had one paying house with the exception of New Year's eve, and possibly, not probably, on holiday nights.

The most important producer of plays in this country, Charles Frohman, although his operations have been on the most extensive scale of his entire career, had not achieved a single success up to Jan. 15, while the number of his new offerings that have been sent to the storehouse, is so large, that space is not available to record the list here.

Almost every week, since the season was inaugurated, two, or three leading Broadway theaters have been closed for want of an attraction, worthy of opening their doors, and at the present writing, the Broadway Theater, the Knickerbocker and the Circle are without an attraction, while the Garden Theater has been open only two weeks in all. The Savoy, on 34th Street, remains a moving picture resort, and its manager, Frank McKee, an erstwhile pillar of the so-called theatrical syndicate, is wholly removed from managerial activity.

The week between Christmas and New Year is generally regarded as the best for theaters in the year, yet, a visit to a half dozen of the most prominent of these, failed to disclose one-half filled auditoriums, while in two of the six the spectacle of less than one hundred persons present, was on view.

The New Theater, now in its second season, has not only not scored with any of its new offerings, but has had to depend on last year's repertoire in order to pretend that it is in the running.

The successes of the season are all in New York for long runs, and these represent the following: "Madame Sherry," "The Spring Maid," "Get Rich Quick Wallingford," "The Gamblers," "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," and "The Concert." The failures on tour have been in the hundreds; theaters have been transformed either into moving picture resorts, or else stock companies have been organized in an effort to provide theatergoers with some sort of attraction.

Even the gold laden field of vaudeville has "come a cropper" for the first time this year, and one magnate with a half dozen theaters in Greater New York confesses to a loss of $200,000 up to Jan. 1; the others are now confronted with problems and seem to be unable to present programmes more compelling than those available at the "Pop" houses, where the admission scale runs from five to twenty-five cents. An amazing illustration of the conditions in vaudeville is shown in the appearance of such stars as Amelia Bingham and the Four Mortons in the ten-cent theaters, where they must appear three and four times a day.

Two of the most active of our producing managers have already announced a decided curtailment of their output for next season; another has abandoned the field altogether, while the solvency of a worldwide entrepreneur is questioned to an extent that an announcement of his assignment is expected almost any day.

Almost every week a revival of an old play of other days is resorted to in desperation as one new offering after the other is sent to the storehouses. Even such tremendous New York successes as "The Midnight Sons" and "The Summer Widowers" have had their tours discontinued because the losses were so prodigious. The failures this year have not been made by irresponsible managers, this class has long since been cast into oblivion; a dozen large firms now constitute the source of activity, and the number is growing smaller all the time.

Conditions in the territory known as the "one night stands" are simply unbelievable, cities of a population of 50,000 are without a single legitimate place of amusement, the regular theaters all being used for moving pictures, or what is called "pop" vaudeville, and these have prospered at least temporarily.

Grand opera to all appearances has been free from financial troubles. In New York one opera house is conciliating the patronage which last year was divided among three establishments, and the subscription was so large as to assure in advance a successful season, but in Boston, where the prices were raised to the New York schedule, without a corresponding uplift in the performances, the results have not been of a constructive character.

One cannot say that managers have not been lavish in their offerings, for where in all the world can one find such stars as Bernhardt, Possart, Sothern and Marlowe, appearing simultaneously, save in New York? The trouble undoubtedly lies in the lack of an understanding between the important interests who control the theatrical output.

The upheaval was bound to come when system and rectitude which prevailed only after a struggle, were followed by a return to the undignified and misdisciplined methods of the days when pavement offices were in vogue!

SOUVENIRS.

Some exhibitors desirous to offer souvenirs as a means of drawing more patronage told us that while the cheap souvenirs filled the wants in many cases, they wanted a better class of souvenirs to call the attention of ladies to the matinees.

We wish to call their attention to a very ingenious proposition advertised by Takito, Ogawa & Co., of Chicago. These gentlemen offer real hand-painted Japanese cups and saucers at the very low price of 70 cents per dozen, or less than 6 cents per set. The proposition is to offer one afternoon the cup and announce that the saucer will be given free at some future show. As a lady will have no real use for the cup alone, she will make it her business to go another day to get the saucer. Another ingenious plan would be for the exhibitor to place the cups and saucers on exhibition in his lobby, and announce that one set will be given free on five admissions. A lady anxious to get a set will find some of her friends to accompany her to the show to make up the five required admissions.

If you have to keep your show going in the afternoon to please certain patrons, it does not cost you anything more to play to a full house than to a few, consequently, you can offer valuable souvenirs for the sake of filling your seats, if even by so doing you do not get the full admission price. A house well filled, even at cut rates, is more cheerful than a house with a small patronage.

A FEW WHYS.

In our personal visitations among the theaters it is not infrequent to find in the operating booth the real brains of the show. Operators are indeed of a varying class. Within a stone's throw of each other we have found two shows, one run by a mere crank turner, the other by a man who uses his brains to give always the best possible show. Yes, there are many very intelligent men occupying the operators' booth and it is a pleasure to meet them. Numerous also are the letters which reach the editor's desk from operators; letters which show an evident desire to improve their work; letters which show an intelligence above the ordinary, and which contain hints that could be passed on to the manufacturers with profit. We will quote from such a letter received from J. W. Russell, an operator on the Pacific coast:

We operators too often get the blame of a poor show when it is not our fault. The public is always ready to censure and the theater manager is frequently too ignorant about the business to place the blame where it properly belongs. Sometimes the themes of the picture are so good that the photoplay will "go over" in spite of defects; at other times the story is so disjointed or seems to have been thrown together in such a hurry that the climax is lost and the picture falls flat no matter how well it may be projected.

Again we are blamed for poor light when the fault lies in the photography and not in the projecting machine.

Why do some makers' films have such dense backgrounds?

Why do others jump around on the screen and often out of focus?

Why do we have to be always framing up when running the films of one of the oldest manufacturers?

Why do the foreign makers use such deep green and blue tints?

Why do the colored films fade so much?

Why are titles of two or three words as long as others of long sentences?

Why are some long messages or letters written so badly that it is impossible to read them even if run slowly?

Why do not the actors say short but appropriate sentences instead of Bow-wow-wow-bah?

Why are not better titles chosen for many of the pictures? It is rather discouraging to hang out a poster that is so inane as to actually drive away patrons. What is needed is something bright and catchy—and an illustration chosen from the most pleasant and cheery scene.

I hope that these fault findings will not be considered impertinent, coming from an operator; but we and the managers have so much to contend with that it is annoying when we see these faults with unfailing regularity. You have often said in your columns that the manufacturers have passed the experimental stage, therefore, why cannot we have these minor faults rectified? They can be overcome, I know, and that is the reason why I have been emboldened to call attention to them.

J. W. R.

WHO WANTS THIS POSITION?

In our advertising columns of this issue, an advertisement will be found headed: "Wanted—A Real Moving Picture Man." The man who sent in this advertisement is a firm believer in the moving picture above everything else in connection with his theaters, having demonstrated that it is possible to get satisfactory financial results by catering to the lovers of good moving pictures without any outside attractions other than good music and singing to accompany the same. The advertisement offers an opportunity to some brainy man with the necessary executive ability to supervise the managers of a line of shows now in operation and he must be sufficiently talented in this respect to outline the policy of each show to produce results. Having to do this, he will be given full authority as supervisor over each establishment. To a man who is ambitious to show what he knows about the value of the moving picture—supplemented by stereo slides—as an educator, this advertisement offers a fine opportunity. Ordinary moving picture and travelogue "lecturers" in the hands of such a man can be "coached" and developed to a degree where they will be able to provide a very satisfactory "twenty minute travel talk," which will immensely please the patrons of the picture theater.

The man filling this position will be in direct touch with school and church officials and also educational bodies and Chatauqua circles who generally furnish their own lectures, but need just such a man with the material at hand from which to choose suitable subjects. It is gratifying to know that some one is preparing to meet a condition that already exists in a great many sections of the United States.

SAN ANTONIO, TEX.

This city is to have one of the finest and largest amusement resorts in the Southwest, to be known as Exposition Park. A large number of prominent business men are on the Advisory Board and Board of Governors, which will insure high-class management. It is expected to have the park ready for opening about April 1. Mr. W. Halliday, of 119 Glenwood Court, is to have the moving picture theater, is to put in a first class equipment, and expects to use first run films.

DEATH OF A REAL MOVING PICTURE MAN.

Horace Manning Hoffman, age 34, of Jersey City, N. J., died in that city February 20 after a short illness. He was an expert electrician and an intelligent student of the moving picture business in general. His leanings were toward the mechanical side, beginning as an operator. A good head and a talent for associating cause with effect were two of the factors that made him a wonder at projection work. He was a man of refinement, education and good taste, but, better still, he was a gentleman. He left the world with a clean record and without an enemy. The deceased was a brother of Mr. H. F. Hoffman, of the Moving Picture World.

As we go to press we are shocked to hear that the wife of Thos. Nash, Gen. Man. of the Selig Polyscope Co., died on Tuesday from injuries received in an automobile accident on Saturday. We deeply sympathize with Mr. Nash in this severe bereavement.

Los Angeles

By Richard V. Spencer.

MISS VIRGINIA CHESTER

THE picture reproduced herewith is that of Miss Virginia Chester, Ingenue of the Pathe West Coast company. Miss Chester was engaged to play Ingenue parts, but in most of her work so far with the Pathe Studio her parts have been straight leads. Previous to her appearance with the Pathe company, she played leads for the Revier company, of Salt Lake City. Some of her best work has been in the recent Pathe western pictures, among which may be mentioned "The Yaqui Girl," in which Miss Chester played the Spanish girl lead, and Ingenue leads in the following: "Trailed by an Indian"; "The Cowboy's Sacrifice," and "Connor's Squaw." Miss Chester is one of the few actresses appearing in moving-picture work that has a special talent for Ingenue parts, and under the careful training and direction of Mr. Young Deer, the director, her future work in the pictures will help to maintain the high-class productions of the Pathe Frere's Studios. As will be seen from her picture, Miss Chester is still very young, and those who have watched her work predict for her a splendid future in the moving-picture drama.

California.—V. L. Duhem, general manager of The California Motion Picture Manufacturing Company, is now in San Diego, Cal. Arrangements have been made with the Chamber of Commerce of the Southern city to take points of interest in San Diego and vicinity in connection with the war films Mr. Duhem is taking of the Mexican revolution at Campo and Tia Juana. That he is finding plenty o fmaterial for photography is evidenced by the fact that his telegraphing home for more film. P. L. Howland, the president of the company, left on the 14th for San Diego, where he will join Mr. Duhem. The pictures, when finished, will be shown at the local exchanges only, for no arrangements have as yet been made for an interstate market.

Selig.—The Los Angeles Board of Fire Commissioiners recently received a certified check from the Selig Polyscope Company for $1,000, in accordance with a contract to make moving pictures of the Los Angeles Fire Department and the newly built six-story Fire Department drill tower. Chief Eley has asked the City Council to make a $100 appropriation to send a representative to San Francisco to get ideas on drills. The appropriation will probably be allowed, and if so, the Selig company will proceed to take pictures of the different ladder and other life-saving drills of the firemen in action.

Bad Weather Delays Work.—Los Angeles has suffered another week of cloudy and rainy weather, preventing the various studios from doing any active work. This condition is most unusual for Los Angeles, and as a result of the bad weather, the different companies are drawing heavily on their re-erved stocks of finished films. At this writing the weather is clearing, and with the coming of the sun work will be rushed from daylight to dark. The recent heavy rains have clarified the air of dust motes and clothed the hills and plains with a carpet of green, and the photography of future local studio productions should be faultless.

Selig.—Iva Sheppard, formerly leading woman with the Selig Company, has rejoined the company, and will be seen in future Selig productions.

Col. William F. Cody.—("Buffalo Bill") Who recently obtained a permanent injunction against the Yankee Film Company to restrain them from using his name, and restrain the distribution of a film entitled "The Terror of the Plains: or, Buffalo Bill's Downfall," recently beat death in a terrible ride. Mrs. Helen Cody Wetmore, sister of the famous frontiersman, and widow of the late Hugh A. Wetmore, a famous writer and editor, died recently at a Pasadena hospital. Col. Cody was some 200 miles inland from Tucson, Ariz., inspecting some mining property, when he received word that his sister lay dying in a Pasadena hospital. Three minutes later he had leaped into a saddle and started for the nearest railroad station, more than 100 miles away. For more than 100 miles he rode through a desert sandstorm. The desert trails were obliterated with shifting sand and rain. Twice he faced death fording swollen rivers, finally reaching Tueson safe. From there the trip was made by train, and he arrived at the bedside of his dying sister eight hours before the death angel.

AMONG LOS ANGELES EXHIBITORS.

Mr L. M Dull has recently purchased the lease of the Bijou Theater, Main Street, between Fifth and Sixth Streets, from Claude E. Halsell. The house is using Licensed pictures and is doing excellent business.

A new suburban moving picture theater opened recently at 54th and Moneta Streets under the management of Mr. O'Keefe. The house has a seating capacity of 500, and is using a three-piece orchestra, consisting of violin, piano and drums. Second run Licensed pictures are being shown.

Burbank, a town near Los Angeles, opened the first moving picture house under the management of G. H. Wood, of that place, and Mr. Bush, of Glendale. The introductory performance witnessed a packed house.

The Metropolitan Theater opened recently at the Plaza. This is one of the better class moving picture theaters, and one of the latest to be erected. It will be reviewed in detail in The World at a later date. The theater is under the management of Kaiser, Sturm & Hughes, the proprietors of the Liberty and other houses. Licensed pictures are being shown to good business.

The Star Theater, which has been dark for the last month, has reopened under new management. Licensed pictures are being shown.

Recently, an East Side moving picture theater proprietor was forced to apply at the East Side Police Station for an officer to arrest three unruly boys who persisted in raising a disturbance in his theater by hooting during the progress of the show. The officer arrived and placed the boys under arrest. When the case came to trial in the police court half the neighbors of the district thronged the court-room. According to the parents of the boys, who asserted that they were innocent, charges will be filed against the arresting officer, and a civil suit will be started against the theater proprietor.

Louis Bixby, a 19-year-old Pasadena boy, tried to work a free berth to one of the Pasadena moving picture shows by exhibiting a private detective's star, at the same time stating that he was an officer. However, the bluff didn't work. Instead of landing in the theater he landed in jail.

P. A. Stillman, chief electrician, U. S. N., is giving a series of stereopticon lectures in local theaters under the management of the local navy recruiting station. Last week he appeared at Clune's Broadway in a lecture on the recent around-the-world cruise of the battleship fleet. He began his lecture course with the fleet at Hampton Roads and continued with it around the world and on to Asiatic waters. These lectures have proven a valuable asset to the navy in attracting new enlistments to the service. The local recruiting officer reports that his work has increased local applications, and for that reason Mr. Merriam's shore leave has been granted an additional two months. The lectures will be continued here two weeks longer, after which Mr. Merriam will take his ivews to Pasadena for two weeks.

E. C. Miles and wife, of San Francisco, are visiting in Los Angeles. Mr. Miles is one of the pioneer exchange men on the coast and is the owner of a large San Franciscan exchange handling Independent films.

Clune's Main Street Theater is featuring the Edison and Kalem lobby display photo fames. The pictures of members of the two popular stock companies are attracting the interest of patrons who have long admired their work in the pictures, but did not previously know their names. Both frames are artistic and would be a credit to any foyer.

A complaint charging felony embezzlement was Isued recently by Deputy District Attorney Doran for J. K. Bruce, who is charged by local moving picture men with obtaining several reels of films and leaving the city with them. Bruce is said to have gone to Mexico.

The Isis Theater, on South Spring Street, has changed its service from Independent to Licensed. Messrs. Hogan & Jensen, the proprietors, have made arrangements to get second run Licensed pictures, four of the best of which will be shown twice weekly.

Long Beach exhibitors are worried over the attitude of the Long Beach church authorities. Recently they were made the subject of a ministerial sermon by Rev. Walter C. Loomis, during the course of which he denounced the picture shows from a moral standpoint. The Long Beach exhibitors are awaiting further developments. Meantime, they are agitating the Exhibitors' League movement, in order to help protect themselves from such unwarranted assaults.

Mr. Hyman has leased for three years the Walker Theater on Grand Avenue, near Seventh, and will open it on the 27th as a first class moving picture theater. This theater in the past has been a hoodoo to all who attempted to manage it. The theater is located about five blocks from the business section. The building is new, the seating and decorations good, but its distance from the business section has caused it to be dark most of the time. Mr. Hyman, knowing the facts, has determined to remove the hoodoo and restore the house to popularity. Whether he will be able to do so or not, will be watched by local exhibitors with interest. The theater will show selected vaudeville and first run independent films.

The Royal, another Hyman enterprise has reduced its admission price from ten cents to five, and substituted second run Independent films for first runs. The heater is located on Broadway in the heart of the retail district and the five-cent admission should keep it packed to the doors.

Theater Being Torn Down.—The old Exposition Theater, opposite the Belasco Theater, is being torn down to make way for a big modern theater. The Exposition Theater was one of the three houses in the city featuring an equal number of motion pictures and vaudeville acts.

Exhibitor Ill.—Mr. Hogan, partner of Jensen & Hogan, proprietors of the Isis, has been very ill recently. The Isis is one of the most popular and prosperous of the five-cent theaters in the city. Under the careful progressive management of the firm the theater is doing very well.

Beach Theater To Be Fine.—Architect R. C. Corbett is receiving bids for the new Hyman Theater at Venice. The specifications call for the Italian style of architecture with a white artificial stone, marble and tile vestibule, plate and art glass, staff ornamentation, opera chairs, plumbing, electric wiring, heating and ventilating, and composition roof. The main floor will seat six hundred, and above it will be a balcony seating two hundred. The stage will be arranged for vaudeville as well as motion pictures.

Emulates Moving Picture Plot.—A recent dispatch from Portland, Ore., states that Mrs. Julia Strand, wife of Adolphus Strand, of No. 340½ Front Street, is at the St. Vincent's Hospital in a critical condition, as the result of being shot with a bullet from a 22-caliber rifle in the hands of her son, Frank Strand, aged 11. The shooting occurred at 10:30 o'clock at night. Returning in advance of his parents from a picture show, at which he had seen the adventurous life of border rangers depicted, the boy loaded his recently purchased rifle, and imagined himself in the role of a border ranger. Forgetting, he explained afterward, that the gun was loaded, he pointed it at his father and mother as they entered the door of the family apartments, cocked the hammer and pulled the trigger. The bullet struck Mrs. Strand in the neck near the base of the skull. The hospital authorities believe that the chances are in favor of recovery. The boy was taken to the police station, but was later released in the custody of his father.

New Picture Theater for Fullerton.—Work was commenced in Fullerton on Feb. 1 on a modern moving picture theater at brick construction to cost $6,000. It will be erected on the vacant lot on Spadra Avenue, immediately adjoining the southwest corner of Commonwealth and Spadra Avenues, owned by Mrs. Adele Browning, who is having the work done. The plans call for a modern theater of Moorish design, 35 x 98 feet. The front will be of white plaster in Moorish design, with box office in the center and entrances on both sides. The stage will be arranged for both moving pictures and vaudeville. The theater will seat about 600, and will be ready for occupancy by March 10.

Clune To Enlarge His Beach Theater.—Word comes from Ocean Park that Clune, Wheelock & Boland who hold the theater concession on the new million dollar Fraser pleasure pier, intend to revise their plans and as a result of the upward revision a $60,000 moving picture theater will be erected instead of the smaller one contemplated. Work will be commenced on the structure on March 10, and will be rushed in time to complete the theater for the annual opening of the beach season on May 30, Memorial Day.

New Theaters for Ontario.—A new moving picture theater has opened to crowded houses on Feb. 5. The new theater located in the heart of the Ontario business district on Euclid Avenue. Harry Milling is the proprietor. Ontario is a small city in the Orange Grove district, some 60 miles from Los Angeles.

Baby Show.—As a result of a spirited beauty contest engaging the attention of patrons of the Cupid Theater, Santa Barbara and Moneta Avenues, for the past two weeks, little Mistress Hazel Geer carried off the first prize honors, winning $5. The contestants were 200 baby girls, all closely approximating the age of 2 years, and it was from this aggregation of infant loveliness that the prize winner was selected by popular vote. Incidentally it may be mentioned that the Geer family have nearly cornered the beauty market, for two years ago, Hazel's older sister, Ruby, carried off a similar prize at another baby show.

New England Notes

G. E. Holbrook, New Boston, Conn., was stabbed with a hat pin on February 11, while attending a performance of moving pictures at Music Hall, Webster. Owing to the lack of light in the auditorium, a woman sitting beside Holbrook accidentally jabbed him, as she was removing her hat. Holbrook was placed under medical treatment. It is time that every moving picture theater provided some means for lighting the house, as such occurrences as these are avoidable with a partially lighted house.

William M. Sistare, manager of the New Orpheum, New London, Conn. reports unusually brisk trade with moving pictures and vaudeville.

The Globe theater, Springfield, Mass., was opened for its initial performance by J. C. Burke & Son. The house was built to conform to all the best ideas in moving picture construction, and should prove itself a winner. Moving pictures and vaudeville are the attractions.

Mr. Moe Mark, proprietor of the Comique theater, Lynn, Mass., has bought a large lot of land on the corner of Central Avenue and Liberty St., Lynn. Mr. Mark will build a large theater on the ground which totals 15,000 feet. The house will have a frontage of 140 feet, and a depth of 90 feet. Mr. David Basker, also of Lynn, will be affiliated with Mr. Mark on this project. Mr. Mark is the brother of Michael Mark, who built the first real moving picture theater in Boston. The Comique, Lynn, is under the management of Mr. Al Newhall and shows good results with moving pictures and vaudeville.

The Pastime theater, Quincy, Mass., opened Monday, February 20 after having been entirely remodelled and renovated. This house is now in a position to do a large business, having a seating capacity of 500, with plenty of standing room to help out. The management has been taken over by Mr. Thifodeaw. The house is using Independent films from the Boston Film Rental Co., and vaudeville secured from the Merrill Amusement Co., who look after the vaudeville for many New England moving picture houses.

As was previously stated in these columns the Convention Hall Rink, Portland, Maine, is to be remodelled into a moving picture and vaudeville house. The date set for the change is February 27, when the house will close pending the alterations.

The Enon theater, Newton, Mass., has opened its doors to the public, with a seating capacity of 450. The house has been altered, and is now a very cozy playhouse. Madame Castiglione, the retired actress of note, will personally manage the house. The house has been offering Independent films from the W. L. Greene Film Exchange and vaudeville from the Merrill Amusement Co.

The World's New England representative dropped into a restaurant, Wednesday, February, 13. While there, three men took seats at the same table. It turned out that these gentlemen were connected with the moving picture business. Man No. 1 said, "Say, boys, that fellow Arthur Johnson has gone with Lubin." Man No. 2 said "Who is Johnson?" "He's that tall fellow, who formerly was a Biograph Star." This description was plenty, and the one man corrected "How do you know?" "Oh, I read it in the World". The incident, although a minor occurrence, explains itself. To get the news, read the World.

In connection with this, the World's New England representative will add that these three men, all of whom were evidently moving picture exhibitors of trend pictures from up-state, went on to state that, as these moving picture stars are leaving them at life, to quote their exact words. That Lubin's releases are looked upon with more favor now than formerly by those three men, can be seen by the fact that one said, Yes, he's (Lubin) doing better. Someone must have been talking to him." In connection with this it may be of interest to note that most Lubin, Kleine and Melies pictures are known in first run houses lately than has ever been the case.

The first releases of the Rex Motion Picture Co. came to Boston at once, and were shown at several local independent houses.

Mr. Horsman, proprietor of the Olympic theater, Lynn, featured the "Buffalo Jones" pictures in his large popular vaudeville and picture house, to very pleasing results. The Olympic is always looking for novelties, whether moving pictures or vaudeville.

HENRY.

BOSTON.

The pictures of Buffalo Jones, which were released by the Patents Co. Sunday, February 12, were not exhibited on the first 3 days of that week by any Boston moving picture theater. There were 2 reasons which accounted for this fact. Several exhibitors expressed themselves as willing to expend $25 for the use of the reels for 3 days, had the picture been only 1000 feet long. The price asked was $50, as the pictures were 2000 feet. The other reason working against the pictures was the fact that Buffalo Jones himself had exhibited and personally lectured on his films in several local houses in 1909 and 1910. Buffalo Jones has appeared twice at the Star theater, Tremont Row, the Theater Comique, and at other local theaters.

The Rev. Herbert S. Johnson, pastor of the Warren Avenue Baptist Church in the course of his sermon on "Moving Picture Shows" stated that he had no reason to condemn either the pictures themselves or the men who conducted the houses. The pictures, were, according to his opinion of no objectionable character as a general rule. The Rev. Johnson is one of the most quoted and progressive of Boston clergy, and his stamp of approval on the moving picture shows is an excellent point for the trade.

As was stated above the licensed houses of Boston did not exhibit the Buffalo Jones pictures, but, the Theater Comique, an independent theater on Tremont Row, exhibited a substitute. The World's New England representative will quote verbation from the advertising lobby—work of the Comique—"Look, Look Look,—startling stamping stupendous—Buffalo Bill and his death defying Riders of the plains. Savage Indians, Screeching Cowboys, Bucking Broncos and everything Wild and Western. The entire lobby was full with such written work, and augmented by posters and paintings of similar nature. As can be seen from the quotation, the intent of the wording was to give the impression that Buffalo Bill was inside the theater in connection with the picture. Across the lobby was a rope, over which were hung Cowboy and Indian clothing, giving the house a cheap and low-grade appearance. The cowboy apparel thrown over the rope slung across the lobby looked more like a clothes line than most anything else. Taking in view the featuring of the name of Buffalo Bill, with its ambiguous meaning and the general work of the whole advertising display, it can not be gainsaid that the Comique took on a thoroughly disreputable appearance, and one detrimental to the moving picture theater throughout the city. The film exhibited was that of the Buffalo Bill and Pawnee Film Co.

A bill was presented to the Massachusetts legislature on Tuesday, February 14, which has as its aim the exclusion of children under 16 years of age to moving picture shows, unless with adults. At present the age limit is 14 years. The bill is being watched with the greatest interest by all Massachusetts exhibitors. At the present writing, no report has been made by the Committee in charge.

Mr. George E. Lothrop of Boston, who is connected with the moving picture business, was heard by the Massachusetts legislature in favor of a bill requiring all theaters and other places of amusement and "all theatrical, legal or judicial officers or talent "to pay into the state treasury their receipts in excess of 6% received over and above their expenses and incomes of $50 a day, week or performance. Mr. Lothrop presented his petition in written form. Mr. J. Albert Brackett, representing the Theater Owners' Association thought it unnecessary to argue against it. It is thought the bill has small chance of passing the committee in charge.

The Theater Premier, Washington St., is giving away free admission tickets, good for women only, between the hours of 9 and 12 A. M.

HENRY.

CONNECTICUT ITEMS.

Bridgeport.—Walter Victory and Henry Woods, of the Park City Theater, corner Stratford and Newfield Avenues, have dissolved partnership. Mr. Victory has purchased the sole interest, and expects to make extensive alterations both in the theater and the Air Dome.

Ansonia.—MacIntyre & Kimberly, of Ansonia, have sold their interest in the Pastime Theater to Mr. Clarkson, of Bethel, who will leave out vaudeville and run four reels of pictures, changed every day. MacIntyre & Kimberly have taken over the Bijou, in Derby, and are doing well.

South Norwalk.—The Music Hall Stock Company have tried running pictures between the acts and find it helps to break the long waits while changing scenery.

Waterbury.—The Italian church is now running four reels of selected pictures every Sunday evening after the service, and the pastor, Rev. Karam, expressed himself as well pleased with the idea.

Milford is still running three nights a week, and it is reported that there will be a theater built this summer.

M. W. L.

Pennsylvania

PHILADELPHIA JOTTINGS.

The hearing of a motion for preliminary injunction in the case of the Independent Moving Picture Company vs. Saulter will come before Judge Holland in the United States Circuit Court here Wednesday, February 15.

William B. Heidinger will have an electric sign installed at his motion picture theater, 151-155 Levering Street, at a cost of $300.

In a trade chat with the MOVING PICTURE WORLD, Edward A. Jeffries, owner and manager of a successful theater at 5232-5234 Ridge Avenue, said: "I call my theater the Royal Photo Play House—do not use the words theater or motion pictures at all. My play house seats 250 persons and admission is 5 cents. It is in the Wissahickon district, and I have found that my patrons like the Vitagraph films. They like 'Jim Slim at Coney Island' and the rest of that series of pictures in which Mr. Costello and Miss Turner appear. This coming Friday I will run 'Trust and True to His Trust,' and believe it will prove popular. I insist upon the best of order at my play house, and I am for the uplifting of the motion picture business. While many exhibitors charge a small entrance fee they should run their houses of amusement right and maintain good order, as well as run clean subjects." Mr. Jeffries runs a licensed service, which is furnished by Messrs. Schwalbe and McCaffrey, trading as the Electric Theater Supply Company, 44 North Tenth Street.

William Cohen, 4038 Parkside Avenue, Philadelphia, is treasurer of the new Model Amusement Company, which has just incorporated with a capital stock of $15,000. Max and Morris Katzman are also identified with the company.

McCarthy Redmond has sold the Drury Theater, vaudeville and motion pictures, Thirteenth Street and Germantown Avenue, to Conway & Cullen. It is said the new proprietors will make several improvements.

Inclement weather had a somewhat depressing effect upon theatrical attendance during the ten days ending February 10, but upon the whole, pretty good business was done by most of the moving picture and vaudeville houses. Lincoln and Washington pictures have received approval wherever shown.

The Exhibitors' League of Pennsylvania, composed of moving picture theater owners and managers, holds meetings every Friday at 11 o'clock a. m., in the Parkway Building, at the Southeast corner of Broad and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia. Walter Stuempfig is president, and Charles F. Kelley secretary of the league. It has for its object the general uplifting of the moving picture theatrical industry, protection of members' interests, etc. The dues are: A house of over 400 capacity, $15 per month in advance, $40 per year; a house of less than 400 capacity, $1.67 per month in advance, $20 per year. Said a member of the league: "We will be pleased to have Moving Picture World notice our meetings. As probably you know, many of the exhibitors feel that they should keep an eye on legislation inimical to their interests as well as to secure favorable legislation if any is needed or desired. There are many things of interest to exhibitors which they can discuss with interest and profit, and that is one of the reasons for the formation of our organization. Subjects said to be under consideration by the League at present are the building regulations, license fees, etc. There has been, so far, a good attendance at the meetings of the organization, which is little more than an infant—but destined to grow and thrive, members and officers assert.

In the New Jersey Legislature February 6 Assemblyman Martin introduced a bill prohibiting the admission of a child under 14 years of age to amusement places after sunset unless accompanied by an adult.

Joseph Harding's new moving picture theater, at Fifth and Vine Streets, Camden, is expected to open Saturday evening, February 18. The theater will have a seating capacity of 250. The stage will be of circular design, and the decorations and furnishings neat and attractive. Independent picture films will be used and changed daily.

Prominent business men of South Bethlehem, Pa., have decided to build a new modern opera house at a cost of $40,000.

Construction work is to start next month and will be rushed to completion.

The Reading (Pa.) Amusement Company has increased its capital stock from $15,000 to $20,000.

Camden's (N. J.), new brick moving picture and vaudeville theater, on Broadway, near Stevens Street, is rapidly nearing Completion. It will have a handsome lobby and facade and excellent electric illumination. It will probably open about March 1. W H. PRESCOTT.

PHILADELPHIA AND PENNSYLVANIA.

New municipal and State Legislation is giving the photo-play fraternity more or less concern in several Pennsylvania cities and towns. In the Legislature January 30th, Representative Ehrhardt, of Lackawanna county, introduced three new bills bearing upon motion picture theaters—viz—to empower the State Factory Department with authority to compel owners of M. P. theaters in first, second and third class cities to surround the projecting machines with fire-proof booths. Representative Schmidt introduced three bills covering boroughs of the three classes. Representative Gray, later on, introduced a bill stipulating the width of aisles in theaters—that they be in accordance with the number of seats. This measure is practically a "relief one," from the law of 1909, which provides three four foot wide aisles for theaters and which theater owners vigorously contend against. The law, however, has been declared constitutional by the higher courts. January 31st Senator James P. McNichol, Philadelphia, introduced a bill as follows:

"That it shall be unlawful for any person or persons to give or participate in or for the owner of any building permit, within said building any play, exhibition, opera or performance or any other theatrical, operatic, dramatic or vaudeville exhibition or performance of a lascivious, sacrilegious, indecent, immoral or impure nature or such as might tend to corrupt morals.

"Any such person who shall be guilty of violation or any provision of the first section of this Act shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be sentenced to pay a fine not exceeding $1,000, or undergo an imprisonment for a period not exceeding one year or both, at the discretion of the court."

The bill, of course, covers vaudeville and M. P. theaters and, according to Senator McNichol, was presented as the result of much agitation in Philadelphia over the proposed introduction of "La Samaritane," by Bernhardt—which was not presented. As a rule the M. P. industry has no objection to the passage of Senator McNichol's bill, but the question "what constitutes an immoral, etc., play and film," and who is to be judge, is one that they ponder over.

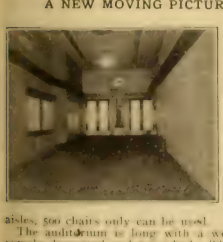
Temperance Hall, the oldest assembly building in Manayunk, Philadelphia, is being altered into a M. P. theater.

J. Fred Zimmerman's new 2-story M. P. theater on Eleventh street, near Lehigh avenue, will be 160 by 81 feet in dimensions and cost $32,000. Preliminary construction work has started.

The case of Lewis M. Swaab vs. the alleged Motion Picture Trust, came before Common Pleas Court, No. 2, January 31st, and after hearing was taken under advisement. Briefly stated the suit is over the recovery of films, which Mr. Swaab says he paid $30,000 for several years ago.

W. H. PRESCOTT.

A NEW MOVING PICTURE THEATER



Messrs. Silverman Bros. have opened a new moving picture theater called the "PHOTOPLAY" at 221 Market Street, Harrisburg, Pa., just opposite the Court House and a short distance from the costly new Pennsylvania Capitol.

The house was built for a large seating capacity but on account of the ridiculous Pennsylvania laws, requiring three four foot aisles, 600 chairs only can be used.

The auditorium is long with a well inclined floor, handsomely decorated and furnished. The side lights are a real innovation. They are on the principle of the indirect lighting system, throwing the rays to the ceiling, to fall back in a diffused soft light over the chairs, no bright bulb to shine in the eye, no direct rays on the screen.

One feature of the new Photoplay House is a waiting room between the lobby and the auditorium

This room handsomely finished is heated and offers a comfortable refuge for the persons waiting a chance to get a seat.

The lobby is simple but tastefully decorated, is very attractive with its great oil paintings on local historical subjects and marks a great improvement on the main shopping street, of Harrisburg.

A woman's resting room in charge of a matron who also acts as a nurse for the children of the patrons, is a notable feature.

A perfect ventilation and polite attendants make the patrons very comfortable, while pictures from the best independent manufacturers are shown on a remarkably clear screen.

Messrs. Silverman Bros. own already the Pastime at Altoona and will soon head a syndicate formed under the laws of Pennsylvania, to operate a chain of motion picture theaters. J. M. B.

FLICKERS.

The hardest thing to understand is yourself.—Bill Swanson.

* * *

Theatre in Baltimore will be re-christened the "Lemmon" Theatre. Whether this is done in honor of the name or the old manager is not clearly stated.

* * *

Blood is thicker than water. That's why you meet a lot of thick heads in charge of departments. Nothing personal. If the shoe fits put it on.

* * *

"A sign falling from a Philadelphia building kills three people. Now, if that had been a moving picture sign—good-night!"

* * *

One moving picture store in Oneida, N. Y., has changed hands so often that the authorities have never been able to find out the owner's name long enough to collect a license.

* * *

Town Committee of Newton, N. J., before considering the reduction of the present moving picture license of $150, will first find out what it costs its surrounding towns. It will save them the bother of figuring out what it ought to be.

* * *

In telling of the prosecution of Maxwell, which the new in moving pictures, Miss Lutie E. Stearns, of the Wisconsin State Library commissioner, said to a Milwaukee reporter:

"It was splendid and took up most of the evening. Why should I pay $5 to see Maxwell in the same thing—and pay forty times as much. The motion picture is robbing the theaters of their patronage and they can't reduce their prices to hold the people." She commended the movement of the Milwaukee Journal for free picture shows in the schools buildings.

The above cut of the attractive front of the Pergola Theatre, in Allentown, Pa., Mr. D. E. Knorr, manager, is of interest to the MOVING PICTURE WORLD and its numerous readers because of the history of this successfully conducted moving picture house. The manager reports that he opened the show three years ago with a capacity of one hundred, since which time he has had to enlarge six different times. The house has lately been completely remodeled inside, is provided with thirteen large exits and the stage is walled off with a brick wall and asbestos curtain, making it one of the largest and best equipped theatres in the State. The following ideas of Mr. Knorr as to the conduct of his house will give a pretty good idea of the primary cause of this success: His highest aim is to show nothing in the least questionable, and he, therefore, gets the ladies and children and finds that the men soon follow. Absolute honesty with the patrons in living up to every advertisement results in crowds waiting thirty and forty minutes to gain admission. In this way the show advertises itself, and with a very little additional advertising in the programmes in the local press, the popularity of the theatre is kept continually in the public mind. The pictures are changed three times and the vaudeville twice each week. The house is well lighted and ventilated; ladies are obliged to remove their hats, and, in fact, nothing is overlooked in order to give a refined, wholesome and interesting entertainment and to make the patrons feel comfortable and happy and safe. "Be honest with your patrons, give them all you can for a nickel and they will give you all the nickels they can," is Mr. Knorr's summing up, and is a policy leading to success that we would recommend to all managers.

JERSEY JOTTINGS.

H. O. Huber & Son having leased Siegle's Hall, Twenty-fourth and Federal streets, Camden, are having it equipped for a motion picture and vaudeville theater. Fire escapes are being erected by the landlord. The theater occupies the second floor of the building.

Rivalry has become so keen in M. P. theater circles at Gloucester City, that exhibitors and owners are offering poultry as prizes. A five-cent ticket entitles each patron to participate in a "drawing" for a plump chicken or turkey. One theater tried giving bread coupons with admission tickets, twelve of the coupons being good at a grocer's for a five-cent loaf of bread.

Two building permits were issued the past week at Camden for new M. P. theaters. One was granted to M. J. McGuire, who will have the building at 456 Kaighn avenue, changed into a parlor for pictures. The second permit was to Powell & Snyder, who will alter the building at 1731 Broadway into a M. P. parlor. It will be the first M. P. theater in the Centerville section of Camden.

Haddonfield, with 4,142 population, is supporting a M. P. entertainment every Saturday night. There is hope—that in time a daily performance can be given.

Having purchased Duncan's Hall, 907 North Fifth street, Joseph Hardy, former sea captain, has plans to alter the hall into a M. P. theater. It will occupy the ground floor and have seats for about 300 persons. It will be the only M. P. house in North Camden.

Millville business men have selected a site upon which, the coming spring, a new vaudeville and M. P. theater will be erected. More particulars later.

W. H. PRESCOTT.

IN THE MISSISSIPPI VALLEY.

The Eagle, East St. Louis, has found that vaudeville does not pay and has gone back to the photoplay exclusively. Manager Forrester is quoted as saying that his patrons want the picture with just enough singing to vary the entertainment.

"We would hate to be so great or so dignified that we couldn't go to a moving picture show," says George Fitch, of Peoria, Ill., the humorist whose name is in all the leading magazines. It is nothing unusual to see Lieutenant-Governor Oglesby, of Illinois, in any of the Springfield picture houses.

N. Clark and Peter Campbell, of Macomb, Ill., have leased the Airdrome at Macomb of J. D. Blume, of Monmouth, and will open a picture show and vaudeville house May 1.

The F. & H. Aumsement Company may build a vaudeville house at Bloomington, Ill.

Arthur & Heffner will open the Princess, a vaudeville house, at Mason City, Iowa.

Lester Linton, of Arcola, Ill., have purchased the Crystal at Tuscola, Ill., and will give pictures and vaudeville.

George Salyer will open a picture show in the Link Building at Oakwood, Mo.

The Precision Camera Company of Chicago has been incorporated with a capital stock of $100,000 to manufacture and deal in motion pictures and cameras and films and operate theaters. The incorporators are J. P. Grier, M. D. Cross and W. H. Tuttle.

Robinson & Zahler, owners of the Liberty, 329 South Adams Street, Peoria, Ill., have closed the place for two weeks to make improvements consisting of a French plate glass mirror front with an ante-lobby of Moorish design, hung in rich tapestries, and the interior of the theater to be done in Old Mission.

C. E. Hutchinson has opened a moving picture theater at Galveston, Ill., charging ten cents admission.

The St. Clair Amusement Company of Chicago has been incorporated with a capital stock of $6,000 to conduct a general theatrical and amusement company. The incorporators are Karl Hoblitzelle, Ashby A. Chouteau, Jr., and E. J. Selon.

The X-Ray, Lincoln, Ill., has changed its location. James Chase is the new vocalist.

C. A. Robbins, proprietor of the moving picture theater at Saybrook, Ill., has installed his own electric light plant.

The Lyric Theater, of Freeport, Ill., it is announced, will put on a road picture show making six northern Illinois and Southern Wisconsin towns each week. A six-piece orchestra will furnish music.

W. H. Robbins and W. G. Hunt, of Brighton, Ill., have opened a picture show to operate on Wednesday and Saturday evenings.

The Grand Opera House, Freeport, Ill., will run pictures nightly with Saturday and Sunday matinees.

Wouldn't you rub your eyes and look again if you were passing a moving picture show and see licensed and independent posters side by side, inviting you to an unusual performance? This is not uncommon at the Royal, Springfield, Ill. Recently I saw a Gaumont in the midst of an independent program there, but it was not announced in the lobby.

Edward Chamberless, of Dexter, Iowa, has purchased the Lyric moving picture show at Iowa Falls, Iowa.

Producers who aspire to records as matchmakers may take heart from this: Joseph Hewitt, proprietor of the Star Moving Picture Theater, at Sparta, Ill., and Miss Minnie Livingston, for the last three years his cashier, were recently married. Both are prominent in their home city.

Manager Marple, of the Palace, Aurora, Ill., admited free old soldiers who wished to see Lubin's "His Last Parade." Quite a number of Aurora veterans were identified in the film and the production got some deserved publicity. Along the line of advertising the Palace is one of the best newspaper advertisers among Mississippi Valley Theaters. Its ads. are always well written. Some cut cyndicate which is writting ads. for moving picture houses recently had one with a display line "The Danger." Standing out with the name of the theater and the cry of buncombe reformers this is sure to assure the patrons of a feeling of safety?

Moton P. Harvey, who has been manager of the Colonial and Colonnade Theaters at Decatur, Ill. has resigned his position and will open up the Nasewan picture show in the building which has been occupied by the Colonade. The lease of the Colonial syndicate on the structure was not renewed.

J. W. Smith is now manager of the Central Opera House at McHenry, Ill.

An ordinance regulating moving picture shows in Milwaukee, Wis., now under consideration, has the following provisions:

"Mill or wooden construction will be allowed only in one-story buildings; buildings of more than one story or whether where other industries or stores are housed, must be constructed of non-combustible material; booth for machine must be of non-combustible material and must have a vent; shows must have three exits with three-foot aisles leading directly to them; all electric wires must be in conduits; operators of machines must be twenty-one years old; no mirrors or draperies allowed in room; only ten seats can be placed in a row; there must be no dressing rooms back of the curtain and no heating apparatus directly under the auditorium.

As recognition for an advertising film there is no equal to the introduction into the program of the Short Course in Agriculture at the University of Illinois at Urbana of the reel "The Romance of the Reaper," which exploits the prodfound in the home of a youth who had a moving picture

A reel of film stolen from the Bijou at Decatur, Ill., was ict of the International Harvester Company. machine. F. H. M.

CLEVELAND.

The Moving Picture and Projecting Machine Operators, Local No. 160, I. A. T. S. E., Cleveland, O., have elected the following officers for the ensuing year: President, Joe Scheiwer; vice-president, C. Gliechmann; financial secretary, Joseph Swartz; recording and corresponding secretary, Howard W. Codding; business agent, Harland Holmden; delegates to convention, S. M. Hulbert, R. W. Mullen; delegates to central body, H. W. Codding, Harland Holmden; sergeant-at-arms, Ernst Widler; trustees, H. W. Codding, Raymond Ray, A. Jay Smith; executive board, A. Jay Smith, Elmer Cox, H. W. Codding, Max Rosenfield, Harland Holmden; examining board, Elmer Cox, August Maier, Raymond Ray, R. W. Mullen, J. A. Steinhoff. Address all communications to Howard W. Codding, recording and corresponding secretary, 300 East Lakeside Avenue, Cleveland, O.

Chicago

The Madison Theater, corner of Fiftieth street and Madison avenue, one of the South side independent houses, was purchased last week by Mrs. David Feder from the former owners, Messrs. Westegard and Knudson. The Madison under the new management is continuing under the same policy and is providing a very good entertainment.

Mr. I. F. Bommerscheim, who disposed of his Lyric theater at Streator, Ill., a few months ago, has purchased the Gaiety theater at Fort Wayne, Indiana, from Messrs. Hayes & Speer, and will take possession at once. Mr. Bommerscheim is an enterprising young man, and the moving picture business is his hobby, it is a certainty that the Gaiety will be very successful under his able management.

Messrs. Hilliard Campbell and I. B. Bigelow have recently opened the American Theatrical Singers' Agency in Chicago, with very good prospects of becoming successful. The new agency is located at 59 Dearborn Street, and is under the business management of Mr. Bigelow. Mr. Campbell, who was formerly leading baritone with one of the Henry W. Savage companies, has charge of the musical end of it.

This supply house of musical talent will furnish not only the best voices obtainable, but will also furnish orchestras and parts of same, also making a specialty of pianists and trap drummers. Mr. Hilliard states that they have tried out at least a thousand voices during the past few months and that only thirty-seven of these have been accepted.

THEATER IS RAZED IN $100,000 FIRE.

"Good Night" On Screen Saves North Avenue Audience As Adjoining Buildings Burn—Children Are Rescued.

The ordinary reader would naturally think from reading the head lines in the Tribune that the fire originated in the theater, and that the children were rescued from the burning theater, and even when you read the text of the story, you have to read very carefully to learn that it was otherwise. Funny how "the press" likes to take a "poke" at the picture theaters whenever they get a chance, isn't it?

LOBBY DISPLAY.

The advantages accruing to the exhibitor who is original and enterprising in connection with the decorations and advertising in his lobby, are many and well know. A large percentage of the attendance in a goodly number of moving picture theaters can consistently be termed transient; in other words, are individuals who drop into the theater when they have a few moments to spare, to while away those few moments in contemplation of the moving pictures exhibited therein. The appearance of the lobby to this transient trade signifies the worth of the exhibition, for which they will pay their money. The importance, therefore, of arranging proper and attractive lobby displays cannot be overestimated.

From reports that we have received from Chicago, it appears that the American Film Manufacturing Company of that city, manufacturers of the "American Films," have gone their competitors, one better in point of advertising for the benefit of the exhibitor.

They have completed four distinct sets and styles of lobby display depicting the leading players in the American films. The first and least expensive of these, but by no means of the smallest moment, is a highly colored poster containing five colors, something unusual in moving picture posters, of an exceedingly artistic design, and on extra heavy calendered paper. These posters will be furnished exhibitors principally through the exchange, although they can be obtained by application direct to the American Company, in Chicago. They likewise have a set of five original photographs, unmounted, each photograph showing a characteristic pose of one of their leading players. This set they will supply the exhibitor direct or through the exchange, at a price of 50 cents per set, or 10 cents for each photograph. The photographs can be obtained neatly mounted at a price of 60 cents.

Another idea, and one that will undoubtedly appeal to a goodly number of exhibitors, is a neatly framed series of photographs of the leading actors in this company, to be hung in the lobbies of the various theaters featuring American films, which they tender exhibitors, at a price of $1.50 F. O. B. Chicago. Their final offer, and in the writer's opinion undoubtedly the best at the price, is a photo frame that would do justice to the finest legitimatae theater in he land. This photo frame is a stanch oaken easel made of real oak, not imitation, together with a large frame containing the photographs of every leading player, arranged in an exceedingly tasteful manner. They propose to furnish these to the exhibitors at a reasonable price.

ALL NIGHT PICTURE SHOW FOR CHICAGO.

From a reliable source of information, we learn that beginning Saturday evening, the Lyric Theater, corner of State and Van Buren streets, will run a continuous performance, lasting all day and all night. Three shifts of operators will be employed and two machines will be used. The report states that if this arrangement proves successful, the owners, Jones, Linick and Schaefer will run their other houses the Bijou Dream and the Orpheum, under the same policy.

* * *

The Matographic Supply Company, of Chicago, has been incorporated, with a capital stock of $25,000 to manufacture cameras and moving picture machines. The incorporators are Louis A. Boening, Victor W. Thomas and Samuel Black.

The Yale Theater Company of Chicago has been incorporated with capital stock of $2,500 to operate a moving picture and vaudeville and deal in picture films. The incorporators are M. Vines, E. Bernsen and John Meles.

The Iowa Picture Show Company of Mendon, Ill. has compromised its suit against the Western Union Telegraph Company. The picture company ordered two reels of gas dispited in Mendon, Ill. The telegraph company transmitted the message as Mendota, Ill. and the photoplay house was idle two nights for lack of power.

Steve Bennos of Lincoln, Ill. plans to open an ice house on that city next summer.

It is due me who, for the last two years have been writing under the pseudonym at the heading of this page, to say that last week, by some of those accidents that occur in the best regulated household, another hand was responsible for what appeared on the screen. It was, in fact, our Man About Town who was made to pose as Lux Graphicus. Enough said on this point.

Readers of this page will notice that this year it has been severely practical. It is the practical side of moving picture making in which I am chiefly interested. I have helped make pictures both in Great Britain and the United States. Nothing is at present of such great interest to me as the practical side of a branch of work which is in process of development—or, I should say, in process of evolution. For the making of the picture is like the making of the business—still in the making. Picture-making, in fine, has not yet been reduced to the state of a definite formula. The reason for this is that at present it reposes very largely upon impractical or inexact knowledge.

My readers know that I am very fond of the parallel between stationary photography and moving picture photography. I think we in the moving picture field can learn from the lesson of the stationary photographic field. Let us take the manufacturing end of matters. I am old enough to remember the time when the great photographic manufacturers started in. This was about the time of the gelatine era, that is in the early eighties. They began tentatively and amidst very humble surroundings. Thep ivot of modern photography is the gelatine process, that is the incorporation of bromide of silver in dry gelatine. Before the gelatine era you had to immerse a film in wet collodion and nitrate of silver and expose and develop the wet sensitized film. This, as the reader knows, is termed the Wet process, and is still extant. It was a personal process—troublesome, messy, awkward and slow.

Then came the incorporation of the sensitized silver salt in gelatine. The mixture was coated on glass; then dried. So you exposed the dry plate and developed it far more readily than the wet plate. And the dry gelatine process made photography practicable in the commercial sense, and as it exists to-day. But for years after the dried gelatine process became popular, exact knowledge on the technical and manufacturing ends was difficult to obtain.

Manufacturers started especially in the old world, in a very small way. Technical difficulties were encountered. The films fogged; they would not stay on the glass; they were spotty; they would keep, etc, etc. I have many old photographic readers, both in this country and across the Atlantic, and I know that they will bear me out in what I say, namely, that between the years 1880 and 1885, modern photography was in the experimental stage just as moving picture work to-day is largely experimental. Definite and exact information was difficult to obtain. Manufacturers and others groped their way along just as they are groping their way to-day.

Of course some of my friendly critics will take exception to what I am saying, but I claim to know what I am writing about. To repeat, I made moving pictures a dozen years ago, so whatever I say is based upon actual experience. Speaking generally, we have not got down to proper methods of exposure in moving picture negative making. We have not got down to the best methods of development, either of the negative or of the positive. Tinting and toning are not perfectly understood. Optically, too, we have still far to go. In short, the entire photographic technique of the picture is still only dimly comprehended by the great majority of picture makers. Of course there are exceptions to this rule both in this country and abroad. I am speaking generally. I am taking the trade as I know it here and abroad.

One thing, in particular, has caused me almost to weep when going through American film factories—for I have not seen an English factory for four or five years—that is, the enormous waste of raw stock by incorrect exposure and faulty development. The waste that goes on in some of these establishments if prevented would have very largely added to the profits of these concerns. It is possible by proper exposure and development of both negative and positive film to stop the ruinous waste that goes on in many moving picture factories. But this can only be done by proper knowledge of technique, by the application of the scientific method which is, after all, only common sense knowledge.

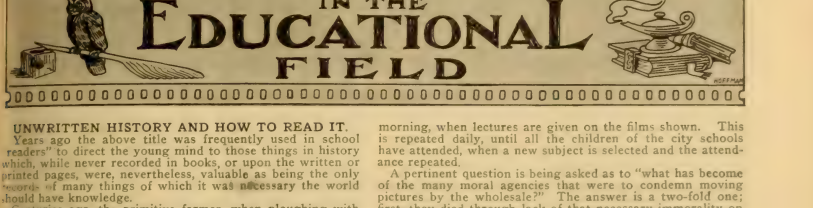
I write this page this week by way of a plea for closer attention to what I will call picture economics and the making of the picture in its photographic aspects. In these and other pages recently, a vast deal of attention has been paid to the scenario end. As to the scenario we have all sorts of writers, authorities and self-constituted authorities. Some people have written about the scenario who have no more idea of how a scenario should be written than the man in the moon. Then again, we have "authorities," self-constituted and otherwise, on acting. Much of this stuff has made me smile. Nobody seems to have especially addressed himself to the technique of the photography of the film. When the average critic criticizes a picture he merely says that the photography is good or is bad, as the case may be. This remark applies to nearly every writer in every journal, trade and theatrical. Not one of them tries to help the manufacturers by pointing out that the picture may be over or under exposed, improperly developed, tinted or toned. Is this because these people do not know? I maintain that no man has a right to sit down and criticise a moving picture unless he has something more than a superficial knowledge of the entire work of the making of the picture. Your ideal critic should be at any rate, a photographer, both theoretically and practically. Most of the critics I have met have never taken a photograph in their lives. The form of criticism they write is not at all helpful to picture progress, simply because they are ignorant of the essentials and fundamentals of what they are criticising. Let us have increased attention to the technique of the picture and technically qualified writers writing about what they understand.

"PROPAGANDARY IN THE PICTURE HOUSE."

In The Moving Picture World two or three weeks ago there was a semi-humorous article with this heading. It predicted the time when the moving picture theater might be seized upon by propagandists of any and every kind for the purpose of furthering the causes they have at heart. Well, this state of things has come to pass. We read in our "New York Times" one day last week that an enthusiastic lady suffragist has captured a downtown moving picture theater, where she is showing lantern slides and talking the virtues of suffragism to large audiences. We are not going to say whether this is a step in the right direction, but it is a straw which shows the direction of the wind. Consider, now, the enormous power which might be wielded in these houses. Five million people attend them daily; 20,000,000 to 25,000,000 people visit them every week; that is, roughly, one-third of the population of the United States. Every propagandist, suffragistic or otherwise might achieve great results by getting his cause illustrated by means of lantern slides, etc., before this mighty public. We have seen what the tuberculosis exterminators have done in the matter. Now come the suffragists; after this, in all probability, other social reformers will avail themselves of the moving picture theater for doing their best, according to their lights, to advance the cause of humanity.

MEMORY RESTORED BY MOVING PICTURES.

Mervin Hitchcock, son of the principal of a military academy at San Rafael, Cal., near San Francisco, says that the sight of a moving picture actress making a feigned fall from a horse at a San Francisco moving picture theater, restored his memory which he had lost in a similar accident. A week preceding his view of the picture he had been thrown from his horse. He was treated for concussion of the brain and quickly dismissed from the hospital as cured. He continued in a half dazed condition, however. Telling of his restoration at the theater, he said: "The whole performance appeared as of a dream. Then came the part where the girl is supposed to fall from her horse. In an instant everything came back to me. It was like waking from a deep sleep. I feel sure that the similarity between the girl's accident and my own restored my memory."



UNWRITTEN HISTORY AND HOW TO READ IT.

Years ago the above title was frequently used in school readers" to direct the young mind to those things in history which, while never recorded in books, or upon the written or printed pages, were, nevertheless, valuable as being the only records of many things of which it was necessary the world should have knowledge.

Centuries ago, the primitive farmer, when ploughing with his oxen, would turn up pieces of hard stone, which, upon close examination, would prove to be flintstone—one, shaped into a point, showing him that his forefathers tipped their arrows with these hard, sharp points to make them more effective in either hunting or warfare. Another would be wedge-shaped, with a long, sharp edge, revealing the axe head of ancient usage. Thus are we able to read that which could not be written. In other places, rude pictures drawn upon soft stone, and allowed to harden into the "hieroglyphics," which became the historians of their days—possessing a value so inestimable that without them even to-day we should not be able to record the world's history and development.

In a higher degree this same process continues. The progress and history of to-day is not confined to books. Generations yet to come will learn much from that which was never written. Education is developed in many ways other than that of language, and in many instances language takes a second place in the impartation of knowledge. The picture, whether scratched in Assyrian clay, or cut into Egyptian stone, served its worthy and noble purpose. It mattered not if the library was housed in pyramid or catacomb, its illustrative records proved well-nigh eternal. In mediæval and modern times the picture has filled an all-important part, sometimes supplementing, and at other times being supplemented by the library. In this connection it is interesting to note that the leading incidents of the Bible are recorded in the picture galleries of the world; so that (says an authority) if all the books in the world were destroyed the Bible incidents could be reproduced from painting and sculpture. Much of the history of almost every nation is found in the illustrative rather than the written account. Indeed, poor indeed would our civilized humanity be without its unwritten records. The living picture, with its life portrayals, speaking with that new language which at once appeals to all the faculties of the reader, is the marvel of all these things.

Sublime, indeed, is the contemplation of the history to be recorded without words, and yet, in a language that speaks to eyes, ears, head and heart, the living picture is the crown of the ages, the greatest recorder of the past, and the greatest teacher of the future. It is said that in degradation there is a bottomless pit. Surely, then, in cultude, there are topless heights, in the climbing of which the picture is of invaluable aid. If it is possible that the future holds a period in which the usefulness of the picture will be transcended, it would seem that such a state is beyond present comprehension. But even then, in that marvellous age, they will still be reading, like ourselves, that which has never been written, the cinematograph having been the medium of their education.

EDUCATIONAL.

"Meanwhile England looks on—and yawns."

The above quotation is found at the end of an article written by an English authority on cinematography, describing the progress made in other countries, in contrast to the lack of progress in his own country. It may be that the writer is not quite fair in his criticism, as England, though conservative, usually "gets there," where educational matters are concerned. While America has been commended for its progress there is no doubt there are places (not a few) in all parts of the United States, where it can as truly be said that they are "looking on and yawning."

In Hamburg, the Board of Education decided that cinematography should form a part of the ordinary education received by the children of the city. Arrangements were made with the proprietor of a theater for the use of his place every morning, when lectures are given on the films shown. This is repeated daily, until all the children of the city schools have attended, when a new subject is selected and the attendance repeated.

A pertinent question is being asked as to "what has become of the many moral agencies that were to condemn moving pictures by the wholesale?" The answer is a two-fold one; first, they died through lack of that necessary immorality on which alone they could feed to live. In the second place the many boards of education now becoming interested, together with the higher standards required by the public, have combined to make the picture more valuable not matter to what branch of art is is applied. It is almost impossible to read a daily newspaper now without finding a reference to the fact that either some notable scholar or lecturer, or some board of trustees or education, are giving cinematography serious consideration. Under these circumstances it is not surprising that censorship is becoming a thing of the past. Education is culture and culture is its own censor.

A NEW PROFESSOR.

A few months ago there appeared in these pages an article entitled "A New Profession." It was therein shown that the operator of the future would be a man of education and ability, rather than a mere user of an instrument. A striking fulfilment of this prediction has recently occurred, when in Brooklyn the associate of Burton Holmes, of "Travelogue" fame, was not permitted to operate the machine through "technical inability." It seemed an unnecessary hardship for this man, himself an inventor of attachments to moving picture machines, to be disqualified because of the lack of certain knowledge in applied electricity. It goes to show, however, that a "Professor of Cinematography" is a title in the near future. The ability to use, lecture upon, and to lecture with the cinematograph, is becoming one of no mean order. With such a striking example as that given above it is apparent that a future of importance is coming to this applied science.

THE "MAKE-BELIEVE" INDIAN.

Children revel in the "make believe," but only when the real is impossible. In generations to come, long ages after the real American Indian has passed into history, pictures of this most interesting race of people will be enjoyed. It will be a gift to the distant future as it is to-day to produce the "make-believe" Indian. But the question arises, should not the Indians of to-day be real? A company of Indians who recently saw some of these reproductions most justly resented the untrue, unreal and unfair representations of themselves and their habits. Truthfulness in picture has previously been advocated in these columns, and it is well that this timely and authoritative protest should come. While we still have the real Indians with us, why cannot thoroughly representative films be produced, making them at once illustrative and historic recorders of this noble race of people, with their splendid physique and physical powers? It is to be hoped that some of our Western manufacturers will yet produce a series of films of REAL Indian life, doing so with the distinct object in view that they are to be of educational value, both for present and future use. Such a certified series will be of great value.

The popularity of the motion picture in educational work has again been attested through the adoption by the Board of Education, of the city of Chicago, of a motion picture equipment to be used in the nine school centers under the direction of Prof. Voorhees. The first entertainment of this nature which the school board will offer to the children and parents will be given this week in the Fallon School at Wallace and 42d streets.

The Board of Education looked into the matter of selecting an outfit with the utmost care, having appointed a special committee under the direction of Mr. J. D. Shoop, Superintendent of Schools, and they finally adopted the motiograph motion picture machine as being the best adapted to their work and the machine on which the committee divided unanimously.

PROFIT BY THEIR EXAMPLE.

Last October, when I criticised the moving picture theaters in Freeport, Ill., it had a curious effect on the several managers in that city. The Lyric manager "got sore," the Superba manager "raved," but the Majestic manager said nothing, smiled grimly, and started to make the improvements as suggested in the write-up. Last Saturday I had occasion to stop off in Freeport again, and the changes made on "picture row" were indeed noticeable. The Superba is in charge of a new manager, Mr. Malone, who is endeavoring to give his patrons the very best in the picture line. Besides the regular Independent releases, he is also giving his patrons an added attraction in the shape of Travelogue slides, and his full house on Saturday showed plainly that the public appreciated that sort of entertainment. The Lyric was showing the best of the licensed makes, the music has been greatly improved, and the interior enhanced with added decorations; here too, the house was playing to good business. But the Majestic surprised me. Here, just a few months ago, was a store front theater, poorly lighted, sans decorations, and equipped with a graphophone to furnish the music. On Saturday I saw a "New Majestic"—a new front with a spacious lobby has been put in, and the interior has been very prettily decorated and lighted.

"IL TROVATORE" BEGINS LYRIC REFORM.

It has been commonly remarked among Springfield, Ill., patrons of the photoplay that if any musician could give a satisfactory accompaniment of the picture it probably would be the pianist at the Lyric, commonly known as Loper's. Lovers on the film who have been hoping for appropriate settings have been cheered by the melodies which rippled forth for comedy reels but they resented the intrusion of light music upon pathos and tensity. At a production of Essanay's "The Unpardonable Sin" the piano help-ed interest the audience in the thrilling struggle and played fairly well at other times. This was encouraging enough to bring people next day when the bills tacked in the lobby, announced that "Il Trovatore" would be given. This was one of the best performances given in Springfield. I saw the film at one of the first runs in the afternoon when the crowd is smallest, but it could not be said that the Pathe version of the story went unappreciated even by the younger folk, who seemed inclined to more frothy music. Musical criticism with the World representative is non-technical and he believes that he is as easily satisfied as the average attendant at moving picture shows. The score of the opera as given at Loper's is in harmony with the pictures, and greatly enjoyed by the patrons. The drummer however failed to get the clash of the swords with his attempts upon the triangle.

Just why the Lyric has installed the male singer of coarse songs, that have been frowned upon by the censors is a puzzle. Not a word of commendation for this feature has been heard while, on the contrary, considerable criticism is offered by the public. Droves of high school girls have the Lyric habit which is reason enough for a non-objectionable entertainment. The projection here has never been the least bit weak and with this good film service and more care on the music the proprietor apparently could command a clientele from the best circles of society. F. H. M.

SUCCESS OF THE PARK THEATER IN BROOKLYN.

The policy adopted by Mr. Germain, proprietor of the Park Theater, of Fifth Avenue and Fifteenth Street, Brooklyn, to conduct a thorough moving picture house at once attractive, clean and satisfying to the best families of the community, has proved eminently successful. Seldom can one find such crowds nightly thronging a moving picture place as one finds here, and to the credit of the management it must be noted that there is no shortening of the programme or hurrying of the pictures. A wise trust to the honor of the people to pass out at the end, making room for those waiting, is extremely creditable. Monday night of this week was a Vitagraph night. A representative from the Vitagraph Company gave an interesting talk on the objects of that company in its desire to produce and present most acceptable entertainments. Mr Maurice Costello, long a favorite in the picture, appeared in person, and gave a brief talk on his experiences, to the delight of the audience. Another most interesting feature was a timely observance of the Lincoln holiday, by showing upon the screen epigrams of the strong moral value from Lincoln's speeches; the audience was especially appreciative of this innovation, and the proprietor is to be commended for his thoughtfulness. There can be no doubt that his well deserved success is largely due to this desire to give his patrons the best possible evening's entertainment.

ON THE ROAD.

Kokomo, Ind.—Mr. G. Schwenger has secured a lease on a very desirable location in the city of Kokomo, and has let the contract for the building of a modern moving picture theater. Mr. Bohman, an old road man and an experienced operator, is associated with Mr. Schwenger in this enterprise. The equipment as well as the building will be modern in every respect, the very latest machines, indirect lighting system, and a Mirror Screen will be installed.

Church in a Picture Theater.—For some time past, the pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal Church, of Los Angeles, has been conducting noon meetings in Clune's Broadway Theater. These services have been instrumental in attracting the busy business man to church. The program consists of several selected films of religious interest, choir selections, and a short address by the pastor. These impromptu talks have been popular, and, it is understood, will be conducted throughout the season. Admission is free.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Addressing the National Municipal League, of this city, Mr. John Collier, of the National Board of Censorship of New York City, pointed out, not only the immediate benefit of moving pictures, but the wider beneficial effect upon the whole motion picture world, of using the school buildings as moving picture theaters.

St. Paul, Minn.—Board of Health is getting ready to start its spring crusade against the house-fly, by using the "Fly Pest" film, as a means of education.

Marion, Indiana. Thomas Ladd, manager of the Starette Theater, states that with twelve first-run Independent releases a week, and the combination of good projection and a tastefully decorated lobby, he is getting the business, despite the fact that the season is backward.

San Antonio, Texas.—Gaston Melies and the Melies Stock Company are canning many "Western dramas" hereabouts for spring and summer consumption. The Melies Company, unlike other dealers in canned goods, are not ashamed to print the contents on the label, and their output is guaranteed under the pure brain-food act of umpty-six.

Macomb, Ill.—The Family Theatre (Independent) has been enjoying a good run of business. Manager M. J. Myers is to enlarge the place by adding a balcony with a seating capacity of 200. The decorations are in red and green, with gold and silver trimmings. Special attention has been given to the system of ventilation, an important point overlooked by too many theatre managers.

Yonkers, N. Y.—Mr. Hamilton opened his beautiful newly built theatre, the "Palace," on Tuesday the 7th. The "Palace" is a model for all moving picture exhibitors to follow. It is as fireproof as any theatre can be made, the decorations are most beautiful. The ceiling represents a sky with cloud and star effects. Moving pictures and illustrated songs are the attractions, no vaudeville. On the opening night all those present marveled at the beautiful dissolving effects produced by The "Monarch Dissolver" furnished by C. B. Kleine.

Muskegon, Mich.—By the purchase of the Temple Theater in Muskegon, Mr. Carl Ray has practically secured entire control of the show business in that city. Plans are being drawn for the enlargement of the Temple, which will give it a seating capacity of 1,200. Work will be started in the near future. Besides the Temple, Mr. Ray owns three of the remaining four theaters in the city, two of which use Independent releases. One of these is called the Theater Beautiful, and it is certainly in keeping with its name. The interior is a work of art with the exception of the ceiling, which is a bit out of harmony with the rest of the surroundings. The side walls are paneled off, and in each of the panels hangs a beautiful oil painting, over which is attached an incandescent lamp, arranged in such a manner that the light gives a good effect to the picture and at the same time lights up the theater with a soft mellow light. One of the pictures which especially attracts the art lover is the "Spring Idol." This painting was formerly the property of a Russian ambassador and was secured at a cost of $2,700. Another one of special interest is the "Tragedy of the Desert"; this was formerly the property of Mrs. Marshall Field, and cost $2,200. F. P. B.

FIGHT PICTURES COMMON NUISANCE?

Upon the plea of County Attorney Venable, that exhibition of the Johnson-Jeffries' fight pictures was a violation of the state law, and the exhibition itself was a common nuisance, District Judge Frank M. Bailey, at Chickasha, Okla., granted an injunction against the production in that city.

Oral Examinations.—Mr. Fred. W. Gregory, St. Louis, Mo., writes: "I would like to have your opinion as regards the matter of oral examinations. I understand that practically all the boards of moving picture operator examiners in various cities conduct oral examinations only. Do you think this kind of an examination is right, proper or fair?"

Well, Neighbor Gregory, I suppose I will get myself in trouble answering your query. No, I do not think an oral examination right or fair. Licensing of operators or any other craftsmen presumes in advance the authority to refuse the applicant the privilege of working at his trade, profession or calling, if he be found incompetent, or if there is question as regards his competency. Withholding the right to work is a very serious matter—a very serious matter, indeed—and every safeguard should be thrown around that kind of authority. The trouble with the oral examination is that it places the applicant in an absolutely helpless position. He may claim his examination was not fair, but he has no method of proving what the examination was. He may say that certain questions were unfair, or that he answered certain questions correctly. He has no method of proving his assertion. It is simply his word against that of the examiner, and in 999 cases out of 1,000 the word of the examiner would be taken. To sum this whole matter up briefly, I very much doubt if an oral examination would stand the test of the courts. That is to say, I doubt if any Supreme Court would hold that a municipality or State had the right to refuse the citizen opportunity to earn his living at his chosen profession or calling unless his incompetency be shown by written examination of which there could and would be competent record. The holding of written examinations, however, would very largely increase the labor of the examinations, and very largely increase the inconvenience to those examiners and to the applicants. As a rule, I think the examiners intend to do the right thing and conduct examinations fairly. Injustice may be, and doubtless is, occasionally done, but where this is the case I believe it is seldom or never intentional. Generally, the examination of operators has been foisted upon the electrical department of the various cities almost invariably against the will of the department, and it is really surprising that they have managed as well as they have and created such a small amount of friction.

Up-to-Date House.—Mr. E. G. Henson, the "Rex Theater," Charlestown, W. Va., writes: "Tuesday, February 15, will see the opening of our new $25,000 modern house seating 900, lower floor and balcony, latest style opera chairs, decoration scheme in green and mahogany. Programme of three reels and illustrated song. Five nights a week we will show pictures only and the sixth night will be filled by a first-class road production. No vaudeville at all; therefore, the ones who predict failure for pictures shown will talk differently. If theaters costing real money are being built for the picture game alone, it stands to reason that the said game is here to stay. Our orchestra consists of ten pieces—not the 'turkey and straw' or 'over the waves' kind, but real musicians who play the pictures. Those who know have paid us the compliment of saying our show is just a wee bit better than most of the photoplays. Our employees are uniformed and we are giving the public amusement they never would or could have enjoyed if the picture plays had not come into existence. We use two Edison machines, 80-foot throw and 14-foot picture.

"I noticed in The World recently an article about trademarks appearing in the different scenes. That was a wise thing to spring. Those trade marks may or may not be necessary, but they certainly do not look right. In days gone by, when pictures were only pictures, it was all right, but at this stage of the game, when we make every effort to have the picture real, try to have the music suit the picture, and to have our projection all that it should be, a trade mark keeps the fact constantly in the mind of the public that after all they are only looking at a shadow—a picture. It seems to me that the one best bet for the film manufacturer just now is paying very, very close attention to little details, which, though perhaps slight, tend most decidedly to mar the picture as a whole."

Glad to hear, Neighbor Henson, that you have such a beautiful little theater all ready to open. The very best wishes of "The Moving Picture World" go with you. Your remarks are timely. Your letter speaks for itself, however, and requires little or no comment.

Ghost Elimination.—Mr. Harry Dobson, Toronto, Can., contributes the following: "Noting several queries regarding ghost on the screen, I write to set forth my own remedy for that trouble, understanding that what I mean by 'ghost' is a blue spot in the picture. My remedy is one No. 10 condenser used with a No. 7 or No. 6. I had trouble on a throw of 80 feet, picture 11 by 15, D. C. 220 volt, 40 amperes, ⅝ Electra carbons. I can now place a carbon 3½ inches long in the bottom of the Edison B lamp and get a spot 2 inches across. These condensers can be bought from Mr. Redpath, manager of Charles Potter's Opticians, 84 Yonge Street, Toronto, at a cost of about $1.50, and I will guarantee that with their use the ghost will disappear. Try them yourself and be convinced. I am the tall one standing third from the end on the right side of that photo on Page 301, February 11 issue. The union is doing very well, having been established about fourteen months. We have about 25 members, in the best picture and vaudeville houses here. The scale for an eight-hour day, six days a week, is $15—rather lower, I think, than it should be for good, reliable men."

You certainly have sprung a new one on me, friend Dobson. I do not know just what to say about the condenser stunt, but pass it along to those who are having ghost troubles, with the recommendation that it be tried out. You did not say which lens you used in he front and which behind, but experimenters can readily determine this point by trying it out. I thoroughly agree with you that $15 per an eight-hour day is altogether too low. However, you will no doubt be able to gradually increase the scale a little at a time, provided you establish the fact that your members are reliable, painstaking, competent operators, and to this end I would heartily recommend to your organization the establishment of demonstration and study rooms in which should be kept all books and periodicals bearing upon the art of projection, as well as such mechanical and electrical appliances as you are able to procure. The editor of this department has had much experience in the organized labor field, and offers this advice: In building up your wage scale, build slowly, but always be building. Let excellence of performance go hand in hand with the demand for increased salary. Remember that a labor organization is nothing more or less than a business organization, and to meet with the greatest degree of success it must be conducted strictly along business lines. Do not stand for injustice from your employers, and on the other hand, never seek to work injustice on them.

Arc Projector.—From Carl W. Rumsey, Lafayette, Ind., comes the following: "Enclosed find money order for Handbook. The attached photos show an apparatus which permits the operator to adjust his carbons accurately without eye strain. The idea is superior to that advanced some time ago in the Trouble Department. Simplicity is one of its main features. Its working parts consist of a ground glass plate on which is projected an image of the carbons, a small rectangular-shaped tube of glass with one end enclosed, a convenient bracket for fastening to lamp-house door. The ground glass plate is fastened to the open end of the tube at an angle of 45 degrees, and at the other, or closed end, is a very small hole, through the lamp-house door, in direct line with the crater. This hole projects an inverted image of the carbons on the ground glass."

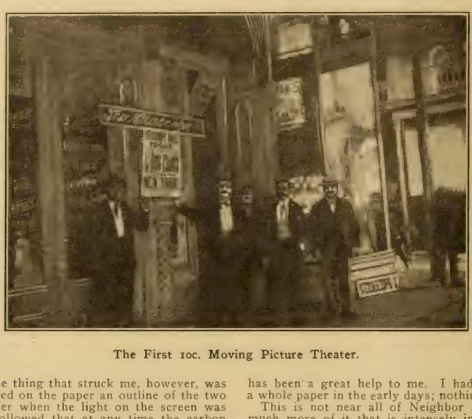
We are indebted to you, Neighbor Rumsey, for submitting the idea, accompanied by such excellent photographs. The photographs of the lamp-house and the arc projection are in themselves unique and altogether out of the ordinary. The idea is, as you say, very simple and of unquestioned value. In this connection, I would like to say that while in Washington I saw the condenser lens arc projection stunt, mention in the Department some time since, exemplified. A pinhole was punched in the back side of the lamp-house, and at proper distance (dependent in distance to wall) away was placed a condensing lens, which, in conjunction with the pinhole, projected a perfect image of the arc and carbon points on a white sheet of paper placed, in this instance, on the wall about 4 feet away. The thing that struck me, however, was that some one had traced on the paper an outline of the two carbon points and crater when the light on the screen was perfect. It naturally followed that at any time the carbon points conformed to the tracing on the paper the arc would be in the right position, and barring flaws in the carbon, the light perfect. It was the best thing of the kind I had ever seen. Neighbor Rumsey's scheme, however, will be of distinct value in operating rooms where there are more than one machine, because in such cases it will be impossible to use the condenser lens idea, for both machines at least.



The First 10c. Moving Picture Theater.

Ancient History.—Mr. W. A. Reid, Atlantic City, N. J., writes as follows: "I have been in the business since 1896 and believe I had the sixth or seventh machine to leave the Edison works. On page 177, January 28 issue, I see where Mr. Robert Grau says he saw the first moving pictures that were revealed to American theater-goers at Keith's, one evening in July, 1894. I presume he meant July, 1896, as Koster & Bial's, at Thirty-fourth street, had the New York City rights, paying, I believe, $500 per week to Messrs. Raff & Gammon, of 43 West Twenty-eighth Street, who had the selling of State rights. If my memory serves me right, the first public exhibition of moving pictures projected on a curtain in American was down near the 'Edison Vitascope,' the date, April 23, 1896, if I am not mistaken in this matter. Mr. James H. White, of the Edison Company, can set you right, as he operated one of the two machines, which were the spool-bank beater type. Mr. Keith had machines in his Providence, Philadelphia and Boston houses, which were called the Edison Vitascope, and I saw the first performance at Boston, Mass., early in May, 1896. I was in New Orleans when Mr. Keith imported the first Lumiere Cinematograph, and I believe the operators who came with them were receiving $75 per week for their work. I left for New Orleans with Messrs. Wainwright and Rock, the present Wm. T., of the Vitagraph, and I think the above firm (meaning Wainwright & Rock) should be given the credit for being the first to open a 10-cent moving picture show. First, they opened up a place, calling it the 'Vitascope,' doors opened at 10 a. m to 3 p. m., and at 6 p. m. to 10 p. m., located at 623 Canal Street, New Orleans. We opened this place Sunday, July 28, 1896. I say 'we;' well, by this I mean I was the operator. Our first performance consisted of five films, as follows: (1) Brooklyn Bicycle Parade, by Edison; (2) The Duel, Lumiere; (3) The Kiss, May Irwin and John C. Rice, by Edison; (4) White Wings Parade, by Edison; (5) Trilby Dance, by the Sisters Leigh, by Edison.

"The people simply flocked to the place. We had closed a four weeks' engagement at the West End, a summer resort seven miles from New Orleans. We opened to over 8,000 people, and the next Sunday 12,000. All I have said can be verified by Mr. Rock or James H. White. I have nearly all the data in my scrap book. After being in the business since 1896, I have not learned it all, and the Trouble Department has been a great help to me. I had trouble enough to fill a whole paper in the early days; nothing like it now."

This is not near all of Neighbor Reid's letter. There is much more of it that is intensely interesting, and which I should like to print, but what is a man to do with letters stacked up all around him? We all thank you, Friend Reid, for the interest reminiscenses of the old days, and I am sure they will be of great interest to our readers everywhere. I may add that the above was verified by Mr. W. T. Rock, of the Vitagraph Company. There was a 25-cent house in New York City which antedated the above by about one year. It used an "Idolascope," or "Idaloscope." Herewith is a picture of the first 10-cent house in America. The man at extreme right is Mr. Rock; next him is Mr. Wainwright, while leaning again the wall is Mr. Reid. The films named were each supposed to be 50 feet long, but only measured 40.

Circuit Breaker.—Mr. Chas. W. Mitchell, Brooklyn, N. Y. writes: "It occurs to me that an entirely practical and proper protection to moving picture arc lamp would be a circuit breaker in addition to fuses. The breaker should be adjusted to operate sooner than the fuse. For the protection of motors, generators and other electrical appliances, the circuit breaker is rapidly replacing the fuse. With a breaker, there is no question as to 'which fuse is blown.' The breaker springs open the same as a knife switch and may be closed again instantly, the arcing being eve less than is at present in switch action. Delays in moving picture theaters are often caused by blown fuses. These delays would be largely obviated through the use of a circuit breaker. True, the breaker costs considerable, but it would soon pay for itself in the saving of fuses. Electrical departments having jurisdiction would have to be consulted. I feel, however, they would favor the installation of circuit breakers."

I would have to think that matter over a little, Friend Mitchell. Certainly, the circuit breaker is a very valuable safety appliance for use under certain conditions. I would like to hear from our readers as to what they think of this proposition. Personally I am at first glance inclined to think the circuit breaker would not be very satisfactory for use on projection arc lights, but that is merely a first impression. I will think the matter over in detail. Meanwhile, let us hear from our readers.

Poor Operator.—Denison, Tex., writes: "Enclosed find check for Handbook. We have just opened a new place and have an operator who claims eleven years' experience, but he is not producing the goods by any means, though we are paying him $5.50 per week over the local scale. I know a good picture when I see it, but can not tell a man how to make it, and think the Handbook ought to help some. I am writing the Powers people (as we have a new Powers No. 6) regarding projection lenses. The ones with the machines seem blurred in spots. Any information you can give will be thankfully received. Would also like to know your personal opinion on the ——— in comparison with others. Would prefer you do not publish this letter, but answer personally, if possible. Our picture seems unsteady. No flicker, but moves about two inches up and down on the screen; throw, 85 feet; 9 by 12 picture. Success to the Trouble Department and the Moving Picture World."

In this connection I wish to say that I have the names of many operators located all over the country, all of whom claim to be, and I believe, are, first-class men. Managers desiring a good operator will be furnished addresses upon application. As to the lenses, possibly they are spotted with oil on the inner end. Are you sure they are perfectly clean? Do not take any one's word, but remove them and see. That "burred in spots" sounds to me like oil. As to the article you wish my personal opinion upon, I would prefer not to express it more than to say that they are very expensive, and while some have invested and are hugely pleased with the investment, others who have purchased have regretted it. As to the movement of the film, you will have to describe it a little more definitely. Does it move up and down two inches systematically four times every revoltion of the crank? If so, the intermittent sprocket shaft is sprung, or the intermitten sprocket itself is not true. Possibly, also, the head of the machine rocks slightly under pressure of the crank. Be sure you have it fastened very solidly. Describe the movement more carefully, and I can then offer you intelligent advice. Letters are only replied to personally when a fee of from $1 to $10 is enclosed, the necessary amount varying with the amount of time and labor involved.

Another Carbon Holder.—Mr. L. A. Davis, Perry, N. Y., writes: "Enclosed find drawing of a contrivance of my own invention which I think may be of use to others. It is a carbon holder, in which stubs of carbons may be used. I had perhaps 200 stubs from two to three inches long. They had been accumulating for some time, and I devised this method of using them. I have been using stubs for my lower carbons for some time, and I get about three-quarters of an hour more light from each stub, burning them down to about one inch, or just so I could get hold of them with the pliers. In a large house, doing a big business, the saving would possibly not be enough to make it worth while, but in a small theater, where every leak is noticed, it counts up in the course of time. The holder is made of steel, but I suppose brass or copper would be as good or better. It is easily made, and cheap, costing but 50 cents. I leave it in the lower carbon jaw all the time, changing the stubs before they get too short to get hold of. This particular holder is made for ½ carbons, but, of course, it can be made for any size. The lower, or stub end, should be made the same size as the carbon, otherwise, the carbons will not line up properly."

Many thanks to you, Neighbor Perry, for the idea and the sketch. Your argument, however, that things would not be noticed in a large house is not good. A leak is a leak, regardless of whether the house be large or small, and the idea can be applied in the big theater as well as in a small one. The part marked "stem" is clamped in the carbon jaw of the lamp, the same as a carbon. The sketch shows a top and a side view.

"From an Old-Timer."—From a city more than a mile above New York (although 1,500 miles west) comes the following: "I have found innumerable 'tips' in the Department, but have only just thought that my little 'wrinkles' might be of use to brother operators. I am an Englishman, and was the fourth man to exhibit pictures publicly in England. (This certainly is our week for old-timers—sort of ancient history review.—Editor.) So I can fairly say I am an old-timer. However, it is wonderful how much even the old-timer may learn from your Department, if he is only willing. Well, here goes for my chunk of knowledge. To tie a machine down solid use two turn-buckles from an old-fashioned 'buck-saw.' To hold an arc in front of carbons on A. C., adopt the flaming arc principle by making a horseshoe core, which should be large enough to go outside the lamp; fasten it in such a manner that the ends of the two poles with be about ½ inch behind the carbons when set for use. Run the lamp feed wire about three times around the core at its back end, and then on to carbon holder in the usual way. This will create a magnet which will repel the arc and force it out in front. To hitch motor to Powers No. 5 set the motor in front of the machine just low enough to miss the light from both lenses. By using a belt made of one-inch elastic to fly-wheel it will be found to pull equally well with the framing carriage in any position, thus saving counter-shafting. Enclosed find rough sketch of wiring which I have found very successful in operating two lamps for dissolver from one compensarc or transformer. You will notice that by throwing the single pole, double throw switch to "A," the upper lamp is cut out, while by throwing it to "B" the lower lamp is cut out. Of course, before opening the switch the carbons of the lamp not burning must be frozen. I expect to install a rotary converter to-morrow, and if you think it will be of any use I will send you my opinion of it in a week or so. Why not print a list of ways by which a manager can tell the difference between the operator and the crank turner. Enclosed find $1.50 for the Handbook."

Your letter came almost as a message from home, for I certainly have had some good times in your town, and I still carry (as a keepsake) an annual pass to the "Carbonate." Now, don't laugh! Many thanks for the ideas. A. C. users might experiment carefully with that magnate proposition. I have used it, and it does the work all right, but my experience is it renders the arc very delicate and hard to handle. Still, it is worth a trial, and perhaps many will like it. As to the dissolver stunt, I do not think I quite get you on that. You certainly do not mean that you put out one of the lamps every time you change a slide, yet that is what it looks like. If you can get any dissolving out of that kind of an arrangement I do not exactly see how you can do it, but pass the thing on to our readers for investigation and comment.

Editor Corrected.—Mr. carl L. Gregory, New Rochelle, N. Y., writes: "You say in answer to 'A Few Questions,' February 18 issue, 'A projection lens focuses at any distance and a clear picture may be projected within an inch of the lens.' No lens, projection or otherwise, will focus at a distance less than its focal length, nor will any projection lens give a sharp focus within a inch of a lens unless under the two following extremely probable conditions, namely: That the projection lens is of less than one-inch focus, i. e., throws a picture greater in length than the distance from machine to screen, or that the distance from the optical center of the lens to exterior lens surface, plus 1 inch, be greater than the focal length of that lens. Having been an appreciative reader of your Department since its inception, I trust you will pardon my kicking about so small a matter, yet one likely to add to the confusion of the operators who are struggling with their first lessons in optics."

Mr dear Mr. Gregory: If you will keep moving the screen toward the machine as far as you can get a sharp definition, and then remove the lens from the machine head, and while moving the screen closer move the lens farther away from the aperture, you will find that you can focus the picture when the screen is within any distance greater than its back focus; but when the screen is right up close to the lens the lens may be quite a long distance from the aperture, say 10 to 12 inches, with a 2½ back focus lens. I have performed this little stunt and found it to be the fact, and what one sees with his own eyes one is very apt to believe. I should not have said one inch, however; you are right there.

Short Range Projection.—Hudson, N. Y., writes: "In a new theater having a stage depth of 35 feet, would it be practical to set at the rear of the stage and throw through the curtain thing at the proscenium? In other words could we get sharp definition that way? With a 14 by 18 picture, thrown 60 feet from the front of the house, we have good, sharp, clear projection. The picture would remain the same size, projecting from the rear. If the stunt is practical, what kind of a curtain should we get?"

The thing could be done, Hudson, but I do not think the results would prove very satisfactory. In the first place, I know of no available screen other than ground glass through which the audience would not see the bright lens spot. You might tilt the machine so that the orchestra audience would not get it, but the people in the balcony would. If you only have a stage depth of 35 feet, then you would have to take off at least 4 feet from the rear wall to the lens front, leaving you actually 31 feet projection. This would require a lens but little more than 2 inches E. F. With such a lens, unless it be a specially made article, ground with great care, it would be almost impossible to get sharp definition. As a matter of fact, I would not advise you to try it. Stick to the front of the house and get as long a throw as you can, is my advice.

Shutters.—Londonville, O., writes: "Will you kindly tell me why the shutter is off when the framing lever is clear up? When it is down the shutter time is perfect."

Presumably you have a machine, the shutter of which travels with the carriage, which places it in different relation to the aperture every time the framing lever is moved. Set your shutter exactly right when the framing lever is midway of its travel and then the ghost will scarcely be noticeable at either extreme of the framing carriage travel.

Unique Question.—Mr. S. J. Bowers, Nevada, Ia., writes: "I am a reader of The World, and simply could not get along without it. I find the Trouble Department very instructive. I now have a bunch of trouble of my own, as follows: I am going to move my theater into a room having a 12-foot ceiling. I wanted to drop the floor into the basement at the rear instead of making an elevated floor, but the owner refuses to let me do it. Can I have a special lens made to project a picture only 6 feet high and about 10 or 12 feet wide? From the curtain to the back row of chairs will be about 75 feet. Will have about twenty-five rows of chairs and 15 feet between the front row and the curtain. Would a picture 6 feet high bring out the same effects? How wide ought it to be when 6 feet high? Could people see the picture well from a level floor at a distance of 75 feet from the curtain? In case you advise elevated floor, how much elevation would you have. Also, size and height of picture you would run? Aisles will be on both sides and none in the center."

No, Friend Bowers, you cannot get a lens to throw a picture such as you suggest. The relative height of the picture, as compared with its width, is governed entirely by the aperture plate, and that could not be materially changed, because the film picture itself is ¾ by 1 inch. There is no practical way to accomplish what you desire. You can, however, project a picture 6 feet in height, and the width of the 6 foot picture would be approximately 8 feet. It is figured out as follows: As 11 is to 15 so is the height of the picture to its width. The only really practical thing for you to do, however, would be to drop front (screen) end of the floor down into the basement, getting all the slope you can; 5 feet in 75 would not be any too much. I am afraid if you build up the rear end of that floor it will be pretty hot in there in summer. If you run a 6 by 8 picture you could leave the floor level back for, say 25 feet, and then make a raise of between 3 and 4 feet in the next 50 feet. The picture will be in proportion all right, but it will, of course, be small for that size room. On the other hand, that small a picture can be made very brilliant, and, if properly done, might prove fairly satisfactory. A 75-foot level floor would not do at all, in my judgment.

Wire Guages.—St. Louis, Mo., asks: "Dear Mr. Richardson.—Another operator and I have had an argument concerning wire-guages. He claims that none of the standard guages are accurate. I claim they are. Who is right?"

It depends, St. Louis, on what you mean by accurate. Any standard guage is reliable enough for use by the operator. None of the guages are accurate when it comes down to close measurements, however. This by reason of the fact that they are affected by change of temperature and by wear and erosion. Large companies in buying wire do not go by a standard guage, but order by actual diameter, measuring with a micrometer caliper. With these people wire is tested down to the thousandth part of an inch—a thing impractical to do with anything except some form of micrometer.

Inspection.—Florida (name of town suppressed to not embarrass writer) writes: "In the house where I am running we have seven four-bladed ceiling fans, two 16-inch desk fans, one ¼ h. p. motor, 29 16 c. p. lamps and 4 60-watt Tungstens and the projection arc all fed by a No. 6 wire, and A. C., at that. The plant was inspected recently by a S. E. Tariff man, and the only fault found was that the transformers was too close to the wall."

The current used, aside from the projection arc, will probably be a little in excess of 20 amperes. The arc probably don't consume to exceed 20 amperes from the line, though it may be more than double that at the arc (you use a transformer, I see). I believe you have made an error in your figures, Florida, as, according to this, the No. 6 is not overloaded. I have not figured it closely—merely a rough, mental calculation; but it is not far from right. If you were using a rheostat it would be another story. Sixty amperes (though a 50-volt arc taking from 110 through a transformer) is only about 20 amperes from the line. In figuring, you must remember that the A. C. arc voltage is considerably lower than the D. C., since the arc is much shorter. Remember, also, that the arc wattage must equal the wattage taken from the line, plus some slight loss in the transformer. Taking the arc voltage at even 40, then 40 x 60 amperes equals 2,400 watts at the arc. The line voltage is 110, therefore, 2,400 divided by 110 (neglecting transformer loss, which should not exceed from 2 to 3 %) gives the amperage taken from the line, or, approximately, 22. In proof the amperes on line and lamp sides, when multiplied by the line and arc voltage, respectively, must give the same result.

Scenarios.—New York City writes: "Every scenario writer should give you credit for starting a needed discussion anent the plagiarism or outright theft of manuscript and ideas from scenario writers. I read your reply to St. Paul with much interest. You may think him wrong, but I most emphatically do not. I am a German, and have written several successful scenarios for old country manufacturers, and supposed I might do the same for American companies. I wrote a certain house, supposed to be one of the best, and was requested to submit work for consideration. I did so, and the first was returned. That was all right, as any house most certainly has the right to purchase or to return MSS. Shortly thereafter, however, in the Moving Picture World I found the same house advertising a picture, to be released in two weeks, the closing scene of which was almost exactly a duplicate of one of the scenes of a scenarios I had submitted to that house two weeks before. I wrote them concerning it, but received no satisfaction at all, they claiming the film to be from a scenario by an author living in a small town in England. Another time I read in the Moving Picture World of a new release of the same concern, the title of which was almost a duplicate of one attached to one of my submitted scenarios. The plot was built around an idea I used in the said scenario. The MSS. had been returned. Now, what is your opinion of this, Mr. Richardson? Don't you think that if an idea is good enough to be built around it is good enough to be paid for?"

Yes, New York City, I most decidedly do! But that merely brings up the proposition, 'Did they steal the idea?' It must be remembered that where so many scenarios are submitted there is naturally much duplication of ideas. I don't propose to say that the companies are innocent. I do say, however, that for a large company to deliberately steal a scenario, which they could purchase for from $10 to $25, seems ridiculous on the face of it. At least, that is the way it appeals to me. If scenarios brought a couple of hundred dollars, or even, one hundred, I could understand there might be temptation to plagiarize, or even steal them outright.

Elects Officers.—Moving picture operators, L. U. 154, I. A. T. S. E., Seattle, Wash., has elected the following officers: President, H. E. Cawthorn; vice-president, Harry Clark; treasurer, C. C. Farmer; recording and financial secretary, Thos. Kennedy; business agent, Chas. Doyle; sergeant-at-arms, G. A. Smith; press agent, L. L. Goldsmith; trustees, Jay Haas and Harry Clark; examining board, Harry Bennett, C. C. Farmer, Thos. Kennedy and Harry Clark. The union expects to give a ball in the near future. We wish the new officers success, at the same time reminding the members at large that officers can only succeed in their work through and by the co-operation and assistance of the members themselves. Send us a programme of your ball.

Operators May Join.—Mr. F. P. Stephens, Clifton, N. J., writes: "Am not operating at present, but read the Department as closely as though I were in trouble myself. I took to operating five years ago, but found the business all shot to pieces by the incompetents, who worked for next to nothing, though claiming to be experts. I finally gave it up as a bad job and went back to electrical work. Operators should get the idea out of their heads that they cannot join a union unless there is one in the town they happen to be working in. Join the operator's union nearest to you, even though hundreds of miles away, and the other craftsmen in your town will then stand by you. Let us see, now, how many isolated operators can say to Mr. Richardson 'I am a union man.' Mr. Richardson will be glad to see that in your letters and it will induce others now outside the pale of organization to get in. Let us see how many will be able to, within the next six months, post in their operating room a card reading, 'I am a union operator.'"

Yes, Mr. Richardson will be glad to see you in the operator's union, for he believes in organization. It is the order of the day, from bank president to ditch digger. Get into the band-wagon, gentlemen, and move with the crowd. Join the union nearest to you, is my advice.

Asbestos Mill Board.—Morton W. Dennis, Norwich, N. Y., writes: "What is abestos mill-board? Where can it be procured? What is its cost? Will it pass inspection by the Board of Fire Underwriters of New York State for the construction of moving picture booths?"

Asbestos mill-board is an asbestos preparation in the form of flat sheets of varying thickness—⅛, ¼, ½ inches, etc. It is both fireproof and non-conducting (insulating). It may be head from the Johns-Manville Company, whom I have had send you description and price lists. Your fourth query I now have up with the National Board of Fire Underwriters for a ruling, which will be published as soon as received.

Resistance Wire.—Birmingham, Ala., writes: "Dear Mr. Richardson—Will you kindly give me the composition of resistance wires used in rheo-tats and oblige?"

F. A. C. Perrine, in "Conductors for Electrical Distribution," says: "Intermediate between the alloys of a constant character (patent nickel) which may be used for resistance standards, and those only valuable for very high resistance (German silver, platinoid, rheotan, etc.) lie a series of nickel-steel alloys. Possibly when the properties of these alloys have been investigated with sufficient care, and their constants and permanence determined with exactness, it will be found that they may be used in standard resistance where they may supplant the other materials as thoroughly as they have already supplanted German silver as a simple absorber of energy. No assay of these alloys nor formula for their constitution is at hand, and it is probable that the ingots are not especially made for use as wire, but that the wire bars are cast from furnace heats run primarily for the manufacture of armor plate or steel shafting. These alloys are sold under trade names such as 'Krupp Wire,' 'Superior,' 'Iaia,' 'Climax,' 'Advance,' etc."

You will thus see, Birmingham, that the "Climax" and other rheostat wires in common use are nothing more or less than nickel-steel—practically the same as that cast for armor plate.

Various Things.—Washington, D. C., writes: "Will you please furnish me the following information? 1. I see that the Edison Company uses a dye which looks like a blueprint on some of their films. Is this done by blue coloring, or in the printing out process? 2. In a British catalogue a 'Maltese cross projector' is spoken of. What is meant? 3. What firms make moving picture cameras in America, and what are their addresses?"

I am not very familiar with the processes of film manufacturing, but as I understand it, the color referred to is produced by a bath of analine coloring through which the film is run. It is not done in the printing. 2. When the Britisher speaks of a Maltese cross projector, he means a cam and star type of intermittent, the same as is used on the Edison, Mutograph, Powers No. 5, Standard, etc. 3. C. W. Jenkins, Washington, D. C.; Bianchi-Columbia Phonograph Co., Tribune Building, New York; Mapes-Jones Co., Park and Tremont Avenue, The Bronx, New York.

Low Salaries.—South Bethlehem, Pa., write: "In this part of the State the maximum wage to experienced operators is $12. I note in your Handbook, recently purchased, you state that operators can be had for as little as $10. Ten dollars is a big—indeed, a very big—price to be paid for operators in this neck of the woods. Very few receive $12, and they, as well as the lower-priced men, clean the theater, distribute circulars, keep the fires going, run errands and perform other duties too numerous to mention. The operators' above referred to work six days a week, from 1 to 11 p. m. Evening jobs only pay from $4 to $6 a week. A married man of large family who worked as machinist for seventeen years on government work accepted a position as 'operator' for $5 a week evenings. Can you beat that? I write this that brother operators may know the conditions prevailing in and around this part of the country."

If the conditions set forth are as stated, then it is nothing less than disgraceful. There is not much use, however, in commenting on such a state of affairs more than to say that expecting to get good projection on any such basis as that is nothing more nor less than foolish. You can not buy brains for $10 a week, or $12, either, and the real operator not only must possess brains, but also the ability to use them. The sooner managers wake up to this fact the better for themselves and the business at large. I would suggest to managers down there that they insist on their operators wearing whiskers. In addition to the duties above enumerated, they could then be made to serve as a scrub rag or door mat.

Large Spot.—"I am using a Powers No. 5 machine with compressed gas for light. The spot at the gate is 3 inches in diameter. Whether I move machine backwards or forwards seems to make no difference. I believe I am losing a lot of light which ought to go through the lenses. I am using 4½-inch condensers. Is there no way of condensing light to a smaller spot?"

Yes. Move your light farther back from the condensers. The spot is made large by moving the light nearer the condenser and smalled by pulling it back. I am inclined to believe, however, you are using only one condenser lens. If this is so, you must install another lens.

EVERY MANAGER SHOULD BE AN OPERATOR.

A theatre manager, all the way from Missouri, writes that he is very much interested in the Moving Picture World and its various departments. He says that the Trouble Department receives his closest attention, but he wonders at the patience of the Editor in answering numerous simple questions which the writers could solve for themselves with a little effort. He says that he is not an operator, but he took a course of study in an operating booth, so as to qualify himself to relieve the operator in case of emergency, and partly so that he could be certain at all times that his operator was doing his best with the material at his command. He says that managers and operators would be relieved of fifty per cent. of their troubles if they would renew their machine heads once in a while, as they do not last forever; all of which is sensible advice.

He also touches upon another subject, which is referred to at greater length on another page of the World this week, under the heading, "The Open Market." He says his motto is, "Pay for what you want, and you can get it," which he finds hardest to apply to the film service. He says that he frequently boosts the pictures in advance from the manufacturers' announcement, and when he gets them he finds that his crowds are disappointed. So, as he concludes he may have the best machine, best light, the best operator, but it is all of no avail, unless he can have pictures to project that are worth while. All of which are obvious truths and food for reflection.

In England, the government is being approached upon the question of special laws compelling the use of cinematographic instruction, so great has grown the faith of its supporters, that they desire schools to immediately insure its benefits.

NESTOR FILMS — MADE BY DAVID HORSLEY

NESTO

"Rarely Equalled—Neve

Scene from "The Professor's Romance"

No matter how good your program may be, you can make it better by getting this well conceived, artistically produced, magnificently staged, splendidly acted and perfectly photographed comedy-drama.

Get the "Professor's Romance"; show it with the best pictures of any leading make, and you, also your audience, will agree that it beats them all.

Release o

March

PROFE

ROMA

990 Feet of

Flavored

: ONE :
NESTOR
A WEEK!

IF IT'S A
NESTOR
IT'S GOOD!

We call your attention to the fact that there will be no cold co
Unless you have already placed your order, you should lose no time

DAVID HORSLEY, German Savings

FILMS

passed—Often Imitated"

NESTOR MADE BY DAVID HORSLEY FILMS

dnesday
11

OR'S
CE

Humor tos

DNESDAY IS : : :
TORDAY!

FAYS TO GET : :
E TORS!

ROUGH-HOUSE YOUR EXCHANGE
For This Wonder Picture Of Military Life
"In The Commissioned Ranks"
For Release Wednesday, March 8th, 1911

Scene from
"In The Commissioned Ranks" is fascinating picture

w Get this winner

building, 4th Avenue and 14th Street, New York

LICENSED.

"The Ransom of Red Chief" (Edison).—A boy story that makes the audience laugh with, not at, the boy from beginning to end. The order of things relating to a ransom is reversed, and the father of the kidnapped boy asks $25 for taking the boy back, instead of paying money to get him, as most fathers would do. All the complications which arise are quite as humorous as that, and before the film ends the people who see it will be ready to declare that it is one of the most interesting and funny boy films they have yet seen.

"Grandmother's War Story" (Kalem).—A narrative of the civil war which affords Miss Gene Gauter ample opportunity to display her versatile powers. The story is simply told of the work of a spy, and is so plain that it cannot be misunderstood. With it is interwoven a love story, which is really the basis of grandmother's tale. The setting is picturesque—in fact, it is typical of the South, where the scenes are laid. The audience retains its interest from beginning to end.

"A Western Courtship" (Pathe).—A picture by the American Company purporting to represent a Western courtship and marriage. It is such a travesty upon anything of that character that could possibly have happened that it almost ceases to be interesting. Perhaps it may be said that picturesque characters are always interesting, but when they perform such absurdities as are here repeated, they cease to be interesting and become merely silly.

"The Axolotl" (Pathe).—A valuable educational film, representing the life history of an axolotl—a frog-like animal of peculiar structure. The development from the egg is clearly shown and forms a marvelously attractive biography of a little known animal. The photography is good, and the different stages of growth and development are so plainly shown that it can be understood without explanation.

"Catherine Howard" (Urban).—A picture which is really the reproduction of an old drama based upon the marriage of King Henry VIII. to Catherine Howard. Various complications are shown, which end in her punishment. It requires a good knowledge of English history to comprehend this story.

"Fisher Folks" (Biograph).—A love story told of the fisher folks in a picturesque village near the sea. It is the tale of a love that is born to conquer and the love that is born of a true heart, and clearly points out the difference between them. The coquette loses, though there are lapses on the part of the man that almost break the heart of his wife. The ending of the story is pleasant, showing the little family united and free from the machinations of the flirt. It is one of those domestic stories, filled with dramatic interest, because it depicts what actually occurs in human hearts. The setting is picturesque and affords numerous glimpses of an interesting fishing village.

"Getting Even" (Lubin).—How a man succeeded in getting even with a restaurant keeper. The fun begins when the proprietor discovers that his place has been advertised as a free lunch establishment and the guests file out without paying.

"Schultz Has Smallpox" (Lubin).—He really has a small box, but because he pronounces it wrongly the people flee from him as from the plague. Some amusing complications occur before the difficulty is finally cleared up.

"Billy and His Pal" (Melies).—Every boy has his ideal of what manhood is, and this one, like many another, selected a cowboy. But unlike many, he is enabled to do his pal, as he proudly terms him, a very great service. The result is that the cowboy grasps the little fellow's hand and thanks him personally, which makes him quite the happiest youngster in all that region. Filled with delightful touches and some situations that are sternly realistic.

"The Buccaneers" (Selig).—A thrilling sea tale of the time of pirates and the way they ravaged the seas. The captain and his wife are bound and carried away in the conventional way, but before the pirates can accomplish their purpose a man-of-war heaves in sight and the tables are turned in a thrilling way. The pirates are punished in summary fashion, while the unfortunate man and woman are freed from their unfortunate and dangerous predicament. There are plenty of thrills and plenty of situations that will remind the audience of the stirring tales of the old Spanish Main. Clearly they liked it, too.

"A Stage Romance" (Edison).—A play within a play that will excite the interest of the audience to the highest pitch. There is no question about this. As the love story slowly unfolds, the villain lays his trap for his rival and then falls into it himself, to use homely parlance, the interest of the audience becomes intense. Happily, however, the tragic result does not follow. But the dramatic strength of the picture is maintained throughout. Then there are peeps into that romantic world of the stage with which very few are acquainted, with some scenes representing the first rehearsal in progress with all the staff busy. It is all attractive and holds the interest from beginning to end.

"The Lost Ribbon" (Kalem).—A Western love story, bearing with it some of the atmosphere of the plains and mountains. The difficulty is to realize that some parts of it are not real, so well is the photography done. The love story that runs through it, the cowboys careering like mad to the cabin which the Indians have attacked, and the fight that follows, are excitement enough for one film. It is all well staged and well acted, with an appreciation of the verities that has made the picture well worth while, even though somewhat melodramatic in temper.

"Whiffles' Double" (Pathe).—A somewhat rough comedy based upon a very striking resemblance. Poor Whiffles loses everything—girl and all—in the melee, and all because another turned up in his absence who looked like him.

"A Boy's Vest" (Pathe).—While this picture is well enough acted to tell its story, some in the audience might question whether it represents an event which might really have occurred. That is coming to be more than ever before a point of consideration with the audience. They like to see pictures that reproduce scenes and incidents which might really have happened, and frequently in direct proportion as this done does the interest of the audience develop. This might have occurred; but the whole proposition seems somewhat questionable. In a way, the material appears wasted.

"When the Light Waned" (Vitagraph).—A love story, in which the principal interest is supposed to center around an artist who goes blind at his work, and is cared for by his sweetheart, but is really developed in the acting of Jean, a very intelligent dog. Some of the outdoor scenes are good, but the impression of the entire picture is somewhat commonplace.

"The Cattleman's Daughter" (Essanay).—A love story with a rival mixed up in it and a daughter turned out because she dared love a poor man instead of accepting the rich man her father favored. Then come reverses, with the young wife almost at death's door and the young man out of work. A safe robbery, discovery of the young man as the thief, his arrest, but before he is taken away the sick woman comes from another room. The sight softens her father's heart and all is peace afterward. Not much drama, but a straight story which can be easily understood. It will appeal to the hearts of most people in the audience.

"Saul and David" (Gaumont).—A Biblical picture, showing Saul and David at the time the evil spirit came upon Saul and he hurled his javelin at David with the intention of killing him. The characters illustrate the Bible text, following the original very closely and affording a concrete interpretation of the narrative. It will help materially in making the story as seen in the Bible real.

"At the End of the Road" (Gaumont).—A detective story, depicting how a girl followed some counterfeiters to their lair and succeeded in securing information which led to their arrest and release of her brother from custody. Some of the scenery is attractive, and there is some interest in the girl's work, but the picture does not rise to dramatic heights in any instance.

"Lieut. Scott's Narrow Escape" (Pathe).—A Western story with some thrilling riding and other acts which will hold the audience from beginning to end. The interpretation of plains life, representing cowboys and Indians, is, perhaps, quite satisfactory, and probably will allow many to acquire fresh impressions of what has become heretofore rather hazy. The picture contains nothing really new, even though it tells the Western story in a different way from what some of the others have done.

"The New Stenographer" (Vitagraph).—A comedy based upon the liking which three men developed for a certain stenographer. Of course, they got a rather severe lesson before they finished, but there is much humor in it. Stenographers may resent the allusion to certain phases of their profession, which are much talked about in the funny papers, at least. It contains no especially interesting features. It merely tells an amusing story.

"The Diamond Star" (Biograph).—A story of a domestic tragedy which separated two people, and for a time seemed likely to cause even more trouble, but the fates were kind, and a beautiful diamond star, intended for an inamorata is given to wife by a little girl, and reconciliation follows. Like all domestic stories of this character, this picture has a considerable degree of interest, but there is something of a sameness which in a way has the effect of creating a feeling that possibly the subject has been overworked.

"The Test" (Lubin).—Tells the story of how a girl discovers that her two lovers hold quite opposite views regarding the treatment to be accorded to the poor. The kindly disposed young man gets the girl, and the gentleman who ordered them away is forgotten in the happiness of the newly engaged pair.

"A Soldier" (Pathe).—Tells in a graphic way how a soldier goes to see his sick mother, even though leave of absence is refused, and how she is nursed back to life and health by physicians provided by the kind-hearted officer. Then the young man is pardoned because of the tearful pleadings of his fully-recovered mother. The last scene is one of the most pathetic which has been seen on the screen in weeks, and represents the highest type of silent emotional acting.

"A Buffalo Hunt" (Pathe).—A graphic illustration of a buffalo hunt in India. The wild buffalo is a dangerous antagonist and makes his strength felt upon all occasioins where self-protection makes it necessary. This is a good picture of the methods adopted to secure the buffalos.

"The Padre" (Selig).—The life story of a baby found by a kind-hearted priest and brought up at the mission as his own son. Interesting and picturesque California scenery, which includes a mission, mountain scenery, a desert and other features which are characteristic. The story is worked out with care. The actors have performed their share with fidelity and graphic strength, while the photographer has chosen his scenes with skill and discretion.

"The Rival Sculptors" (Edison).—One of the most artistically conceived and beautifully staged productions of the month. It is a story of ancient Greece in which love and sculpture are acceptably interwoven, making a picture which tells a good story well and at the same time maintains the highest standard of pictorial art. One of the most attractive scenes is where the girl, discovering the ruin of the statue takes its place herself, afterward showing the wicked sculptor that she knows what he has done. This is a dramatic climax which makes the heart interest strong and allows the development of the pleasant ending. With all the mechanical features admirably cared for the picture will please any audience, not alone by its excellence as a story, but because of its interesting pictorial features.

"Their Wedding Gifts" (Essanay).—A warning couched in the form of a humorous story, for the benefit of those who have received many duplicate wedding gifts and desire to exchange them. Not everybody would run into the clutches of the law, but these unfortunates did and the film tells the story of their misadventures in a humorous fashion.

"Just as the Clock Struck Nine" (Essanay).—A humorous film, illustrating the adventures of a wife afraid to stay alone and suspecting her husband of all sorts of treachery. Dressed in her husband's clothes she is taken by him for her lover, while he is taken for a burglar when he returns and attempts to enter by a window. Ultimately all the tangles are straightened out and the story develops an interesting ending.

"The Plot That Failed" (Gaumont).—A story of a French outlaw, marked on the shoulder with the fleur de lis as used to be the custom there. His sister betrays his true social condition when he attempts to make love to an heiress and meditates assassination to help him consummate his plans.

"Pictures in Chemistry" (Gaumont).—A series of handsome views showing how certain substances form their crystals. One of the most interesting phases of motion picture work is here developed. What actually requires hours to perform is here shown as completed in a few moments. Few who see this probably have much conception of the way crystals are formed, but this picture will explain it to them very plainly.

"A Tale of two Cities" (Vitagraph).—The first of a series of three reels adequately reproducing Dickens' famous story. It is unnecessary to go over the story. Probably most who will see the picture know its main features at least. The first reel takes the audience up to the seizure of the peasant girl and the killing of her brother, her death, the visit to Dr. Manette to be a party to the crime, which results in his arrest and imprisonment in the Bastile and the consequent sufferings in a dungeon. The story is complete in itself, but the other two reels which go with it complete the story as Dickens wrote it. Probably most readers have formed some conception of the appearance of the different characters. In this picture they undoubtedly have an adequate reproduction of the story, with the principal personages faithfully depicted. The staging is little short of sumptuous. There is shown a care in the attention to details which stamps the picture as an unusually faithful reproduction and affords opportunity for those who have read and loved Dickens in the books to see his story move before them, much, perhaps, as it moved before him during its composition. Without being an expert upon Dickens, it seems safe to say that this production of one of his most famous stories will go down in motion picture history as one of the most notable of photoplay productions of the beginning of the year.

"Mr. Bumptious, Detective" (Edison).—A travesty on detective work which shows this capable humorist to the best and the mistakes he makes in locating a young woman who wasn't missing at all are sufficient to supply food for laughter. The closing scene, showing Bumptious with his feet in hot water endeavoring to kill the effects of a cold, is funny in its absurdity.

"The Open Road" (Kalem).—A story of a Gypsy girl who, after years in the home of a man who brought her up as his own daughter, finds the call of the wild is too strong and she chooses a Gypsy lover and the open road again. It is another form of the story which is frequently told about the call of the blood, and is interesting as showing what certain traits in human nature will do, even though they are apparently overcome with other influences.

"Hubby's Troubles" (Pathe).—Another version of the oft-told tale of too much mother-in-law. Hubby has a variety of troubles and gets led home by the ear by his Nemesis. Then comes a series of funny scenes, then he develops a tendency to suicide.

'Indo-China, Province of Laos" (Pathe).—An interesting picture of the land and the people, showing many of their customs and manners and depicting some of their most picturesque scenery.

"The Golden Sickle" (Urban).—An excellently photographed film showing the result of a love match between a hunter and a Druid priestess. The oracles are consulted and the young man is sentenced to death. But the priestess cleverly prevents the execution of the sentence, and they go away together, much as lovers have done since the beginning of time.

"Felling a Smokestack" (Urban).—A graphic illustration of how a huge chimney was thrown down in England. It is a thrilling moment just as the tall structure topples ready to fall flat along the ground.

INDEPENDENT.

"The Three Proposals" (Champion).—Not every girl has three proposals. And all in one afternoon, too. So the picture presents this as a novelty. After she receives them the fortunate young woman falls asleep and dreams, and that dream was her undoing. It frightened her so that she decided to remain single, and years afterward she is shown with her cats and her parrot, ruefully examining the fragments of the formerly prepossessing. This is a good comedy, with features about it which attract because of the keenness of the satire. The photography is clear, too, which helps in the interpretation and increases the enjoyment of the picture.

"Coals of Fire" (Atlas).—A story of an elopement which contains some situations developed in the Nestor good fields. The mix-up of elopement, hidden and found gold, closing with the climax of saving the young man's father from suicide must be accepted as the story.

"The Light Beyond" (Nestor).—Interesting as a love tale. The author disposes of the two men very summarily, however. But the main point is the husband of the young woman does not return, and she, after some years of waiting, is discovered by her former sweetheart. That makes a pretty story of what begins in gloom. The little girl is an interesting and winsome character, and will help to hold the attention of the audience. The photography is good, like all the Nestor films, possessing those striking characteristics which make the Nestor outdoor films notable from an artistic viewpoint.

"Three Men" (Reliance).—A love story in a Western setting, depicting the wavering fortunes of Nell, a beautiful girl beloved of one who abuses her. The Indian is quite the most attractive of the characters. The way he steadily awaits certain death merely to allow the girl and her lover opportunity to escape, is one of the best things done on the screen in some time. But it is usual for the Reliance to do good, and while the character of the subject does not offer the best opportunities, it is sufficiently individual to lift it quite out of the rut-

Nell is an attractive character, and received applause where the film was seen. There are weak points in the photography, but not serious enough to injure the film materially.

"A Hero of '76" (Rex).—The first release of any producer is always awaited with much interest. It may be interesting to know that from a business standpoint this release has been one of the marked successes of the year. Long before the release the exchanges were receiving premiums for booking it and any manager who booked it early, could have sold out at a good profit any time previous to the release. Moreover, these premium bookings extend some time into the future. Undoubtedly this interest is justified. The picture is all the producers claimed it would be before it was released. It is a most beautiful picture ever put on the screen, and while it may not be based upon an actual occurrence, it is something which might have happened, and, therefore, does not transcend the probabilities. That a girl should voluntarily offer her life in the manner shown to save that of Washington, gives the picture a strong dramatic and romantic interest, and the acting is quite up to the standard required to maintain the unities. Staging has been attended to with great care and costuming, and settings are historically accurate. It would be difficult to offer suggestions for improvement. The release previous to Washington's Birthday, but during the season while the thoughts of a large number of people are turned toward him, adds interest to the film and assists in making it of more than ordinary importance. The photography is clear most of the length of the film, only here and there a weak spot is noted, and possibly that is due to an uneven current. As a whole, the picture is satisfactory. It tells a dramatic story clearly, its setting is historically accurate, and the actors have become imbued with the spirit which is plainly manifested in the film. Managers have evidently made no mistake in bidding up the price. They will find it a superior attraction.

"In the Land of Cactus" (American).—A Western drama abounding in thrilling situations and good photographic reproductions of Western life and scenery. There is a swing to some parts of it which is thrilling, and carries the audience forward with a rush of the life the picture represents. The photography of American films has improved of late, and is, all things considered, among the best of them now. Recent releases have all been particularly clear and artistic.

"The Convert" (Imp).—A sad story, well filled with dramatic situations, which are interpreted by sympathetic actors. It is the old story of a girl going to a convent because she believes her lover dead, and his return after it is too late for her to return to the world. There is a pathetic impression rendered by this picture which lingers long after the picture itself has disappeared from the screen. Disappointment of this kind appeals directly to the heart, and so well is the interpretation done in this picture that the eyes of the audience involuntarily fill with tears. It must be said, however, that while it may be dramatic to harrow up the feelings in this way, it is better to alleviate it somehow before the picture closes. Otherwise the memory is not altogether pleasant.

"Her Birthday Surprise" (Yankee).—Tells the story of the jealousy of a wife when her artist-husband was reported to be closeted with a strange woman all day. Ultimately, the door of his studio is broken down, when they find to their chagrin that it is a portrait of his wife he was painting, and the woman was one of the domestics whom he pressed into service as a model. As an exhibition of unreasoning jealousy the picture is a success.

"A Warrior's Squaw" (Bison).—A picture representing some phases of life upon the plains, and indicating in interesting glimpses the life of the Indians. The photography is clear, and the acting of the Indians is well executed.

"Pictureland" (Imp).—Dreams, as shown in this instance, may exert a beneficial influence. The girl was fortunate to dream what would happen to her rather than be compelled to go on and experience it. Perhaps the young man was equally fortunate that something occurred which changed the current of his sweetheart's thoughts and sent her back to him. The scene of the wedding supplies a pleasant ending to this heart picture.

"A Lifetime Penance" (Yankee). — A graphic relation of what a man felt when he killed an employee and carried the secret for years. The scene where the dead man's son appears and asks for work in his office is strongly dramatic, and the murderer displays all the characteristics of fear in his countenance and his acting. Then comes the expiation, so far as that is possible. The whole picture appeals to the audience quite as interestingly as any the company has offered in some time.

"The Heart of a Warrior" (Eclair).—A well-told tale, but without much dramatic strength. The last scene, where the man gallantly charges a company of the enemy to save his false love and her family, is exciting. It is a bit dramatic when he returns the locket he has carried for years as evidence of his constancy. The story is clear, the acting is good and the sceneic effects were well cared for.

"A Hospital for Small Animals" (Eclair).—Good illustrations of a hospital for the treatment of small animals in Paris. All the features which go with a hospital are present, and the picture tells the entire story. It is interesting because it is quite out of the ordinary.

"The College Spendthrift" (American).—A story of a misspent youth and a striking illustration of what comes afterward. The picture is dramatic in its appeal and holds the attention of the audience from beginning to end.

"His Father's House" (Nestor).—A well pictured story of every-day life, with its smiles and tears, its light and shade. Rather than give up the girl he loves he quits his father's house and marries her. Later his happiness is made complete by the advent of a baby girl, who, through a chain of interesting circumstances, finally meets her grandfather and brings about forgiveness and reunion. The child-actress in this film is clever and winsome, while the player impersonating the old man does some excellent acting.

"Broncho Bill, the Brave Cowboy" (Lux).—A drama supposed to represent occurences in that wild and wooly portion of the country known as the West. The love story starts out well, but runs against strong opposition when Bill trounces the girl's father, but afterward there is a change when the cowboy catches this same father with money which he has stolen. However, these are only incidents. The love story ends well after a more or less exciting course, which seemed at times to threaten shipwreck.

"Matilda Lovestruck" (Lux).—A comedy presenting a condition of affairs which should appeal irresistibly to love-sick maids and youths. Not every man is as coy as this one, but perhaps he might be under the same provocation. It is an admirable travesty upon the actions of some lovesick couples.

"Corinne in Dollyland" (Solax). — A pretty child's picture, telling a clear story of the adventures of a little girl that wasn't allowed in the moving pictures and helped a little boy she saw crying by giving him her coin. Then she trudged home and played with pretty toys until she fell asleep and dreamed of Dollyland. It is a reproduction of what a little girl would be likely to do under similar circumstances, and is, therefore, unusually interesting. The nearer the producer can get to life in these pictures the more popular the films will become, and this little girl is an excellent reproduction.

"Checkmate" (Thanhouser).—A somewhat complicated love story filled with exciting instances. Self-inflicted wounds send a rival to prison for a long term, but the girl works two clever ruses and succeeds in convincing the baron, and also in securing the release of the imprisoned man.

"The Life of a Muschik" (Great Northern).—Apart from the story contained in this film it is instructive because it graphically depicts the life of the oppressed Russian peasant. The home life is shown, and some of the barbarisms to which they are subjected are represented. It gives a clearer insight into what actually occurs in Russia than many books could do.

"The False Alarm" (Great Northern).—A lively comedy, showing how the unfortunate individual attempted to escape from his mother-in-law, who announced her intention of paying them a visit. The many funny situations developed will afford amusement enough for the time.

"Beneath Southern Skies" (Powers).—A complication of events represented as occurring in the South during slavery times, with one or two love stories interwoven, an auction sale, which included a number of slaves, and a murder to make it more thrilling. A photograph furnishes the proof which convicts the murderer. There is no particular dramatic feature in the story, but it has so many thrills that it is interesting. The Powers Company has interpreted it well, which will insure for it success with the public.

"The Way of the Red Man" (Bison).—An Indian story which, while it has some effusion of blood, is interesting because it exhibits graphically the way of the Red Man under certain conditions. The elemental passion of jealousy influences one man, but he expiates his crime at the hands of the executioner. The scene with the girl, holding her dead lover, is more pathetic than is usual with Indians. The Indian burial is interesting and shows how they dispose of their dead, with the accompanying ceremonials.

"What Would You Do?" (Powers).—Illustration of an embarrassing situation in which a young man was placed by the mistake of a messenger boy who delivered a pair of trousers to a young woman instead of the flowers that were intended. The close of the picture is a very lively bit of comedy.

"THE SIGN OF THE FLYING A"

AMERICAN RELEASES

TWO REELS EACH WEEK—MONDAYS AND THURSDAYS

Release of Monday, Feb. 27th.

"The Sheriff's Sweetheart"

A Western story equal if not superior to our recent Western success, "The Mission in the Desert." An extremely original story—astoundingly realistic background—and acting second to none. A masterpiece of the best Western producer in the moving picture business.

Release of Thursday, March 2nd.

"College Chums"

A college story of friendship, love and jealousy. Original in plot, treatment, and production. Photography that is clear—flawless—perfect. A Feature film in all that the name implies.

$200 In Cold Cash

There is still time for every Independent exhibitor in America to extend to his patrons an opportunity of winning this $200.

The biggest advertising proposition for the exhibitor ever promulgated. Write the Contest Editor at address below for particulars.

Coming! "The Harem Skirt." A Typical Comedy Guaranteed. A Screech from Start to Finish.

AMERICAN FILM MANUFACTURING CO.

Bank Floor, Ashland Block, Chicago, Ill.

CAUTION INVESTIGATE BEFORE YOU BUY—NOT AFTER. Examine carefully construction—quality of material—workmanship—finish—and last—pictures. Pictures to continue perfect must be projected perfectly at all times by a Perfect Machine.

THERE IS NO LIMIT TO THE LIFE OF THE MOTIOGRAPH.

IF YOU COULD GO THROUGH OUR FACTORY and see how carefully each part of the MOTIOGRAPH is made you could no longer wonder at the fast growing popularity—Among PARTICULAR Users—Of The MOTIOGRAPH.

THE MOTIOGRAPH IS ECONOMICAL—The big saving comes after you buy.

THE MOTIOGRAPH CONSTRUCTION—Is superior—You can prove it.

THE MOTIOGRAPH WORKMANSHIP—Is the best—Results prove it.

THE MOTIOGRAPH PICTURE—Is the best—The Pictures prove it.

ENTHUSIASTIC USERS in all parts of the World—Attest to the SUPERIOR QUALITY OF PICTURES AND WORKMANSHIP AND CONSTRUCTION.

Manufactured and Jobbed by

THE ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MFG. CO., 564-572 West Randolph Street, Chicago, Ill.

AGENTS IN ALL PRINCIPAL CITIES.

"For Washington" (Thanhouser).—A suitable picture for Washington's birthday, proposing to tell the story of who informed Washington that the Hessians were in condition to be easily captured at Trenton. The patriot maid is well acted and her part in this interesting episode is so clearly portrayed that there can be no misunderstanding. She is represented as giving them with drink and then informing the Americans that they could be captured. Whether the story is true or not, and it might be, it has an element of plausibility which adds to its interest and serves to emphasize the intense patriotism which influenced people of both sexes and all stations in life during the Revolution. There can be no mistake about this. The story is so well told that the audience is held almost spellbound in places as the reel moves through the changing scenes. It is admirably done, staging, acting and photography combining to make an exceptionally attractive picture of this patriotic subject.

"Redeeming Angel" (Ambrosio).—The story of a little girl who pleads so successfully for the release of a thief that he is given food and afterward work. The acting of the child when she is making her appeal is the principal feature of the drama.

"Tweedledum Is Shy" (Ambrosio).—A comic showing the results of Tweedledum attempting to flirt with a handsome young woman. The difficulty he gets into will serve as a funny warning for lovers similarly inclined.

"The Old Man and Jim" (Champion).—James Whitcomb Riley's famous poem rendered into pictures. The scenes described in the verses are reproduced with a succession of thrills which hold the interest of the audience at the highest pitch. There are the resistless charges, with Jim leading, and the waving of the flag while standing on the pile of slain, and then the death scene, with the vision of Washington and Lincoln and Liberty standing between. All is worked out with such an appreciation of the spirit of the piece that it would be difficult to conceive anything more interesting or thrilling. Almost every one admires an exhibition of bravery, and here the picture shows it in strikingly clear scenes. The work has been well done by the actors and equally well done by the photographer.

"His Father's House" (Nestor).—The story of domestic difficulties, beginning with the separation of a daughter from her father, then the separation of her daughter from her, and the adoption of her own grandfather, ultimately resulting in the reunion of the whole family. The picture is well acted and there has been an attempt to develop pictorial effects well worth seeing, while the story is clearly told and develops interesting situations. The reputation of the house for a good grade of work will not suffer by this film.

"Souls Courageous" (Reliance).—A war picture which will attract attention because it has mixed with it that eternal triangle, the men and the woman. The love tale is quite the most absorbing and develops some interesting and rather unexpected complications before it ends. But the girl succeeds in preventing the man from fighting against his country and promises to marry him as he breaks his sword across his knee in a dramatic scene. The photography is fairly well done, though there are weak places, which might have been due to the projection apparatus.

FIGHT PICTURES.

An Interesting Gaumont Release.

The Jeffries-Johnson fight pictures, are, we read, still being shown to enthusiastic audiences in Paris. Now and again we have tidings that in other countries, interest in this film has not entirely waned. This is all the more surprising now that, after cool reflection, everybody has agreed that the fight itself, fake or not, counted for very little, and, moreover that the pictures as such were of no particular order of merit.

There is no doubt that good fight pictures will always be popular with the majority of us just as good fights themselves are and will be. By good fights, we mean contests in which the combatants are evenly matched and the fight is well and fairly fought to a finish, or at least, a definite conclusion. Fighting is a primal instinct with the human race. Most of us are fighting all our lives, and have to fight to live, one way or another.

We saw a very fine fight picture this last week. It is so good that we hope many thousands of our readers and the general public will see it. It is a Gaumont picture of a contest between two British lads, Welch and Driscoll, who fought at Cardiff, in the West of England, for a purse of £2,500, say $25,000. We are not experts in this matter but the men belonged it seemed to us, to the light-weight class. The Gaumont Company secured pictures illustrative of the whole of the contest. The pictures are on two reels, and they supply a very good and exciting little entertainment. Five rounds are on one reel and five on the other. You are taken through the preliminaries of the contest at the ringside. Then the men enter the ring and fight scientifically, not brutally, five well and evenly-contested rounds, before the eyes of thousands of spectators.

The second reel depicts the second series of five rounds. So evenly matched were these fighters that the issue hung in double fight up to the conclusion, and then the fight was only decided on a foul. Driscoll, in the last few moments of the fight, lost his head and fouled his opponent. The referee, thereupon, jumped into the ring, stopped the fight and gave it to Welch.

This fine fight picture is being handled by the Solax Company, of 147 Fourth Avenue, New York City, who are disposing of it by State rights and otherwise. It should prove a popular picture wherever shown, because, as we have said, it illustrates a good fight by means of clever photography, which, in parts, shows the contestants of very great size.

It is commonly supposed in this country that prize fights of the better kind have gone out of favor in the British Isles. This is not the case although the old country of recent years has not produced any champions of international standing, mainly, we think, from lack of inclination. Still, with sufficient encouragement, we have no doubt that Mr. Johnson might attract an opponent from the British Isles who could put the colored man out of business.

PICTURE INSTRUCTION IN CANADA.

Not long ago the Maryland, (Man.,) Sunday school installed a moving picture machine at a cost of nearly $300. If there was ever any doubt as to the wisdom of this undertaking that doubt has been completely dispelled. The interest in the school, as well as attendance is increasing, which is partly attributable to the popularity of the machinie.

One Sunday, toward the close of the school, the first of three sections of the Passion Play, covering the childhood days of Christ, was thoroughly enjoyed by all present. A new record of attendance was also established, the number present being 515. It is the plan to run the famous play in sections.

During the week a moving picture entertainment is held, when the church is crowded to the doors, chiefly with children.—Winnipeg, Man. "Free Press."

Marquette, Mich.—Manager L. T. Dorsey, of the Bijou took his entire staff out to the Penitentiary one Sunday recently and treated the inmates to an excellent program of three songs and three reels of carefully selected pictures. The entire audience and the management voted it the best entertainment they ever had. Such thoughtful consideration of the unfortunate or misguided brother man deserves the highest commendation.

PROVISIONS OF DALLAS LAW.

The ordinance introduced in Dallas, Tex., providing for the regulation of moving pictures has the following provisions:

Sec. 1. For a license fee to be listed in numerical order with the full name or names of the person or persons conducting, operating or maintaining the show.

Sec. 2. The license to be granted upon the condition:

(a) That all pictures shown shall first have been approved by a consor committee, whose decision will be final, and who may exclude any "calculated to corrupt the morals of youth, indecent, low or vulgar, calculated to provoke racial prejudice or create disorder or reasonably calculated to cause disturbance of the peace."

(b) That the places of exhibit shall be kept well ventilated and in sanitary condition, approved by the City Health Officer.

(c) That the show places shall be maintained in strict compliance with the building code and subject to the examination at any time of the building inspector, the city electrician or the chief of the Fire Department, or their agents.

d) That no immoral, indecent or vulgar conduct is to be permitted in the place, nor persons of low moral character permitted to enter. If, in the judgment of the Censor Committee a policeman is necessary to keep order, such policeman shall be kept at the expense of the proprietors of the establishment.

(e) Notoriously immoral or drunken persons shall not be allowed to enter or remain in the place.

(f) All laws of the State and ordinances of the city are to be rigorously obeyed.

Sec. 3. The term "picture show" is defined to mean "a place devoted exclusively to the displaying and exhibiting of moving pictures" with a second definition to include such places also "giving vaudeville or theatrical performances in connection therewith."

Sec. 4. All such shows shall be subject to the criticism of the Censor Committee at any time, and upon condemnation shall be immediately stopped by the proprietor.

Sec. 5. The Mayor may appoint three citizens, one of whom shall be the Police and Fire Commissioner, as ex-officio chairman, to be the Censor Committee, the two citizens besides the commissioner to hold office during the pleasure of the Mayor, serving without compensation.

Sec. 6. Violation of the ordinance subjects to a penalty of fine not to exceed $200.

Sec. 7. Creating an emergency.

No mention is made in this act of the plan for maintaining well-lighted places. This is to be urged by the ladies in another act.

F. H. M.

EDISON CELEBRATES SILVER WEDDING.

Thomas A. Edison and his wife celebrated their silver wedding at Llewellyn Park, N. J., on the evening of February 23. The gathering was informal, and was limited to members of the family and a few personal friends. Mr. Edison, as usual, worked in his laboratory until his friends came and carried him off to the affair, that was gotten up to remind him of the days when his heart was tender but his work was tough. Mr. Edison is only 64 years old, but don't say we told you.

The Bonita Theater, Tampa, Fla.—The accompanying cut shows how well the design succeeds in giving a tropical and inviting appearance to this popular house. The Bonita is one of a chain of seven theaters in the South, which, through competent management and the high-class character of the programs, are meeting with increasing popularity and a steady advance in patronage. A. N. Waters, manager, is well qualified for his duties, having been connected with theater and amusement enterprises on the road and in Denver, Colo., and has built and operated theaters in Greensboro, N. C., and Greenville, S. C. The second theater of the chain is in Ybor City, Fla., and the third at Norfolk, Va.

THE SCENARIO; THE PRODUCER.

Of late, much has been said on the question of scenarios, and the poor writers, who try to make a living by preparing dope for the producers, have been blamed for the mediocre pictures shown on the screen. When I say "poor writers," I do not mean the brainless ones, but the men and women, who, with bright and clever ideas, try to make a living. The idea of asking literary men, who command high figures, to write for the motion pictures, is ridiculous, as the producers are not looking for correct English—not even for good spelling—they are looking for an original idea on which they can build a good picture.

The producer is really the guilty party, the one responsible for the poor productions. He may make a masterpiece from a very poor scenario, or he may produce a rank picture from a high-priced manuscript. Producers vary in their ability to give mute expression to the words, just as pianists vary in their ability to interpret the sentiment of a piece of music.

As an illustration, I wish to relate a personal experience: A few years ago, while boarding with a private family, the lady of the house decided that it was time for her daughter to learn music, and, after taking lessons, she purchased a piano. The first day that the piano was installed in the parlor, the neighbors were invited, and a Miss Nellie was asked to play something. Miss Nellie played a selection from Faust. Talk of jackass music! If Miss Nellie worked on the nerves of the visitors by butchering Gounod's great work, she, at least proved, by her hammering on the keys, that the piano was a solid instrument, capable to stand the strain of the most violent rag-time music.

She was applauded. She had to be applauded.

Other persons were invited to the piano, and, I myself, could not refuse testing the qualities of the instrument.

I don't know why I started to play the very same selection of Faust, but I gave it the proper expression. Although I was applauded, the joke is, that Nellie's mother came to me and asked for the name of the selection, as she wanted her daughter to study "such a fine piece," as she called it. I was badly embarrassed, and I had to confess that what I had executed on the piano, was the same selection of Faust rendered by Miss Nellie. Needless to say, that I was rewarded with a stony stare.

It is the same with the scenarios. If the producer does not know how to bring out the proper effects from the lines of the writer, he will ruin the reputation of the very best writer, while another producer can make a masterpicture from a very crude idea.

I formerly wrote and sold many scenarios, yet in many cases I was very thankful to the manufacturers to conceal my name, as I would have been ashamed to see myself advertised on a screen with a poorly produced picture. A producer should not be a mere clerk, but an artist, in his line of work. He should be like the sculptor, who, when given an idea, takes his clay and models his subject. The producer should not require good English phrases, nor small details. It is for the scenario writer to say how many spoons and forks are to be required in a scene.

A manufacturer returned one of my manuscripts once, with a note that he would not consider it, unless I gave a correct list of the props, including forks and spoons, and his offer was $5 for the scenario with the list of props. As I could not consider such a generous offer, I mailed the said scenario to another manufacturer, and received in return, a check for $15, and this, without his asking for a list of spoons and forks.

If a producer must be told the props needed in a picture, if he has to be told of every small detail, he is not an artist, he is not a man with the necessary qualifications to work from the scenarios of the most popular authors. Words do not count in motion pictures.

On December 20th, the Edison Company released "The Police Force of New York City." I did not read the scenario, but I have good reason to believe that the writer of the scenario never said that the man working in the warehouse should jump in the water, nor that the burglar should stop and wait for the dog to come for him. Most likely the scenario writer said: "Through the open door of a warehouse, on the pier, we see a man lifting bags of flour. He is weak, tired and, while lifting a bag, he loses his balance and falls in the water. We see the Police-boat coming to his rescue." The producer shows us the man dropping a sack, walking to the edge of the pier, spring up, and jump backward in the water. We also see many persons on the pier, but they all remain still, not the least excitement, no one ready to rescue the poor fellow, as if the producer was raising his hand and voice, "Stay there, fellow, do not move; do not spoil the action of the police-boat." In another scene we see a policeman and his dog hiding themselves behind some bushes. The burglar drops from the window, he looks around and waits for the dog to come to him. Surely, the scenario writer never gave such details, and no scenario writer would like to see his name on the film, or be accused of such blunders.—J. M. B.

Scene From "The Vindication of John."—Champion.

SEEING IS BELIEVING.

By Jane Elliott Snow

"I feel so disturbed and troubled," said Mrs. Brown, as her neighbor, Mrs. Jones, stepped in for a morning call.

"And why disturbed and troubled?" asked Mrs. Jones.

"Oh, it's all on account of so many moving picture shows—'photoplays' they call them now. They seem to be everywhere, and the children are crazy to go to them."

"Is that all?"

"Yes; but isn't that enough?"

"I don't think they are suitable places for anyone to visit, let alone the children."

"Have you ever visited one?"

"No, I never have, and I don't intend to."

"How about the children?"

"They have been a few times, but they teased so hard I just had to let them go."

"That's strange. Why there are the Fields, they let the children go to the photoplay every little while as a reward for well doing, both at home and in the school.

"The Hayses have just returned from Mount Clemens, and they said about all the amusement the town afforded was the photoplay, a new play every day and all pretty good."

"Is that so, and did respectable people go to them?"

"Certainly; what kind of people do you think go to Mount Clemens"

"Oh, invalids, I suppose! People with rheumatism and other diseases. And some say that hard drinkers go there to get their systems cleared of alcohol."

"What folks say is not always reliable, but the Hayses thought they met some pretty nice people there. Then another thing I've learned, and that is that the photoplay is an excellent amusement for the deaf. Why, you know Cousin Lide? For years she has been shut out of all sources of amusement because of her deafness. If there was a concert, it did her no good, because she couldn't hear. It was the same with the theater, and the church services afforded her no comfort because of her affliction. But one day she happened to go to a motion picture show, and since then she goes often and finds great pleasure in so doing. As an amusement for the deaf, there is nothing can excel the photoplay.

"There was old Mr. Ely, who, you remember, was quite deaf for years. He wrote to his son, who was living in Denver, that he was so lonesome since he had become deaf; couldn't converse with his family, and didn't like to go out in company at all. The son wrote and said:

"'Father, you just go to the moving picture shows; they'll make you forget all about yourself. You may be deaf, but you are not blind, and you can enjoy the photoplays quite as well as though you could hear.'

"Well, the father went, and since then he goes often and his family are all pleased that he has found something to make life pass pleasantly."

Mrs. Brown listened in amazement to all this talk. This was a new phase of the question. The moving pictures a deversion for invalids, for the deaf—that's all so strange.

She had thought of the places where the photoplays were given as close, stuffy, dark places; places where only bad boys and girls gathered; where the plays themselves were silly, questionable. Then the very cheapness of the plays made her fear them. Nothing good surely could come out of them. No five or ten cent show could be worth anything.

But Mrs. Brown was not devoid of good sense, and after listening to Mrs. Jones's edifying talk, she concluded she had better go and see for herself. So the two neighbors set a time and place to visit the photoplay.

Fortunately, for both concerned, they chose a good place, where the air was good; where the room was partially lighted and where the plays, three in number, represented the scenic, the educational and the humorous. In the latter there was much running, jumping, and scrambling, all of which caused the grave Mrs. Brown to indulge in a smile.

The entire process of wheat growing and harvesting and its transformation into flour and bread were thrown upon the screen, and lastly, there was a fine trip through the Swiss Alps.

It was a great treat, all for five cents, and Mrs. Brown returned home with views very much altered about the business of the photoplay.

FIVE CENT THEATER TEACHER.

Indiana Educator Says It Is A Great Institution.

A feature of the Indiana state conference of charities was a discussion of The Child and the 5-Cent Theater. This took place at the juvenile charities round table.

John A. Lapp, legislative reference librarian at Indianapolis, told of an investigation made of the theaters in Indianapolis by the agents of the Children's Aid Society. On the night the investigation was made the attendance of children was about three thousand five hundred. It is estimated that about ten thousand children visit these shows in the course of a week.

Mr. Lapp was opposed to abolishing the moving picture show. He regarded it as one of the greatest institutions ever produced for good, and he believed that it should be regulated so as to produce educational pictures instead of sensation. He said he hoped the day would come when every church, every club, every institution for the betterment of the child and the adult would have a moving picture show, and he thought the matter should be taken up by the schools and these pictures used for educational purposes.—Indianapolis News.

Letters to the Editor

Cleveland, February 17, 1911.

Editor Moving Picture World:
125 East 23d Street, New York, N. Y.

On Monday evening, February 13, we, in co-operation with the local Anti-Tuberculosis League, under whose auspices the exhibition was given, exhibited the five reels of the "Life of Moses," a vitagraph issue, at the Euclid Avenue Christian Church, this city. The projection was accompanied by a well-prepared Biblical lecture, delivered by the Rev. Dr. H. M. Cook.

The performance was well attended, there being approximately 450 persons present, a goodly number of whom were clergymen and ministers of this city. All told, 270 ministers were invited. To say that the entire audience was enthusiastic does by no means express their appreciation in the superlative degree. A prominent layman, after witnessing the exhibition, made the remark that in his estimation this subject, shown to both children and adults, would do more in a spiritual way than a whole year of sermons.

Although no one derived any special benefit, either monetary or otherwise, from this exhibition, it, nevertheless, had its object, and the results will ultimately be that the men of the cloth are going to take a different stand toward motion pictures, at least in this city. It will remove, to a great degree, the narrow-minded, parched and prejudiced opinion held by a good man clergymen toward motion pictures and moving picture theaters. Yours very truly

THE LAKE SHORE FILM & SUPPLY CO.,
E. MANDELBAUM, President.

Eureka Springs, Ark., February 12, 1911.

Editor Moving Picture World:

In looking over The World, I notice that the producers are "enjoying" the rainy season in Southern California. Now, while not posing as "authority," I think some of them have overlooked a good bet in not investigating this little city, located in the heart of the Ozark Mountains (hills). Most every variety of picturesque scenery is offered within a radius of twenty miles. The atmosphere is very clear—in fact, our average of clear days per year is 209, against Los Angeles with 171. As to climate, there has not been over five days this "winter" when "shirt sleeves" were not the prevailing mode. As I write, at 10 a. m., the sky is void of clouds, and the thermometer registers 72 degrees in the shade. We are not troubled with mud; one-half hour after the heaviest rain it is dry under foot. Our water is the purest on the face of the globe; we are one-half nearer civilization (meaning New York) than Southern California, besides having other advantages. I am of the opinion that it would be a wise plan for some enterprising producer to look us over and see what we have to offer in the lines mentioned. I shall be glad to answer any questions relative to Eureka Springs that I am able to. I must congratulate you on the strides The World is making. Looking over my files of two years ago I can hardly realize it is the same paper. More success to you. Yours,

WILL CARLETON,
No. 3 Howell Avenue.

Sandusky, Ohio, Feb. 1, 1911.

Editors, Moving Picture World.

Dear Sirs: I would like space in your paper to comment on Reliance and Bison films. The pictures of both are good and clear, and they have capable actors, but there are so many defects in the running of the films that an operator has to have his hand on the frame lever from the time the picture starts until it is finished, framing up and down 12 to 15 times in each reel. I have refused to run any more of them and think every exhibitor using Independent films should do the same until they put their pictures in first-class condition.

Yours very truly,

Charles Rearr.

HE CATERS TO THE CHILDREN.

Brooklyn, N. Y., February 12, 1911.

Editor Moving Picture World:

Dear sir:—In reply to your editorial, "Is Kid Business Worth Bidding for?" I can say positively that it is. During my career as manager of a moving picture theater I have entertained many children in my place, and do not believe that they have a tendency to drive away adults. Most of the children who patronize my place come in the afternoon, when there are mostly women and children. About 85 per cent. of my audiences during the daytime consist of women and children. The noise of children does not then drive away adults; nor does it in the evening.

I run a ten-cent house in a refined neighborhood, and cater to refined people. I do not see how a manager can turn away children, as their money materially helps to defray the expenses of the house. Can you tell me why we should not admit "the kids?" When a youngster in my house becomes boisterous I tell him to keep quiet. If this has not the desired effect, I gently take him to the street.

I think that it is an injustice to the children not to let them attend a moving picture show, where an entertainment of innocuous subjects are projected. I think that justice to the moving picture business and to the children is done when they are admitted into a good theater.

The laws restricting children under a certain age from attending picture shows ought to be repealed, or modified considerably. I trust that you will give this letter space in your valuable paper, as I want every manager of picture houses to know my views toward letting children see moving pictures. Yours very truly, D. KEIZER,

Washington Street Theater.

THE TECHNIQUE OF THE PICTURE PLAY.

344 Fifth Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Gentlemen—A few days ago I picked up at random the issue of January 21 last. The article, "The Technique of the Picture Play," by George Rockhill Craw, appealed to me, particularly for the common sense way in which the author handles his subject. Under the sub-head of "Few Scenarios Worthy," he hits the nail squarely on the head. There are several others of us who believe that the author should be accorded recognition. The fact that recognintion is given only to those writers whose places in the literary world are already secure, has a tendency to keep many a clever scenario under lock and key. It 's all right to give recognition to Rex Beach and Emile Zola, and others of like caliber, but how about Bill Jones down at Bird Center?

A certain war drama (motion picture) came to a certain Indiana theater and proved a hit. The plot was good, the action brisk and the producing company had given it a good interpretation. The house manager was especially pleased with the piece, and for his own satisfaction wrote the producers, asking the names of certain actors, and, incidentally, asked who was the author. His surprise was genuine and pleasureable when the answer came that the actors were So-and-So. "The author, we find, is a fellow-townsman of yours, Mr. So-and-So." This fellow-townsman, "Mr. So-and-So," proved to be the drummer in this particular theater. You can imagine the manager's surprise. His drummer had sat there and drummed his own picture, put the shots just where they belonged, worked the "long roll" at just the proper place, and made the "noise" fit exactly as it should be, but afraid to open his mouth that he was the father of the thing. Had he claimed authorship to it his friends (?) would likely have run fingers along noses and looked at him sidewise and murmured: "Poor chap, such a pity he's batty!"

The woods are full of embryonic scenario artists. They can evolve plot, but cannot clothe their plat in a dress of English that will make it marketable as a story. They need recognition. It is their due. And when this recognition becomes universal there will be a boost in scenarios, both in quantity and quality, as Mr. Craw says. Give the author credit for what he does. If it's rotten stuff we'll know who has a swift kick coming; if it's good, he is entitled to the honor of having produced it. Very truly,

CARL ANDERSON.

Spencer, Ind.

Machines Repaired

SO THEY WILL LAST

Refer to back cover for prices on repairs etc.

PAT. APPLD FOR — INDESTRUCTIBLE — DUPLEX — SUPERIOR

E. W. LAVEZZI
3042 N. Ashland Ave., Chicago

WANTED—A REAL MOVING PICTURE MAN.

I want a man who is pre-eminently fitted to supervise a line of picture shows now running in a large city outside of New York City. Must be a man who recognizes the value of the pictures above everything else. Must understand vaudeville without regard to what the lessees agent wants to hand him, and must work with the ultimate object in view of dispensing with this feature.

We will provide an unlimited supply of educational, industrial and scenic films to draw from and will procure anything he needs in this line.

Must have the ability to catalogue same for church, Chautauqua and school exhibitions. The catalogue of the largest travelogue and lecture slide firm in the world is his to draw from as auxiliary to the films. Will have full control over every manager and other help in connection with seven shows now running and he must necessarily be a practical man in this line.

Show me you can handle this proposition and I won't dicker on your financial recompense. Address "Confidential"

MOVING PICTURE WORLD.

HENRY BELMAR

Dramatic Director

POWERS PICTURE PLAYS

Author and Producer of the following Photoplays :

The Cattle King of Arizona	The Call of the Heart
The Angel of His Dreams	A Gamble with Love
Beneath Southern Skies	Come Back to Erin

Can use short cast scenarios of every description.

HENRY BELMAR, 2779 Webster Ave., New York City

YANKEE FILMS

MONDAY, March 6,

"Angel Of The Bowery"

A Salvation Army Drama

FRIDAY, MARCH 10,

"The Senorita's Sacrifice"

Spanish World-Tour Film

YANKEE FILM CO.

344 East 32d St. New York City

FILM EXCHANGES

The Stern Rewinder No. 3 is guaranteed to be the strongest and speediest rewinder made. All exhibitors like them and the demand is great. Price is so reasonable that you can not afford to be without them. Send in a sample order. We also have ready for shipping 25,000 reels knocked down. Prices on application.

THE STERN MFG. CO.

109 North Tenth St. Philadelphia, Pa.

Orders and letters in the trade.

H. F. HOFFMAN

Lecturer of Special Releases

New York City and Vicinity

Care Moving Picture World

Telephone 1344 Gramercy

Lecturing Buffalo Jones Pictures Now

STORIES of the FILMS

ESSANAY.

TAMING A TYRANT.—Bill Dobbs is a bully and is making life miserable for his wife and daughter. Edna is a winsome lass and it is Dobbs's hope to some day sell her to Zeke Hazlitt, his nephew. Edna dislikes Zeke and spends as little time with him as possible. Mrs. Dobbs is a meek and submissive wife and mother and her husband, but writes to uncle Peter for advice. Uncle Peter is a sea captain and when he receives his answer he plans to decide upon a plan which he feels will prove beneficial in the moral education of his brother-in-law. Whoever time some second mate, Jack Hastings, is dispatched with a note to Mrs. Dobbs, who is instructed to inform Dobbs that the sender is a second cousin of her husband, whom she has not seen for fifteen years. The scheme works beautifully. Dobbs, instead of being the master of his house, is cowed by the strapping, big first mate, and made to do all the menial home work, much to the amusement of his wife and daughter. Zeke, unwelcome suitor to Edna, is given a lesson in the art of making love and then told to make himself scarce. After a few days of this when sailor Jack decides that his supposed step-father has had enough of the bitter medicine he proposes to Edna and she accepts. The photoplay ends with the confession that Jack is not Mrs. Dobbs's son, and Dobbs, thoroughly subdued, is condemned to a life of real usefulness in making the house-work lighter for his truly worthy spouse.

ON THE DESERT'S EDGE.—Kate Shaw, a Western girl, has an admirer in Ed Sawyer, an undesirable citizen of the town of Larkin. Because of her great fear for him she countenances his nefariousness, but when Sawyer gets into trouble in a gambling hall she gladly directs young Hal Morley, a deputy sheriff to the trail Sawyer has taken, along the rocky ledge of the Mojave desert and it is in this great waste that Sawyer endeavors to hide himself. Morley tracks the bad man and goes out to battle for said blind and runs across the bad man when he is at a serious disadvantage. Sawyer has the young deputy's affection and after a fight, knocks Morley on the head with the butt of his pistol, leaving him for dead. Sawyer continues on his endeavor to make his way home stumbles over a cliff, rolls to the bottom and is severely injured. Kate goes out to search for Morley and finds him at the bottom of the cliff. She, conducts him home, bandages his cuts and goes out to procure food for him when she hears Sawyer returning. He discovers Morley in the house and endeavors to choke Kate to death, but is prevented by Hal, who has recovered slightly from the blindness. Realizing that they are over their their lives, Kate and Morley become engaged.

THE LITTLE DRUDGE.—Upon the death of his father, Ray Payne, a young country boy, decides to seek his fortune in the city and tenderly bidding his mother and little sister, Mary, goodbye, he leaves them in poverty, the latter having met with some success in the city. Ray proposes to the daughter of his boarding house keeper and is engaged to marry her. They are married and but rarely settled in their little flat when Ray receives news of the death of his mother. He goes to his home town and returns with his sister, Mary. It is then that he discovers the hopeless nature of the woman he has taken all of the hard work on the little girl and gives her tasks to do, work of a nature which overtaxes her strength. A climax comes in the life of the one through the carelessness of her taskmaster, is nearly asphixiated by escaping gas from the kitchen range. The incident awakens Ray to a realization of his wifes unkindness and after a scene some she leaves the house. Ray decides his little sister is his best, promising that in the future he can will enjoy life.

THEIR WEDDING GIFTS.—Jack and Jennie are married. Examining their presents, they are surprised when they find that the gifts run chiefly to clocks and banks. Each of the couple has all of the same variety. After the last guest is gone a messenger boy brings a telegram, which, upon being opened, reveals another clock. The couple turn to their friends to have them exchanged, seems easy enough, but when they send in the card they decide to make the exchange themselves. For each receives a bunch of bills instead of lamps and clocks they drive to a pawn shop where they make known their desires, but a clerk who has just entered, points out a column in the morning's paper regarding the robbery of a downtown jewelers by a man and woman wearing auto goggles. Jack and Jennie quite fill the description and the proprietor loses no time in calling a policeman and both being taken to the police station, followed by a hooting mob, Jennie's father comes to the rescue, but is unable to effect their release until the real crooks are captured and brought in.

JUST AS THE CLOCK STRUCK NINE.—Tony Costello, an Italian fruit dealer, has just married. For three months nothing short of existence until one night Tony is detained at his shop past his usual hour of home-coming and Maria suspects the worst. Left alone Maria begins to fear burglars. Maria is ingenious and finally devolves the really clever plan of masquerading as a man, believing that no burglar would enter where there was a man in the house. This she does by appropriating her husband's clothes and has just finished her disguise when Tony comes home. She thinks him a burglar, he thinks her his wife's lover. He finally breaks down the door and enters to kill the betrayer of his home, but it is not long after that the mystery is cleared.

THE OUTLAW AND THE CHILD.—Dan Warrington, an outlaw, is captured by the sheriff, after the former had held up a stage coach, and is sent to jail. After the sheriff has placed his captive safely behind the bars he is left alone welcomed by his little daughter, a child of five. Not long after the sheriff is notified of the escape of Warrington, and proceeds to the scene of the crime and finds the body of the outlaw. The sheriff leaves the little girl at home asleep, but an hour later the little one awakening finds her father gone, and in naivety for his welfare determines to go out and find him. Taking a dolly in her arms she wanders out of town and into the desert, unmindful of the dangers in her path. In the meantime the sheriff and his posse are down in a spiritd pursuit of the escaped bad man, who succeeds in eluding them. Darkness falls and they give up the hunt and the sheriff returning home finds his little daughter gone. The alarm is soon spread and a search party, headed by the sheriff, starts out to seek the lost baby. The little girl by this time has become lost in the desert and is unable to find her way home, and sometimes, under the torrid sun, she sinks into the burning hot sands, only to rise again. Warrington, who sacrifices the water in his canteen to save her life, he then carries her back to her father's door, but the exertion has been too much for the man and he lapses off into an unconsciousness from which he is never revived.

MELIES.

MY PRAIRIE FLOWER.—Bob Ford, a young college graduate and a man-about-town, self-willed and wild, who tries his father's patience and generosity to the limit, is finally, in a fit of sudden hait by the old gentleman and sent out West with a letter to a friend of his father's in Texas and prove to his father that he is not a hopeless renegade.

Bob arrives in Texas with his valet, whom he tells to take his place and pretend that he is Bob while he, Bob, will pretend to be the valet. Mr. Jones has a very beautiful daughter, for whom her father feels some anxiety about coming in contact with the wild element. Meeting and seeing Bob, fearing that she will fall in love with him. Jenkins, the valet, presents the note from Bob's father to Mr. Jones, who is deceived in the Mr. Ford's son, while Bob is treated as the valet.

The "story" about the ranch Jay plans to put Jenkins through a course of training in the way they do it would do credit to a "dusing box." Bob runs against what he takes to be a gangster, who has the reputation of being a "bad man," in a fight and tries to put on "call over" the tender foot. But he meets his match, for he wants to fight like a man, to put down his gun and put up his fists. They get busy, Langdon is put down and out, and loses his reputation as a terror. From that time on, Bob is one of the most popular men on the ranch. They fall in love with Flora, and Flora doesn't object.

From this point on, Bob has easy sailing and, when his father comes to visit him at the ranch, he is delighted to find his boy in good shape and a man among men. And, of course, when he learns that Bob is engaged to Flora Jones.

LUBIN.

DOBBS THE DAUBER.—Dobbs was a janitor. Circumstances made him a painter. Being forcibly ejected from a saloon, he, finding some brushes and palettes thrown after him, he immediately started on a painting career. On automobiles, store windows, signs, and anything he could get paint on. He was quite satisfied with himself, but the owners of the automobiles, store windows and signs did not share this view of his art. It wasn't long before they were all on his trail. Then the police joined them. Dobbs had a merry chase of it. The automobile Police Patrol was catching up with him when he discovered a haystack and then continued his flight. Still they gained on him. So over a fence went Dobbs, followed soon by the people and the police. Many fences were passed. Finally, wrecking almost everything in his path. His pursuers were close behind. Dobbs had a brilliant idea. He dropped from a rear window. Ran into the police. The police were there too and he dropped right into their arms.

NAN'S DIPLOMACY.—Ralph Thurston liked excitement. His wife liked to stay at home, so Ralph was very much delighted when he received a letter from a former sweetheart of his, Mae Sharp, announcing that she was going to pay them a visit. Mae was an accomplished pianist and a brilliant conversationalist and Ralph anticipated a glorious time. All went well after Mae came until Nan became angry at being neglected and playing "second fiddle" as it were. Then Nan's cousin, Bob Jones arrived to pay them a visit. Between them Bob and Nan hatched a plot to get rid of Mae. Nan feigned insanity and proceeded to turn the house upside down. The doctor came and Bob took him into the plot. The doctor told Ralph that his wife must have complete rest, so Mae went to bed. Then it was up to Mae to do a housework and a terrible mess she made of Nan couldn't even boil potatoes and in this ingenuity Ralph didn't find much comfort in the fact that she could play the piano and converse brilliantly. Nan seemed to get worse. She was chase her husband out of the room with every appearance of wild frenzy. Finally Nan, in order with Bob, chased Mae from the house. The Ralph sought means to restore her sanity. I suggestion her knitting for a present of wash she had always been very fond. It had a wonderful effect. Nan was restored to sanity. Ralph was overjoyed and they lived happily ever after.

VITAGRAPH.

A TALE OF TWO CITIES (Part I).—In France in the Year 1757, there was a great conflict between wealth and poverty—in other words, between the aristocrats and the people. At Paris, St. Evremond was a leader of the privileged few, who had respect or consideration for the rights of the "common people." The Marquis seizes young peasant girl and kills her brother who tries to defend her. He endeavors to force his attentions upon the girl, who dies from the abuse and treatment she receives from a vassals of the Marquis. A celebrated French physician, is called in, and when he beholds the cause of the girl's death he denounces the Marquis. He is hurried to the Bastille and is imprisoned without trial. During his imprisonment his home is wrecked by order of the Marquis, and his infant daughter, Lucy, is taken to London by his faithful servant, Defarge. Lucy passes her youth in the guardianship of Mr. Lorry, and she becomes a ward of Tellson's Bank.

Dr. Manette, during his imprisonment in the Bastille, writes a document denouncing the Marquis and all his family, calling upon the people to avenge his wrongs. He is put to work as a shoemaker in his cell; his imprisonment is a living death and he soon loses his reason and his identity.

A TALE OF TWO CITIES (Part II.)—Eighteen years after Dr. Manette's imprisonment, Mr. Manette has grown to young womanhood and, unknown to her, she is very much admired by Sidney Carton, a young barrister employed by Tellson's Bank. Through her purity of soul and delight of her character, he is made conscious of his own moral deficiencies and he resolves to make a desire to gain her respect and friendship. Through the influence of Carton, Darnay, a former servant of Dr. Manette, Lucy learns to her father is still alive. She loses no time in going to Paris, where she is received by Defarge's wife. Lucy finds in the garret of Defarge's workshop, engaged in mind numbing toil, the old remember his daughter, but gradually recollects.

Charles Darnay, grown to manhood, is filled with disgust at the deeds of Evremond and the oppression of the people, renounces his title and goes to the estate of the Marquis to live.

Lucy, returning to England with her father, becomes acquainted with young Darnay, who is a passenger on the sam boat. The Marquis incenses at his nephew, sends hirelings to London, who soon after leaving a spy and an escort to Anglet. Darnay is arrested and acquitted, the Marquis' emissary cannot distinguish Darnay from Carton, the two closely resemble each other. Darnay becomes engaged to Lucy, her father learns to his intense distress of the relationship of the Marquis, but does not reveal this knowledge. If Lorry tells Carton of Lucy's engagement and the young attorney declares his love for her. He declares that he ever will remain her and he to speak a word that will cause her grief would gladly down his life for their happiness.

A TALE OF TWO CITIES (Part III).—The Revolution in France is Kindling. A mob storms the old Bastille Evremond is in charge. The fall swears vengeance and the same night steals to the Marquis' chamber and kills him. This is the beginning of the end. The people rise in all the fury. With cries of "Down with the Bastille have overpowered the jailer and become masters written by Dr. Manette against Evremond and all his kin.

In London, living in peace and happiness with his wife Lucy, Darnay received a letter from a old servant, who has been imprisoned by the Revolutionists, and he calls upon Darnay to save him from the accusation of being in league with the aristocrat returns to Paris to help his servant's life is arrested as being an aristocrat. Dr. Manette, Lucy and their daughter go to Paris to plead in self known as the prisoner of the Bastille and to the infuriated populace that the young man is a descendant. They endeavor to save Darnay and return to his wife, who is overjoyed.

Whom, however, the people learn that Darnay is a nephew of the Marquis, they rearrest Darnay and condemned him to the guillotine.

Sidney Carton now puts in his appearance. He bribes the jailer, gains access to his friend's cell tries to persuade Darnay to change clothes with him and let him take his place. Darnay refuses but Carton, who has provided himself with chloroform, applies it to the prisoner's nostrils and while he is unconscious, changes garments with him calls the jailers, has them carry Darnay to the carriage, which he, Carton, has in waiting. So gray is restored to Lucy and her father; they help make their way to London, while Carton is seen to the guillotine and suffers the death penalty, a willing sacrifice for the love and friendship he bore Lucy and her husband.

KALEM.

PRISCILLA AND THE PEQUOT.—Priscilla, the daughter of John Brandsomb, a Puritan settler, hears faint knock on the cabin door. Stepping outside she finds Ponus, a Pequot Indian, who has been shot, injured by a bear. Helping him into the house, she binds up his wounds. The Indian, about to depart, tells Priscilla he will some day repay her kindness. A month later Ponus warns Priscilla that King Philip has again incited the Pequots to an uprising against the whites. This timely warning permits the settlers to reach the nearby town house, where, after a sharp conflict, the attack of the Indians is repulsed.

THE OPEN ROAD.—Jack Darwin, a wealthy senior finds Zora, a pretty little gipsy girl, and all years old, who has strayed from her camp and become lost. Darwin takes Zora to his home and adopts her. As the pretty gipsy girl grows to womanhood Darwin falls in love with her. One day Zora visits a local gipsy camp and has her fortune told. While being paid for her services the gipsy fortune teller recognizes a birthmark on Zora's arm and declares her to be a daughter. Darwin, when called upon for an explanation, tells how he found the little wanderer and took her home.

Becoming fascinated with the gipsy life Zora decides to join them, and despite the pleadings of her adopted father chooses the "Open Road."

MEXICAN FILIBUSTERERS.—Our story opens in the office of the Mexican junta in a Texas town not many miles from the border, presided over by M. Olivercr, supposedly the agent for the Sierra American Fruit Co. Pedro, a young Mexican attached to the junta, is in love with Blanca, the agent's daughter.

Arrangements have been made to run a quantity of arms and ammunition across the line to the Mexican insurgents. In loading a freight car for the contraband every parrigal in Mexico takes his cost and works with a will, all except Pedro, who is cooling on the scene and finally ceases working but Monte, upbraids the lazy lout and threatens to strike him. This arouses the revengeful spirit of Monte, he breaks away and advises the American authorities that the Mexican filibusters are attempting to rush fire arms across the border. Although compelled to act on information furnished by him the Secret Service men are discovering the traitor and look upon him with contempt. In the meantime Blanca, who detested Monte's contemptible treachery, watches for an opportunity to report the affair to the American Secret Service. Quickly returning to the junta where the ammunition is being loaded she tells the Mexican of the train ordered to start immediately. The Secret Service men arrive on the scene just as the train is pulling out. Then follows a thrilling chase, in which Lieutenant Brown's daring feat of uncoupling the engine and underneath the ammunition and the transport is seen dashing across the border make a thrilling ending.

SAILOR JACK'S REFORMATION. Sailor Jack is the terror on his home leave spending more time on saloons who have been on a long voyage and most usually ends in a brawling affair. Now, after having achieved fame as a sailor and a career whose record has subdued and tamed many of the wild spirits of the sea, Jack addresses under the influence of liquor, impressed by the strong appeal of Captain Agnes. Jack's reformation and is induced to go to the mission hall where services are to be held. Jack attends the gathering and falls in love with Agnes. Despite pronouncing her as only a month interview Agnes promises to wed. A few months later a wedding follows Jack's backsliding and needle stepped in the friendship between Agnes and Lieutenant Landers of the Salvation Army. Jack, learning the group rendezvous to accept Agnes' decision and spends the night drinking and the next morning is a very sorry sight. When he reaches the mission he finds Agnes with Landers. Realizing that in Agnes he has been his wife he mounts up his rated energy, and as soon as possible he and Agnes become Jack's long trip being ended he seeks Agnes and his wife has been constantly awaiting him. With a glad cry Agnes throws herself into his arms as the curtain descends on a happy reconciliation.

SELIG.

THE SEMINOLE'S SACRIFICE. An English officer and an Indian Squaw. Commander of the garrison fort forces him to marry her or lose his life. Knowing the Seminoles punished the whites if the Indians must with defeat or severe turn to the verge of starvation, Evan General from offers treasonable amounts, if time will allow her to his camp in from their Chief. Her father, Red Bird, watches refusing to do the best for the band of the people he made the sacrifice of his own free will and unfettered by bonds of love Evan himself to the pale face general.

THE EYE OF CONSCIENCE. Harold Burton, a fiscal employee of the Las Vegas Mining company, Mexico, is in a quandary and sorely perplexed, owing to a letter from his wife, who in sympathizing with him in his struggle for fortune. The Superintendent is dangerously sick and is lying on a cot in the office. Burton believes him dead, is tempted to steal the contents of the safe, the pay-roll, and go back to civilization, but the ever watchful eye of conscience awakes in him the bitter pangs of remorse and finally quells him. In his ambitions for a purer and nobler manhood restoration is made, and Harold Burton is happy in the thought of conquered temptations.

We not only make Plans and build

Theatres and Vaudeville Houses

We also build

MOVING PICTURE THEATRES

We have built over 60 Theatres the last 5 years which are all ORIGINAL in Construction, Design and Decorations

BIOGRAPH.

THE LILY OF THE TENEMENTS.—Here we find a youthful toilet at a sewing machine causing the loss of her poor old mother and friend. She receives a most welcome letter from Ireland and her lonely gives them plans final settlement having made up the sum of their cherished savings. The owner of the tenements calls for payment, and being a man of unconscionable pernicious efforts on the results of misfortune and her refusing to aid and even to pay and her own pretend of loss, liquidate all that he supposed to be due. Her plans are spent but are poor and refused against this he recognizes herself. After the scene has been remaining of the dead and the tenement pioneer, but she has no longer needs from that. Within a month the tenements. Upon the owner's return to collect the rent he is met by an order to keep from collapse. This was to the father's daughter, who had been the cause of the death. He will receive nothing for the loss. Incensed that the owner dares to confine his interest, he returns to the tenements and is arrested by his determination. He finds himself alone with girl to whom he promises marriage and agrees to make a sacrifice of himself. She, however, is seen to give her decision next day. He has not left when the owner calls. He is met by the girl, who tells him that she has decided to marry him and has come to beg for money and things which to pay her rent. At the office one month later we see Mr. Rumpleton seated with the poor girl's petition and in further argument as to the terms of the lease. Mr. Rumpleton is in an investigation, but becomes alarmed and seated with his father entirely and tells her he will be. Mr. Rumpleton's father, who is also present. The poor girl at the entrance to go a point of the gift, and for the owner to obtain the option. The girl's only repugnance to agree to pay money that she with no moral scruples for the future owner. Mr. Rumpleton, the owner's son, and Harold Burton, and their discussion his father. Within a little girl two forever. Hastening out in possession confronted by the old lady's and grateful parents, and promising to protect the girl for all time to come will allow, as per plight he has aroused in him almost lost.

THE HEART OF A SAVAGE.—Into a camp of peaceful Indians fires a gang of white men. Several of the Indians are killed and wounded, but two escape one of the wounded Indians is driven through fear further away from the Indian village and falls exhausted in the side of a spring. One day some time he and there is a prospector and his family of a wife and small girl child. The prospector having departed for his claim the wife goes to the spring for water and sees the Indian prostrate before it. She sees at once he is suffering and in need of aid which she at once administers. Meanwhile, the other wounded Indian has made his way to the village and told the story of the assault. Look Spot thorn by the things and now is aroused against all whites. The first Indians arrive that he for war dance is proclaimed to and gathering on danger to which his home is the cause of it with him. Then the prospector returns to his home, he seems himself surrounded by the women who is alone with his wife. Finding it impossible to escape the prospector and his wife resolve to make the best of a bad situation and arming themselves with rifles and ammunition they prepare to defend themselves against the attack of the savages. The wife and arriving it should be remembered that the prospector and his wife are not in the position, where

EDISON.

MR. RUMPLETON'S DETECTIVE.—The famous detective Mr. Rumpleton is seen in his office at his own residence. Among the callers are the father of a young lady, whose daughter has been kidnapped by a gang of thieves, headed by Gordon Scott by the name of Gordon Scott. Mr. Rumpleton promises to find the girl and bring her back to her parents. Upon the arrival of the girl at the house of the gang, where she is employed as a stenographer. He manages to gain access to the asylum, but once inside he finds it difficult to get out. However, he finally escapes in his shirt sleeves and contracts a severe cold on his way home. Hastily he dons another suit and rushes to the boarding house to report the whereabouts of the missing lady, only to find that the stout lady was not the missing one after all and, incidentally, that the young lady reported to be missing was none other than his constant hoodoo, the chewing gum girl, who has absented herself for a few days and has turned up safe, sound and sarcastic as usual.

THE PRICE OF VICTORY—In the South of France lived old Dumbet, the keeper of an inn, and his son, a young man of violent views, like father a royalist, the son an enthusiastic patriot.

One day Jean Dumbet returned to the inn after weeks later the lad returns to the village dressed in all the wonderful trappings of a drummer boy, full of life and patriotism, and thinks the old man bids him farewell.

The news of the battle reaches the village, the old gray-haired father goes forth to search for his son. Back to the inn the heartbroken father brings his dear dead son and silently and sadly the silent widow figure upon the table, and placing two candles at his head, sits alone in the silent watches of the night beside the dead.

The Emperor and his staff stop at the inn for a few moments to write home dispatches heralding the news of the victory. Small wonder when the man of destiny calls for candles, as that he may see to write, that the old innkeeper brings them up. To this means the Emperor and the dead drummer boy are brought together, the father, filled with hatred, springs upon Napoleon with an upraised knife, but the Emperor almost abstractedly brushes it aside, and in a manner which flashes to his defense, quietly places the Cross of the Legion of Honor upon the dead boy's breast and silently continues his writing of the note for which he died, thus doing all that lay, even in the power of the Emperor, to pay reverence to this simple little drummer boy.

THE IRON MASTER.—The story is laid in France and deals with high society. The principal character, the Iron Master, is a strong, true character of sterling worth who is deeply in love with Claire De Beaulieu, the daughter of a noble but impoverished neighbor to his estate, while she in turn is fondly devoted to Gaston, the Duke De Bligny, and also engaged to Jacques De Mervier, a gentleman of wild habits and eventually loses all his fortune at the gaming table. The first scene becomes known to Moulinet, a "financier," who has more money than manners and whose one desire is to marry his daughter into high society. Being in a position to know of Claire's financial state, he acquaints the Duke of her entire loss of fortune, and then offers to buy off all his debts if he will marry his daughter. This the Duke consents to do, and Claire, becoming acquainted with the fact, is so deeply humiliated that she, upon the spur of the moment, accepts the hand of the Iron Master in marriage.

On the wedding night he learns of the true state of her heart. He is overcome with anger but for the Iron Master's life and almost forfeits her own instead. It is needless to say that the Iron Master wins her love.

URBAN ECLIPSE.

COMRADES.—A thrilling story of the devotion of two soldiers to one another until one loses his life in battle. The other at great risk carries the dying music message to his old father, and while there finds an opportunity to further serve his dead friend by giving his life for that of his comrade's father.

GAUMONT.

PAGANINI AND THE COUNTESS BEATRICE.—A story of the life of Paganini, the famous violinist. He is secretly loved by the Princess Beatrice, whom count Ingri courts in vain. The musician prefers his violin to the Countess. Beatrice learns of Paganini's weakness for gambling and she supplies money to be used against him in order to win his violin from him. Paganini loses to her messenger, who returns the instrument to the Countess. Paganini, following him, arrives to find Beatrice in possession of his precious instrument. Enraged, he attacks her, is arrested and thrown into prison. The Countess sends his violin to him and plans his escape. In a series of exciting incidents we watch her plans materialize.

MATRIMONIAL EPIDEMIC.—In which old uncles and aunts are so impressed by the ardent love of a young couple that they too return in spirit to the spring time of life and become exceedingly coquettish and flirtatious.

The love germ finds lodgment and develops to laughable proportions and finally conquers a trio of fond couples.

LAFONT AND POLA'S LAST FLIGHT.—The ascending mechanical bird majestically wends its way through the air currents and is seen as but a speck in the heavens, when a mishap causes the machine to drop. The unbroken fall allows the speed to increase until there appears to be only a streak of black descending from the skies, and with a tremendous crash machine and human cargo strike the earth.

PATHE.

JEALOUSY FOILED.—Waldron, who is a cashier in a bank, gets a note from an old friend asking him to meet him at the bank to take out of the safe to loan to him until the next morning. This Waldron does, and Carleton, who is the bookkeeper and a rejected suitor of Waldron's sister, sees the act, later he steals the letter and accuses Waldron of being a thief. Things look black for Waldron and the president of the bank has him arrested. Ten years elapse and Carleton has become a wealthy man and has fallen in love with his stenographer, not knowing that she is the daughter of the man he sent to jail. Jack, who loves Jack Lawton, who is playing the stock market. Stocks are on the rise and Lawton can make a large amount of money if he can obtain $2,000 to cover his margins. In order to get this from Carleton, Lawton forges the endorsement of his note for the amount. Carleton suspecting the nature as a forgery, but loans him the amount and when the note comes due he is disappointed, but Carleton refuses to give up the note and tells him that the next day he will swear out a warrant for his arrest. Lawton goes to the office to see the girl he loves. Alone in his room Lawton contemplates suicide, but when he is about to shoot himself he discovers Waldron, who, recently released from prison, has become a thief in earnest. This turn of affairs changes Lawton's mind and he saves him from disgrace in the nick of time. How this is done is best left for the film to tell as it would spoil its interest.

MAX MAKES MUSIC.—Our old friend Max is seen ambling down the street on pleasure bent, when he is stopped by an admiring friend, who gives him a magic flute. All who hear the music from the instrument cannot help dancing. From here Max can imagine the result. Puppy dogs dance the sailors' hornpipe, and a group of sweet girl graduates so view the performance for a moment, fall under the mystic spell and—do they dance? Well, yes! On he goes turning sorrow to joy, making every one laugh. He finally finds himself in this film, which ends with Max in bed piping away on his flute and chairs, tables and bed do a can-can around the room.

OH! YOU CLUBMAN.—Mr. Clubman, who has a most charming wife, doesn't appreciate his home somuch as he should, spending many evenings at the club. Mrs. Clubman remonstrates each time and Hubby promises to remain home, but can't resist a clubman! One fine night he has a note from a friend announcing a session at the club, and he goes, but pretends to be very well. Now this is at 8 P. M., and at 2 A. M. he is seen making his unsteady way homeward. Now comes the fun. In the mean time Mrs. Clubman has doped out a scheme by which she hopes to cure her spouse of his clubbing proclivities. She dresses in an old suit of her husband's, she awaits his homecoming in mask and old slouch hat and a big revolver in hand. When he comes in very promptly throws up his hands at the supposed burglar's ominous display. What happens after he was cured of his bad habits is best left to be told by the film itself.

SAFELY DEFEATED.—Robert of Normandy is in love with the daughter of the Duke of Messina and they are secretly betrothed. Satan, however, wants the girl for himself and Robert causes much sorrow and trouble. When Robert fights a duel Satan changes his face into many horrible masks and when Robert is at the point of death he transformed into frogs, lizards and the like. Finally, as the power of freedom from such annoyances Satan tries to bargain for Robert's soul, but he refuses. The marriage occurs, and as the couple leave the church Satan again appears and attempts to drag Robert down with him to eternal darkness, but the fearless fellow seizes and waves aloft the crucifix and Satan disappears forever.

Independent Film Stories.
AMERICAN.

STRATEGY.—Jack Merrill was prosperous. He possessed, but did not wholly deserve the love of his patient little wife and daughter. His estrangement was seditiously fanned by one which should have been beautiful and attractive to Jack did not mean to him what home implies to the well regulated mind.

The club, with its poker game and convivial highballs, occupied the evenings that should have brought happiness to the wife and baby, who loved and longed alone. Yes, Jack was selfish.

One night, while keeping the lonely vigil, her heart aching with her husband's neglect, the wife resorts to strategy in the hope of regaining her loved one. She writes a brief note.

Jack:

Your drinking and late hours are more than baby and I can endure. We have gone never to return.

ALICE.

At 3.00 a. m. Jack arrives at his home in a rather unsteady condition. On his library table he discovers the note. Its contents dawn slowly upon his liquor benumbed brain, and as he reads at last the full import, his grief is beyond control. Alice secretly observes him from behind the portieres and feeling that his punishment has been sufficient, sends baby in to relieve the situation. Baby clasps her papa's knees just as he is about to fire a bullet which would relieve his life. His hand is stayed. "Where is mamma" he asks. Baby points to the bedroom. "Mamma is dead, papa is playing a little joke on dear eh? Yes. Well, you go and tell mamma I want to see her." Baby runs out of the room to do Jack revolves the matter in his mind and determines to turn the tables. He frees the gas in the air and fills the room. Then he kneels by his side and sobs over the prostrate form of loved one.

The wife gains her point. Jack's awakening is complete. He gathers his dear ones to his bosom and home is home at last.

RELIANCE.

A PLAIN TALE.—A young music composer having a hard struggle. Unknown to him, his wife writes stories which she offers to magazine editors. She is followed home by a wealthy man who feigns sympathy and offers her money. (a delightful comedy bit ensues), and she ordered of the house by the indignant woman. The offering of the money was overheard by another as part of the temptation to cause no time in forming the husband, who meanwhile has become famous by the sale of his music, plans a surprise for her husband by laying in a stock of groceries and buying him a new overcoat. The basket full of groceries, and he sets out to find the man who dropped the card, has secured a wrong description. In the wrong the address given he meets the rake and follows him to the publishing office, where he sees his wife waiting, and is overjoyed to hear her plain and contemptuously arraign the man for the trouble he has caused. Ashamed and remorseful, he hurries home only to find the basket of food for an accepted opera. He, in turn, plans a surprise for his wife and as he enters the door he dons the overcoat which he had refused to wear and when she enters he begs her forgiveness which she readily grants.

REX.

THE STORY OF A PRAYER RUG.—To York the land of mystery and mysterious romance there are no more fascinating cities more wonderful in the eyes of occidentals. Amongst them is a "prayer rug" upon which the household kneel when contemplating its prayers.

Old Hamid has just finished weaving a "prayer rug" and his daughter, Elmas, feels her own heart of the event. In the shade of a grove, where the warm sun and blossoms of the sunny land about them, she plays at their own love. This is the same the world over, and love is the life of the young.

Accidentally, one day while getting water at a well, Elmas is discovered by the Pasha, who desires to make her queen of his harem. He feels her home and offers to buy her from her father but the offer is refused.

He returns later, Elmas disappears. Sorrowfully the father apprises Elmas' sweetheart of the loss. The latter determines to investigate and rescue Elmas, and, disguised as a rug peddler he gains entrance to the harem. Amongst the sortment he takes with him is the "prayer rug" which he knew Elmas would recognize sight and desire. So when Elmas' attendants departed from the harem with his rugs on back he had concealed in the packed little film

He arrives at her abode before departing and after clasping her in his arms, he points the sun, the oriental symbol of happiness, ceases of love.

THANHOUSER.

STAGE STRUCK.—A country girl becomes infatuated with her attractive setting, and the hotel work and bad hotels soon tax her strength. We playing at one-night stand in a little town. company is treated to a square meal by a few persons young drummer who is greatly attracted by the company's pretty leading lady.

The company get into financial straits, and to their baggage seized. Entirely without funds to start by walk to the next town. "Walking ties" is a new form of exercise for our hero and half way on the journey she begs the company to go on without her, as she is too weary sick to continue. Sitting alone and weeping bitterly on the steps of a forlorn little railway station, the girl is surprised to see, getting off train, her former acquaintance, the drummer. He sees upon buying her a ticket for home and starting her off at once. The girl is welcomed to home by her father and when a few weeks later she receives together an offer of a New York

...ment and an offer of marriage from the young ...mer—she decides to accept the latter, and to ...r in the future as—just a wife.

...E LITTLE MOTHER.—A poor widow who ...esents her two children, one a baby and the ... a girl of six, by scrubbing, weakens under ... hard work, and finally dies. Marie, the ...ttle mother," anxious that her home may not ...ken up, calls on one of her mother's em...yers and requests that she be given a chance to ... the dead woman's place. The artist, a ...ssy, good-hearted man, pleased with the child's ...ple, haughtily employs her, and makes her be...ve that she is really doing all the "chores." ... artist's kindness, much to his surprise, brings ...to remembrance one thousand fold. Some of his ...ists plots to fleece him. She calls at his studio, ...ps in his arms, and when her confederate ...es in with a policeman, she makes charges ...h lead to the arrest of the innocent artist. ...st as the policeman is leading her benefactor ...y, the little scrubwoman sees what is happen...ing. She follows the party to the police station, ...s afraid to enter. When the "complainant" ...n her husband come out, the child is impressed ...ith the fact that they seem to be on the best of ...rms. Her suspicions are aroused, and she "shod...s" them like a regular detective.

...o crook would ever imagine that a little girl, ...ushing a baby carriage was a "Sleuth". This ...e certainly did not, for when they meet a ...iend in the park, they stopped to tell him how ...t had successfully arranged to "trim" a rich ...rt, never doubting that he would pay liberally ...o save the case dropped.

...e little girl, from her place in hiding heard ...e story. So the girl found a policeman, and ...old him about it. And the policeman went with ...er hiding place, and heard enough to war...ra him in making what he afterwards described ...s a two hander collar." The adventuress and ...er confederate were haled to the police station ...nd locked up, while the artist was set free in a ...ew.

Released

Tuesday, Mar. 7th.

When Masons Meet

A Comedy

Imagine the comedy when a real Mason meets two who think they are masons because they wear the emblem. It is one continuous roar for 450 feet.

2 on 1

The Bandit's Surprise

A WESTERN COMEDY-DRAMA

that has twelve scenes of good acting.

Synopsis elsewhere in this paper

2 on 1

John Robins, who is infatuated by her and induces her to elope with him to New York. Bob, a clerk in the office, admires and secretly loves Mary, prompted by jealousy, phones Mrs. Robins, informing her of the deception of her husband. She makes an appointment with Bob and they follow the runaway couple, catching them and confronting the husband in the corridor of one of New York's leading hotels. The wife entreats Robins to go home with her, which he finally does, leaving the girl alone in a strange city. Mary, on discovering that she is being deserted, and learning that Robins is a husband, is heart-broken, realizing the mistake she has made and she is miles from home without a friend. She is heard crying by the girl in the next room who comes in and tries to cheer her. Suddenly she hears strains in the adoining room playing "Home Sweet Home." It brings back a memory of her own home and they who are waiting for her. She starts from the room and is met by Bob, who at last has found her and who is just about to knock entreating her to come back to the arms of her mother once more in the dear old Home Sweet Home.

A GAMBLE WITH LOVE.—This intensely interesting drama is laid in the region of the town now known as Goldfield, Nevada. Mary, the daughter of an old miner is in love with a young easterner. She in turn is madly loved by a gambler. The miner dies and the father's dying request is that the gambler take care of Mary. In the meantime the easterner has been summoned home. Months elapse, the gambler has intercepted the letters and continues to make ardent love to Mary and eventually wins her consent and they are married, although he is twice her age. Several years elapse. A sweet-faced child blesses their union. Prosperity? No. The gambler never wins. It is nearly midnight and Mary's husband has not returned from the game. She is seen sitting beside the cradle gazing earnestly at the photograph of her first love. Suddenly a bearded stranger opens the door, removes his false beard and the one who had occupied her thoughts stands before

Powers Picture Plays

Tuesday Saturday

...e result is that there is now a "scrubwoman" ...ho during the afternoon is employed in the brogerage office of ... artist, and the future of the "little mother" ...nd her baby are assured.

POWERS.

...E CALL OF THE HEART.—The name of ... is a very large figure in the working art ... is photoplay. Jane Smith, a slum worker, and ...s Smith, a blind street singer, coming in for ... share of trouble. The will of Robert Smith ...ontains a very peculiar clause, offering Five Mil...ion Dollars to his daughter Jane who has been ...ost a great many years, providing she marries within one month after she is found. A shrewd lawyer plans to put over a singer and ...ake the fortune. By accident he meets the ...ld street singer and is overjoyed to learn that ...is client is Jane Smith. Meanwhile Jane, the ...lum worker, has been deluged with offers of mar...iage, without admirers taking it for granted ...hat she is the advertised for heiress. The blind ...irl is sheltered and protected by a couple of in...ident actors, the youngster of the pair falls madly ...ver with her. Many attempts are made to ...ake the blind street girl away from her compan...ons and series of thrilling scenes follow each other in rapid succession. Love interest is sustained ...hen introducing of a novel method both tender ...nd pathetic. Through the slum worker's efforts ...he blind girl recovers her sight and incidentally ...er fortune. The young author's consistency is re...ewarded, Jane Smith, no longer the blind street ...inger, offers to share her fortune with the man ...ho watched over her so tenderly during the dark ...ays of her hapless life, proving the truth of the ...old proverb, "Cast thy bread upon the waters." ...his play will long be remembered by your patrons ...s one of the features of the year.

...OME SWEET HOME.—Mary Vernon, a stenog...apher, is employed in the brogerage office of

Released

Saturday, Mar. 11th

A Gamble with Love

A Comedy-Drama

A Western story without chases and every foot full of tense dramatic action.

THE Exchanges furnish two Powers a week

Do you get BOTH?

The Powers Co.

241st St. and Richardson Ave. New York City

Good Stories Wanted

her. A struggle is going on within the bosom of the gambler's wife. The man she loves urges her to flee with him. The baby in the cradle holds her back. Suddenly the door opens and the husband bars the exit. The dramatic scenes between these people will surely please the spectator. Mary decides to remain steadfast. The young man's better nature shows itself and with a hearty "God Bless You," on his lips he passes into the night.

WHEN MASONS MEET.—Betty Kimble has three lovers and has great difficulty in trying to decide which to choose for a partner for life. She receives a letter from her uncle telling her that if she does not marry a man who is a Mason that he will ignore her in his will. Carl Fisher, one of the suitors, happens to be a Mason and he has always been Betty's favorite but she is in a quandary as to what excuse to offer the other two and humble them. She then hears the letter that she has received from her uncle. Both the deadline reader has still time for action. They become Masons and hasten to the nearest jewelry store and purchase Masonic badges. They shortly afterward arrive at the house and with great display point to the emblem which they wear and humorous complications arise as each one thinks the other is playing some kind trick on him. Both the suitors after watching the two supposed Masons, inquires what they are trying to do. Each proudly points to his emblem. Carl assumes them of being impostors and shows them the emblem which a real mason would wear and walks out of the room with Betty.

THE BANDIT'S SURPRISE.—Fred Burton, a yearly broker of cottage graves in Nevada with the intention of purchasing a ranch, he is mistaken for the general manager of the Great West ern Railroad and dolloped by "Black" Jack and his gang and held for ransom. Young Burton calls at the Mexican ranch and while explaining the nature of his call to Miss Merton, Black Jack and his going overboard him and he is saved and Miss Mackie has taken a great fancy to young Brown, and urges the Sheriff to reconsider the affair and besides, the Sheriff has a great deal of liquor at liberty. The Sheriff is soon a prey to Morpheus. While he slumbers Ned and Brown escape and one of the crew of the good Wycomb is let by, removes him for reasons unknown. Burton and Miss Mackie fall in love and they subsequently happy husband of Dorothy Dix and Bertram becomes the idle partner of the entire Westcott gang.

IMP.

TRACKED.—Ray Barret, a forger, is sought by Bellows, a detective. Barret finding his father's former housekeeper, Mrs. Dunsmore, calls to see her, but she refuses to admit him. He is finally brought to the mansion by the sound of his father's voice and finds him dying. Barret is accused of the murder by Dunsmore and his wife. The prisoner is taken to the police station in a closed carriage and escapes by the window. He goes to the home of Lester Dunsmore as Vanderbilt and finds employment in domestic service.

On his arrival Barret is taken ill and is cared for by Dunsmore and his wife. On becoming convalescent he admires the wife of his benefactor and is seized with a violent passion for her. He revives her by accompanying him on a horseback ride. She succumbs and he then forges a letter to her husband, telling her that he no longer loves him and has gone with another man. The ruse, unsuspecting, is brought to the attention of the coroner and Barret appears in his true colors, seizing her and throwing her across his horse gallops away.

The mother of Mrs. Dunsmore finds the note and summons Dunsmore by servant. Dunsmore is shown the note and he follows, in company with a servant he sets out to be avenged. They find Barret at bay and he is attacked by the servant and disarmed by Dunsmore. The plunder will not listen to his wife The compromising situation explains. He gives the note as a means for his life by extracting all the cartridges in his revolver but one. Then splashing the cylinder around commands the destroyer of his happiness to shoot. In turn each snaps the hammer until it is Dunsmore's turn to try the fifth shot with uncertainty of the death of Barret. Barret finishes, proves himself a craven coward and begs for the life. Dunsmore allows him the miserable boon and then with his servant gives chase. Barret runs, but finally falls exhausted and is captured. Dunsmore is about to run him through with his machete. Balfour, the detective, who has followed Barret to China, providentially arrives on the scene and saves the life of Barret. He explains Barret is a forger. The detective is shown the note and, to the satisfaction of the husband, points the note to Dunsmore as a forgery. Barret, brought to a sense of meditation confesses and the household returns to the wife he has wronged and is forgiven.

Barret is led away, and the story closes with the planter taking his faithful wife in his arms, begging her forgiveness for ever doubting her fidelity.

THE MESSAGE IN THE BOTTLE.—Lieutenant Shannon a handsome young officer of the United States army, bids farewell to his sweetheart, Louise Sherman, and takes passage on a battle ship to join his regiment. We see him on the deck of the ship waving farewell to his friends as the craft steams majestically away.

The boat is shipwrecked and the young officer drifts ashore on a raft on the north coast of Africa. Exhausted and almost famished, he manages to beach his frail craft and then, stripping a sash from the handkerchief which he has used as a signal, he writes on the canvas, puts the message in a bottle and corking the receptacle, tosses it into the sea, breathing a prayer that it may be found by friends and that he may be rescued. Staggering under his strength almost spent, he falls exhausted on the rocks to be captured by members of a tribe of cannibals and half carried to their king. His presence among the savages at first provokes curiosity and hostile demonstrations but he is spared and his coming is hailed with delight.

Later recognizing his prowess in battle, he is crowned as a leader. At the head of the tribe, he engages an invading faction in battle and distinguishes himself, returning to the king with a report of victory, carried on the shoulders of admiring members of the tribe, the fight having been a decisive struggle in which many natives participated.

The young lieutenant has so ingratiated himself into the affections of the natives that the dignitary wishes to reward him, and offers Shannon the hand of his daughter in marriage. The young white man is averse to any such arrangement, but he consents, when the request is accompanied by a stern command.

In the meantime the message in the bottle has been found by some of Shannon's friends while bathing, and they lose no time in fitting out an expedition to search for him. They arrive on the island just as the wedding ceremony is being performed. It is an elaborate affair. The warriors are all in attendance in their wild fantastic garbs, hideously naked war-like in their love ornaments. Most are drinking the Fuego-African war dance with Shannon and the dusky maiden kneeling before the white chief. He is interrupted by the arrival of officers and sailors of a gun boat together with Louise Sherman, who recognizes Shannon and rushes to his arms. He is overjoyed to see his friends and sweetheart.

As the ship's entire crew goes from the island, bearing the native officer, the dusky maiden who was to have been his bride, stands immovable, pissed out of luck, arms extended, bidding him a sad farewell, heartbroken.

NESTOR.

THE PROFESSOR'S ROMANCE.—Professor Wilkins remembered his college chum, John Bonnycastle, Jr., and Eva Edgar with a delightful affection, and while he highly appreciated the honor the judge conferred in appointing him guardian of Eva Hammond, it was with misgiving that the Professor learned his friend intended having Eva with him until his return from abroad.

Harold Bonnycastle was then a young Miss of seventeen arrived with her maid, husband of the little girl to the Professor's home, but expected.

Her appearance was the signal for an outburst of merriment on the part of his friends, Tom, Dick, Harry and the maid, and the quiet bachelor rapidly transformed his sitting room into a child's playhouse.

Eva's sweetheart, George Bedlow, had pocketed the only "grown-up" picture she had, so when the Judge ordered a photograph mailed to her guardian, Eva promptly forwarded the one taken several years before—hence, the Professor's mistake.

A few weeks, however, found Professor Rudolph Wilkins quite a domesticated man with his household, but also altering his appearance at his ward's suggestions, and actually vieing with the boys for Eva's company.

One evening, after the Professor had presented Eva with a big bouquet, greatly to the amusement of his friends, and triumphantly marched her off to dinner, George Bedlow appeared. Gleefully the boys undertook to impress upon Harold Eva's love, Rudolph." Then, after working him up into a jealous rage, stole softly out to await their friend's return.

Indeed so effectively did they do their work that, upon Eva's return, Harold refused to permit her to listen to an explanation until she indignantly sent for the Professor.

Delighted that gentleman hurried down, only to find the young people so busily engrossed that they did not even notice his appearance.

Hurriedly the learned Professor turned to his room, snatched up the half-finished letter to Judge Hammond, asking his permission to court Eva, and tore it into shreds. Then, with one glance in the mirror, he ripped off his high collar, angrily and resigned that he should have been guilty of such folly.

GREAT NORTHERN.

THE RIVAL SERVANTS.—A young girl leaves home to go to attention in a big city as a domestic servant. She receives advances from the son of the family, who turns out to be an inveterate gambler. In a gambling den which he frequents he one night loses all he has. Reaching home in the small hours of the morning, he goes on the sideboard a valuable piece of jewelry, which his mother has left there. The temptation to steal it beset him and he succumbs. The new domestic performs the usual household duties in the room the next morning, and when the family arrives and the jewelry is missed she is promptly accused of the theft. The son though present, allows her to be arrested for the crime of which she is innocent. About this time the gambling den is raided. Here there was a maid who has pawned the jewel on behalf of the thief. She is arrested and, finally been in communication with the pawnbroker and have her description. He is summoned, and recognizes her as the girl who pawned the jewel, and she, to save herself, denounces the real criminal, upon whom judgment is speedy.

CHAMPION.

THE VINDICATION OF JOHN.—Pressing creditors and large losses at the gaming table are greatly depressing to Harold Brown, the bank clerk, but some new arrangement is made by which he escapes.

The great new bank vault had been newly installed and the combination was known only to John, who copies it in his book and gives it to the treasurer. Harold notes the blotting of the written combination. At the opportune moment he secures it and arresting in his room easily reads it by holding it before the mirror.

That night the safe is opened and a large sum is extracted. The combination, providentially says to some but the treasurer and John, the poor boy is suspected, apprehended and confined in jail to await trial. His mother, believing in John's innocence, accomplishes his escape in a basket incident and his soon on his way Westward to await proof of his honesty.

With the flight of time he becomes a valuable ranch hand and the favorite of all, including Helen, the daughter of Rancher Case. He is also to tell his wealthy and eager girl of his love. When he suddenly confesses his position as a fugitive from justice. He dare not ask this girl to share his misery.

Harold Brown, the actual looter of the bank's cash, pays his debts, and resigning his position, boards a train for the West—to spend the summer in leaving a good time. He rapidly sinks to the lowest strata of existence in the Barrooms and from one of which he is bodily ejected, staggering about, sick and disgusted, he is overcome and is discovered by a returning body of cowpunchers of Case, lying in the road. Some gallop off for a doctor while others carry him to a deserted shack. John arrives from the ranch with the doctor and is surprised to find his old desk mate in such wretched a condition. Bending over the form, he is thrilled with happiness at the broken, muttered confession. Then comes the removal of stigma to his name. John is released from custody and is interested and to that little girl, who, smiling through her tears, looks up into the face of her vindicated lover. John.

SOLAX.

A COSTLY PLEDGE.—Lucy Martin waits in her cosy home wearily for her husband. Finally John arrives. He has imbibed not wisely but too well. Lucy upbraids him for his weakness, but finally breaks down into a burst of passionate tears. Repentant and anxious to spare his wife, tells her that he will never do it again. Finally John offers to sign a pledge, which he writes at a table, supported by Lucy. The pledge John never to take another drink and provides that should he break it he will pay his wife, as forfeit, the sum of five hundred dollars. Several weeks pass—poor John, thirsty and weakening, resents his wife's plan to take her self-denying town for a visit to her folks and immediately after her departure heads for the nearest saloon for a longed for drink. In the meantime Mrs. Robbins, one of John's friends, receives an intimation of his temporary lapse and decides to expect. He meets John, coming out of the saloon, who tells him of his wife's absence and the two plan to "take in the town" together. John buys a bell-boy outfit and his friend the costume of a red cross nurse. Both invites Robbins to make his house their headquarters during the absence of his wife and the two proceed there, stopping on the way at numerous drinks. The morning after the ball, the two friends are found attired in their respective costumes—with oh, such heads and well-formed resolutions to "never again." A ring at the door bell attracts their attention—then look out of the window—horrors, the wife is there, vigorously ringing the bell and waiting admittance. Consternation reigns. Finally John has an idea. His friend is attired as a nurse, so will sing sick and thus gain his wife's sympathy. Robbins, the supposed nurse, admits Mrs. Martin. Fun fast and furious follows but the young wife finally detects the imposition and makes John pay the penalty—a cash fine of five hundred dollars.

YANKEE.

THE SENORITA'S SACRIFICE.—From some Spain comes the story of a Senorita's sacrifice. The story of a love which went for naught and could only be shown in silence.

It has to do with a young American whose sojourn in Spain was marred by an encounter with brigands who left him for dead. Pinpinas, a pretty Senorita, while gathering flowers along the mountain side, discovers the wounded Yankee and brings him to her home. Here there is much need of nursing. We leave the film to tell what followed.

Suffice it to say, there's a surprise in store on only the standpoint of a story but photography as well.

ANGEL OF THE BOWERY.—There's plenty of material for good dramas in the Salvation Army. Almost every soldier in this vast organization could tell a story of heart-throbs, of hopes and aspirations, of storms and distress, which would suffice to make a drama dramatic. "The Angel of the Bowery," is famous in song and story all over America.

She was a Salvation Army lass whose father had died a drunkard. She loved a chap in the

Do You Need Money? THEN GET ON OUR LOCKED-REEL SERVICE That Gets It

No. 44 North Ninth St. PHILADELPHIA PROJECTION CO. Philadelphia, Pa.
and work in the corner WE BUY 30 REELS EACH WEEK

e town but the boy's mother would not coun-nce a union between her son and a drunk-n daughter, so the girl went to New York became a Salvationist.
ttie did she know she would later meet her sweetheart in a low Bowery dive, where he finally drifted after leaving his mother in
, and started on the downward path. But never faltered when her duty called, at what transpired afterward must not be . Suffice it that there was a wedding at the Barracks n he admitted, however, and it was attended ome rank and file of the army.

LUX.

JACK'S LUCKY HORSESHOE.—Within the silcountry lanes Jack wanders in search of work.
homestead he cottage and every landsale he wanders wearily. Finally he, in turning heavy hearted from a farmhouse where he sought employment, his foot strikes against horseshoe which he picks up and places in his
. The farmer's daughter, Mary, has been rested spectator of the incident and she draws father's attention to it. Thus Jack is called and finds employment. Now Bill, the head hand, is in love with Mary and does not like advantage. His many cunning tricks to dis-of the new hand, however, fail. One day he the girths of Jack's horse and places a thorn its saddle. This leads to the villain's ruin, for, when Jack is thrown from his horse, a boy comes forward and exposes the plotter.
chief enemy is now removed from Jack's path crown his lucky horseshoe brings him a bride y a good situation.

THEIR HONEYMOON.—Jones has just got ied and departs for the honeymoon on spoon-ound. A kind friend telegraphs the proprietor e hotel at which they will stay, that they sent on suicide. In alarm the hotel people in-the police and then every effort is made to rent their being alone. Things get worked up very high pitch before the kind friend is disosed and the kind friend is in hospital yet.

AMONG THE EXHIBITORS

Ismath Falls, Oregon.—Mrs. Grant Lincoln ened the Iris Moving Picture Theater here to ublic.

Rochelle, Iowa.—Mr. J. P. Brodeerson has pur-ased the Pastime Theater here from Messrs. and Wright.

Carol, Ill.—Mr. George H. Waters is making rangements to open a new moving picture theain the Metcalf Building.

Leminster, Mass.—Another moving picture thea-is soon to be opened in this town, which will ocated in Merchants Block on G. F. Wheeler roperty. The theater will be able to seat out 400 patrons.

Lima, Ohio.—A contract for a moving picture ter in West Broad Street, near Avendale, has awarded to E. O. Jones by Dr. W. E. Edmiston.
ding will cost about $16,000.

Luing, Mich.—S. K. Butterfield, owner of everal theaters in several cities in this state, ased the Bijou Theater here from D. J. Rob-and will convert it into a moving picture and ic theater.

Pierson, N. J.—Another new showhouse, ded especially for moving pictures, will soon ready for ruling located between the new ffices at 208 Main Street, which will be under e superintendency of Mr. Joseph M. and William
. The front elevation shows a beautiful ction in Byzantine style of architecture and ty-five feet by 125 feet deep. The e is estimated at $16,000.

New Brookfield, Mass.—The Star Theater opened ts doors a few days ago and drew a full house. The mission fee is 15 cents for gentlemen and 10 ents for women and children. The location of e theater is in the old Union Church Building ndows seat about 500 patrons. The proprietors, ssrs. Gilmore, claim that this house is one of e largest in the State, estimating at $4,000.
ictures are changed three times a week.

Fort Richmond, Va.—The Victoria Moving Pice Theater here has opened under the manement of Mr. J. A. Kendall, formerly of the ew Charlottesville, Va. This theater has a tal capacity of 400 and is running Independts.

Des Moines, Iowa.—The Family Theater here has opened under the management of Mr. Mr. J.
Swain. The admission will be five cents.

Cowden, Ohio.—Mr. J. W. Swain has incorated a company for $10,000 to erect and op-ate up-to-date theaters in Central Ohio, to be ated at 7 South High Street. He expects to his building upwards of about seven hundred and business record of Mr. Swain has been of the most prosperous ones.

Sparta, Wis.—Mr. Dudley Cheney has sold the and Gem Theaters to Mr. Charles P. Trux, will conduct them on the present lines for
. He intends to inaugurate new features, probably introduce vaudeville at the Unique.

Oregon, Iowa.—The Liberty Theater, which has under the management of Mr. Frank Howell ast year, has been sold to J. McWilliams, will remodel and enlarge the theater.

Arcadia, Cal.—The management of the new
Orange Moving Picture Show at Santa Clara Avenue, states that the theater will not be able to open for a week or so yet.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Mr. Samuel Schultz has been awarded contract for a new moving picture theater at 755 South Third Street for the B. F. Miner Company.

Plattsmouth, Neb.—Messrs. C. L. Peck and H. N. Hilderand are making arrangements to open a new moving picture theater here.

Sun Prairie, Wis.—F. A. Kleiner and B. B. Cobbare are making arrangements to open a new moving picture theater here.

Lima, Ohio.—L. G. Berger is making arrangements to open a new moving picture theater on North Main Street which will be known as the Lyric Theater.

Dixon, Ill.—Messrs. Henry Clopine and Arthur Angelmier are making arrangements to open a new moving picture theater here.

Lima, Ohio.—Mr. L. G. Berger is making arrangements to open a new moving picture theater on North Main Street which will be known as the Lyric Theater.

Davenport, Iowa.—Mr. Charles Berkell is preparing to open a new moving picture theater at 428 Brady Street.

Mahanoy City, Pa.—Mr. Owen Altoff, the new proprietor of the picture show formerly managed by J. S. Quirk, has installed a brand new Model B Edison machine.

Iowa Falls, Iowa.—The Lyric Theater here has been sold by G. B. Ohle to Edward Chamberless for $1,500.

Lockport, N. Y.—The management of the Hodge Opera House has inaugurated a policy of high class moving pictures, latest and most popular illustrated songs and refined musical numbers, both vocal and instrumental. The Simpson Amusement Company, who has taken over the lease of the Opera House, has had success in presenting amusements of a character and promise to give the amusement loving public of Lockport the benefit of their experience. This company is now successful in operating large moving picture and vaudeville theaters in Auburn, Syracuse and Rochester and intends to add the town of Lockport.

Boston, Mass.—Work on the new theater, which is to be managed by Lieber & Company, of New York, and with the main entrance in Eliot Street, near Tremont Street, has already been begun, and according to the contract the house should be complete by August 30. The property is numbered 129 Eliot Street, and extends through to Van Rensselaer Place. The entrance is twenty-five feet in width and seventy-five feet deep, the theater covers an area of 108 by 709 feet.

Ornamental
Theatres
PLASTER RELIEF DECORATIONS
Theatres Designed Everywhere
Write for Illustrated Theatre Catalog. Send us Sizes of Theatre for Special Designs
The Decorators Supply Co.
2549 Archer Avenue :: CHICAGO, ILL.

WANTED

Experienced men to book picture show attractions. Answer stating all.

ATTRACTION
601 Schiller Bldg. CHICAGO, ILL.

To Exchanges

ORTHO FILM CO.
2726 W Division St. Chicago, Ill.

Write and get our ADVERTISING SLIDE PROPOSITION and make money between reels. Slides are best guarantee for large advertisers by us. Let us know yours.
Independent Ad. Co., 141-147 West 45th St., New York

Licensed Release Dates

BIOGRAPH.

Feb. 2—Three Sisters (Dr.) 997
Feb. 6—Heart Beats of Long Ago (Dr.) 997
Feb. 9—Priscilla's Engagement Kiss (Com.) ..997
Feb. 13—What Shall We Do With Our Old? (Dr.) 994
Feb. 16—Fisher Folks (Dr.) 998
Feb. 20—The Diamond Star (Dr.) 996
Feb. 23—His Daughter (Dr.) 997
Feb. 27—The Lily of the Tenements (Dr.) 996
Mar. 2—The Heart of a Savage (Dr.) 991

EDISON.

Jan. 31—The Toy Out (Dr.) 995
Feb. 1—Rumptious as Romeo (Com.) .....
Feb. 3—Selling Old Master (Dr.) .....
Feb. 7—The Doctor (Dr.) 1000
Feb. 8—Two Valentines (Com.) 1000
Feb. 10—His First Confession (Dr.) 990
Feb. 14—The Rajah (Dr.) 1000
Feb. 15—The Ransom of Red Chief (Dr.) ....
Feb. 17—A Stage Romance (Dr.) .....
Feb. 21—The Rival Sculptors (Dr.) 990
Feb. 22—Mr. Bumptious, Detective (Com.) 990
Feb. 24—The Prize of Victory (Dr.) 1000
Feb. 28—The Iron Master (Dr.) 1000
Mar. 1—The Rival Candidates (Com.) .....
Mar. 3—The Writing On the Blotter (Dr.) .....

ESSANAY.

Feb. 4—Carmencita, The Faithful (Dr.) 995
Feb. 7—A Woman's Votive (Com.) 566
Feb. 7—Ten Words For Twenty-five Cents (Com.) 425
Feb. 11—The Bad Man's Downfall (Dr.) ..1000
Feb. 14—Getting Sister Married (Com.) .....
Feb. 18—Cattleman's Daughter (Dr.) .....
Feb. 21—Their Wedding Gifts (Com.) 580
Feb. 21—Just as the Clock Struck Nine (Com.) 412
Feb. 25—The Outlaw and the Child (W. Dr.) ..1000
Feb. 28—Taming A Tyrant (Com.) 1000
Mar. 4—On The Desert's Edge (W. Dr.) .....
Mar. 7—The Little Drudge (Dr.) .....

GAUMONT.
G. Kleine.

Feb. 18—Saul and David (Bib.) 128
Feb. 18—At the End of a Clue (Dr.) 858
Feb. 21—The Plot That Failed (Dr.) 815
Feb. 21—Pictures In Chemistry (Sc.) 175
Feb. 25—Paganini and the Countess Beatrice (Dr.) 998
Feb. 28—Matrimonial Epidemic (Com.) 813
Feb. 28—Lafont and Pola's Last Flight (Sc.) ..185
Mar. 4—The Tramp's Find (Dr.) 680
Mar. 4—Forbidden Cigarettes (Com.) 335

KALEM.

Jan. 25—The Secret of the Still (Dr.) 950
Jan. 27—Puritans and Indians (Dr.) 970
Feb. 1—The Sheriff's Niece (Dr.) .....
Feb. 3—The Trail of the Foman Charm (Dr.) 1005
Feb. 8—Little Sister (Dr.) 970
Feb. 10—The Broken Trail (Dr.) 1000
Feb. 15—Grandmother's War Story (Dr.) 975
Feb. 17—The Lost Ribbon (Dr.) 1000
Feb. 22—The Open Road (Dr.) 995
Feb. 24—Priscilla and the Pequot (Dr.) 925
Mar. 1—Sailor Jack's Reformation (Dr.) 1005
Mar. 3—Mexican Filibusters (Dr.) 1000

LUBIN.

Jan. 30—His Bogus Uncle (Com.) 1000
Feb. 2—Age vs. Youth (Dr.) 1000
Feb. 6—A Double Elopement (Dr.) 960
Feb. 9—The Petticoat Sheriff (Com.) 1000
Feb. 13—The Show-Girl's Stratagem (Dr.) 1000
Feb. 16—Getting Even (Com.) 1000
Feb. 16—Schultz Has the Smallpox (Com.) 400
Feb. 20—The Test (Dr.) 1000
Feb. 23—Dobbs the Dauber 1000
Feb. 27—Man's Diplomacy 1000
Mar. 2—Woman's Curiosity 400
Mar. 2—Father's Birthday Ring 600

MELIES.

Jan. 19—Changing Cooks (Com.) 980
Jan. 26—How Mary Met the Comedians (Dr.) 980
Feb. 2—Only a Sister (Dr.) .....
Feb. 9—Tony the Greaser (Dr.) 980
Feb. 16—Billy and His Pal (Dr.) 1000
Feb. 23—My Parisle Flower (W. Com.) 980
Mar. 2—In the Hot Lands (W. Dr.) 960

PATHE.

Feb. 15—A Western Courtship (Dr.) 715
Feb. 15—The Axolotl (Indus.) 286
Feb. 17—Whiffle's Double (Com.) 499
Feb. 17—A Boy's Will (Dr.) 1000
Feb. 18—Lieut. Scott's Narrow Escape (Dr.). 984
Feb. 20—A Soldier (Dr.) .....
Feb. 20—A Buffalo Hunt (Sc.) 236
Feb. 22—Hubby's Troubles (Com.) 672
Feb. 22—Indo-China—Province of Laos (Sc.) .321
Feb. 24—Who Killed Max (Com.) 680
Feb. 24—An Escape of Gas (Com.) 302
Feb. 25—The Changeling (Dr.) 1000
Feb. 27—Max Makes Music (Com.) 403
Feb. 27—Pots, Pans & Poetry (Com.) 531
Mar. 1—Oh! You Clubman! (Com.) 965
Mar. 3—Satan Defeated (Dr.) 750
Mar. 3—Around Constantine, Algeria (Sc.) .. 290
Mar. 4—Jealousy Foiled (Dr.) 1000

SELIG.

Feb. 2—The Curse of the Red Man (Dr.) ....
Feb. 6—Too Much Mother-In-Law (Com.) ....
Feb. 9—Thelma (Dr.) .....
Feb. 13—The Survival of the Fittest (Dr.) 1000
Feb. 16—The Buccaneers (Dr.) 1000
Feb. 20—The Padre (Dr.) .....
Feb. 23—The Seminole's Sacrifice (Dr.) .....
Feb. 27—The Eye of Conscience (Dr.) .....
Mar. 2—The Outbreak (Dr.) 1000

URBAN-ECLIPSE.
(G. Kleine.)

Feb. 8—On the Border of the Forest (Dr.) .. 895
Feb. 8—Canadian Iron Center, Port Arthur, Ontario (Scenic) 110
Feb. 15—Catherine Howard (Dr.) 1005
Feb. 22—The Golden Sickle (Dr.) 882
Feb. 22—Felling a Smokestack (Sc.) 113

VITAGRAPH.

Feb. 4—A Queen for a Day (Com.) .....
Feb. 7—The Deluge (Dr.) 978
Feb. 10—The League of Mercy (Dr.) .....
Feb. 11—At the White Man's Door (Dr.) .....
Feb. 14—Consuming Love (Dr.) .....
Feb. 17—When the Light Fled (Dr.) .....
Feb. 18—The New Stenographer (Com.) .....
Feb. 21—A Tale of Two Cities. (Part 1.) (Dr.) 1014
Feb. 24—A Tale of Two Cities. (Part 2.) (Dr.) 1013
Feb. 25—A Tale of Two Cities. (Part 3.) (Dr.) 994
Feb. 28—Captain Barnacle's Courtship (Com.) ..
Mar. 3—Bertha's Mission (Dr.) .....
Mar. 4—Mummy's Ghost (Dr.) .....

THIS WEEK'S PROGRAM OF LICENSED FILMS.

Monday, February 27.

Biograph—The Lily of the Tenements (Dr.)..996
Lubin—Man's Diplomacy 1000
Pathe—Max Makes Music (Com.) 403
Pathe—Pots, Pans & Poetry (Com.) 531
Selig—The Eye of Conscience (Dr.) .....

Tuesday, February 28.

Edison—The Iron Master (Dr.) 1000
Essanay—Taming A Tyrant (Com.) 1000
Gaumont—Matrimonial Epidemic (Com.) 813
Gaumont—Lafont and Pola's Last Flight (Sc.)..185
Vitagraph—Captain Barnacle's Courtship (Com.)

Wednesday, March 1.

Edison—The Rival Candidates (Com.) .....
Kalem—Sailor Jack's Reformation (Dr.) 1005
Pathe—Oh! You Clubman (Com.) 965
Urban—(Title Not Given) .....

Thursday, March 2.

Biograph—The Heart of a Savage (Dr.) 991
Lubin—Woman's Curiosity (Com.) 400
Lubin—Father's Birthday Ring 600
Melies—In The Hot Lands (W. Dr.) 960
Selig—The Outbreak (Dr.) 1000

Friday, March 3.

Edison—The Writing On The Blotter (Dr.) ....
Pathe—Satan Defeated (Dr.) 750
Pathe—Around Constantina, Algeria (Sc.) 290
Kalem—Mexican Filibusterers (Dr.) 1000
Vitagraph—Bertha's Mission (Dr.) .....

Saturday, March 4.

Essanay—On The Desert's Edge (W. Dr.) .....
Gaumont—The Tramp's Find (Dr.) 680
Gaumont—Forbidden Cigarettes (Com.) 335
Pathe—Jealousy Foiled (Dr.) 1000
Vitagraph—Mummy's Ghost (Dr.) .....

A "W" before the words drama or a comedy specifies that it is a Western drama or a comedy.

Classified Advertisements

[Classified advertisements, three cents per word, cash with order; 50 cents minimum; postage stamps accepted.]

SITUATIONS WANTED.

WANTED.—Good operator would like position anywhere in Vermont. Non-drinker and reliable. Pathe and Powers machines. Reasonable offer accepted with reliable people. F. A. ANTONIOTTI, Box 138, Montpelier, Vt.

WANTED.—Position as operator or manager. Five years' experience. Strictly sober and reliable. Gilt Edge references. Wide Awake, Pleasant preferred. Address, Manager, Comet Theater, Peabroke St., Bridgeport, Conn.

THEATER FOR SALE.

FOR SALE.—Moving picture theater, the only picture house in a town of 5,000 population, seating capacity, 400. Good location, good reasons for selling. Address, S. A. M., care of Moving Picture World.

FOR SALE.—A profitable Moving Picture and Vaudeville Theater in Grand Forks, North Dakota. Reason for selling, death in family. Write for particulars. Manager, UNIQUE THEATER BEAUTIFUL, Grand Forks, N. Dak.

FOR SALE—Moving picture theater in a Massachusetts town of 100,000 to 125,000. Best location in the town, on the main street and at an important transfer point. Seats 700, all on ground floor. T. & D. M., care Moving Picture World.

FOR SALE—One of the largest Moving Picture and Vaudeville Theaters in Washington, D. C. P. O. Box 279, Washington, D. C.

FOR SALE.—Moving Picture and Vaudeville Theater. Good location and business. Address 1137 J. Street, Fresno, Cal.

EQUIPMENT FOR SALE.

FOR SALE—I will sell my new Edison Exhibition Style Machine complete for $100.00. Never been used. T. Mitchell, 4024 Lexington Street, Chicago, Ill.

FOR SALE.—Excela Soundograph, good as new. Have no use for it. Cost $150.00, will sell for $50.00. S. G. SMITH, New Lexington, Ohio.

FOR SALE.—Underwriters Model American Projectograph, used but few weeks, cuticle shutter. $85.00 cash. Write quick. Manager, Comet Theater, Pembroke, St., Bridgeport, Conn.

FOR SALE.—One Regina Cortina Large Music Box, suitable for Moving Picture Show. Play twelve pieces (Automatic Change). I use one in my Theatorium instead of piano and it does the good business. Will be a bargain or trade for Opera Chairs. The above instrument can be worked by inserting nickel or without. EDWARD C. SAKS, Mansfield, Pa.

MISCELLANEOUS.

WANTED.—Three or four hundred second-hand opera chairs. Must be cheap. FRANK E. NEW, Windsor Hotel, Phoenix, N. Y.

WANTED.—350 second-hand opera chairs in first class condition. State price and condition. Fairal Opera House, Ferrale, B. C., Canada.

WANTED.—To buy, five-cent show. Must have good location. Or will buy fixtures separate. J. R. KOENIG, 419 Madison Street, Fort Wayne, Ind.

HAND COLORED SLIDES made from any clipping, photo negative. Finest work guaranteed. Reasonable prices. Write for samples. Artists, lettering included. Photo Specialty Co., Knoxville, N. Y.

AMONG THE EXHIBITORS.

Philadelphia, Penn.—A new moving picture theater is being planned for 1332 South Fifth Street, which will be under the management of the partnership of Messrs. Lashner & Friedman and cost about $12,000.

Burlington, Wis.—The Fenn Building, recently vacated by the Crystal Theater, has been leased to J. P. Converse, of the Pastime Theater, who expects to open for business within a week.

Green Bay, Wis.—The Empire Theater, which was owned by Mr. Henry Easler, has been moved to Brill, where he will open it.

Duluth, Minn.—The Elco Theater, which has recently been fitted out by Mr. E. T. Sandberg, has opened. It is a picture show and promises to be a success.

Islip, N. Y.—The management of the picture show in the Opera House has installed a Powers Compensarc.

Colville, Wash.—Mr. George H. Bartlett will soon open a moving picture theater in the Reynolds Building, Main Street.

Biddeford, Me.—Mr. Frank X. C. Cote has taken a five years' lease on Hanlon's Hall on Adams Street.

Sturgis, Mich.—Mr. C. J. Crosby has completed the Crystal Theater, which has a seating capacity of 500, and will put on moving pictures and vaudeville. The Paris Theater is also being remodeled and enlarged.

THE PHILADELPHIA FILM EXCHANGE, 934 Arch St., Philadelphia
The largest Independent Exchange in the East. The house where you can get quality and a square deal. We buy the entire output of the Sales Company. A trial will convince you. Open day and night. Call, write or phone.
Baltimore Office 610 East Baltimore Street Baltimore, Md.

National Film Mfg. & Leasing Company

Enters the market fully aware of the many difficulties confronting any effort to break in upon conditions existing in the business as now organized. Its plans have been conceived with a view of establishing an equitable relation between all factors: the factory, the Exchange and the Exhibitor. We believe the interest of the public in pictures needs protection; our plans are formulated with an eye to the public's interest needs and demands, from factory through to exhibitor. Every step taken by this organization will emphasize this thought—THAT THE RIGHTS OF THE PUBLIC IN THE PARAMOUNT ISSUE IN PICTURES. Our several staffs are composed of men fitted mentally and by training to serve this issue and are imbued with the purpose of demonstrating the power of pictures, as an Educator—We have no words of criticism for our predecessors, this is an issue for the public.

We have a program in which quality will not be wanting, and in which will be preserved all the higher values of pictures. This program we mean shall win recognition everywhere, and to that end we shall have a voice in the presentation of that program, as the business of our Exchanges will be mutual with that of ourselves. We propose to invade the entire territory and wherever we find a competent Exchange, to interest that Exchange in our cause. We propose that our Exhibitors shall handle our program upon novel and distinctive lines, that the public interest, which is the support of all worthy efforts, shall be conserved.

We are ready to start with a complete program.

We will contract with existing Exchanges or establish new ones as quickly as possible.

We are amply protected with patents, thus assuring the necessary protection to all our connections.

The Exhibitor, whose business has suffered so largely in the past because of blind indifference to his needs by the manufacturers, will find in our organization a department devoted to the study of this important part of the business, wherein suggestions, and counter suggestions, will be accepted and given.

Negotiations are under way for contribution from some of the leading literary men of the country, and our scenario department will be in the hands of a man of recognized literary and dramatic ability.

We have in contemplation the presentation in pictures of some of the leading Stars of the American stage, and have now in preparation some spectacular productions which will rank with the best produced in the art.

National Film Mfg. & Leasing Co.

INCORPORATED

12 East 15th Street New York City, U. S. A.

Controlling patents covering every branch of the industry

EXCHANGES

Write for our Plans and Program. Address Dept. A

EXHIBITORS

Send in your name for our mailing list. Address Dept. B

Independent Release Dates

AMERICAN.

Feb. 9—On the Installment Plan (Com.).....500
Feb. 9—Too Much Aunt (Com.).....420
Feb. 13—A Quiet Evening at Home (Com.).....1000
Feb. 16—In the Land of Cactus (Dr.).....1000
Feb. 20—The Cottage Sweethearts (Dr.).....990
Feb. 23—Strategy (Dr.).....980
Feb. 27—The Sheriff's Sweetheart (W. Dr.).....800
Feb. 27—The Steamer Spotters (Com.).....1000
Mar. 2—College Chums (Dr.).....975
Mar. 6—Hypnotism by Hypnotist (Com.).....675
Mar. 6—Memories (Dr.).....375
Mar. 9—The Rich and The Poor (Dr.).....1000

ARTO.

Jan. 25—Irish Hearts (Dr.).....
Feb. 1—His Great Sacrifice (Dr.).....
Feb. 8—Kelly, U. S. A. (Dr.).....
Feb. 15—Coals of Fire.....

CHAMPION.

Feb. 1—Judged by Higher Power (Dr.).....
Feb. 8—At Double Trouble Ranch (Dr.).....950
Feb. 15—Her Inner Self (Dr.).....950
Feb. 22—The Old Man and Jim (Dr.).....950
Mar. 1—A Western Girl's Courage.....950
Mar. 8—The Vindication of Jean (Dr.).....950

COLUMBIA.

Dec. 24—The Cattlemen's Feud (Dr.).....
Dec. 31—Trapped (Dr.).....
Jan. 7—Queen of the Prairies (Dr.).....

ECLAIR.

Feb. 13—Mr. Fuddlewunk is on Strike (Com.)..522
Feb. 15—The Elixir of Bravery.....424
Feb. 20—The Heart of a Warrior (Dr.).....683
Feb. 20—Hospital for Small Animals (Spec.)..280
Feb. 27—"Dumeb" (Dr.).....595
Feb. 27—Bobbie of the Bomb (Com.).....370
Mar. 6—King Phillip The Fair and the Templars (Dr.).....975

GREAT NORTHERN.

Feb. 4—The Criminal Chief's Capture.....
Feb. 11—Found Again (Dr.).....
Feb. 18—The Life of a Cowgirl.....
Feb. 18—The False Alarm.....
Feb. 25—His Great Duty (Dr.).....
Mar. 4—The Rival Servants (Dr.).....

IMP.

Feb. 9—The Mirror (Com.).....500
Feb. 9—When the Cat's Away (Com.).....500
Feb. 13—Her Darkest Hour (Dr.).....1000
Feb. 16—The Convert (Dr.).....1000
Feb. 20—Pictureland.....1000
Feb. 23—Artful Kate (Dr.).....1000
Feb. 27—A Manly Man (Dr.).....1000
Mar. 2—Armor Manufacturers in Cuba (Edc.)...500
Mar. 2—The Dynamitiers (Com.).....500
Mar. 6—Tracked (Dr.).....1000
Mar. 9—The Messenger in the Bottle (Dr.).....1000

LUX.

Feb. 3—Back to the Old Homestead (Dr.).....944
Feb. 10—The Orphan's Friend (Dr.).....711
Feb. 10—That Horse Ran (Com.).....272
Feb. 17—Bronco Bill, the Brave Cowboy (Dr.)..639
Feb. 17—Matilda Lovestruck (Com.).....272
Feb. 24—A Child's Prayer (Dr.).....554
Feb. 24—Matilda Chased (Com.).....554
Mar. 3—Jack's Lucky Horseshoe (Dr.).....530
Mar. 3—On Their Honeymoon (Com.).....440
Mar. 6—Annie of the Bowery (Dr.).....
Mar. 10—The Senorita's Sacrifice (Dr.).....

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO. (Bison.)

Feb. 7—The Half Breed's Plan.....
Feb. 10—The Salted Mine (Dr.).....
Feb. 14—A Deputy's Honor.....
Feb. 17—A Warrior's Squaw (Dr.).....
Feb. 21—The Way of a Red Man (Dr.).....
Feb. 24—Fate of Joe Dere (Dr.).....
Feb. 28—A Warrior's Faith.....
Mar. 3—Owanee's Great Love.....

ITALA.
(By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

Feb. 9—John Milton (Dr.).....
Feb. 11—Foolshead at the Kinematograph.....
Feb. 16—Fatal Charm.....
Feb. 18—Who Will Eat the Turkey?.....
Feb. 25—Little Souls.....770
Feb. 25—Foolshead Present .....
Feb. 25—Havana Cigar .....
Mar. 2—Nini's Doll .....
Mar. 4—Cato and the Flag.....
Mar. 4—Foolshead More than Usual.....

AMBROSIO.
(By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

Feb. 1—Tweedledum Tries Winter Sports.....500
Feb. 1—The Enemy from Sea Side Bathing....500
Feb. 8—The Secret Cavalry 500
Feb. 8—Tweedledum as a Detective.....500
Feb. 15—The Menace .....
Feb. 22—Redeeming Angel .....
Mar. 1—Tweedle Dum, Aviator .....
Mar. 1—War of the Cossacks.....

NESTOR.

Feb. 1—The Bridal Trail (Dr.).....1000
Feb. 5—The Transgressor (Dr.).....1000
Feb. 15—The Light Beyond (Dr.).....1000
Feb. 22—His Father's House (Dr.).....998
Mar. 1—The Professor's Romance (Com-Dr.)...990
Mar. 8—The Old Commissioned Ranks (Dr.).....

POWERS PICTURE PLAYS.

Feb. 14—A Trip Through Mexico (Scenic)....
Feb. 14—An Unforeseen Combination (Com.)..
Feb. 18—Beneath Southern Skies (Dr.).....
Feb. 21—What Would You Do (Com.).....
Feb. 25—Across the Mexican Border (Dr.)....
Feb. 28—The Call of the Heart (Dr.).....950
Mar. 4—Home Sweet Home (Dr.).....950
Mar. 7—When Queens Meet .....
Mar. 11—The Outside Surplice.....
Mar. 11—A Gamble With Love .....

RELIANCE.

Feb. 4—The Command From Galilee.....900
Feb. 8—The School Ma'am's Courage.....900
Feb. 11—The Little Avenger.....
Feb. 15—Three Men (Dr.).....
Feb. 18—Souls Emancipated.....
Feb. 22—A Plain Tale .....
Feb. 25—Ever The Avenger .....
Mar. 1—The Trump Card .....
Mar. 4—From the Valley of Shadow.....

REVIER.

Jan. 4—For Better Or Worse (Dr.).....
Jan. 11—The Gooseneck Claim (Dr.).....
Jan. 18—For the Child's Sake (Dr.).....500
Jan. 18—You Try It (Com.).....500

REX.

Feb. 16—A Heroine of '76 (Dr.).....910
Feb. 23—The Story of a Prayer Rug (Dr.).....
Mar. 2—By the Light of the Moon.....

SOLAX COMPANY.

Feb. 3—Ring of Love (Com.).....
Feb. 10—Mixed Pets (Com.).....
Feb. 17—Corinne in Bullshead (Com.).....
Feb. 24—Love's Test (Dr.).....
Mar. 3—A Costly Pledge (Com.).....
Mar. 8—Out of the Abyss (Dr.).....

THANHOUSER.

Feb. 10—The Norwood Necklace (Dr.).....
Feb. 14—For Her Sake (Dr.).....
Feb. 17—Checkmate (Dr.).....
Feb. 21—For Washington (Dr.).....1000
Feb. 24—A Newsboy Hero (Dr.).....1000
Feb. 28—The Little Mother (Dr.).....
Mar. 3—Stage struck (Dr.).....
Mar. 7—The Mummy (Dr.).....1000
Mar. 10—The Spirit Hand (Dr.).....1000

YANKEE.

Feb. 10—Was She Justified (Dr.).....
Feb. 13—Condemned to Death (Dr.).....
Feb. 17—Her Birthday Surprise (Com.).....
Feb. 20—The Life-Line (Dr.).....
Feb. 24—The Woman Who Dared (Dr.).....
Feb. 27—All for Gold (Dr.).....
Mar. 3—The Abduction of Parson Jones (Com.)

CALCIUM GAS

Compressed in drums ready for operation for Moving Picture Shows where electricity cannot be had. Absolutely pure gas. Prompt shipments, freight or express.

WRITE FOR OUR TERMS

Complete stock of repair parts for machines and supplies.

ERKER BROS. OPTICAL CO.

604 Olive St., St. Louis, Mo

THIS WEEK'S PROGRAM OF INDEPENDENT FILMS.

Monday, February 27.

American—The Sheriff's Sweetheart (W. Dr.)..2
American—The Silence System (Com.).....2
Bison—Tracks (Dr.).....2
Reliance—Beware of the Bomb (Com.).....3
Imp—A Manly Man (Dr.).....1
Yankee—All for Gold (Dr.).....

Tuesday, February 28.

Bison—A Warrior's Faith.....
Champion—The Call of the Heart (Dr.).....9
Thanhouser—The Little Mother (Dr.).....

Wednesday, March 1.

Champion—A Western Girl's Chance (Dr.).....9
Nestor—The Professor's Romance (Com.-Dr.)..9
Reliance—The Trump Card.....
Ambrosio—Tweedle Dum, Aviator .....
Ambrosio—War of the Cossacks.....

Thursday, March 2.

American—College Chums (Dr.).....9
Imp—Army Manufacturers in Cuba (Edc.)..5
Imp—The Dynamiters (Com.).....5
Nestor—The Bell .....
Rex—By the Light of the Moon.....

Friday, March 3.

Bison—Owanee's Great Love.....
Lux—Jack's Lucky Horseshoe (Dr.).....
Lux—On their Honeymoon (Com.).....44
Solax—A Costly Pledge (Com.).....
Thanhouser—Stage Struck (Dr.).....
Yankee—The Abduction of Parson Jones (Com.)

Saturday, March 4.

Powers—Home Sweet Home (Dr.).....950
Great Northern—The Rival Servants (Dr.).....
Reliance—From the Valley of Shadow.....
Italia—Cato and the Flag .....
Italia—Foolshead More than Usual.....

A "W" before the words drama and comedy specifies that it is a Western drama or a comedy.

In Corresponding with Advertisers Kindly Mention Moving Picture World.

Important to Exhibitors and Operators

Can you afford to ruin that new machine for which you paid a good price, by using cheap oils. Take no chances and oil your machine with

ONE DROP OIL

One Drop Oil is scientifically compounded and has a heavy rich lubricating body, is fireproof, will not burn, smoke or smell.

Ask your Exchange for One Drop Oil and Bull Dog Cement

If you want to make patches that will never come apart

Use BULL DOG FILM CEMENT
Sticks any kind of films

To introduce our goods to exhibitors we make the following offer, good until April 1st:

6—25c. Bottles Bull Dog Cement
6—25c. Bottles One Drop Oil
} $2.00, prepaid.

THE ONE DROP OIL CO.
4059 North 47th Ave. Chicago, Ill.

To Exchanges: We furnish Bull Dog Film Cement in gallons for inflammable and N. I. films.

EAGLE FILM EXCHANGE

WE BUY the entire output of the Independent manufacturers. Ask about our Three-locked reel system.

Posters free. Prompt service. Day and night service Write, wire or phone

143 NORTH EIGHTH STREET, PHILADELPHIA, PA

C.W. Bradenburgh
CINEMATOGRAPH FILMS

28 N. 8th St. Phone Market 331 Philadelphia, Pa.
Code: Brad-films Phila. Code: A.B.C. 5th Edition

SALES LIST

...Code will give date of consignation and parcel delivery, on which express charges ... When ordering state title and maker, also ... number.

T. Travel. E. Educational.
TR. Trick. Topic. Topical.

FILMS AT TEN DOLLARS PER REEL.

...A Woman's Treachery (Eclair).
...Kidnapper to Rescuer (Eclair).
...Redeem (Eclair).
...Conspiracy (Cines). C.A.—Capricious monument (N. Y.).
...Constantly Suspected (Lux).
...Country Girl's Peril (Pathe).
...Faces Friend-T-Troihattan.
...Brave Enemy (Lux). C.—Interrupted Rendezvous (Cines).
...ight in the Act (Hepworth).
...g Anarchical Attempt (G. N.). C.—Dr.'s Monkey ...
...the Prohibitory Age (Hepworth). C.—Dinner of ... (Eclair).
...Jockey's Daughter (Eclair).
...and Temptations (Eclair).
...Cook Gets Good Legacy (Eclair).
...between Two Loves (Vesuvius). C.—Jockey's Bad ... (Cosmos).
...Artistic Sickness. C.—Diversions (Hepworth).
...es Violins (G. N.).
...Doubtful Servant (Walturdaw).
...ession of a Statue (Lux).
...ethful Trick Death (Bioscope).
...and the Bandleader (G. N.).
...of the Terror (Cosmos).
...Kidnapper's Plot (Eclair).
...Dear Departing Friends for Life (Hepworth).
...end of the Erring Jew (Eclair). C.—Pals ... A Mix.
...Cines. C.—New Sign of the Globe Hotel (Itala).
...Clumsiest Treasure Seekers. C.—Bear in a Flat ...
...ver of His Youth. C.—How Father Minded Baby (Hepworth).
...me Industries (Hepworth). C.—Cupboard Courtship (Hepworth).

VERY GOOD ITEMS AT $20 PER REEL.

...Carmelite—Sisters Can't Stop (Eclair).
...the Wilderness (Ambrosio).
...the Streets (Cines).
...Queen's Son (Itala).
...ights of the Shoots (Itala).
...Cowboy's Safe (Imp).
...'s Baby Boy—The Butcher Bill (Hepworth).
...Fighting Parson (Nestor).
...Hunchback Salesman—A Beggar's Ride (Lux).
...aughter's Devotion (Cines).
...Landlubber (Nestor).
...Dead Powers).
...Rose & The Brigands (Clarendon).
...the Dales (Itala). Faithful.
...Carousing Shaw! (Dusko).
...Heir of Chosen Court Castle (Eclair).
...the Cross (Ambrosio).
...in the Iron Mask (Cines).
...for Love (Itala). The Bubble (Itala).
...Sensation of the Time. A Game for Two (Imp).
...Governor's Daughter (Thanhouser).
...and Romeo (Imp).
...Hero of Holland (Thanhouser).
...the Fall of the Eagle—Theatre of Phenomena (Eclair).

GAIN LIST AT A CONDITION—WITH POSTERS GRATIS AT $15 PER REEL.

...John Halifax Gentleman (Thanhouser).
...The Revolving Doors (Imp).
...Adventures of Gerald and Percy (Imp).
...The Poor Student (Imp).
...A Brave Western Girl (Bison).
...The Woodsman (Nestor).
...Alaska Western Rod (Powers).
...Value Beyond Price (Thanhouser).
...Jap Van Winkle (Thanhouser).
...Peppermint Joe in a Stone (Bison).
...Comedy Ave Maria (Ambrosio).
...Queen of the West (Yankee).
...The Schenk Poisoning Case (Amer. W. W. Co.).
...An Imaginary Elopement (Imp).
...Who Runs the Way—Reliance).
...Son of the Prince and the Actor (G. N.).
...Woman Hater (Powers).
...A Windy Day—A Chinese Marksman (Itala).
...Mistress and Maid (Thanhouser).

SEE THE PICK OF THE SALES COMPANY SITE OFFERED. NO "AMATEUR JUNK" IN STOCK. COLD COPIES, BRAND NEW GOODS WITH POSTERS, ALWAYS ON HAND.

WRITE FOR SPECIAL PRICES.

...TLES MADE ON EASTMAN STOCK, 50 PER ... ANY FILMS NOT LISTED PLEASE MAKE INQUIRIES FOR, AS THE ABOVE IS ONLY A SMALL PART OF OUR STOCK. ALL FILMS ARE INSPECTED BY US BEFORE RELEASED. NO SCRATCHED OR WORN OUT FILMS OFFERED. ALL FILMS SENT C. O. D. WITH PRIVILEGE OF EXAMINATION ON RECEIPT OF EXPRESS CHARGES. AGENTS WANTED. SPECIAL SURRENTING RATES TO EXCHANGES.

Here's the Truth In a Nut Shell:

I honestly believe that I have the BEST, the VERY BEST film service organization today in existence. I KNOW that no other concern continues to grow as steadily as I do. I have given the problem how to please exhibitors closer study than anyone else I know of. Everybody in the Laemmle offices, from the office boy up, is working with me hand in hand to make this business still more successful.

Buying more than others—giving closer attention than others—being absolutely on the square with each and everyone of you—looking after the little details as much as the big ones all the time—wouldn't it be mighty strange if I weren't

The biggest and best film renter in the world

SLIP ME THAT LETTER

CARL LAEMMLE, President

The Laemmle Film Service

Headquarters:
196-198 Lake Street, Chicago

4th Floor, Sykes Block
Minneapolis, Minn.

1517 Farnam Street
Omaha, Neb.

FOR SALE—A number of good moving picture houses at bargain prices. Write direct to my Minneapolis office.

NEW ENGLAND EXHIBITORS

Can furnish nice Independent service of less than twenty-five day and commercial.
Prompt personal attention.

THE PARK FILM COMPANY
1188 Main Street, or Bridgeport, Conn.
W. M. Leighton, Prop.

Incandescent Lamps
For Theatres, Parks and Shows
Clear, 6 Cents Colored, 7 Cents
SAFETY ELECTRIC CO.
15 Michigan Ave., Chicago, Ill.

NEW FIELD BIG MONEY EASY WORK

Why don't you think up plots for Motion Picture plays? It's easy, pays up to $50 a week for good work. Men and women. We teach you and help sell plots. Demand unlimited. Send for particulars.

ASS'D M. P. SCHOOLS
908 Chicago Opera House Bldg. CHICAGO

COMPENSARC

That's the device that saves Moving Picture men two-thirds on their electric light bills, and yet gives better light. Did you see our ad. last week? Well, don't look it up. Just write for our

Booklet 15018

Fort Wayne Electric Works
1402 Broadway
FORT WAYNE, INDIANA 733

Sound Effects

In Picture Machine Theaters it is very essential that the imitations and sound effects are of the kind that can be depended upon. We make only practical and serviceable imitations that will give the exact reproduction of the original. We also manufacture Chimes, Tympani, Bells, Xylophones, Drums and accessories.

LEEDY MANUFACTURING COMPANY
1055 E. Palmer St., INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

MR. OPERATOR

You Want to Make Some Extra Money

SO DO I

Write Me for Particulars at Once

Give me your exact voltage, cycles, make of machine, length of throw, size of picture and make of carbons. If you have a current saver state make. I will do the rest. Address Department W.

J. H. HALLBERG
36 East 23d Street New York City

Money Makers for you. Think of the people passing by or out of your place that would drop another nickel or dime. Many styles. Catalog No. 34 tells all.

KINGERY MFG. CO.
CINCINNATI, O.

FOR BLANK LEADER, ANY KIND
Write to
WASTE UTILIZATION CO.
227 E. 150th St., New York
TO EXCHANGE. Send for sample bottle Stikwik Cement

"SILVERLIGHT"
Aluminum Motion Picture Curtain
Extraordinary Features Are: Permanent Brilliancy Economy, Flexibility Non-cracking, Safety, Strength. Send for circular. Dept. M
Ralph J. Gelsen Supply Co. 84 Wabash Ave., Chicago

For Rent
1000 Reels of Film
$1.00 per day Each
WRITE IMMEDIATELY
Alamo Film Exchange
Maison Blanche Building, Canal and Dauphine Streets New Orleans, La.
You pay express charges both ways.

Drummers This high grade Orchestra Drum direct from factory to you for $10.00

Shell-3x14-Solid Maple
Shell-3x15-Rosewood or Walnut
10 Rods, Kangaroo Heads Send U.S. Money or Express order. If you wish C.O.D. send sufficient to guarantee Express charges.
E. P. ZEIDLER DRUM CO. Dept. F. CLEVELAND, OHIO.

St. Patrick's Day SOUVENIRS

No. 1. Metal Shamrock, long pin	$ .75
No. 2. Silk Spun Shamrock, Fancy Gilt Harp	1.50
No. 3. Silk Bow Shamrock, Gilt Harp Pin, fancy	2.00
No. 4. Satin Ribbon Rosettes, 3 Colored Buttons	5.00
No. 5. Shamrock, Red Rose Center and Pin	1.15
No. 7. Large Fancy Silk Bow and Horseshoe Pin	3.00
No. 11. Cupid Bisque Doll, Shamrock Spun Silk, Celluloid Button & Green Hat. Any One Seen Kelly	2.00
No. 25. Button and Streamers	2.00
Buttonhole Irish Flags, gross lots only	1.25

Large Catalogue FREE. Sample line $1.00.
No goods C. O. D. Money order must be in full.
NEWMAN MFG. CO., Cleveland, Ohio

THIS IS IT
PRICE'S MIRROR CURTAIN
IT ROLLS UP
Clears the picture
Gives greater depth
The price is reasonable
Sent on approval
ELGIN MIRROR CURTAIN CO.
ELGIN, ILL.

¶ Put in our Easels and Poster Frames and watch your attendance grow.

¶ We make mechanical attractions, Electric signs, or anything special in the theatrical line. ¶ Ideas developed—Low Prices — Best Work — DON'T DELAY but write to-day.
THE NEWMAN MFG. CO.
717-719 Sycamore St., Cincinnati, O.

At Last

it is possible to secure comfortable, even illumination throughout a theatre without a brilliant light in range of vision.

¶ The Eye Comfort System of Indirect Illuminstion is a notable success in the lighting of Moving Picture Houses.

¶ Theatres in all sections of the country installing this inexpensive and very desirable electric lighting system.

¶ You are undoubtedly interested in this important matter.

¶ Write us for full information. Our engineering department, on receipt of particulars, will furnish, free of expense, report and recommendations.

Sold by Electrical Trade Generally
WRITE TODAY
National X-Ray Reflector Co.
227 Jackson Boulevard
CHICAGO, ILL.

Annual Subscription Moving Picture World $2.00

THE ONE BEST SOUVENIR
S. R. O. EVERY NIGHT
5c. EACH
$5.00 Per Hundred

This beautiful Souvenir Spoon is guaranteed Solid Silver Plated French Gray Finish and the latest design. Write today for sample and 3 plans that will fill your house to capacity.

UNITED STATES FACTORIES CO. MANUFACTURERS 40 Dearborn Street, Chicago

Corcoran Moving Picture Tanks

Develop your films to perfection. Save Time and Reduce Your Expenses by using a "Corcoran Film Development Tank." All up-to-date houses are now installing the "Corcoran System."

SEND FOR PRICE LIST No. 4.

A. J. CORCORAN, Inc.
No. 15 John Street - - - N. Y. City

Imitators will always trade on the reputation of the best

"AGFA METOL"

has many imitations, but none near enough to warrant your discarding "AGFA." Quality uniform and of a guaranteed chemical purity.

ASK

BERLIN ANILINE WORKS, 213-215 Water Street New York

W. E. GREENE FILM EXCHANGE, Inc.

The Oldest and Largest Independent Film Exchange in New England

The House of Quality and Satisfaction

MR. EXHIBITOR :

If you are desirous of finding out how to improve your present service and increase your daily attendance call and have a confidential chat with us. If you are unable to call, drop us a line.

W. E. Greene Film Exchange
INCORPORATED
228 Tremont Street, Boston, Mass.
Telephone 3790 Oxford

GENRE MOTION SLIDES

THE SLIDES THAT MOVE

GENRE TRANSPARENCY CO.
507 North Clark Street Chicago, Ill.

SAVE MONEY
and use our Program Board

with Interchangeable Porcelain Letters

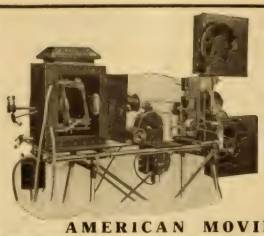
Make your own Program

You cannot afford to be without one.

Announcements quickly changed. Prices and full particulars on application.

Agents Wanted.

THE CAMBRIDGE TILE MFG. CO.
COVINGTON, KY.



THE "STANDARD"

The Machine That Gives Results

FULLY GUARANTEED

The complete intermittent movement can be taken out and adjusted by loosening four screws. All parts are interchangeable, and if any parts should prove defective during the life of the machine we will replace them at our expense. Why take a chance on some old-time machine?

AMERICAN MOVING PICTURE MACHINE COMPANY
101 BEEKMAN STREET - - - - - NEW YORK

Atlas Disinfectant

IS MADE IN TWO FORMS Odorless or Perfumed

1 gallon cans $1.50 per gallon
5 " " 1.40 " "
10 " " 1.30 " "

F.O.B. PHILA., PA.

Superior in quality to any disinfectant on the market

Ask your exchange for a circular or write us direct.

ATLAS SUPPLY CO.
Manayunk, Philadelphia, Pa.

We'll Make Every Night Saturday Night

That's just what we are doing for hundreds of Moving Picture Shows, and we can do the same for you.
Our "BIG FOUR" RECEIPT PLAN will PACK your house every performance, give you a lasting advertisement and make a friend and patron of EVERY show-going person in your community.
WRITE NOW and let us tell you about the "Big Four" Crowd-Getter. Address Dept. M-5

BUSINESS MFG. CO.
Fort Wayne, Ind.

Ornamental :: Indestructible
Fire Resisting

THEATRE AND STAGE FRONTS
ARTISTIC CEILINGS

Designs Suitable to Any Building. Blue Prints, Suggestions and Estimates Free. Ask for Our Design Book M.

The Kanneberg Roofing and Ceiling Company, CANTON OHIO

See What They Say About

SILVO KURTAIN KOAT

Pottsville, Pa., Dec. 8, '10.

Please ship C. O. D. one can of Kurtain Koat, as I have used the other can and found it to be the greatest thing I ever saw.

Kansas City, Mo., Dec. 17, '10

We have examined Mr. ———'s curtain and have nothing but praise for the results in comparison to other curtains.

$6.00

and following directions will give you the same results as above. One can covers 350 square feet. Order from your exchange or C. O. D.

KURTAIN KOAT CO.
2109 W. LAKE STREET CHICAGO, ILL.

Were YOU One of the Many who realized that our "circuit proposition" was a winner for the country exhibitors? If you have delayed answering, get in touch with us IMMEDIATELY. Don't let your competitor "slip one over on you." Full, detailed particulars and latest 1911 catalogue on receipt of postal. Take the initiative and boom your business.

Yours for a perfect service,

CHICAGO SONG SLIDE EXCHANGE
Sixth Floor, Portland Block
107 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.
Dept. 1

WHY SEND TO EUROPE FOR

FILM PERFORATING DIES

When we can make them for you?
High-class repairing and alterations on Foreign Machines.

THE A. DEWES COMPANY
249 Centre Street, NEW YORK
'Phone, 2351 Spring

READY FOR DELIVERY—Moving Picture World
BOUND VOLUME No. 7
July to December, 1910
TWO DOLLARS, EACH, $2.00 Express charges collect

MOVING PICTURE SUPPLIES
and Accessories of All Kinds
Send for Catalogue
AMERICAN MOVING PICTURE SUPPLY CO.
110 Fourth Avenue New York City

To the Trade

We are now prepared to manufacture films for educational and advertising purposes. We go anywhere on request. Printing and developing our specialty.

Write for particulars
Demonstrations free of charge

Educational Mov. Picture Mfg. and Adv. Co.
F. W. Hochstetter S. Robinson, Prop.
2726 W. Division St. 408 Smithfield St.
CHICAGO, ILL. PITTSBURGH, PA.

The J. C. Coghlan Company

41 Union Square West NEW YORK CITY
Broadway and 17th St.

Second-hand Independent Films, all makes, 60 and 90 days old

The largest dealers in new and second-hand Association and Independent Films in the United States.

SECOND-HAND FILM
$5.00 per reel upwards

CAMERAPHONE FILM
new, with two sets records

All goods shipped subject to examination and partial acceptance on receipt of deposit covering express charges.

Complete lists sent free upon request

If you are in the Market for

SECOND HAND FILMS

Write to the largest and most reliable Dealers and Importers of these goods in the U. S.

International Film Traders
German Savings Bank Building
147 Fourth Avenue. NEW YORK CITY

Mr. Exhibitor—Do You Cater to Both Sides of the Street?

To catch the eye of the passerby on either side you need a finishing touch to your outside display. We offer our

DURABLE ATTRACTIVE 3 x 12 Ft. DISPLAY BANNERS WITH THE TITLE IN 14 TO 20 in. LETTERS

As the best and cheapest way to get Mr. and Mrs. Passerby's trade.

HERE ARE THE REDUCED PRICES:

6 BANNERS PER WEEK $5.75 PREPAID EAST OF MISS. RIVER
(Formerly $6.00 plus charges)
90c. extra for each banner in excess of 6

6 for $6.50 Prepaid to points West of the Mississippi
SINGLE BANNERS, postpaid (in U. S.) $1.15 (formerly $1.35)
SPECIALS TO ORDER (prepaid) 12 ft. $1.70, 15 ft. $2.00, 18 ft. $2.30

FOR EITHER LICENSED OR INDEPENDENT SUBJECTS | The B. B. SIGN CO., Cleveland | SPECIAL PRICES IN QUANTITIES TERMS: Cash with order

SPECIAL ROLL TICKETS

The Big Ticket. Any Printing Any Colors

5,000	$1.25	20,000	$4.50	50,000	$7.50
10,000	$2.50	25,000	$5.50	100,000	$10.00

Get the Samples Stock Tickets, 6 Cents

NATIONAL TICKET COMPANY - - - Shamokin, Pa.

FOLDING CHAIRS

For Moving Picture Shows, Grand Stands, Assembly Halls, etc. In sections if wanted.

Write for Catalog No. 2

The Kauffman Manufacturing Co.
ASHLAND, OHIO

OPERA CHAIRS

FOR EVERY PURPOSE
1,000 STYLES

ESTABLISHED 1865
WRITE FOR CAT. No. 31

The A. H. Andrews Co.
174-176 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.
Branches in all leading cities

CHEAP
STEEL FRAME
THEATRE CHAIRS
ABSOLUTELY NON-BREAKABLE

Suitable for small Theatres and Moving Picture Shows. We carry these chairs in stock and can ship immediately.

Second Hand Chairs
Also seating for Out-of-door use.

Address Dept. W.

STEEL FURNITURE CO., GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.
New York Office: 150 Fifth Avenue

The Automatic Theatre Chair

It is a friend to the public.
It advertises your theatre and makes your business grow.
It folds automatically and can be revolving, stationary or self righting.
It is the only sanitary chair.
It is a space-saver, life-saver and money-saver.
It is the world's greatest theatre Chair.
If you have not seen our latest models, investigate.
Write today for circular A.

THE HARDESTY MFG. CO
Canal Dover, Ohio, U. S. A.

FILMS FOR SALE. 50 Reels of Films
$8 to $16 per Reel
Second-hand one pin Edison machine, $100.00
Mayer Silverman, 105 4th Ave., Pittsburg, Pa.

Opera and Assembly Chairs

Most popular priced chairs on the market for picture show use.
Prompt Shipments. Write for Catalogue
PEABODY SCHOOL FURNITURE CO.
North Manchester - - Indiana
New York Agents: ROBERT J. EHLERS CO
Lexington Ave. and 43d St. - New York, N. Y.

The Independent Film Exchange
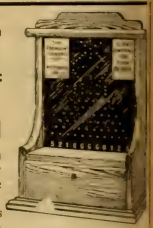
of Pittsburg, Pa.

The Pioneer Independent Exchange of Western Pennsylvania buying the output of the Sales Company.

We have a few choice runs that we can let out at reasonable prices. Write us.

INDEPENDENT FILM EXCHANGE, Inc.
A. S. DAVIS, Manager
415 Ferry Street, PITTSBURG, PA.

WE WANT



ONE THOUSAND
Moving Picture Men

to operate PREMIUM pin machines and get rich, or if already so, to get more wealth. Why not you? PREMIUM pin machines have become an institution in every candy store. By placing a machine in your retailer's store you will monopolize his trade and squeeze out competition.

Mr. Flint of Mo. writes: "Kindly accept thanks for introducing me to a gold mine."

Ten machines will support you. Fifty machines operated will prove a mortgage lifter to you.

We make them out of Oak or Metal.

Percentage of winners arranged so that from every twenty dollars deposited in the machine twelve dollars will be your profit. If so advised, will make it still more.

Write to-day for exclusive territory to

PREMIUM VENDING COMPANY
56-58 WALNUT ST. PITTSBURG, PA.

Uniforms Stylish Nobby Cheap

Coat and Pants like cut $ 11½ as low as $7.50. Caps, $1.00.

Send for our catalogue of Uniforms and Caps, samples of cloth and prices before ordering elsewhere.

R. W. STOCKLEY & CO.
810 West Walnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.
Mfrs. of Uniforms and Equipments

WURLITZER
Automatic Musical Instruments

Concert Pianorchestra

They do the work of expert musicians and reduce your operating expenses.

Wurlitzer is the world's largest manufacturer. We supply the U. S. Government with musical instruments. Write for big, new 84-page catalogue showing the only complete line of self-players, from a small electric piano to an automatic orchestra representing 35 musicians. Easy time payments.

THE RUDOLPH WURLITZER CO.

CINCINNATI, 117 to 121 E. 4th; NEW YORK, 25 and 27 W. 32d (bet. B'way and 5th Ave.); CHICAGO, 266 and 268 Wabash Ave.; PHILADELPHIA, 1835 Chestnut; ST. LOUIS, 912 Pine; CLEVELAND, 206 Prospect Ave. S. E.; COLUMBUS, O., 57 E. Main.

NEW SLIDES
For the following Songs—JUST OUT

Take Me Back to Baby-land.
Going Back to My Old Girl.
My! What a Funny Little World This Is!
In Winter.
When the trees are dressed in crimson and in gold.
King Chanticleer.
Killarney, my Home o'er the Sea.
Dancing Starlight.
Broncho Nell.
For Killarney and You.
My Country Has First Call.
Mandy Lou.
Dolores.
The Best Place of All.
The Moon Swings Low
Springtime Brings Roses and You.
You're the Sweetest Girl in All This World To Me.
Moonlight. Dear.
We've Kept the Golden Rule.

De WITT C. WHEELER
120 W. 31st St. New York City

OPERA CHAIRS

The Latest in Seats | GET OUR PRICES Before You Buy Largest Variety Lowest Prices | The Best in Seats

GEO. W. BENNETT
744 West 5th Street
CINCINNATI OHIO

Xylophones, Orchestra Bells, Chimes, Forks, etc. Send for free illustrated catalogue.

J. C. DEAGAN
3800-3810 N. Clark St., Chicago, Ill.

Correspondence Course. Special rates to the trade. Send for free illustrated catalogue.

School class meets every morning and afternoon, with F. H. Richardson of Chicago as chief instructor. Evening classes meet every Monday, Wednesday and Friday. We positively guarantee you a $15 position.

We have a Powers' Cameragraph No. 5 in A-1 condition for $85.00 and an Edison Exhibition Model Machine for $60.00.

We carry a large line of electrical supplies and furnish everything for the theatre.

F. C. TAYLOR
49 West 28th Street New York City
Phone 1405 Madison Square

HAVE GOOD MUSIC

Singers, Pianists, Trap Drummers and Orchestras. Guaranteed Artists Always on the Wire.
AMERICAN THEATRICAL SINGERS AGCY.
39 Dearborn St., CHICAGO, ILL.
Hilliard Campbell, Mgr.

Moving Picture Pianists

Are you "working up" your pictures? If not, why not? If so, you want some good melodramatic music. Send for free sample page of "Orpheum Collection of Moving Picture Music." Now being used and praised by many of the best houses in the country.

PRICE 75 CENTS

Also latest cue music (series 1910) for 10 parts and piano, $1.00.

1-4 discount on both numbers.

CLARENCE E. SINN
1501 Sedgwick St CHICAGO, ILL.

CLEAN YOUR FILMS WITH
The MORTIMER FILM CLEANER
It does the work while the operator is rewinding the film. Send for the Booklet.
MORTIMER FILM CLEANING CO.
Fidelity Building Portland, Maine

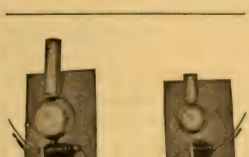
MISFIT UNIFORMS

50 Per Cent. Less than MANUFACTURERS' COST

Blue Coat, Pants and Cap for $6.00

In a large Uniform business there is a small percentage of Misfits. These become dead stock, and we now intend to force them into cash; by taking one-half our cost or less. We have Braided Blue and Gray Dress Coats which cost us in the shop as much as $12.00. We will sell them from $3.50 to $6.00. Let us figure with you.

The Geo. B. Donavin Co.
Columbus, Ohio, U.S.A.



* OUR PATENT ELECTRIC BELLS create great enthusiasm in Moving Picture Houses, play from a keyboard as a solo instrument, or as an accompaniment to songs. Twenty-five Bells, two octaves chromatic. Including resonators, magnets and keyboards, $75.00.

J. C. DEAGAN
3800 3810 N. Clark St. CHICAGO, ILL.

FILMS FOR RENT

New Films High Class Service

The Pioneer House, With 8 Years' Experience and $250,000.00 Back Of It

Write To-day for Terms

EUGENE CLINE
57 and 59 Dearborn St., Chicago

BIO CARBONS

Let us show you how to get better results

In nine theatres out of ten, better results may be obtained without increased cost simply by a careful selection of Carbons.

It is a well-known fact among Electrical Engineers that a different size of Carbon should be used for every different current, and a different grade for each voltage, if the best results are to be obtained.

In moving picture work the range of voltage at the arc is from 26 to 55 and the range of current is from 15 amperes to 65 amperes.

Before the introduction of the BIO Carbon practically only one size and grade was used. Consequently only those exhibitors who happened to have the particular conditions suited to this size and grade were getting perfect results. The rest—a big majority—were simply getting results that seemed satisfactory because they never had the opportunity to see anything better.

Thousands of exhibitors have availed themselves of our services and are now getting better results than they had ever believed possible. Send us the stubs of the carbons you are now burning and we will make a complete report on their suitability for your purposes and send samples of proper carbons free of charge.

Charles L. Kiewert Company

39 Cortlandt St., New York

Largest importers of Flaming Arc Lamps and Carbons in America

Have You Tried the Acme?

IT'S the only place in New York where you get a square deal and get what you pay for.

We can furnish any class of service you desire and ship anywhere.

Send for prices.

ACME FILM CO., Inc.

12 East 15th Street New York

The Chautauqua Film Exchange

Get Ready to Use the BEST Service.
Releases Begin Soon

Write to-day for our list and terms

356 Dearborn Street - CHICAGO, ILL.

Annual Subscription to Moving Picture World, $2.00

THE ENTERPRISE MODEL B

Portable Calcium Gas Outfit

is the only Substitute for Electricity for projecting Motion Picture or Stereopticon Views and is the

Only Satisfactory Portable Outfit

because it operates by WATER PRESSURE, IS CONSTANT, REGULAR AND RELIABLE and has no complicated spring valves to corrode, choke up and otherwise get out of order. Is patented.

"OXONE" in SQUARE CAKES is most Satisfactory for the production of Oxygen Gas. Send for particulars.

For Sale by Dealers.

Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co. MANUFACTURERS AND SALES AGENTS 564 and 572 W. Randolph Street, CHICAGO

Save Tickets

AND

Eliminate Choppers

at the entrance to every Theatre and Amusement Place

GET THE COUNT WITH

JONES DUPLEX CHECK GATE

and you GET all the money

Ask us to send you further details

JONES CHANGE REGISTER CO.
INCORPORATED
18 BROADWAY NEW YORK CITY

H. A. Mackie

Asbestos Booths

All Sizes.

Mackie's Automatic Stereopticon
Advertising Machine.

Mackie's Home Moving Picture Machine.

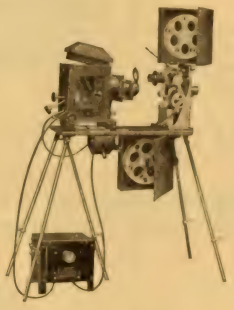
Mackie's Post Card Projector.



DEALER IN

EDISON MACHINES

AND PARTS. ALL MODELS.

Mackie, Agent for Mirror Screens.

Mackie's Repair Department on Premises.

Repairs to all makes of machines promptly executed.

Mackie sells and uses genuine parts only for all machines.

HARRY A. MACKIE

853 Broadway, New York City

CORNER OF 14th STREET

"Mirror Screens" Glass Curtains "Transparent Screens"

Daylight Pictures

Perspective and Clearness.

Rests the Eyes

New Process of Manufacturing makes them more perfect and more wonderful than ever.

We can tell you how to pay for one in two weeks by increased receipts.

CURTAIN OR WHITE WALL GLASS CURTAIN

Are you required to throw your picture from the rear?

Our new TRANSPARENT SCREEN has the world beat.

Nothing like it on the market.

Be the first in your city.

Like the "Mirror Screen" it is a Joy and Money Getter

Address all communications to

MOTION PICTURE SCREEN CO.

SHELBYVILLE, INDIANA

"ARCO-B"
BIOGRAPH CARBONS

ARE made expressly for Motion Picture Work. Are of the Highest Grade. Are Sold at right prices, commensurate with High Quality. Are Carried in stock by the leading Film Exchanges of the Country, and are Imported Exclusively by us.

¶ "Just as good as Arco-B" is the statement frequently made. A complimentary acknowledgment of the High merit of

ARCO BIOGRAPH CARBONS

¶ Insist upon getting the genuine article. Each individual Carbon bears our trade mark. - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - -

L. E. FRORUP & COMPANY, Importers

232-234 GREENWICH STREET NEW YORK

Vol. 8, No. 10 March 11, 1911 Price, 10 Cents

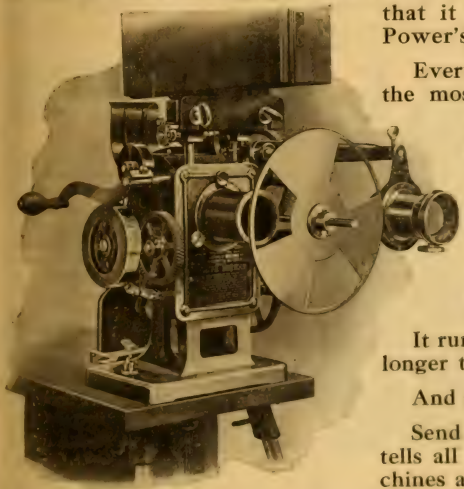
THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD

THE ORGAN OF THE PHOTOPLAY AND ALLIED INTERESTS

NEW YORK

THE PROOF

Fifteen Hundred users have sent us enthusiastic endorsements of our No. 6 Cameragraph. What better evidence can you ask that it "Pays to Purchase a Power's."



Every user is a "rooter" for the most reliable moving-picture machine on the market—Power's No. 6. Why? Because:

It gives an absolutely steady picture.

Is the most substantially constructed projecting machine made.

It runs smoother, quieter and longer than any other machine.

And a few other good why's.

Send for Catalog G, which tells all about our picture machines and current savers.

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY

For thirteen years the leading makers of moving picture machines

115-117 Nassau Street New York

STILL Insisting STILL Insisting STILL Insisting
ON

THE THANHOUSER?

TWO-A-WEEK

RELEASED TUESDAY, MARCH 14

See the "Thanhouser Twist!"

HIS YOUNGER BROTHER

is the story of the artifice of a girl employed in her brother's behalf, and the twist comes when you find that her efforts weren't needed. For the brother was not the spotless man his sister presumed him to be, but the discovery came at the windup of her struggle to place the blame elsewhere. Her sense of devotion to him leads her to try hard to fasten the guilt on a man of stainless character and when she learns how mistaken and misguided was the effort, she makes reparation by taking the man's name for her own and joining with him to save the erring brother from further sin.

No. 193. Code Word, Hither.

RELEASED FRIDAY, MARCH 17

A Splendid "Thanhouser Classic"

ROBERT EMMET

makes a subject of actual historical importance, one that stamps the motion picture as an absolute educational force. As such it will add tone to your place and go far to refute the local Picture Pounders. You have in this a reel that will teach more about the momentous Emmet period in Irish history than hours among the text books. This fifteen-minutes-of-film really describes Emmet's part in Ireland's great fight better than all the lengthy discourses of the Patrick's Day orators. It is remarkable for its wide appeal. Not only will the Irish-American enthuse over the stirring tale it tells, but the lover of liberty everywhere will feel its appeal, the student of history (we all are, nowadays) will like it for the history in it, and the lover of love stories will like it for the entrancing love story that it is.

No. 194. Code Word, Emmet.

The Thanhouser News the "Exhibitor's Guide," sent FREE OF CHARGE to all who can show connection with the Moving Picture business. Drop a card to PUBLISHER, THANHOUSER NEWS, NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y.

The Thanhouser Photoframe consisting of portraits of the famous Thanhouser "Stock," framed in solid oak, mission finish, 34 inches in width and 44 inches in depth, with glass and easel (6 feet high) GOES TO YOU FOR $3.50 with order. This is the prize outfit that tickled-to-death exhibitors the country over are calling THE GREATEST LOBBY-DISPLAY BARGAIN EVER KNOWN.

For System's Sake address Art Dept.

THANHOUSER COMPANY

NEW ROCHELLE NEW YORK

UNEXCELLED PROGRAM

EVERY MONDAY
AMERICAN—American Film Manufacturing Company
EDLAIR—Edlair Film Company
IMP—Independent Moving Pictures Company
YANKEE—Yankee Film Company

EVERY TUESDAY
BISON—New York Motion Picture Company
POWERS—The Powers Company
THANHOUSER—Thanhouser Company

EVERY WEDNESDAY
AMBROSIO—New York Motion Picture Co.
ATLAS—Atlas Film Company
CHAMPION—The Champion Film Company
MENTOR—David Horsley
RELIANCE—Carlton Laboratories
SOLAX—Solax Company.

EVERY THURSDAY
AMERICAN—American Film Manufacturing Company
IMP—Independent Moving Pictures Co.
ITALA—New York Motion Picture Company
REX—Rex Moving Picture Mfg. Company

EVERY FRIDAY
BISON—New York Motion Picture Company
LUX—E. Prieur
SOLAX—Solax Company
THANHOUSER—Thanhouser Company
YANKEE—Yankee Film Co.

EVERY SATURDAY
CAPITAL—Capital Film Co.
GREAT NORTHERN—Great Northern Film Co.
ITALA—New York Motion Picture Company
POWERS—The Powers Company
RELIANCE—Carlton Laboratories

CONSEQUENCES

They are the final result, the last analysis.

In our battle for the right to trade, we have stood by our guns, and each well aimed, carefully-planned shot has brought—consequences.

At this moment we are feeling these consequences in the good, healthy condition of the Sales Company. We invite exhibitors to share in it—there's sunshine enough for all, no toll exacted. The portal to real independence is through this

Unexcelled Program

Motion Picture Distributing & Sales Company

111 E. 14th St., New York City

ALWAYS
Forging Ahead
WITH A HIGH STANDARD OF QUALITY FILMS

THE ONE BEST BET

Release for Saturday, March 4th

The Rival Servants

A strong, dramatic production that will not fail to make a vivid impression because of its clever and realistic portrayal.

Release for Saturday, March 11th

The Son of the Executioner

A beautiful feature film with a wealth of detail that will win the admiration of every audience. Many thrilling scenes, magnificent costumes, perfect photography and effective tinting and toning.

Exhibitors: You cannot possibly afford to miss a single Great Northern release as they are drawing cards, every one of them. SEE SYNOPSIS IN THIS ISSUE.
ALL FIRST-CLASS INDEPENDENT EXCHANGES HANDLE OUR PRODUCT

Great Northern Film Co., 7 EAST 14th STREET, NEW YORK
All Films Sold Through Sales Co.

Put This in Your Pipe

THERE are several film exchanges which would rather drink poison than patronize the "Imp" Company. It is a matter of personal spite, envy, bitterness, jealousy, hatred. Your exchange may be one of those. If it is not giving you

TWO Imps EVERY Week

there's a nigger in the woodpile somewhere. Find out! If your exchange is not giving you TWO IMPS EVERY WEEK, do one of two things:

(1)—Write to them every day till you get what you want. Or—

(2)—Try another exchange.

"THE SECRET OF THE PALM"

(IMP Release of March 13) "Made in Cuba"

Here's a thriller—full of action—exciting from start to finish—get it for your next "IMP night" and notice results.

A Spaniard, goaded to desperation, attempts to ruin a rival on account of unrequited love.

He fastens a crime on the ranch foreman, and then brings about his own death in a sensational manner by a fall from the topmost branches of a palm tree.

The wrong is righted—but—see the film.

"THE FISHER-MAID"

(IMP Release of March 16) "Made in Cuba"

Mr. Exhibitor:—

Nine hundred and ninety-six feet of thrilling drama with "Little Mary" in nearly every foot of it. (Do your booking right now).

One of the greatest fishermen's stories ever attempted.

The Fishermaid, jealous of the sister of her sweetheart, drifts away to the open sea seeking to end her life in solitude.

Her lover discovers the mistake and goes to the rescue, finding her body tossed by the waves. The thrilling rescue, the resuscitation of the girl, and the subsequent reconciliation, has heart gripping interest all the way through. But what's the use.

Cold type can never begin to tell this story—get the picture.

Independent Moving Pictures Co. of America
102 W. 101st St. New York
Carl Laemmle, Pres.
All "Imp" Films Sold Through the Sales Co.

It's Neither Bull-headed Luck Nor Accident

That I am doing the MOST SUCCESSFUL film rental business of the day. No, siree!! It's because I have gained the absolute confidence of you exhibitors. It's because my square, honest, upright dealing with you for the past five years is bearing fruit. It's because I'm "doing things" all the time—doing them for you—the exhibitor—and for the betterment of the whole moving picture industry, and lastly, it's because I have always given you your money's worth—and sometimes more. I don't want your business unless you honestly believe I deserve it. I don't want it if you are doubting my sincerity. If, on the other hand, you believe in me—if my word carries any weight with you—then, and then only, do I ask you to give me a chance to figure with you on your film service—and on the basis of quality only.

CARL LAEMMLE, President

The Laemmle Film Service

Headquarters:
196-198 Lake Street, Chicago, Ill.

4th Floor, Sykes Block
Minneapolis, Minn.

1517 Farnam Street
Omaha, Neb.

The biggest and best film renter in the world

SolaxSolaxSolaxSolaxSolaxSolaxSolaxSolaxSolaxSolax

Solax

Wonderful Jump to Popularity
Everybody is Talking About Them

Wednesday and Friday

"OUT OF THE ARCTIC"

RELEASED MARCH 8th

A MASTERFUL PIECE of WORK A HOUSE JAMMER

The crying demand from all parts of the country is for COMEDY and SPLIT REELS

Solax Supplies the Demand

In their Release of FRIDAY, MARCH 10th,

"Put Out" and "Caribou Hunting in Canada"
(Comedy) - - - - Split Reel - - - - (Scenic)

The SOLAX comedians appear at their best in this screaming, rib-cracking, original comedy, while our picture of "Caribou Hunting" has never been surpassed for scenic beauty and general educational value.

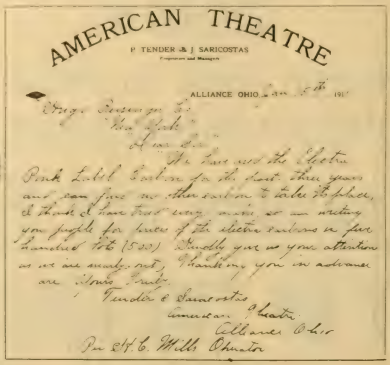
Remember! All Our Films Are Tinted and Toned Throughout.

Solax Company
147 Fourth Avenue - - - - NEW YORK

SolaxSolaxSolaxSolaxSolaxSolaxSolaxSolaxSolaxSolax

Eventually, you will be convinced of the superiority of

"Electra" PINK LABEL Carbons Why Not Now?



AMERICAN THEATRE

P. TENDER & J. SARICOSTAS

ALLIANCE OHIO

Dear Sirs:

We have used the Electra Pink Label Carbons for the last three years and can find no other carbon to take its place. I think I have had very many of our writing people for users of the electra carbons in fact hundred per (100) Kindly give us your attention as we are ready out, thanking you in advance are Yours truly

Tender & Saricostas
American Theatre
Alliance Ohio

Per H. G. Mills Operator

ELECTRA

•TRADE MARK•

ELECTRA

•TRADE MARK•

SOLE IMPORTER

11 BROADWAY HUGO REISINGER NEW YORK CITY

ECLAIR FILMS

THE FILMS OF PICTORIAL QUALITY

Combining Perfect Photography with Popular Plays

RELEASE OF MARCH 13th

"An Unforseen Introduction"

A Graceful Comedy
Vivacious and Mirth-Provoking

"A Day of Storms"

A Real Joker
One You Can't Afford to Miss

ECLAIR FILM COMPANY

NEW YORK: 31 East 27th St. CHICAGO: 35 East Randolph St.

ATTENTION, EXHIBITORS

A New Independent Exchange for Philadelphia

1. We wish to announce to the trade that we have opened an Independent film exchange at 23 N. 9th Street, Philadelphia, Pa., and that we offer exhibitors of the city and surrounding territory an

EXCEPTIONAL UP-TO-DATE FILM SERVICE

2. We are buying the output of the Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Co., and we can guarantee for every week the entire output of the Imp, Thanhouser, Reliance, Bison and American manufacturers.

3. We have absolutely no dead stock on hand. All our films are new. Think of the great advantage of dealing with a new exchange, to be able to secure clean, new films of almost any subject desired.

4. We have a triplicate checking system and we furnish you with a typewritten list of your daily program so you can file same and at all times have a record of your past exhibitions.

5. We can book you on a definite date from date of release.

6. We furnish posters with every reel, also a ten-foot banner for the feature reel.

7. We invite you to our offices to inspect our system and our examining department. We thoroughly examine and put in first-class condition every reel before leaving our place and therefore assure you of no broken sprocket holes which tend to wrench your machine and spoil your show.

8. Come and see us and let us quote you OUR price, or write, wire or 'phone.

Exhibitors Film Service Co., 23 North Ninth St. Philadelphia, Pa.

THE CHAMP STAMP

Champion Films Must

BE ON YOUR PROGRAM

Partake from Your Exchange

List this CHAMP to-day.

"The Girl and the Oath"

It is purely and simply Great

Released March 15th, 1911

Note:— Get our "Photos"

Champion Film Co.

MARK M. DINTENFASS, Gen'l Mgr. :: 12 East 15th St., New York City

EVERY FRIDAY THE WORLD'S BEST—BAR NONE EVERY FRIDAY

INDEPENDENT EXHIBITORS AND EXCHANGES

IF YOU WANT Quality and Variety, Artistic Productions, Clean and Clever Comedies, Stirring Dramatics, Popular Programs, Pleased Patrons, Perfect Pictures, BE SURE YOU specify and take no substitute for the weekly release of

LUX FILMS

Released, March 10th, 1911

BILL IN LOVE AGAIN
COMEDY—432 Feet

JONES' REMEDY
COMEDY—524 Feet

There is enough comedy in this split reel to send all the ladies in your audience into hysterics and to make the men roll off their seats. Do not take our word for it, however, but see it for yourself.

SEE OTHER PAGES FOR SYNOPSES AND PAST RELEASES

GET LUX The World's Best—Bar None GET LUX

R. PRIEUR

10 East 15th Street 'Phone, 3427 Stuyvesant New York City

Sold only through the Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company

What Expert Operators Think of

Bio Carbons

We extract the following from a letter from R. C. Groh, 330 Wyoming Street, St. Paul, Minn.:

> "The Gaiety Theatre of St. Paul has been using the 'BIO' since last summer. They do a tremendous business because their pictures are so bright and clear. WITH 'BIO' CARBONS YOU DON'T NEED A MIRROR SCREEN. You can print that in any paper and sign my name to it."

You notice that users of BIO Carbons don't express themselves in milk and water language. They are up to the neck with enthusiasm.

We value the "BIO'S" reputation for superlative excellence far more than the few extra dollars we might make by selling a "just-as-good" or "just-a-little-better" carbon.

Send us $1.50 for a sample 50 5-8x6 Cored "BIO" Carbons, prepaid to your door. You'll be as enthusiastic about them as we are.

CHARLES L. KIEWERT COMPANY,

LARGEST IMPORTERS OF FLAMING ARC LAMPS AND CARBONS IN AMERICA.

39 Cortlandt Street, New York
114 Huron Street, Milwaukee, Wis.
15th and Pine Streets, St. Louis, Mo.
309 Carson St., Pittsburg, Pa.
195 Fremont Street, San Francisco, Cal.
58 Plymouth Court, Chicago, Ill.

Moving Picture World

THE WORLD PHOTOGRAPHIC PUBLISHING COMPANY • 125 E. 23d Street, NEW YORK
(Beach Building) Telephone call, 1344 Gramercy

SUBSCRIPTION: $2.00 per year. Post free in the United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands. Canada $2.50. Foreign Countries, $3.00. Post Paid.

ADVERTISING RATES: Whole page, $60.00; half page, $30.00; quarter page, $15.00; eighth page, $7.50; one inch (3⅛ in. wide), $3.00; one inch (2¼ in. wide), $2.00; classified (no display), 3 cents per word.
TIME DISCOUNTS: 10% one months order, 15% six months, 20% twelve months.

WESTERN OFFICE: 160 Washington Street, (Post Building, Chicago). Telephone, Main 3145.

Entered at the General Post Office in New York City as Second-Class Matter.

Vol. 8 MARCH 11, 1911 No. 10

The Open Market—II

Our article of two weeks ago on the subject of "The Open Market," has attracted, we learn, considerable attention. We have not heard any single one of our arguments in favor of an open market seriously controverted. Everything ranges itself on the side of opening the market to the high grade quality moving pictures, whether made in this country or abroad. It is axiomatic that the court of last appeal in this, as all other matters, has an indestructible right to select that which it desires to buy. In other words, the freedom of the public, the purchaser, is or should be inviolable.

* * *

We said in our former article that the present system of restricting the market also restricted quality. So it does. Here is an instance which we have deduced only this very week. Mr. W. G. Barker, of the Barker Motion Picture Company, Ltd., sends us an illustrated pamphlet descriptive of one of the most remarkable films ever made. This is a film of the Shakespearean play: "Henry the VIII," especially enacted by probably the finest dramatic company just now in England, or indeed in any part of the world, Sir H. B. Tree's His Majesty's theater company. "Henry the VIII" was produced by Tree on a scale of unparalleled magnificence. Tree is doing for the stage today what Irving used to do; so that the American reader can probably locate his position in modern histrionics.

* * *

Barker is making a great success of this film play in England. There are thousands, probably hundreds of thousands, if not millions of people in this country who would be glad to see this film in this country, but under present conditions, it is impossible for them to do so. The Patents Company licences have to be reckoned with on the one hand; the Sales Company on the other. It is the policy of these two concerns to as far as possible exclude the imported product.

* * *

Outside these two trusts, then, Mr. Barker must twiddle his thumbs. He cannot find a market. So, metaphorically speaking, he stands down at the Cunard Pier with goods to sell which the people in this country want to buy, but between him and his would-be purchasers stands a barrier stretched along Fourteenth Street.

Now let us apply the tu quoque argument. Supposing Mr. Selig or Mr. Laemmle made a very fine film; is there anything to prevent him getting that film on the English market? Absolutely nothing! As we write this paragraph we take up the Kinematograph Weekly for February 9th. What do we find in it? Advertisements of Vitagraph, Biograph, Lubin, Imp, Powers, Nestor and other films. And among the manufacturers we name are those who are opposed to the open market in this country. They do not want an open market here, but they want it across the Atlantic. Is this consistent? We do not think it is. Sauce for the Goose is sauce for the Gander.

* * *

This question of the open market which is of considerable interest in the film world, is also, it seems, of equal, if not greater, interest outside. As we hinted in our first article on this subject, capital has its eye upon the moving picture field. By capital, we mean money in the large sense. It has hitherto been possible for the man of comparatively small capital to gain admission into the Independent moving picture field. So far, however, the larger capitalist with control of hundreds of thousands, of millions, has not come into the field. But now we are privy to the fact that he is prepared to do so. There has been talk in our pages and elsewhere for some time past of a third party. The third party, in a sense, has made its appearance—but it is chiefly on paper. It has not attacked the problemin the only possible business-like way, that of the manufacturing end on a grandiose scale. It is, however, probable that in a short time there will be one, if not two, large concerns commencing operations in the making of moving pictures on a large scale. The best available plants, acting talent, technical talent, scenario writing talent will be employed. With all this, the problem of getting well made moving pictures on to a closed market will remain for solution. No doubt the problem will be solved in a satisfactory manner, because it is difficult in these times, to stand against weight of money.

* * *

At present the market is closed on the one hand by certain adjudicated patent rights, and on the other by a business organization. Nobody can pretend, however, that either of these sides is strong enough to withstand the stram of competition of quality. It would be by quality, and quality only that any new entrants into the American moving picture field would make headway. The time has gone by when we, or anybody else with knowledge of the business, would welcome the small, but ambitious capitalist into the moving picture field. He would harm himself, as well as the trade, by his abortive efforts. He has done so in the past, he would do so again. We have a double duty to perform in this respect. One is to point out the desirability of the open market. We think that the grounds we have alleged are sufficient to uphold our contention in this respect. Then, again, there is the broad matter of welcoming healthy competition. We certainly are of the opinion that the best made moving pictures of the world, be those pictures made here or in any other country, have a moral right to be present on this market. As we have pointed out before, by the present policy of exclusion, some of the best pictures that are made do not find their way on to the American moving picture screen. We think they should be there. When we learn of the probability of capital, brains and ability entering the manufacturing field, we consider it our duty to encourage it. We are decidedly of the opinion that there is plenty of room in the American moving picture field for all these, and we desire to invite and welcome them into the American moving picture business.

Silhouetted Moving Pictures

Probably not 2 per cent. of our readers could tell offhand what we have in mind when referring to silhouetted moving pictures. Fewer still no doubt could tell the origin of the word "silhouette." Let us give it. "Silhouette" was the name of an ingenious Frenchman, who many years ago, by the aid of a pair of scissors and a sheet of black paper, immortalized his name. For a few cents, or rather we should say, sous, he cut out profile portraits of sitters. These pictures were soon called after the originator's name, Silhouette. The name silhouette survives today in various forms of graphic art, where you get a black outline against a light ground. The word silhouette, in fact, has passed into literary currency. For example: Coming up New York Bay towards evening we speak of the "silhouetted outlines of the New York skyscrapers," etc., etc. Then, again, the draughtsmen who illustrate the popular press, are said, in some senses, to make silhouette pictures when they produce those amusing black bodied caricatures in outline.

The silhouette photograph was, and is, fairly popular among many amateurs and a few professionals. We can recall at least one professional studio where silhouette photographs are made for business purposes. The modus operandi of making silhouette photographs is roughly this: You pose your sitter against a translucent background with a matted surface. A stippled, or a frosted window, one of ground glass in fact, answers very well as the background. Only diffused light is supposed to pass through the window. You must exclude all front and side lights from the sitter. He must, in fact, be seen by the lens to be just a dark shadow. The object of the photographer is merely to impress his outline on a sensitized plate, the main part of the figure being unrelieved black. These silhouette photographs, however, are chiefly objects of curiosity and interest. There is no great demand for them, they merely excite the interest of novelty among those who do not realize what a number of interesting variants are produced by photography.

The silhouette moving picture may probably receive some impetus from a recent release of the Rex Company. Here many of the figures are shown just as detailless shadows with sharp outlines. Some interesting moonlight effects appear in this Rex release, which is called: "By the Light of the Moon." We are not sure whether other makers have adopted this plan of making moving pictures. If they have not, probably they will, as many quaint effects can be obtained by silhouetting the characters.

We refer to this little variation of moving picture technique for the purpose of emphasizing a point often made in these pages, that moving picture makers have at hand greater opportunities for varying the kind of picture they produce, than they seem to be aware of. An occasional release en silhouette, offers scope for the cultivation of the comic side of moving picture making. So far as we can judge, in making silhouetted moving pictures, the same principles are availed of, as in making silhouette still photographs. You expose against a translucent matted surface, and shut off all light from the front and sides of the picture. But we do not pretend to speak with certainty on this point. Possibly some of the Independent manufacturers who sadly need the element of novelty in their releases, will make one or two of these silhouette or shadow pictures. If cleverly done, the exchanges would, no doubt, welcome them, and we are sure that the public in the moving picture theaters would like them.

WILLIAM ("BILL") STEINER IN BERMUDA.

This little cut shows William Steiner, of Yankee film fame, disporting himself amongst the bananas in Bermuda, accompanied by Mrs. Steiner. It will be seen that they hardly wear a worried look. We are informed that some very excellent Yankee pictures have been made in Bermuda. Two companies are at work there, and the pictures will shortly be released. Mr. Steiner returns to New York in the course of a few weeks.

"OLD ED HOWE" ON PICTURES.

"Old Ed Howe," the philosopher of the Atchison, Kan., Globe whose Sunflower Philosophy has given him a national reputation remarks:

"Our theory is that any one who is misled by a picture show is too easily led to make much of a stand on anything."

Value of the Moving Pictures for Advertising

By Horatio F. Stoll.

It is doubtful if any form of entertainment has ever taken possession of the general public as quickly and as completely as have the motion pictures. In every city, practically, of the civilized world, moving pictures are being shown to crowds of spectators daily, and every one, large and small, rich and poor, alike, seem to enjoy them thoroughly.

A few years ago, imperfect films, showing foreign scenes, famous people and elaborate street pageants and festivals were projected at the leading vaudeville theaters, and were looked upon as something truly wonderful. Today, the photographing process has been perfected, the art of throwing the pictures on the screen has been simplified, and the cost of projecting them has been so minimized that every little hamlet in the United States, no matter how remote, is able to boast of its moving picture shows.

From a financial standpoint, the success of the moving pictures has also been remarkable. A writer in the American Review of Reviews, estimates that the chief combination of manufacturers produce 20,000 feet a week of new films, of which, perhaps, an average of eighty copies apiece are made.

The middlemen or "exchanges" pay manufacturers $9,000,000 for films, while the former rent at about $18,000,000 a year to the actual exhibitors or showmen. They, in turn, collected nickels and dimes in 1909 at their 10,000 ticket windows, amounting to $57,500,000. And these audiences unmbered more than 2,250,000 souls per day—three times the audiences of all the regular theaters in America put together.

The enterprise of the moving picture men is marvelous. Nothing seems to be too difficult for them to accomplish, and expense is apparently a side issue. They are constantly on the alert for something novel, that will amuse and attract, and as a result, when a nickelodeon or moving picture theater is entered, the spectator never knows just what surprise is in store for him. One day you are "delighted" with Colonel Roosevelt's hunting experiences in the jugles of Africa, another time you are amazed at the daring flights of the birdmen at Los Angeles or Rheims; while on still another evening you behold the solemn funeral procession of King Edward VII.

We are only just beginning to realize the many uses to which the moving picture can be put, for example: Some months ago, in Paris, Dr. Doyen, the famous French surgeon, whose methods sometimes have been criticised as flamboyant, but whose skill as an operator never has been questioned, created a sensation by introducing in his lecture, a series of moving pictures, showing an operation for appendicitis. Each successive detail of the delicate operation was vividly depicted, and as the pictures were flashed on the screen, Dr. Doyen kept up a running commentary which left nothing to the imagination of the French students. These pictures will no doubt soon be shown in colleges in the United States and other countries, since the films can be multiplied indefinitely.

Moving pictures have also been used in crusades of various kinds to influence public opinion. The other evening I saw a very effective story picture, intended to impress upon people the necessity of securing pure milk for their children. Scenes reproducing unsanitary and filthy methods of preparing milk for city consumption were introduced and a strong dramatic plot worked up. It told of a baby's life endangered by milk obtained from the dairy of its mercenary grandfather The examination, by a physician, showed the old man that his milk was full of death-dealing germs, due to the careless methods employed in his dairy. Impressed with the narrow escape of his beloved grandchild, the aged dairyman resolved to take the advice of his son-in-law and install a sanitary dairy The whole story is graphically handled, and serves as a splendid argument for clean milk.

The Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce appreciates the value of moving pictures as interesting colonists. At the Alaska-Yukon Pacific Exposition, at Seattle, last summer, they attracted much attention with a series of pictures showing an ostrich farm. The lecture room was always filled when these views were announced, and as they were projected after the speaker had pointed out the resources and advantages of the land of sunshine, fruit and flowers, they served an excellent purpose—that is, to attract a crowd and enable the speaker to send home his forcible arguments in favor of Los Angeles and its tributary country.

These ostrich pictures proved so popular everywhere, that they have since been elaborated into a very interesting film called "Southern California Industries." It opens with a glimpse of thousands of fluttering pigeons on the great pigeon ranch, located in the outskirts of Los Angeles. Then comes a novel tropical alligator garden, and finally the famous Cawston ostriches. You see them feeding, resting, having their feathers plucked, and being ridden by daring caretakers. The film closes with a close-range picture of a charming Southern California belle, smiling coquettishly over a large fan made of rich feathers. Her huge picture hat is covered with costly willow plumes, and about her shoulders is carelessly thrown a fluffy boa, made of specially selected feathers. The combination appeals strongly to the women who gasp with envy as they behold the beautiful array of costly feathers.

Many of the subjects handled by the picture men seem to be especially intended for the gentle sex. A few days ago, at the Emporium, San Francisco's largest department store, I witnessed a novel display of Parisian styles which were breathlessly followed by the women who filled the darkened room. The picture showed the entrance to a Paris racetrack, the arrival of motor parties, and splendidly equipped vehicles of every kind. The grand dames, the demi monde, the hoi polloi were all trailing their skirts over the sweeping lawn, or watching the races from the grandstand. The gowns and hats were chic and bewilderingly beautiful. I heard one woman exclaim, as she hurriedly departed: "I am going to run over to the art department for a few minutes, and then I'm coming back to see the pictures again, after the intermission. They're great. I want to study the gowns more carefully, for one can scarcely grasp the details in one sitting. I'm looking for pointers, and I saw half a dozen gowns that were dreams."

There are many subjects of this kind that have a world-wide interest, and that is the value of the moving pictures—they speak no individual tongue, but a universal language, and can be appreciated as much in Rio Janeiro, Cairo or Pekin, as they are in Berlin, Paris or New York.

America and England exchange films on a large scale, while Italy, France and Germany have especially enjoyed those dealing with our beauty spots, notable people and the Wild West life or Indian pictures. Germany also welcomes many of our humorous films, for they seem to be singularly lacking in creating comic pictures. Of course, all our light, fluffy material is not suited to them, for conditions and customs are so different that in many cases they are unable to understand or appreciate our humor.

Consul General Robert P. Skinner tells of a very amusing American picture recently exhibited in Hamburg, which failed to draw forth even a smile. The subject dealt with was the typical American noon-day slice of pie, but nobody knew what pie was, nobody knew the American habit, very few understood the various signs exhibited in the picture, all in English, and the humor of a chase across the city for a piece of fresh pie, failed to touch anyone.

Much has been written about the mechanical side of the picture production: how the camera takes the little postage stamp pictures at the rate of 16 to the second; how the films are developed, the scenes fastened together and finally made up into a 1,000-foot reel, which will take about 20 minutes to be shown; how the different scenes are taken at different times and different places, and welded together into a complete whole; how the end of each topic is manifested not by the dropping of a curtain, but by the flashing of a printed announcement of the new scene upon the screen.

In addition to the taking of a series of pictures, showing the extent and importance of California's viticultural industry, I had a good chance to study the care necessary to achieve good results Everything must be worked out in advance, so that there is absolutely no possibility of anything going wrong We studied the vital features of our industry, mapped out a sort of scenario, and submitted it to the photographer, who told us what was practical and what was not. His selection of scenes suggested an entire blue print, of the superfluous material of a manuscript. The photographer also gave us the tempo, so to speak, for in the moving picture scenes, it is often necessary to condense in a minute what it ordinarily takes five minutes to perform.

Industrial pictures are easy enough to get suitable backgrounds and light effects, but it is often difficult to get laborers, who do not realize the workings of a moving picture camera, to be merely themselves and act naturally. They usually work a little and then stop and await instructions. If you shout at them to keep going they often act as if they had been struck with a bullet, and begin to work furiously. One stupid person will often spoil the whole excellent effect achieved by a dozen intelligent employees who know what is expected of them.

We were very anxious to get some pictures at Asti, showing the Italians picking grapes, but we happened to arrive there when they were scattered in small numbers throughout the large vineyard, and it was necessary, therefore, to be content with Japanese, who were working near at hand. It was explained to the Jap foreman that at a given signal the pickers were to carry their boxes to the end of each row of vines and pile them one on top of another. The foreman, who had spent many a leisure hour in nickelodeons, was intuitive and quick, and grasped the idea in a moment. All the men and women seemed delighted to have pictures taken and after stationing each one in his proper place so as to be within range of the camera he announced that we could proceed.

The machine was properly adjusted and focused, and when the signal was given the Japanese went about their picking, working hurriedly, but acting naturally, as if no pictures were being taken. They were asked not to look at the machine, and they followed their instructions to the letter.

Down in Fresno county, at the Wahtoke vineyard, it was planned to snap a number of Chinese laborers, as they looked very picturesque with their large, flat, sun hats and their peculiar gourd water bottles slung over their shoulders. The foreman refused absolutely to help. "My boys get paid by the box; they no want waste time taking pictures," he remarked, and as his decision was final, there was no use parleying with him longer. A close-range view was needed to show how heavily the vines bear, the dexterity of the pickers' hands and the peculiar little cutter used in separating the bunches from the vines.

"All right," the foreman was told, "we won't bother you about the other boys, but will you let us take a picture of yourself picking?"

The Chinaman agreed. He cut away the leaves, exposing to view the full bunches of grapes and knelt in position ready to pick as soon as the signal was given.

When he was told to "pick like h——l" he worked as if his life depended upon it, and the grapes fell into the basket with such rapidity that it was soon filled to the brim. One of the operators bemoaned the fact that the Chinaman's sun hat covered his face, and suggested that he be asked to push it back. But the Chinaman intended that the picture should be natural and showed his good judgment by remarking: "You heap big fool. No can pick grapes quick and look at you. I no want to cut my fingers off. This knife plenty sharp."

There are often little incidents that occur in the taking of pictures that are purely accidental, but help out the atmosphere wonderfully. Following the picking we photographed the hauling and showed two sturdy men lifting the boxes from the ground upon the wagon which was to carry the grapes to the winery. With the regularity of machines they grasped the boxes, gave them a good swing and landed them on the wagon without the least apparent effort. The driver in turn piled them on top of one another so as to get as many boxes on the wagon as possible. As he lifted one of these boxes, the bottom gave way and there was a perfect shower of white berries, which clung to the wagon and dropped over the side on the ground. This little accident proved very effective when reproduced on the screen, for it gave the eye something to consider besides the boxes, which followed one another in rapid succession.

PATHE STOCK COMPANY—OPERATING AT LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA.

Left to right back row: Willis, House, Snow, Hart Hoxie, 'Curly," Davis, Pockets: Second Row: Peters, Joseph De Grasse, Characters, Irvin Hay, Characters, Frank Biggy, Ridgay, K. Breed. Third Row: Red Wing, Indian leads, Virginia Chester, Ingenue, Bessie Eyton, leads, Miss Austin; Front row: Chas. K. French, character leads, assistant manager. James Young Deer, manager and producer.

In photographing a large cooperage plant at Fresno an amusing bit of side business was also unconsciously introduced. It was arranged to take a panoramic view of the immense yard showing about 5,000 barrels. In the foreground, the various departments were to be represented by workmen so that the spectator might get a good idea of the different stages in the manufacture of a barrel from the time it is a bunch of staves until it comes out a finished barrel. As the camera swung around from the warehouse across the railroad tracks to the manufacturing plant, it was planned that several heads of the department should come into the picture, instruct the various employees, point to novel features and wind up in front of the steaming plant and engage in conversation.

Inasmuch as they were not familiar with the working of the machine, they walked too rapidly. The operator did not notice this until two-thirds of the amount of film allotted to the subject was exhausted. Then he called to one of the men to get into the picture. It so happened that he was at the farthest end of the yard with about 200 barrels between him and the other men who had arrived at the steaming plant. Quick as a flash, the unanxious foreman jumped on the nearest barrel and hastened to reach the others. But the barrels were wobbly and his progress reminded one of Eliza crossing the ice in "Uncle Tom's Cabin." Presently as he neared his goal he lost his balance, and after a struggle to save himself, went down and out of sight between two barrels. The expression on his face and the look he let loose as he gathered himself together and brushed off his clothes, as well as the mirth of his amused friends, who roared with laughter, are plainly discernible in the picture. This accident invariably gets a laugh when it is shown, for somehow people are always amused when a person slips awkwardly, even if the resultant fall ends serious-ly.

A pathetic incident, on the other hand, was the photographing of the plant wizard, Luther Burbank, and his aged mother, Mrs. Olive Burbank, who only the other day died at Santa Rosa at the age of 98 years. In order to attract attention to Santa Rosa it was arranged to have a series of moving pictures taken of the famous botanist, who kindly agreed to walk about his garden pointing out the unusual flowers and trees that grew there. Incidentally it was planned to have his aged mother, assisted by her faithful nurse, Miss Swanson, come out into the garden, seat herself in a rocker and admire a bouquet of flowers created by her gifted son. The kindly old lady was very gracious about posing for the photographers and entered into the spirit of the thing with great enthusiasm. She followed the instructions carefully and upon being seated took the flowers from the nurse, handled them fondly, breathed in their fragrance and then, looking straight into the camera, smiled sweetly. The little scene ended when she placed the flowers on her lap and engaged in conversation with her nurse.

Mrs. Burbank expressed a keen desire to see the pictures, but unfortunately her strength failed rapidly after they were taken and she was unable to have her wish gratified.

Industrial views of this kind are considered the best kind of advertising, for it enables prospective colonists in the Eastern cities to see exactly what the Pacific Slope has to offer. Of course, the camera can be made to lie and the pictures can be faked to a certain extent, but the general truths and facts are all there. A San Franciscan, who recently visited the enterprising little town of Ashland, Oregon, had a rather amusing experience in this connection. When he alighted from the train, he found the depot deserted and as he walked to his hotel, he was surprised to find everything quiet and lifeless. "However," he said, "when I turned into the main business street, I saw a strange spectacle. The street was deserted just as the residence streets had been, except for a stretch of two blocks. The part of the street comprised in those two blocks would make our busiest street look lonesome. Autos, carriages, farm wagons, delivery wagons, horsemen, perambulators and wheelbarrows made two congested lines of traffic in the street. Half the packed thoroughfare was moving in one direction; the other half was headed the opposite way. The sidewalks were crowded. People scooted into and out of stores; merchants bowed at their doorways, even babies and dogs caught the enthusiasm and added to the general activity. Children, enough to fill a schoolhouse, were hurrying along the sidewalks of those two blocks. Then I bumped into a fellow I knew.

"Why, what in the name of all that's funny is happening in this town?" I yelled. "What's the whole country trying to do a footrace on that two blocks of street for?"

"Why, the good people are simply doing their patriotic duty," replied my friend. "The Chamber of Commerce is having a moving picture of the main business street made to be used in showing the world what sort of a town we have here, and every man, woman, child, dog and cat that calls this place home is doing his best to help the picture."

Good industrial films are welcomed at conventions, fairs and public meetings, for they add interest and variety to any program. But if advertisers or Chambers of Commerce desire to have their pictures run over a definite circuit of nickelodeons, they must pay for them according to the manner in which they are treated. Five hundred feet are usually used. The company that handles the California district gives one hundred feet of film to you gratis and the other four hundred feet are photographed at the rate of $1.25 per foot. It takes about ten minutes to project the pictures, for which you must pay at the following rate: Story film, in which your industry or business is casually introduced in a story, which has a distinct plot, $25 per month; industrial film, treated broadly and devoted entirely to the workings of a large manufacturing plant, or the life and resources of a particular section or community, $50 per month; pure advertising film, where you come out boldly and make your announcement so plain that all who run may read, $75 per month. The minimum contract is usually for six months and during that period, the pictures are shown for from three to seven days in every city and town in California.

There are similar circuits throughout the East and I am firmly convinced that before long, a large advertiser will be able to have his goods brought before the American people through moving pictures more thoroughly and in a shorter time than through any other medium.

A NEW FILM EXCHANGE IN PHILADELPHIA.

The Exhibitors Film Service Company is the name of a new independent film exchange in Philadelphia. J. E. Moyer is general manager. Mr. Moyer is well known among the trade, having for a umber of years been connected with the Lubin Film Service. The Exhibitors Film Service Company was opened the 6th of March, and is centrally located a few doors from Market Street, occupying a suit of commodious and spacious offices at 23 North Ninth Street.

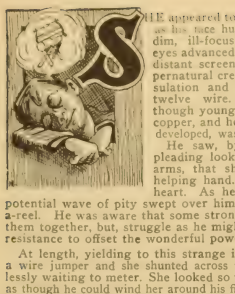
In an interview with a representative of the Moving Picture World Mr. Moyer emphasized the intentions of his firm to spare no expense and to use every effort in making the Exhibitors Film Service Company the model and up-to-date film exchange of Philadelphia. "We are buying the output of the Sales Company," said Mr. Moyer, "and we can satisfy any demand, even the most pretentious, in a first-run film service. Exhibitors should appreciate the fact that we haven't an old reel in the house, and all our stock is brand new. Furthermore, we shall take special pains to keep our films in the most perfect condition. Our examining department is a feature. Every inch of film is thoroughly inspected and put in first-class condition before being shipped out to our customers, which means time and money saved for the man that runs a show. We have also a triplicate checking system, and none of our customers will have to suffer with repeaters, as we furnish a typewritten list of his daily programme for him to file, so as at all times to have a record of his past exhibitions. There are many other features we have incorporated to operate this exchange on modern business principles, and," concluded Mr. Moyer, "we are here to do business, and mean to get it."

The Moving Picture World congratulates Mr. Moyer on his manly enterprise and the very high standard of business policy outlined on the programme of the Exhibitors Film Service Company.

We wish to call the exhibitors' attention to the advertisement of the Atlas Supply Company of Manayunk, Philadelphia. A sanitary theater will be appreciated by the patrons and the price quoted on these accessories is so low that the expense is only a trifle. The Atlas Supply Company will furnish either the perfumed or the odorless disinfectant to suit each individual taste. We might suggest to try a sample of each to ascertain which form will be the more agreeable or better adapted.

The Operator's Dream

By H. F. Hoffman.



SHE appeared to him as a purple ghost, as his face hung out of the coop. A dim, ill-focused image with filmy eyes advanced from the depths of the distant screen. A woe-begone, supernatural creature without much insulation and as slim as a number twelve wire. Haggard she was, though young, with hair of stranded copper, and her body, though underdeveloped, was sadly over-exposed.

He saw, by the sadness of her pleading look, and her outstretched arms, that she was begging for a helping hand. He had a solt-cored heart. As he gazed at her a high, potential wave of pity swept over him, and his brain was all a-reel. He was aware that some strong magnet was drawing them together, but, struggle as he might, he did not have the resistance to offset the wonderful power.

At length, yielding to this strange influence, he threw her a wire jumper and she shunted across to where he stood aimlessly waiting to meter. She looked so wan and thin it seemed as though he could wind her around his finger, and then again re-wind. But her pretty smile was the magic that changed her from a shadow to a ray of sunshine. He at once became gallant in his manner. Bowing low, he brushed the flies off the fly-wheel and bade her be seated upon it.

Then he thought to himself: "Perhaps the Fates have sent her to me. Has it come my time to take-up the single man's burden, or shall I shutter out of my heart? Her voltage is low, but she does not seem to be grounded in the ways of the world. I know I can help her. I would like to developer and put her on my circuit," so he began to plier with questions. "Tell me, wan maid, who are you and whence have you come?" She smiled as he gazed, and spoke to him with a sweet metric voice: "I am the ghost of a Nickelodeon that died from a short circuit in the bank-roll, but now I have come to you and I am at your service."

"Ah!" said he. "'Tis well, fair maid, and I'll protect you; come, will you trust in me?" For answer she nestled into his arms and lifted her pleased face to his, as he left a positive print of a kiss upon her facial aperture.

"Lead and I will follow," said she, "even to the end of the line."

"But wait," said he, "you are weak. You need a tonic. I will go and fetch you a toning solution, after which we will go and eat, drink and be merry, for to-morrow we may dye."

Our hero made his exit, and in an hour he returned with a normal load and a bottle of Eastman's emulsion. She drank this to give her strength, while he stood by, gallantly waiting to conductor to the feed wire.

They were a happy pair as they sauntered forth from the gloomy auditorium. Together they followed the street main to the Main Street. As they walked along 110 Volts went by on 60 cycles, riding tandem, on their way to an outing. "Those are friends of mine," he explained. "Some time I'll introduce you; I'm sure you will—oh, my, what's the matter? Are you ill?" he cried in alarm, for she was getting very limp. "No, I'm not ill," she smiled, "only a little faint, that's all." "Are you hungry, dear?" he asked. "Well, not exactly," she replied, "but I'm dying for something to eat." "Very well," he answered, "here we are now; this is the place." They turned into a fashionable rathskeller known as Noah's Arc.

With the taste of food the poor creature appeared to take on a new life. It gratified him to be the one to rescue her from a death by starvation. He watched her in silence as they ate, and he noticed that she grew more beautiful with every mouthful. They enjoyed a delightful meal of comedy cutlets, non-inflammable celluloid eggs, kosher scenarios with soubrette sauce, pate-de-foyer-grass, scrambeled plots with fixing salts, friccasseed fol-de-rol, planked slapsticks, fire-proof croquettes and scalloped films. The dish of the day was censored frog's legs en drape, served on Agfa dry plates. For desert they had leading-lady-fingers, served with first-run peaches and dynamo juice en tasse.

The service fluctuated, but the food touched the spot. She was beginning to expand and she no longer looked to be the emaciated creature she had been. He noticed the close connection she was making with the Swiss cheese with sprocket holes. The amount of stewed current she consumed caused him to vibrate, and he admitted to himself that she was no economizer, although he was willing to take a chance. She had eaten more than her carrying capacity and was so swelled up that they had to give her some mica wafers to condenser. But there was a great change for the better. One who had known her an hour before would never have recognized her.

"Now," he exclaimed in admiration, "you look like a new creature, but you need some better clothes." She was changed, indeed, and now, instead of the ghost-like figure that she once had been, she had become a radiant beauty. She really did need clothes, for she had come to him, as said before, without much insulation.

"Dearest," he ventured, quite timidly, "pray accept this trifling token of my esteem. It will gladden my heart if you will take this money from me and buy yourself a costume befitting your great beauty. It will please me, and I know it will——" He hesitated, for she gave him a look of scorn that would have withered an obelisk. He had made the mistake of his life. She wasn't that kind of a girl.

110 VOLTS WENT BY ON 60 CYCLES, RIDING TANDEM

"I am sorry I came in contact with you," she cried, suddenly, with contempt. "How dare you offer me your filthy money? I may need clothes, but I don't need them so badly that I have to accept gifts of money from men, although you may loan me some if you like." She would accept nothing from him as a gift. He even reversed the Bible in her favor by pointing out that it is more blessed to receive than to give. She remained true to her early teaching, so he lens her a thousand dollars to transformer into a lady.

"Oh, thank you, kind sir," she said, "how good you are!"

"Tut, tut," he replies, "a mere bagatelle."

"Now," she smiled, "you stay here and read your Upper Magazine while I go shopping. Since you insist upon my having better clothes I will do the best I can with the small sum you have loaned me. Don't you go 'till I come," she said, and departing, allowed him to kiss her facial receptacle once more. Ah, that kiss; that fatal kiss! Ooey such a kiss, for it made him her slave!

After a wait that seemed like ages to him, she returned, a resplendent and wonderful creature. She had changed from a ghost to an angel. Bedecked in her new finery she was more divine than when he saw her last. As he gazed at her he realized that his heart was lost. He was in love.

"Darling, I love you," he cried, falling upon his knees. "Say that you'll be mine and I will go at once and buy a little ohm out in Ampere, N. J. There we can live happily ever after. If you will be the light of my life I will be your power-house, and I promise to keep you always lit-up."

She did not seem to hear him. Instead, she stood admiring her reflection in a mirror, and he was out of her thoughts. She was attired in a yellow pine dress with asbestos trimmings, lined throughout with sheet iron and padded with hot air. It was a pretty design, with non-adjustable buttons arranged in series, and neatly stuck on with film cement. She had bought herself some switches to match her stranded copper hair, that hung in pretty inducing coils about her shoulders. From her neck hung an incandescent necklace, tucked into an electric belt, the whole effect being topped off with a multiple hat and rubber gloves.

"You look so pretty," he exclaimed, with pride. "Let me kiss you again on the face plate." She looked at him coldly through her finder, but made no reply. She sat cam and fanned herself with a gently oscillating fan, as though she had never met him.

"What means this coldness, fair one? I love you madly," he breathed, looking earnestly into her large push-button eyes, but all he got was a stony stare. "I was hoping you would be my wife," he faltered, throwing himself in despair at her feet. "Give me some hope, I beg of you, dearest one! Will you marry me?"

"You have asked a positive question," she answered, "to which I must make a negative reply."

Watt had he done to extinguisher love? He was froze by her North polarity and he did not understand.

"You will not even kiss me," he lamented, "after all I have done for you? Do you consider that a fair exchange?"

"No," said she, "a fair exchange is one where they do not soak you first-run price for second-hand junk."

"Have a care, woman! Do not trifle with my feelings! Remember, that you were not such a Tungsten when I first met you."

"You need not insult me sir, even if that is true. I wouldn't marry you because you are nothing but a crank."

"Then why have you ground me like this? You have allowed me to love you forty horse-power, and after getting what you wanted, you return it with this four-candle-power efficiency. Woman, you have deceived me!"

"You wrong me. I have not deceived you, and now that you have accused me, I will tell the truth. I loved you up 'till the moment I left to buy the clothes. I had barely left Noah's Arc when I realized that I was being followed. I was being followed by a MAN—a man who had always had a strange electrical power over me. He came up and spoke to me and in that instant I realized that I had always loved him. I am sorry, for you have been so good, but I can be only neutral to you now. Even the pretty things I am wearing I bought to please him. He went with me and made me buy the outfit I have on."

"Aha!" screamed the dupe. "I see it all clearly now. You have a false alternating system. You have been alternating between that man and me! By your own words you have told me who you love. You are in love with Peeko, the fire inspector! Now I know why he has been hanging around. He selected your clothes, did he? It is for his eyes that my good coin has gone to buy you these pretty things you have on? Well, mark my word, false woman, you will suffer! Now that you are his slave you will not see him much. He will come around to see you only about once a year, and then he will look you over with contempt. He will walk away without a word of praise, while you weep bitter tears. Nay, he will even find fault with you and tell you your pine dress, asbestos trimmings and multiple hat are out of date. What say you to that, vain creature?"

She replied with a hiss, like the sputter of a carbon. Shocked into a high-tension, his brain was filled with shooting star-wheels and his eyes began to flicker. He was going mad. Unable to hear her taunting hiss he seized her, crying, "Curses on you. I will have my revenge! You must die! You shall not leave this place alive!" He dragged her back to the operating room, threw her upon the switchboard and prepared to cut-out her lights. He stood poised with murderous knife raised aloft, ready to make the fatal plunge. Just then somebody pulled the main switch and he felt himself falling—falling—in darkness. Downward—downward—he knew not where, until he struck upon a corrugated wooden floor. At the same time he heard a husky, satanic voice calling out: "All out—car ahead!"

LOS ANGELES NOTES.

By Richard V. Spencer.

(Pacific Coast Correspondent of The World.)

Selig.—Mr. Boggs (director), Mr. Bosworth, and several members of the company have gone to the Yosemite Valley to take a series of pictures. They expect to return in about a week. Last year the company spent several months in the same vicinity, getting what was afterward declared to be, the finest pictures of American scenery ever taken in connection with dramatic work.

Selig Gets Fire Pictures.—Los Angeles was recently visited by a disastrous $250,000 fire. The fire broke out at 8 o'clock in the morning in the Byrne Building, Third and Broadway, in the heart of the business district. The fire was a three alarm one calling out the entire available city fire fighting equipment, there being eighteen engines at work at the worst stage of the fire. The Selig Company were notified early and were soon on the scene with a camera and several members of the company. Excellent views were secured of the arrival of the apparatus, pictures of the big crowds before the police succeeded in forming fire lines, firemen at work, etc. During the progress of the fire, Miss Hart a member of the Selig company mounted to the third story of the burning building and was "rescued" by another member of the company in a dramatic manner. A fitting story will probably be written around the fire scenes, or on the other hand, the scenes may prove one of a series that the Selig company have made arrangements with the city officials to take of the city fire department in drill and action. Whichever way is chosen, the film should be of interest to firemen all over the country.

Essanay.—The Essanay company are putting on several Indian plays. Several of the Banning Reservation Indians have been summoned to the Essanay studio near Redlands to take part in the pictures.

Mr. Gilbert Anderson, producer of the Essanay Western Company at present working near Redlands, motored down to Los Angeles recently and visited the Selig, Pathe, Biograph, Kalem studios, reviving old friendships and making new ones.

Bison.—Mrs. Bertha Blancett, member of the Bison company, and champion woman broncho buster of the world, added new laurels to her enviable record at the recent broncho busting exhibition held here. Side-winding, vanishing, plunging broncos, ridden with grace and skill by Jim Jeffries," the bucking bull, was led out and there were many laughable attempts to ride him. A prize of a hundred dollars offered to any outside rider who had the nerve to try to ride the club's prize bucking broncho "Cyclone," hero of a hundred bucking battles, went unclaimed. Pony Express races, cowboy quadrilles, trick horse drills, cow girl races, and numerous other interesting events were held. The most interesting events were taken by the Bison company in motion pictures.

California.—Mr. Duhem, director, has returned from San Diego without his war pictures. Mr. Duhem reports that by the time he reached the boundary the headquarters of the Comic Opera Revolution had shifted some sixty miles and fifty miles to the southward, and with automobiles at fifty dollars per day, and none to be had, he was forced to give up the case and return to civilization.

Among Los Angeles Exhibitors.

Clune's Pasadena Theater.—Mr. W. H. Clune's Pasadena theater will open March 1st, instead of February 15th as had been planned. The delay is due to the slow installation of the heating system. The theater when completed will be the third in a chain of first class houses that Mr. Clune is erecting throughout Southern California.

Another New Theater.—The Architectural Engraving Company have prepared plans for a one-story and mezzanine picture theater building, 41x80 feet, to be built at South Park Avenue and Forty-fifth street for J. L. Hill of Monrovia. The building will have cement floor, pressed brick front, composition roof, galvanized iron cornice, ornamental plaster decorations, etc.

Exterior of Selig Polyscope Company's Studio at Edendale, Los Angeles, Cal.

Startling Statistics.—A local theatrical statistician with a penchant for figures has figured out that 22,000,000 paid admissions are received at Los Angeles theaters annually. Los Angeles has a permanent population at this writing of approximately 350,000 and added to this in the winter are some 150,000 tourists. Added to this are 150,000 in suburban towns and cities within a radius of thirty miles. A big percentage of these people, it must be remembered, are of the wealthy and well-to-do middle classes who are the best patrons of the drama in any city. There are ninety-five moving picture houses in the city. These vary from a "hole in the wall" to the modern picture palace, such as the Clune Broadway, or the Hyman. Of the ninety-five, sixty-five are suburban and the other thirty in the business districts. Vaudeville and the legitimate report packed houses and investigation verifies their claims. Many of the downtown picture theaters are packed to the doors every night, rain or shine. Among the stock houses, three, four, five, eight and even ten week runs are given to worthy plays. Last year, Broadhurst's, "The Dollar Mark" ran for ten weeks to packed houses. Lee Arthur's new play, "The Fox", has just completed a five weeks' run in Burbank stock. "The Campus," a musical comedy local premiere, is now in the middle of its eighth week and is still running strong. If Philadelphia, Boston, or Pittsburgh gives a stock combination of three weeks it is a miracle in the dramatic world. "Why?" Mr. Othenian Stevens, Dramatic Critic on the staff of the Los Angeles Examiner, gives the following reasons:

"First: Los Angeles is a pleasure loving city, in that it loves pleasure of the right type. The citizens are an out-of-doors people. There are summer days when hundreds of thousands are at the beaches. Also because the weather permits theaters to keep open the year round.

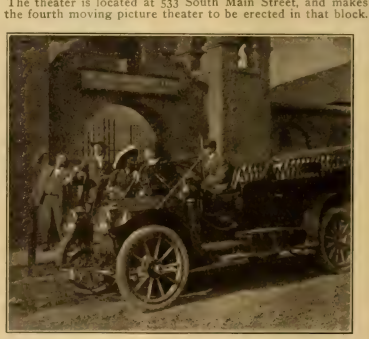
Secondly: Because the theaters are clean and respectable, and because the major portion of Los Angeles' population consists of well educated, refined people.

Thirdly: And by some considered the most important reason of all, because Los Angeles through its clean form of entertainment has wiped out the "Hoodoo" of city disgrace without knowing it. When Los Angeles was carefully combed a few years ago, the submerged tenth eradicated, and the noisy wine halls forced out of commission, people, who had frequented such places, turned to some other form of entertainment. They wanted to go somewhere to spend the evening. It was not long until they found pleasure in visiting the theaters. The result was that hundreds of young men and women, who had found enjoyment in visiting wine halls, found greater enjoyment in theaters, a form of entertainment kept clean by the city authorities. But whatever the cause, Los Angeles is enjoyinig the greatest theatrical prosperity of its history, and ranks first in the world in proportion to its size in patronizing clean forms of entertainment. Nearly every week sees a new theater permit taken out, and in spite of it the public cannot get enough amusement. To quote an incident. Last year the Fred Thomson Scenic Railway Co. built a roller coaster at Venice, a local seaside resort. The structure represented an investment of $45,000. In the remarkably short time of THREE WEEKS, the investment paid for itself and how many times it has paid for itself since, nobody but the managers know. Suffice it to say that four more similar enterprises are under way for the coming season.

W. H. Clune is manufacturing his own flashers for his electric signs on his various houses. The sign that he now has building by his own men for his Pasadena house will contain double flashers and is being manufactured in a private workroom in the rear of the Clune exchange. Mr. Clune's electricians are said to be the only electricians west of Chicago that are capable of doing this kind of work.

Something Big Coming?—Mr. Clune has lately been in consultation with Oliver Morosco and John Cort, coast theatrical men of international note. If these men decide to enter the moving picture field, money will flow like water in the race for exhibiting supremacy. Mr. Clune and Mr. Hyman are both spending hundreds of thousands of dollars trying to outdo each other in erecting picture palaces.

Woodsley.—The theater being erected for Mr. Woodsley, formerly proprietor of the Optic, is rapidly approaching completion. The house will be first class in every particular. The theater is located at 533 South Main Street, and makes the fourth moving picture theater to be erected in that block.



Entrance to Selig Studio, Los Angeles.

Scene from a picture soon to be released, entitled: "United by Moving Pictures." Left to right: George Hernandez, Robert Leonard, Eugenie Besserer, Hobart Bosworth.

BOSTON.

Manager F. H. Deering, of the new Back Bay Theater, Dartmouth Street, corner of Columbus Avenue, states that his house is doing extremely well since its reopening. The house is drawing a considerable number of ladies and children, especially at the afternoon performance. The house is in better condition now than when it was closed some months ago, as many needed alterations have been made.

Local moving picture theaters all reported the very best of business on Washington's Birthday. The Beacon and Old South Theaters advanced admission rates from ten to twenty cents, with a corresponding increase in the length of the performance.

The Back Bay, Bowdoin Square and Scenic Temple all ran continuous performances on the twenty-third.

Local licensed exhibitors remarked the fact that their releases showed no picture especially adapted for the holiday, while their independent competitors were featuring the Thanhouser picture, "For Washington," to the limit.

The Bowdoin Square Theater will show the Buffalo Jones picture on Monday, March 6. At present none of the local Boston houses have exhibited this film.

The Tremont Temple has become a regular mecca for lecturers, professors and others who deliver special lectures on foreign countries accompanied by motion pictures. Practically every day some lecturer comes along with a travel talk aided by "beautiful illustrated slides and fascinating moving pictures." As these engagements are often lengthened owing to good local reports, the public evidently is acquiring a taste for this special moving picture work. And the admission prices usually range from ten to fifty cents.

"Silver Satin Screens" and "Light House Pictures" are being featured in the lobbies of some of the local houses. However, the nearest that these houses come to showing mirror scenes, etc., is a coat of aluminum paint on the screens.

Several exhibitors, both of licensed and of independent films, were seen about town with serious faces. The cause for this unusual fact seemed to be due to the advertisement in The World of February 25, in which the National Film Manufacturing and Leasing Company announced their incorporation. "As one New England exhibitor stated: "It looks like a third party—ah—hum!" Exhibitors with grievances, either real or fancied, with their present film service (of which there are many, it seems) are now awaiting with some eagerness more complete details of this company. Local exchanges looked wise, but said nothing, when asked what they might know of the matter. In consequence, The World will be opened with unusual interest by certain exhibitors on Monday mornings. HENRY.

NEW ENGLAND NOTES.

On Thursday, February 23, a meeting of the directors of the Worcester Amusement Company was held, at which a reorganization of this corporation was effected. Edward W. Lynch, president of the company, will resign from his office, and will also tender to the remaining directors his shares in the corporation which was a controlling interest. In return for the stock, Mr. Lynch is to receive three theaters devoted to moving pictures and vaudeville, which have been operated by the company. Walter M. Leslie, of New York, is both vice-president and general manager for the Worcester (Mass.) Corporation, which is a large operator of theaters of all descriptions.

In a recent issue of The Moving Picture World the World's New England representative wrote of a moving picture and vaudeville house erected in Brighton, Mass., which was unable to procure a license, owing to considerable local opposition by the church. Alderman William H. Woods, who was principally interested in this house, went before the Committee on Mercantile Affairs in Boston on February 24. Mr. Woods charged that licenses for moving picture theaters in the Brighton district of Boston were used as rewards for political service. Alderman Woods also argued for a bill permitting appeals to the district police from the decision of the Mayor in the matter of such licenses. Mr. Woods also declared that he cared nothing so far as he is personally concerned, knowing that the present Mayor of Boston would never give him a license, but that he asked for the legislation as a matter of fair play to a widow who has invested a large portion of her money in this house, and is not permitted a license. Mr. Arthur L. Spring, for the City of Boston, opposed the bill as a matter of policy; he stated that no man can administer the affairs of so large a city as Boston without hurting the feelings of some people, and that, as regards the bill spoken of by Alderman Woods, it was just as well to allow present conditions to continue. The World's New England representative has positive knowledge that the chief reason for the refusal of the license by Mayor John H. Fitzgerald was due to the insistent efforts of certain Brightin clergymen against it, rather than from any political reasons. This matter was carried to the Mayor's office some months ago by both the clergy and the promoters of the Brighton moving picture theater. Although an executive may personally have no objections to a theatrical license being allowed, yet, as an executive, he cannot act adverse to the clergy, who are politically important, as they often can influence their parish to vote for the candidate favorably viewed by them.

Messrs. Cooney & Wallson, of Pittsfield, Mass., have completed their plans for the erection of a picture and vaudeville theater to be erected in that city, and expect to start operations by early spring.

George W. Graham, the new manager of the Palace Theater, Fall River, Mass., was the first to introduce daylight pictures in Fall River. The innovation has been successful, according to reports.

The Sheedy-Donovan Theater Company has been incorporated to own and lease theaters, and to engage in a general amusement business, with a capital of $5,000. M. R. Sheedy, A. L. Smith and J. H. Donovan, of Woonsocket, R. I., were the incorporators. Mr. M. R. Sheedy, or "Mike" Sheedy, as he is generally known, is one of the most active New England theatrical men engaged in operating moving picture and vaudeville houses. "Mike" Sheedy operates several "pop" vaudeville and picture houses, and is also identified with vaudeville booking agencies. Sheedy's Brockton theater is one of his best known houses.

Providence, R. I., in its present legislative sitting, has introduced a bill, which, if enacted as a law, will forbid the proprietor of any theater not on the ground floor, whose seating capacity exceeds 400, to permit a greater number of persons than that for which there is seating capacity to enter the theater. The bill has been referred to the Committee on Special Legislation for consideration.

The new Lawrence theater, Lawrence, Mass., was burned on February 18, with a loss of about $8,000. This house has been playing pictures and vaudeville, but on February 16 changed its policy to a stock company. The change evidently was the "hoodoo" over the house, as it burned two days later. The cause of the fire has not been ascertained.

The Colonial Theater, Lowell, Mass., will open Monday, March 6, playing moving pictures and vaudeville.

Plymouth, Mass., has a new theater devoted to licensed pictures and illustrated songs. The theater is using three reels of new pictures and two commercial reels.

Edward Morrill, general manager of the Bradley Theater, Putnam, Conn., presented the proceeds of his performances of moving pictures and vaudeville on February 23 to the Firemen's Association of that city.

After some minor delays the new Scenic Temple, Pawtucket, R. I., was opened to the public February 18. Mr. William Bradstreet, who operates a score of moving picture theaters throughout New England, is backing this house. The Scenic opened to packed houses with five reels of licensed pictures, a six-piece orchestra, and four acts of vaudeville. The house is large and first-class in every way, and should be a winner. HENRY.

IN THE MISSISSIPPI VALLEY.

The William Foster estate has sold the Grand Opera House, Des Moines, Ia., to Elbert Getchell, owner of the Princess and two other theaters, for $100,000.

A. G. Miller, of Girard, who operates a moving picture show in the opera house in that city, has purchased an interest in the amusement company of Gardner & Leonard, which operates a number of photoplay theaters.

G. H. Miller, former proprietor of the Crystal, Tuscola, Ill., has leased the Gebhart block, Decatur, Ill., and will open a moving picture and vaudeville show. The room is being remodeled at an expense of $1,200, and when finished will seat 450 persons.

Walter Davidson, of Havana, Ill., formerly singer at the Savoy, Springfield, is now with the Star Photoplay Theater, Lincoln, Ill.

Edwin Alpin and Robert Nichols have dissolved partnership at Farmington, Ill. Nichols retaining the Nichols, and Alpin opening a new picture show in the Grand Opera House.

Alterations are being made in the Town Hall, Camargo, Ill., including the installation of a stage, which will make it available for show purposes.

E. F. Newcomb has purchased the Burwell Opera House at Gibson City, Ill., for $8,000.

Herbert J. Lamb, of Jerseyville, Ill., has purchased a moving picture theater at Roodhouse, Ill.

The North Shore Theater Company, Chicago, has been incorporated with a capital stock of $7,000, to do a general theatrical and amusement business. Incorporators—Charles A. Selleck, Fred D. Silber and F. O. Havens.

The York Theaters Company, of Chicago, has been incorporated with a capital stock of $2,500, to do a general theatrical and amusement business. Incorporators—William J. Strange, George Henry, Mark

H. H. Tuggle, who was manager of the Colonial Theater at Springfield for a short time preceding its closing, has gone to Rock Island, Ill., where he will manage the Colonial. Mrs. Tuggle accompanies him as musician. Mrs. Tuggle is a graduate of the Wesleyan College of Music and is a capable pianist.

"The Midland Electric Theater wishes to secure a good vaudeville troupe of prank players and singers," says an advertisement from Midland, Tex. Certain trap-drummers under our observation are recommended as masters of the pranckings.

T. C. German, of Springfield, Ill., owner of several small town shows, was forced to suspend his work of exhibition at Athens because of an epidemic of scarlet fever. German is now operating several nights each week at Riverton, Delavan, and has announced that he will open at Greenview.

A balcony for singers and electrical chiming bells operated from a keyboard are features of the remodeled Liberty Theater at Peoria, Ill.

Moving picture shows at Dunlap, Ill., it is announced, will be suspended while a revival at the Methodist Church is in progress.

The Family Theater, Macomb, Ill., will raise the side walls and roof to allow the addition of a large balcony.

John Vance, of Quincy, Ill., has purchased the Orpheum, a picture show, at 616 Hampshire Street, Quincy, Ill., of W. O. McMahan, and having secured a five-year lease on the Urban Building, will remodel the entire structure.

The Vaudette, Springfield, Ill., has running water in a sanitary looking outfit conveniently near the entrance. This place has a tendency to run its fans every now and then, even if it is winter—something that is much appreciated by many of the patrons. There was an improvement in the class of songs sung here at the last visit of the World representative. The same thing was true of Loper's Lyric, in Springfield. The ballads here were cleaner than some the Capital City has been enduring, and they were as well, if not better received by the audience.

Green walls with red panels and other decorations, and ceiling of tan, are announced as features of the renovation of the Crystal Theater, at Paxton, Ill., in addition to the installation of 275 mahogany opera chairs.

Harold Crosby, formerly of Keokuk, Ia., succeeds Mrs. Archie Powell as singer at the Collonade Theater, Quincy, Ill.

"Do you attend these shows on Wednesday and Saturday nights? Then you know what real life is," is the latest assertion of the New Berlin (Ill.) Tribune, which likes the Wall Street Theater, of that village.

H. Van Gestel has opened a moving picture show in the Tripp Building, Belvidere, Ill.

Ten business men at Fort Dodge, Ia., are said to be behind a movement to build a handsome theater devoted to motion pictures and vaudeville. Option on a site has been secured.

The Columbia Theater, St. Louis, Mo., is now showing films in a lighted theater.

"All union employees" is the plan of Manager Harvey, of the Nasawan, Decatur, Ill., according to his announcement. The public is informed that any song desired will be sung on two days' notice.

The military parade, upon the occasion of President Taft's visit to Springfield, February 11, was the only occasion requiring the attendance of the majority of the visitors, and the photoplay houses reaped the benefit. A tour of the theaters in the afternoon showed most of them lining up the patrons outside.

Cannon and Freeze are giving a picture show Wednesday and Friday nights of each week at Edinburg, Ill.

Winkler's Theater, 1404 Main Street, Fort Worth, Tex., advertised the pictures of Ben Hur simultaneously with the performance of the big spectacle in a theater of that city.

Miss Anna Lannan, of Lincoln, has purchased the half interest of A. Marcucci in the Star Photoplay Theater at Lincoln, Ill. Eiler Jones, who owns the other half, will continue as manager.

The Virginia Amusement Company of Evansville, Ind. has been incorporated with capital stock of $3,000 to conduct theaters. The incorporators are J. Hamburg, Phillip Skora and Phillip Raphael.

Operators in Springfield, Ill. are talking of a union as the city is not organized. A scale of $18 a week will be demanded. In most of the theaters the projection apparently is worth this amount.

The Film Advertising Company of St. Louis has been incorporated with capital stock of $4,500. The incorporators are A. F. Rupenthal, Frank M. White and Fred A. Etroback.

F. K. Kiefner of Terre Haute, Ind. has purchased the Orpheum Theater at Casey, Ill. from George Spencer.

The Casa Blanca Amusement Company of St. Louis has been incorporated with a capital of $100,000. The incorporators are W. H. Richardson, John F. Albers and W. A. Fortner.

It has always impressed me that The Grand, Springfield, Ill. would be a good place to show plaintive pictures exclusively. There is a wonderful whir from the operating room not unlike the wailing of the wind on a cheerless day. This exponent of the Independents, still made at the last visit, a feature of the girl who whistled the chorous of the song. This house apparently would profit very much by appropriate music.

F. H. M

FUNERAL OF ARCHBISHOP RYAN.

Interesting Film By Lubin.

Dr. Ryan, the Roman Catholic Archbishop of Philadelphia, who recently died was extremely popular throughout the world. Had he lived it was thought by many, that he would have received the Cardinal's hat. His funeral gave the opportunity for an extraordinary display of ritual. All Catholic ceremonies are marked by great solemnity. The passing of a Prince of the church affords opportunity for great magnificence of ceremony. To do honor to Dr. Ryan in his obsequies, there was present a wonderful gathering of Catholic dignitaries. There were six Archbishops, led by Cardinal Gibbons of Baltimore, and the Apostolic Delegate, Dr. Falconio, who represents the Pope in the United States. Thirty American Roman Catholic Archbishops and more than 700 priests from various parts of the country also attended. The Cathedral was crowded with laymen of every creed assembled to pay tribute to the memory of a great churchman, a great citizen and a great man. It is estimated that round the four sides of Logan Square, where the Cathedral is situated, 25,000 people waited for hours to witness the passing of the procession.

The film gives a good idea of the appearance of the various grades of the Catholic Hierarchy in their official robes. To quote from a sympathetic newspaper account:

"There were the archbishops, whose flowing purple robes stood out in rich contrast with the deep crimson of the monsignori. In a temporary throne, opposite the vacant draped throne of Archbishop Ryan, sat Archbishop Falconio, dressed in the picturesque, fur-trimmed gray robe of the Franciscans of high rank, attended on either side by Monsignori Kiernan and McCort, as chaplains."

"The last of the distinguished prelates to enter was Cardinal Gibbons, clad in the brilliant red silk robe of his station, preceded by acolytes and followed by trainbearers, and by his two chaplains, Monsignori McDevitt and Sinnott."

"As priests and prelates wound their way, two abreast, out of the main doorway of the edifice and around Logan Square, the face of the dead Archbishop was revealed to thousands through the glass sides of a hearse as it was drawn slowly over them by four black horses. Heads were uncovered as the hearse encircled the square, with the van of the procession keeping pace with it. From the windows and roofs of the houses overlooking the scene hundreds of other persons caught a parting glimpse of the familiar features of the Archbishop whose death had filled all with profound sorrow."

"When the hearse finally returned to the front of the Cathedral the remains of the Archbishop were carried back into the Cathedral and lowered into the crypt beneath the main altar, where his predecessors, Arshbishop Wood and Bishops Egan and Conwell, already repose."

The solemn funeral of a Catholic Archbishop is, of course, a rare occurrence, as a number of these exalted dignataries is not great. Consequently, this film may fairly be regarded as one of extraordinary interest, especially when we come to consider the high personal esteem in which the late Dr. Ryan was held.

The picture is, we understand, of great photographic excellence. There are something like 12,000,000 Roman Catholics in the United States. To this large body the picture, therefore, makes a direct appeal. Even so, it also appeals to other sections of the community, because Dr. Ryan was a great American. It is fitting that the passing of a great American should be illustrated by means of suitable moving pictures. Such an event as the funeral of Dr. Ryan forms part of American history.

NEW ENGLAND PICTURE PERSONALITIES—No. 2. GEORGE IRVING APPLEBY.

By Henry.

The World's New England representative has chosen Mr. George Irving Appleby, general manager of the Star Theater, Boston, as the second exhibitor to be written of under the heading 'NEW ENGLAND PICTURE PERSONALITIES," as he is well and favorably known to the trade hereabouts, and stands for the advancement of the picture.

Manager Appleby broke into the theatrical business in 1898, when he connected himself with Mr. H. Price Webber, proprietor of the Boston Comedy Company. To quote Mr. Appleby: "I played 'lit parts' in that company, as it was almost my first bow to the stage." In 1900, after two years with the comedy company, Mr. Appleby went with Mr. Charles Atkinson, a Boston producer, who at that time was offering "Miss Petticoats." Mr. Appleby remained two years with this organization, the first of which found him playing a role in the show, and the second year saw him a stage manager for the same production. In 1902 Mr. Appleby toured the Middle States and Canada with the Harkins Comedy Company, playing repertoire.. After one year with this organization he was able to obtain quite an important role in the "Proud Prince" with Mr. E. H. Sothern. After one season with Mr. Sothern Mr. Appleby played a part in the "Mountain Climber," which was headed by Mr. Francis Wilson. These engagements took Mr. Appleby down to 1905, when he became affiliated with the J. J. Flynn Amusement Company as general stage manager for the productions of this concern. Mr. Appleby remained with J. J. Flynn threeyears, during which time he drew considerable favorable comment toward himself by the able way in which he managed and staged the "Vision of Venus," a play which was extremely successful at that time. In 1908 Mr. Appleby became general manager of Sheedy's Brockton Theater, a large house devoted to "pop" vaudeville and pictures, and remained there one and one-half years. In 1909 Mr. Appleby was induced to return to the J. J. Flynn Amusement Company to manage and superintend Sabtra Park, Taunton, Mass. After a trip with the "Broken Idol" and with the Boston Opera Company, Mr. Appleby accepted the offer to take charge of the Star Theater, Boston, succeeding H. F. Campbell. Mr. Appleby has proven himself an exceptionally able and astute manager while at the Star, and has proven that a successful moving picture theater manager must have varied experience before undertaking his duties.

George Irving Appleby.

Manager Appleby was the first moving picture manager in Boston to contract for a film service from the General Film Company, which called for eight first-run reels weekly, with a Monday and Thursday change. Mr. Appleby stands for clean ideas regarding lobby advertising, is discriminating in his choice of pictures and generally believes in a "glorious future" for the business. Under his management the Star has been unusually successful, and has a name for being a clean, high-class picture and vaudeville house.

JACK BINNS VS. VITAGRAPH COMPANY.

Just as we were going to press the jury announced their verdict, awarding the plaintiff $12,500 damages. Jack Binns, an Englishman, who was the wireless operator on the ill-fated steamer Baltic, who sent the famous C. Q. D. message, sued the Vitagraph Company of America for $50,000 damages for impersonating him by an actor and using his name in a film made by them in March, 1909, entitled "C. Q. D., or, Saved By Wireless." In this film Binns' name and fame was adequately presented, but as Binns was not consulted in the matter, he claimed that his feelings were injured $50,000 worth. The Vitagraph Company has appealed to the judge (Justice Greenbaum) for a stay, and will appeal the case.

THE SIZE OF THE PICTURE.

As far back as we can remember theatrical managers tried to present the players and the scenic effects in their natural sizes and shapes, and as correctly as possible. It remained for the motion pictures to upset all the old traditions and to present the plays in a distorted manner. Why? Because the exhibitors do not know any better they do not seem to have any thinking power and they always shield themselves behind this stupid answer: "The public demand it."

One exhibitor, who inquired the price of a mirror screen, gave such ridiculous measurements for a short throw that I asked him why he wanted such a large picture—a picture to show the figures one-third over their natural sizes. His answer was the same old story: "The public demands a large picture." No, Mr. Exhibitor, the public does not ask for a large picture, as the films have already enough defects without having to magnify them with a large picture. Perhaps an old man or an old woman, sitting in a rear seat, and with weak eyes, may have said: "Why don't they show a larger picture?" and Mr. Exhibitor, taking this remark as a general demand of the public, is willing to displease a whole audience.

I believe that the distance between the last seats of the galleries of the Grand Opera of Paris, of Covent Garden or London, of the La Scale of Milan, of the Metropolitan Opera House of New York, and of many more theaters, is longer than the longest throw of any moving picture machine in Paris, London, Milan, New York, etc., they do not add three or four feet to each actor to make them appear larger on the stage to please a few persons with weak eyes. Why should the moving picture show us actors from one-fourth to one-third larger than life size, when the opera and play have satisfied the public for generations with actors life-size?

There is no reason for large pictures, except to magnify the defects. If persons with weak eyes would do as when they go to the opera house, viz., take a pair of opera glasses with them, the moving picture managers would not tell us that the public demands large pictures. My own experience is that I enjoy much better a picture when seen at one of the manufacturer's show rooms, because there the short throw and small screen show the pictures under life size.

Well, the exhibitor is not the only one to blame, as the manufacturer is also guilty. There is nothing more absurd on the part of a manufacturer, nothing which destroys the art and beauty of a scene more than showing us greatly enlarged faces of the leading actors. The manufacturer does not care if he shows us the leading lady wearing the same dress for five years. No, such details do not concern him; all that he wants is to show us how she can twist her mouth and roll her eyes. In too many cases these enlarged pictures show all the defects of the make-up; but the manufacturer does not worry at such small details, as his ambition is to show us how his actors can roll their eyes.

Many beautiful scenes are marred by showing these enlarged figures, with the head touching the very upper part of the frame, and the feet missing. Some pathetic scenes, some love scenes, etc., would be far better without enlarged figures, as the surroundings, either in furniture or natural scenery, would give depth to the picture and add some charm, some closer resemblance to the natural.

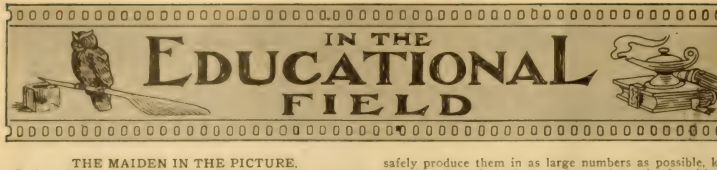
With so many of our managers wishing to give a big show in a few minutes, the operators often have to run a full reel in ten minutes, and you know what this means. Bad action on the screen. If to this you add a large picture, you naturally magnify these bad actions and make the actors appear as if they were mechanical toys.

The greatest success of motion pictures over the regular playhouse is that they show natural scenery, real water falls, trees, gardens, etc., instead of painted scenery. Yet with all these advantages to please the eye some manufacturers are willing to ruin the effects to show us what they call facial expression.

J. M. B.

AMERICAN HISTORY IN FILM.

American manufacturers, with few exceptions, have produced any films of a truly educational nature. The most notable exception is the Edison Company, who issued several which are still exciting national interest, and which have a lasting value. Now they announce a series showing the most important events in American history from the landing of Columbus to recent times. To add interest a story will be woven around the principal characters, but which will not overshadow the historical value or accuracy. The series will be issued at regular intervals, and besides being of great interest to the public, may ultimately find their way into the schools, where they will greatly facilitate the dry study of history.



THE MAIDEN IN THE PICTURE.

It is quite time that attention should be drawn to the maiden as she appears in all the pictures of to-day. When we say "all the pictures" we mean ALL for there is no difference in any make. One of the beautiful characteristics of the true maiden is her natural bashfulness, her genuine coy nature and retiring disposition. In love-making, nature with all its passion and fire is governed by laws, the true lover is a man and a gentleman, never in his life is his conduct more decorous than when trying to win the young lady of his choice; the maiden, while coyly receiving these attentions, even encouraging them, loses both self-respect and becoming dignity if she appears eager or in any degree bold; the kiss of plighted troth is almost sacred in its tenderness, and cannot be desecrated by rudeness and vulgarity; this hour of true love is one surrounding itself by all the highest and best laws of true and natural refinement. In the picture all this is changed; the lovers are free and bold; the maiden is too often too forward and plays her part with many advancements; the tender embrace becomes a hug, and the gentle kiss is changed to one of the vulgar "soul kiss" variety, showing an unhealthy experience rather than an innocent one.

Often when the lovers meet they rush at each other with outstretched arms, hug and kiss in a most unseemly manner, only pardonable in the meeting of a long-parted and well-related couple. The educational effect of this is extremely unwholesome; this is a place where a board of censors cannot comment; neither can education or nature direct; but truth and purity must be real. To the credit of the French makers it must be said that this outrage does not exist; the kiss on the hand or the forehead are the forerunners of a more ardent affection and intimate relationship.

Are the Americans more bold or vulgar than the French? Are these portrayals evidences of a national nature? We hope not; as if so, American customs suffer in the comparison. When it is remembered that the class of picture in which these scenes occur are most popular, and that they are seen by millions of young people, it is a matter of serious regret that they should be looked upon and probably imitated by them.

Education is not only in the realm of the technical and moral, but it reaches into all that is highest and best in life; actors and film-makers must be told, and they must remember, that they are teachers of a varied and wide order; if they teach that which is wrong they are responsible for much mischief, and deserving not only of criticism but censure; if they teach that which is right they shall receive both praise and commendation.

NOT YET GOOD ENOUGH.

Because of the many complaints from educational authorities to the effect that they have found the films of the moving pictures inadequate for true and thorough educational purposes, the writer determined by as wide and thorough examination as possible, to ascertain the real cause of this complaint. In the first place, evidence was sought as to the possibility of finding any pictures or subjects which had proved satisfactory. It is interesting to note that there are such, but at present they are limited to two or three classes—the scenic, those of natural history and the scientific. In each of these both satisfaction and pleasuer are found.

Looking for the causes why these subjects fill their educational requirements, it is found in the fact that they are in every case undisturbed by the scenario writer, stage manager or actor. In the scenic it is impossible to do otherwise than picture the real and the actual; this also may truthfully apply to the natural history series, where, no matter how varied or in what country, the fact that they are real is itself apparent; and by the addition of a few names or a few descriptive words, their whole objective is most satisfactorily fulfilled. In the scientific also, the illustrations are of facts and realities, and if any errors or faults exist they are to be found in the science itself and not in the reproductions.

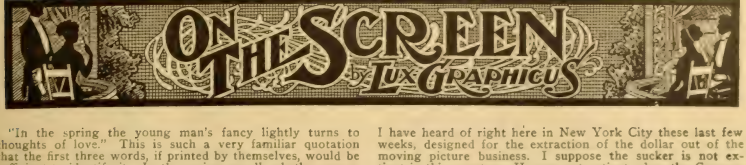
As the above-mentioned subjects are self-satisfactory there is every warrant and encouragement for manufacturers to safely produce them in as large numbers as possible, knowing that there is both a market and a school waiting for them free from criticism.

In all other subjects there are evidences of weakness, inefficiency and insufficiency which it is hoped this article may prove effectual in causing their removal, or a great blow will be dealt to the future of educational films, as there can be no doubt (and the subject must be dealt with plainly) there is not at present a truly satisfactory series at the disposition of those who wish to use them. The writer has tried and tested all that came within his reach and found them absolutely unsuitable for any purpose other than those of an ordinary exhibitive nature, especially when applied to teaching or truthful lecture or explanatory purposes. If an expletive word is necessary the writer has tried to use and follow in a didactic manner everything in the way of an educational film, and finds them unequal to the demands legitimately required of them.

The most conspicuous and glaring inefficiencies are in those of a Biblical and religious nature, probably because this is the largest and most difficult field; consequently, requiring the greater care and thoroughness. As it is manifestly wrong to point out an error without suggesting a remedy, where one is possible, so it would be wrong to declare the failure of the educational picture without showing wherein it fails, and wherein it may succeed. It is no disparagement of any firm to say that as at present constituted they are not large enough, neither have they scope enough to deal with such large problems; in a word, the subjects are too big for them. They have been trying to squeeze down and into their own limitations that which would admit of no such pressure, and in undertaking them they are attempting that which is beyond them in their present environment. America itself is not big enough to reproduce scenes which alone can be taken in Palestine. No scenario writer can improve upon the history already written, any departure from which spoils it and renders it untruthful. No actors or their supporters, if of Western and modern ideas, can expect to cope with the characteristics of an ancient and Oriental people. The life, manners and customs of the Saxons, Latins and Greeks are as diverse as the Poles, and no one can try to imitate the other without producing a burlesque or a farce.

It is a painful experience to view the presentation of any Biblical picture now before the world. Some of these pictures may have been produced under the supervision of competent advisers, but the crudities of the scenes are excruciating to the last degree. It will be far better from the standard of truth and the pleasure of seeing an approximation of the real, that the pictures now before us should die out rather than that any reproduction should cause them to carry their burlesque imitations into the minds of the rising generation. It is worth while making it clear that this applies to every subject appearing up to this date, so that no maker shall feels that this criticism is for "the other fellow;" at the time of writing there is no Biblical picture worth anything more than the passing pleasure which may be derived from a look at anything that appears on the screen. From the standpoint of that which comes under the heading of this department of the Educational Field, they are worse than useless.

In other subjects these crudities are not so manifest, their chief fault being incompleteness and lack of truthful detail. The remedy alone lies in larger scope, greater thoroughness, more competent instruction and supervision; evidently capable authorities are not used in sufficient force in preparation. The "making of pictures" seems to be the dominant characteristic of the manufacturer. In conclusion, it may be well to suggest to the makers of films of the class and nature of those referred to in this article, that they remember that their "factories" must become universities, their scenario writers must be professors of the highest order, their "plants" are seats of learning, and above all their students are numbered by the millions, and the instruction must be of the highest and most perfect order; and any filmmaker who does not aim to fulfil these requirements should not adulterate the world with productions not only valueless but harmful and misleading; we are looking for and impatiently expecting a new and worthy type of educational film.



"In the spring the young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love." This is such a very familiar quotation that the first three words, if printed by themselves, would be sufficient to identify it. In the spring we all, whether young or old, do many things besides turning to love. We wake from our period of hibernation and look forward to the future with renewed hope, vigor and enterprise. Just as the flowers bloom in the sping, so do we mortals, in a sense, bloom, and become fragrant with new ideas. Chiefly for the annexation and accumulation of that elusive integer known as the $. For yea, verily, are we not all out for that same $?

Spring being here, or nearly here, may account, I suppose, for the sprightliness, not to say, the fecundity of the moving picture mind in giving off ideas with regard to the future of the business. These last few weeks I have listened to so many schemes with the moving picture as a business basis, that, frankly, my mind occaionally whirls with the magnitude of interests involved.

For instance: There are my friends down there on Fifteenth Street. I mean the National Film Manufacturing and Leasing Company. They have certainly succeeded in one thing, namely, getting themselves talked about. I hope that neither they nor anybody else will think me unfriendly or hostile in hazarding the remark that their intentions are bold and picturesque. I wish them success. So far we have no really national concern in the moving picture business. There is room for one if it is carried out on NATIONAL lines. There is always room at the top, and on broad general principles, Messrs. Clapham & Company have a right to try and get at the top. Distinctly so!

But what is this merely "National" Company compared with one in course of inception, of which I am apprised? This is said to be international in its scope. It proposes to be not merely content with the moving picture trade of the United States, but to make an effort to get that of the remaining parts of the world. I quote literally from my information. It is a scheme of international importance and scope, and behind it there are all the fabled millions of Wall Street.

Oh, those fabled millions of Wall Street! When I was a humble dark-room worker at the ill-fated Cameraphone Company, the guiding spirits of that concern gently talked to me of the 10, 20, 30 and even 40 millions, if required. In the innocence of my heart (for 700 days ago I was vastly more ignorant of the moving picture business than I am now) I believed all this stuff. But alas and alack! Those same fabled millions never materialized. Desolation has reigned on Eleventh Avenue, though I hope and believe Friend Porter will lighten the gloom.

And there is more to tell about these March visions of moving picture Eldorados. Kinemacolor, according to the Allentown formula, has hardly caught on. But it again is to be taken in hand by the distributors of superfluous millions. Wall Street is said to be at the back of the new condition of affairs. I write this paragraph in no unfriendly or carping spirit. I want to see Kinemacolor, as I said many months ago, successful in this country, and if Wall Street finance can make it successful, I mean in the scientific sense, then my blessings be on Wall Street.

Do you think I have completed my catalogue of March phenomena? Oh, dear no! Within the last few days at least seven separate individuals have solemnly assured me that they have invented the only practical non-infringing cameras in existence, which will put the Patents Company out of business. Think of it! Count 'em! Seven of them! One inventor gently asks for the trifling sum of a half million dollars for his non-infringing camera!

Then comes my friend, William Friese Greene, still lingering in the land of the dollar—a possible magnate for some millions of them. Here's Greene with the color process and other ideas, and round him are, or were, capitalists having the potentiality of profiting by his inventions. I hope they will.

Now, reader, I am quite serious in writing this. I have not my tongue in my cheek. These are some of the schemes I have heard of right here in New York City these last few weeks, designed for the extraction of the dollar out of the moving picture business. I suppose the sucker is not extinct in this country. He was not extinct when the Cameraphone Company was about, when the Film Import & Trading Company made its bow, when the Cinephone Company was here in the land.

I suppose he is still extant in this very month of March, and I suppose he will again lose his money in that cheerful American fashion, which is the admiration of the world. Commend me to the denizens of this country for taking chances! One of the most successful business men I ever knew was an American man who was never happy unless he was taking chances, i. e., gambling. He was known to many of the Atlantic liner captains as a man who would bet on almost anything that was mentioned. He distinguished himself on one trip by backing a flea that he caught to jump further than a flea which a fellow passenger caught. I do not know how this bet was settled, but I do know that my friend made two or three fortunes in London. Then he returned to this, his native country, and lost every cent in land somewhere out West or Southwest. Had he been living he would surely have gambled on the moving picture. Which brings me to the point of this page of gossip. This: That it looks to me as if the picture had reached that stage of development when it is likely to become a mere counter in the hands of Wall Street and other gamblers.

THE ELDER AND THE DEACON.

Said the Elder to the Deacon: Have you noticed how our youth
Are less rapt in their devotion
Since those pictures set in motion
Have distracted their attention from the everlasting truth?

Said the Deacon to the Elder: I have noticed that our kids
Are now talking less of ball games,
And much less, in fact of all games,
Since the all-alluring picture to their infant fancy bids.

While it's true all games are sinful, all diversion just the same,
Leading downward to perdition,
Closing ears to admonition,
And thus offering obstruction to our own religious game;

Should the pictures be anathema, in this, our holy ire?
Have you never thought of fighting
The horn'd person we're indicting
With an element he thrives in, which the scientists call fire?

I take notice, said the Elder, of your learned hint, and say
I'll be with you in unfolding
And religiously upholding
Your "homoeopathatic" very practicable way.

So the Elder and the Deacon gave the subject gravest heed,
And they ordered up an outfit
Which could not with any doubt fit
The hitherto unthought of adolescent pressing need.

And it filled it in such measure that the wandering kids came back,
Bringing others that had never,
Or, at furthest, hardly ever,
Seen the inside of a show, or of a church, the more alack!

But the most surprising feature of the victory thus won,
Was that older wandering sinners,
And backsliding glory-winners
Came back to former graces on a Marathonic run.

H. J. Hoffman.

Fusewire Alloys.—Mr. John S. Gorham, St. Louis, Mo., writes: Down here we think a lot of the Trouble Department and its editor. Projection in this city, as I believe is the case everywhere, might be considerably improved. The difficulty has heretofore been that we have had absolutely no avenue of knowledge open. What little projection lore there was in existence was widely scattered and so deeply buried that to the average man it was unavailable. Knowledge of electricity as applied to projection was in the same boat. I firmly believe, Mr. Richardson, that it is largely, if not entirely due to the articles and books you have written that we owe such advancement in projection knowledge as has been made. Your answers have been almost uniformly excellent, and in a remarkably large percentage absolutely correct. Personally I have no use whatever for the man who says he never makes a mistake, I have even less use for the critter who, while unwilling or unable to do a thing himself (some of them are trying to do something now, but NOT until long after you set the ball rolling and practically forced the issue upon them) is eternally looking for errors in and trying to belittle the work of those who were first to come forward and do their best. I notice you are being subjected to this sort of annoyance and regret to see it. Pay no attention to it, Friend R., you are doing a splendid work. Don't be switched off by the biting of fleas. I have your handbook and, while it contains a few errors, such as might be expected in a new work as a whole I consider it worth ten times its cost. I believe any manager or operator would be the gainer by purchasing the handbook were the price ten dollars instead of one and a half. Those who criticise your book should mend their own fences for I have tabulated more than fifty mistakes and misstatements in the series of articles on electricity now running in the paper so industriously engaged in slandering your work. And now will you please give me an alloy suitable for fuse wires. If possible give melting temperature also."

I certainly appreciate your kind words and your loyalty, neighbor Gorham. You have expressed a great deal in a few words. Your statements and inferences are correct. The editor of this department does not, and never has laid claim to "Knowing it All." He has never made the least claim to perfection. To the best of his ability he has set forth, for the benefit of others, such things as he believes he does know. He is absolutely the first one in the projection field to have done so. He has opened up a channel for the exchange of ideas by and between operators and managers, scattered hundreds and even thousands of miles apart, which, principally, constitutes the value of the Trouble Department. He has forced others to attempt the same thing, apperently very much against their will. I have told you what Richardson has NOT claimed I will now tell you what he DOES claim: That he is absolutely the FIRST one to give any intelligent instruction in projection as applied to motion pictures. That he is a PRACTICAL OPERATOR who has largely tested out his theories in practice. That while he has made mistakes (who would not in so new a field) he has at least not hidden his light under a bushel, occupying a dog-in-a-manger attitude. Moreover (whisper) some alleged "experts" have made just as many errors as has he, while others talk in language the average operator can no more understand than he can understand Greek. In certain quarters the editor of this department has been criticised because he frankly admits he does not know it all and is sometimes mistaken. He has also been criticised because he does not try out everything, but submits many problems to his readers for experiment instead. He does this, not for the reason that he does not wish to make the experiments, for he would really enjoy it, but for the very simple reason that the day is not long enough to allow it. He works now on the average from 8 A. M. till nearly midnight and even then is unable to keep up with the work which demands his personal attention. Please understand that these explanations are most decidedly NOT MADE IN ANY SPIRIT OF APOLOGY. The editor of this department has nothing whatever to apologize for. The proof of the pudding is in the eating and although thousands of the handbooks have been sold, there has not yet one single purchaser intimated dissatisfaction with the book. On the other hand more than a hundred enthusiastic letters have been received as well as many hundreds of others commending the work. The Department readers are satisfied, if their letters count for anything, so of what account are the "flea bites?" One other thing I must speak of, and I am done, viz: one letter from an old operator (published in this paper during the illness of its owner as sub-editorial by mistake) informs us that all operators who seek information from a "trade paper" are either fools or knaves. This is mere drivel and nonsense. The man who penned those lines is the fool and knave, if any there be in that connection. What IS a "trade paper?" It is a paper which SERVES ALL BRANCHES OF THE TRADE, isn't it? Isn't improving projection "serving the trade?" Isn't it helping the manufacturer to popularize his product? Isn't it helping the actor? Isn't it helping the film exchange, the exhibitor, the Motion Picture Patents Company and the Sales Company? Doesn't the doctor, the lawyer, the architect, the mason, the carpenter, the electrician and every other craftsman and professional man discuss matters pertaining to their trade or profession through the columns of their trade or professional magazine? Are they fools or knaves for so doing? This same writer says "let the exhibitor pay the price and his projection will be properly attended to," or words to that effect. This statement merely shows the writer to be ignorant of the situation. Only a very limited number of REALLY HIGH-CLASS MEN, WELL AND THOROUGHLY VERSED IN EVEN THE LIMITED AVAILABLE KNOWLEDGE OF PROJECTION, ARE TO BE HAD. Taking the 10,000 more or less motion picture theaters now in existence, together with probably half as many more places where films are shown, I very much doubt if to exceed one in every ten houses could be supplied with such an operator as described above. More than this, under present conditions were the exhibitor to be obliged to pay $35.00 to $50.00 per week for such a man (they cannot be had for less) it would force out of business several thousand small town theaters, thus depriving the people in those small communities of the photoplay form of amusement. Of course raising salaries would improve matters very much—that we freely concede. In fact we have said that long ago. And now, St. Louis, I must apoligize for using your letter as the excuse for all this, but one thing just naturally led to another until the whole thing is set forth.

As to fuse wire alloys: there are several, three of which are as follows: Bismuth and lead 20 parts each and mercury 60 parts. Melts at 20 degrees C. Tin and bismuth 50 parts each. Melts at 160 degrees C. Tin 80 parts, Bismuth 20 parts, melts at 200 degrees C. Others are available but I believe these would serve.

Outside Shutters.—Mr. C. Henningsen, Stillwater, Minn., writes as follows: "It is with pleasure that I comply with your suggestion (page 363, Vol. 8). I am always glad to give the 'boys' the benefit of what little observation I may have made in the line of improvement of the ART of the business. The nine-inch outside shutter I attached to my Edison is a three-wing shutter, made of stiff cardboard painted black, and it works fine. I inclose a full-size sketch thereof. Anyone wishing can make one of a piece of iron, using a sharp chisel, a hammer and a wooden block. We put it on the new shaft, using the hub and set screw of the old shutter, as well as the plate thereto. We used three little brass bolts from old electric light fixtures to fasten the shutter to the plate. Mr. Hardinge did that job in five minutes. It cost nothing but our time; the satisfaction was ample payment. It was so simple that I quite forgot to menion it in my description last week. The old shutter traveled 15 inches each revolution, while the new makes 30 in the same time, and, as one old-timer said: 'It forgets to leave a flicker on the curtain.' It runs so fast that the eyes cannot detect any flicker. My old Edison lamp used to break from two to five condensers per week. It has reformed, and has not broken one in three years, though used every night at the Gem by Mr. Hardinge. This is how I changed it: I took a school ruler, put a piece of thin wood on the end with two small nails, went where the sun shone freely, put the flat of the new condensers (one at a time) on the ruler, in line with the sun's rays, to measure the focus; one is 7 inches, the other 5½. I put the 7-inch one next the carbons, so that the rays would meet at a point and travel in conjunction, then I set them in the frame and turned them until the rays came to the same point, right in focus; in that way I cut out the ghost on the curtain; in other words, the condensers must be adjusted so they send a single spot through the object lenses, or there will be trouble on the curtain. Do not take this as a scientific discourse. I have attempted to make my idea as plain as possible, and give it for what it may be worth, to the neighbors."

One thing I want to correct you on, Stillwater, and that is, that the fast peripheral speed of the shutter is not what eliminates the flicker. The elimination of the flicker is caused by the substitution of three wings instead of two, which brings the alternations of light and darkness so close together that the eye does not detect the change except in a general diminution of brilliancy. As to the condenser idea, I think you have some idea that you have not made quite plain, and I wish you would by sketch, illustrate what you have in mind when you say "so that the rays would meet at a point and travel in conjunction, then I set them in the frame and turned them until the rays came to the same point, right in focus." I think quite probably you have some valuable idea, provided you can set it forth in a little more understandable form. To make working pattern of the shutter just enlarge it in proportion to 9 inches in diameter. It runs with belly side of blades cutting the light.

Another Answer.—Delaware (name of town suppressed by request) contributes the following: "Some time ago I had precisely the same trouble Mr. Charles Catt describes on page 420, February 25th issue. I found the trouble lay between the intermittent tension roller and apron. Should the roller extend too far back on the sprocket it will cause the film to catch on the teeth when leaving the sprocket. Again, should the apron incline backward at the sprocket it will cause practically the same trouble. I would suggest that Mr. Catt adjust these parts carefully, and I feel sure that it will remedy the trouble. I have discovered a metallic curtain coating which has given surprising results. If Brother Burbaker, or other parties are interested, and it is not too much trouble, you may give my address to anyone asking for the same and enclosing postage."

We are indebted to you, Delaware, for your explanation of Neighbor Catt's trouble. Since receiving your letter I have examined the make of machine in question and find that what you describe could very well take place, though I do not remember having encountered that particular trouble.

A Few Remarks.—Mr. Eugene Cook, Adrian, Mich., writes: "I have been operating for something like ten years in several States and many houses, changing my location sometimes merely for the added experience. I have been in trouble many times, but always managed to wiggle through with the assistance of other operators. Before calling for help, though, I always tried to figure things out for myself. I have never asked you for advice, though I may some time, as I do not know it all and do not ever expect to."

Glad to hear from you, Friend Cook. You are wise in realizing that neither you nor anyone else knows it all. It is said that a little knowledge is a dangerous thing, and it is true, but it is, perhaps, even more dangerous to imagine one knows it all. The man who is well posted, but is aware of the fact that he has yet many things to learn, is in position to advance, while the man who imagines he has reached perfection will never get any further. Talking things over with other operators and exchanging views and ideas through the Trouble Department, adds to one's knowledge and to the knowledge of the profession in general. Therefore, the value of such intercourse is beyond dispute.

Film Exchange Practice.—Iowa (name of town suppressed by request) writes: "I would like a little information through the Trouble Department as regards the relation between an exhibitor and his exchange. Is it necessary for an exhibitor to take any films which the exchange happens to send? Shouldn't an exchange be able to supply certain films asked for? That is to say, couldn't an exhibitor make a list of desired subjects and have the exchange send them instead of the first thing that comes to hand? Also, could an exchange book a certain film for an exhibitor on a definite date? I would not be without the World and the Trouble Department for most anything I could mention."

As regards your inquiry concerning film exchanges, Iowa, the items named depend largely on two things: First, the kind of service you have contracted for; second, the spirit of accommodation on the part of the exchange. So far as the booking of films for definite dates is concerned, it is an exceedingly difficult thing to do. You must take into consideration the fact that the films are shipped from exchanges all over the surrounding territory. Now, supposing this to be March 1 and you want to run three reels of the new Vitagraph "Tale of Two Cities" on March 15. The exchange agrees to let you have them on that date. You proceed to advertise. Now, supposing on March 10 the exchange ships those films to a customer 200 miles away to be used one day. The customer, however, after he sees the films, wishes to and does retain them two or three days instead of returning them as he should. The exchange has acted in good faith, so far as it could, but you cannot get the films on the 15th. You curse the exchange for it, whereas the fault lies in another exhibitor, who has not done the right thing. The exchange, in order to make certain of your getting those films, would have to hold them in anywhere from two or three days to a week prior to your date, to avoid any possibility of disappointing you. This would mean either the loss of the rental on the films for all of that time, or that you would have to pay the rental for the time they were idle, as well as for the time you used the films. Do you see the point? As regards the general proposition of film service, there is only one way to buy service, and that is according to release dates. You no doubt keep all copies of the Moving Picture World on file. If you do not, you most certainly ought to. If you do, you are in position to know on what date any given film was released. Now, supposing you propose to use four films, changing three times a week. You go to the exchange and say that you want one film not more than five days old, one film not to exceed ten days old, one film not to exceed fifteen days old, and one film not to exceed thirty days old. Draw up a contract setting forth that at any time a film is found to be older than the time agreed upon you shall only pay half rate for that particular film. For that kind of a contract you will probably have to pay a somewhat higher rate than you pay for the ordinary slip-and-verbal agreement the average exhibitor has with his exchange. You can, however, be in a position not only to demand what you pay for, but to get it, or else pay only half rate. That is a common sense, businesslike way to purchase film service, and it is the only common sense way there is at doing it. The writer has managed a film exchange doing $1,800 worth of business per week, and he knows the amount of bunkair and the downright rankness there is in the film business. The average exhibitor buys his service as first run, second run, third run and commercial. The second run means anything under 15 to 20 days old, third run is a joke and commercial is a very bad joke. Apply business methods to buying film service, and while you may have to pay some advance in price, you will, nevertheless, be the gainer. Incidentally, it is not so certain that you will have to pay in advance if you meet on a businesslike agreement along the lines hereinbefore set forth, informing the exchange manager that it is either that kind of an agreement or nothing.

Send Them In.—Mr. Lester L. Conrad, Patterson, Cal., writes: "Find enclosed check for the Handbook. Let the good work of the Trouble Department go on. Am now working on some diagrams that I will submit for your approval in the near future. I am also trying out a few things and may have an interesting letter in a short time."

All right, old man. I will expect to hear from you in the near future, and will be glad indeed to receive the diagrams and result of your experiments.

Why, Indeed?—A certain publication recently asked, editorially the question, "Why, in the name of common sense, if operators wish to know something about their machine, don't they write to the machine manufacturer?" For the benefit of the questioner, let it be known that operators have discovered the fact that through the Moving Picture World their questions are answered in such manner that they can be understood, whereas, the usual answer from the manufacturer expends ten lines in trying to convince the operator that there really isn't anything at all the matter, and that nothing could possibly be the matter with "their machine," and two lines to an alleged answer to the operator's question, the said two lines being couched in language it would require that one be a civil engineer to understand.

Travel Ghost.—Princeton, N. J., writes: "I am running a latest model Edison machine with two wing shutter. When I frame clear up there is travel ghost in the right-hand bottom corner, as you look at the picture from the audience. When I frame clear down the travel ghost changes to the top left-hand corner. I have tried moving shutter blade both ways, but when I get it out at the bottom it is worse at the top, and vice versa. I do not think it can be gotten out at all; the shutter must not be large enough. The picture is fine with the framing lever central. I have a 4-inch E. F. projecting lens on a 58-foot throw, D. C. 110, pulling 40 amperes, one 7½ and one 6½ condenser. What condenser would you advise me to use, and how may I tell what size condenser is best? Is there any table for finding the required focal length. I certainly should like to know, as with the two I am using it is necessary to keep a very large spot to get a good picture. My projection lens is perfectly clean, as are also the condensers. The lenses are the ones which came with the mahine."

You are right, Princeton. If you have correctly described the effect then the blade of your shutter is not wide enough. You can remedy this by riveting on a piece of metal, making the blade somewhat wider; say ¼ inch or so. I would suggest, however, that you make an outlined sketch of your shutter and send same to the Edison Company, Orange, N. J., describing the effect, and asking for a shutter with wider blade. You might try two 7½-inch condensers with that 4-inch lens. They possibly would give better results than the 6½ and 4½ you are now using; before doing that, however, try pulling your lamp-house back as far as it will go; also be sure that everything is in perfect line from the arc to the front lens of the objective. No, so far as I know there is no table such as you ask for. Theoretically the E. F. of condenser and objective should be the same, but that is impracticable.

..Galvanized Wire.—St. Joseph, Mo., inquires: "Will you please tell me what size of ordinary galvanized wire will carry the following amperages: 16, 26, 30, 35 and 45? Also, can you tell me the number of watts that will be absorbed per meter of a given size wire?"

The best authorities I can find, St. Joe, give the diameters of the wires you require as follows: An ordinary galvanized wire 120 mills in diameter will carry 16 amperes of current; 162 mills in diameter, 26 amperes; 175 mills in diameter, 30 amperes; 193 mills in diameter, 35 amperes; 205 mills in diameter, 45 amperes. But it must be understood that there will be considerable heat produced in forcing these amperages over the above-named sizes of wire. It will be observed in the above that the result does not depend on the material of which the wire is composed, on account of the fact that the absorption of energy is inversely in proportion to the square root of the specific resistance, though the resistance of one foot of any given wire will vary directly as the square root of the specific resistance. For instance, it will require 3½ times as many amperes to heat a copper wire of given diameter as will be required to heat an iron wire of equal size, this being due to the difference in the resistance of the wires, the energy used in overcoming the resistance being the same in each instance. The above is by authority of Mr. D. K. Morris in an article on "Construction of Resistances," written for "The Electrician," London, Vol. 33, page 107. As to your second question, I do not think I quite understand it. However, the authorities say that any given wire 20 mills in diameter will absorb one watt per meter; 40 mills in diameter, 2 watts per meter; 54 mills in diameter, 3 watts per metier; 80 mills in diameter, 4 watts per meter; 104 mills in diameter, 5 watts per meter. I do not know whether this is what you want or not, but if it is not you will have to make your question more clear.

Several Things.—Mr. M. M. Maddern, Willows, Cal., writes as follows: "Although this is my first letter to the Department, I have my troubles. By the assistance of the Department and the Handbook, together with personal application on my own part, I have so far been able to master the situation. Following the sketch of Friend Hepburn's motor rewind, published in the Department recently, I built one, and must say it works fine. Have added a circuit breaker which starts motor when brake shoe is applied to reel, and stops motor when released. Thanks to all parties concerned. Am submitting for your inspection and criticism a sketch of the way I have my 110 volt alternating current hooked up. I believe this would be prohibited by the underwriters in some places. However, the scheme works fine. I have no trouble with poor contact, as is so common when using adjustable rheostats. By the use of the jumper knife switches I am able to work my amperage up or down, as circumstances demand, while sitting in operating position, as the switchboard is bracketed to the ceiling directly above the machine, lamp leads falling direct to lamps. It was impossible to get knife switches here to answer the purpose, so I took parts of other switches and made one. You will note the contact end of each knife is mounted on a contact blade, so that no matter which division is cut in the current will pass over this blade to the lamp."

I see no reason, Friend Maddern, why your device should not be approved by the underwriters, provided, of course, the rheostat, coils, switches, etc., were properly protected. The thing really amounts to an adjustable rheostat in a very excellent form. So far as I am concerned, I would not hesitate to recommend it, provided, as I have said, it be properly installed. By properly installed, I mean that the rheostat switches, etc., be of such capacity and design that when switches No. 4 and No. 1 are closed, thus giving the maximum supply of current, neither the coils or anything else would be overloaded. I do not know, of course, whether you mean to use two long coils of resistance wire, as shown, or merely use that as an illustration, intending to really use regular rheostats connected in multiple. But whichever way it might be done, the thing is all right if, as I have before said, properly done. It might, of course, in some cities be prohibited by local rules or laws.

Carbon Setting.—Mr. Fred. L. Sineral, Clarksburg, W. Va., writes: "Enclosed find check for Handbook. I have read what others have had to say about setting carbons straight up and down, but I find I can get the best results by setting them as per sketch. (Sketch shows practically the D. C. setting.—Ed.) I tried setting them straight up and down, but light wasn't good and the picture was full of ghosts with black and blue streaks across it. With the lamp angled as shown and the bottom carbon a trifle advanced over the top one, I get a good, clear light. I have a few questions to ask, but will wait for the Handbook, and probably will find them answered therein. If not, will write again. I thank you cordially for all the information received through the Moving Picture World."

Your letter, Friend Sineral, requires little or no comment. As far as the carbon setting is concerned, I have a great many letters saying practically the same thing. I have tried the up-and-down set myself long ago, and have never been able to get good light with it, nor do I know of anyone who has.

Operators.—Fort Smith, Ark., writes: "I wish to know if you furnish operators to theaters?"

I do not, Fort Smith; but I can furnish you the names of a number of operators who I believe to be first-class men. Some of them are located not far from your neck of the woods.

Poor Light.—Nebraska (name of town suppressed by request) writes: "Being a constant reader of the Trouble Department, I feel privileged to ask for information. We have our own lighting plant and are doing our best to please the people. Up to date we have succeeded. Of late, however, we have been bothered to some extent with our light. Although our dynamo is run at the same speed every night, some nights the light is poor and we cannot get a clear field. Sometimes I think probably the carbons are to blame for the poor light, but whether this is so or not I do not know. We have a Motiograph No. 2, 65-foot throw, picture 8 by 11. Can you locate the trouble and suggest a remedy?"

You say your dynamo runs at the same speed all the time. How do you know this? Have you a reliable volt meter, or have you tested your armature shaft with a speed tester? If your volt meter is reliable and it registers the same all the time, then the trouble is not in the dynamo. This is the first thing for you to find out. The trouble does not lie in the carbons, unless the difference is caused by setting them wrong. I am inclined to believe from what you say that the voltage is not held up uniformly all the time. You must remember that a drop of from 4 volts will seriously affect your light. Possibly the dynamo belt is slipping. But until I know that the voltage is constant, there is no use in speculating as to what might be. If you positively know the voltage remains constant, write me again and I will go more deeply into the matter.

Has Ideas.—Mr. C. J. Riley, Burlington, Vt., writes, submitting sketch of a Powers No. 5, to which he wishes to attach outside shutter. He says: "This is a very poor diagram of a Powers No. 5, but will give you some idea of what I wish to try. I am one of the boys who have a lot of ideas and have tried some of them out successfully. For instance, I have a new carbon jaw which I have used three months seven hours every day, and have had no trouble of any kind. If you wish I will send you a sketch of it."

We will, of course, be glad to receive sketch of your carbon jaw, Neighbor Riley. On page 809, October 8, 1910, issue, you will see a photograph of the Powers No. 5, to which Neighbor Craig, Operator Lyceum Theater, Seattle, Wash., shown quite clearly and is practically the same as your sketch illustrates. There is no doubt but what the shutter will work all right, but it will be more or less in the way on that side of the machine.

Resistance.—One who signs himself "Electro Resisto" (New York City) contributes the following: "Noting that there is considerable inquiry as regards the action of resistance on A. C. and D. C. circuits, I take the liberty of using your space for the enlightenment of those who are in the dark on this subject. First, let us treat the subject from the D. C. end by finding why a rheostat is used in conjunction with the arc lamp. If we were to take a D. C. arc, the resistance of which is about 1⅝ ohms, and connect the same to 110 volt D. C. supply wires, we would have, according to ohms law $\frac{110}{1⅝}$ which equals 61 amperes flowing across the arc at 110 volts' drop. Now, with an arc having 110 volts' drop across it, we would have a light that would be spluttering and spitting and hard to control. Also, an arc having 61 amperes flowing across it would, in most cases, be a violation of the underwriters' rule (not if the wires and appliances are big enough.—Ed.). Laboratory tests of the voltage of the arc show it to be at its best between 45 and 65 volts, 45 volts being the better, with 25 amperes flowing through the arc. If we subtract 45 volts (active voltage of the arc) from 110 volts, the supplied voltage, we would have 65 volts in excess of that required. To get rid of this excess voltage we shall have to cut in series with the arc a suitable resistance to give us 25 amperes at a drop of 65 volts, which is the useless voltage. We shall now proceed to find out, according to ohms law, what the resistance of the rheostat should have to be to give 25 amperes at 65 volts' drop. Ohms law says to find the resistance, divide the voltage drop by the current required, which gives us $\frac{65}{25}$, which equals 2⅗ ohms, the resistance of the rheostat. Now, let us figure out the resistance of the arc: $\frac{45}{25}$ equals 1⅘ ohms. Now, we have a total resistance in the circuit of 2⅗ plus 1⅘, or 4⅗ ohms. Ohms law says to find the current, divide voltage by resistance, which gives us $\frac{110}{4⅗}$ or 25 amperes across the arc. To find resistance, divide voltage by amperage, $\frac{110}{25}$ gives 4⅖ ohms. To find voltage, multiply amperes by resistance, 25 times 4⅖ equals 110. Now, let us turn to the A. C. end. We will still require a 45-volt drop across the arc at 25 amperes on connecting up our rheostat and arc lamp to 110 volt 60 cycle A. C. circuit and striking the arc (if our rheostat has its resistance units wound inductively, that is to say, spiral-shaped, like a door spring, as in the Powers, Edison and Underwriters' rheostats), we do not get as good a light as on the D. C., for the following reasons, which I shall endeavor to explain in non-technical terms. In all A. C. circuits (of which the rheostat is part) that are wound inductively, or spiral-shaped, we have self-induction or inductive resistance set up which hampers the flow of current and prevents it from rising to the same value as would direct current with the same voltage. That is, they act, with A. C., as additional resistance in the circuit by setting up a counter E. M. F., or voltage, in the opposite direction, thereby causing a choking or bucking effect in the rheostat. By cutting out one or two coils in the rheostat you will secure a current of 25 amperes across the arc, the same as on D. C. The reason for cutting out one or two resistance coils is this: The rheostat has a given ohmic resistance of 2⅗ ohms when used on D. C. but when used on A. C. it has this ohmic resistance plus an inductive resistance (set up by counter E. M. F.—of about ⅕ ohm). As this inductive resistance cannot be cut out, we shall have to cut out its equivalent in ohmic resistance, which is one or two coils, according to the type of rheostat used. If you should happen to get a non-inductive rheostat (such as the Standard or Ward Leonard) with the coils wound non-inductively, that is to say, zig-zag, not spirally, it will work the same regardless of the kind of current or frequency used. I trust I have made myself clear, and if my slight knowledge of the electric arc will enlighten the one who desires further information regarding the use of transformers, economizers, compensars and choke coils, I am at your service."

I have given the above more to promote discussion than anything else. I do not agree with some of the writer's deductions. Conceding that where wires are wound spirally, using A. C., there is self-induction set up, still, practical rheostat men—manufacturers—claim the magnetic kick in a 25 ampere spiral coil rheostat is only sufficient to cause about ½ volt drop. As to the proposition of burning a projection arc on 110 volts with only the arc resistance, the thing is not impractical, as the writer intimates, it is impossible from the fact that during the time the carbons are in actual contact in striking the arc there would be (aside from the slight line resistance) no resistance at all; hence a dead short circuit. During this time there would be, supposing the fuses to be large enough, sufficient amperage to enormously overload the wires—a thing not allowable under the code. Glad to have the other articles, however.

Turning Sprocket.—Sioux City, Ia., asks: "Is the teeth of the intermitten sprockets of all three of my machines are somewhat undercut. Is it permissable to turn them around, thus presenting the opposite side of the teeth to the film?"

Yes, Sioux City, you may prolong the useful life of your sprockets by reversing ends, but be sure the old pin-holes bring the sprocket teeth in exact line with aperture tracks after reversal, or else drill new holes. The undercutting is caused by the pull of the film against the teeth. An alleged critic recently "corrected" me in this by stating that it was the "friction" instead of the pull which did the damage. What would the friction be but for the pull?

New Theater.—Mr. Geo. C. Knox, Johnstown, Pa., writes: "Mr. George Panagotacos is about to install a new picture and vaudeville theater here in Johnstown. He is also the proprietor of the Stadium Moving Picture Theater, which he will continue to operate. Location of new house is considered best in the city. The seating capacity will be between 900 and 1,000. Ground is already broken, and he would like to hear from supply houses, decorators, manufacturers and film supply houses. The house when completed will represent an outlay of $50,000."

Glad to hear of the installation of so expensive a house in Johnstown, and sorry to know it is not to be for pictures alone. You will, no doubt, receive plenty of literature from various supply houses, decorators, chair manufacturers, etc. If not, I would respectively refer you to the advertising pages of the Moving Picture World, in which will be found the addresses of any number of the people you wish to get in touch with. Mr. Panagotacos' address is 505 main Street, Johnstown, Pa.

Transformer.—California (name of town suppressed) writes: "We are thinking of putting in a transformer, stepping the voltage (110) down to about 40 volts, using no rheostat. Do you think it would work? Would it blow a fuse if there were no resistance in series with the arc? What would a transformer like that cost? We also have trouble with our stereo. slides being out of focus in the lower right-hand corner."

There are a number of transformers made for the purpose you descibe. I shall have two or three of them send you literature concerning them. These transformers are designed to work without resistance, except that offered by the arc itself. Their cost is from $50 to $75. They last almost indefinitely, but, of course, can only be used on alternating current. As to the stereo, slide trouble, it might be due to several things. First, see that your condensing lenses are perfectly clean and that they set square with each other. Second, see that your slide carrier is square with the condensers. Third, examine your objective lens carefully and see that there is no trouble there. Fourth, see that the center of your objective lens is level with the center of the condensers and that the objective and condenser lenses set approximately square with each other.

Three Wing Shutter.—Mr. B. H. White, Manager Newport Opera House, Newport, Ark., writes: "Enclosed find check for Handbook. To say I am an interested reader of the Trouble Department is expressing it mildly. With its assistance I pride myself that the Newport Opera House puts on as good a picture as could be expected with the class of films we run, namely: 60-day Association reels. I have an Edison machine and am thinking of attempting the installation of a three wing shutter, as outlined by some of the operators in the Department. Would you advise the attempt? And do you think it to be an improvement over the old two wing shutter?"

Most certainly the three wing shutter is a distinct and decided improvement over the two wing, provided the shutter be properly proportioned. You do not say what model your Edison machine is. If it is the late Model "B", I believe the Edison Company will be able to supply you with a three wing shutter which can be put on without sending the machine to the factory. I am not sure of this, but I believe it is the fact. If you have an exhibition model ma- a three wing shutter which can be put on without sending the machine to the factory. I am not sure of this, but I believe is is the fact. If you have an exhibition model machine, then I believe you would have to make your own shutter. I could not offer advice in this matter without knowing something of your ingenuity and ability as a mechanic. I think, however, before attempting that particular stunt I would write one of the operators who have installed these shutters, asking that they send outlined sketch of the shutter, which I am sure they will be glad to do when you will enclose postage. Later, you will find sketch of a three wing shutter such as you want in another part of this week's department.

A Newsy Letter.—Mr. James Martin, Spencer, Ia., writes: "Enclosed find money order for Handbook. I am a constant reader of the World, having derived therefrom much valuable advice and information. I have been operating in this state and Minnesota for the past four years, but am continually learning something new in regard to projection. Salaries around here are very low and very few card men are to be found, though we hope for betterment in the not far distant future. I have been experiencing considerable trouble with condensing lenses. I trust the Handbook will put me right, but if not you will hear from me shortly, with request for information through the Department. Now, for a little news as regards exhibitors. Deaver & Sheehan have purchased the Unique Theater of this city from Mr. Wm. Cornish and have rearranged the house, making it the neatest in this locality. The Lyric Theater, of Estherville, Mr. C. Steddman proprietor and manager, has just installed a new Standard machine. The Magic, at Algong, Mr. Fargo proprietor and manager, has just put in a new Motiograph. Mr. Angle, of Cedar Rapids, is to open a picture theater in Ft. Dodge, using the equipment from the Princess Theater, Cedar Rapids, the front of which was recently destroyed by fire. The operating booth and front of the Gem Theater at Forest City, Ia., was destroyed by fire a week ago; no one seriously hurt, though the operator received a few slight burns. The booth of the theater at Alden, Minn., was destroyed by fire, February 4th; loss unknown. If room can be given me in the Trouble Department I will send complete instructions for making a type slide for advertising purposes, one that I have never seen made by any other operator or manager. They are very simple and make an attractive slide, far more so than those made with pen."

Many thanks for the news notes you have sent in, Neighbor Martin. We shall, of course, be glad to have more at any time; also the description of the slide you speak of.

Square Deal.—Oskaloosa, Ia., writes: "Find enclosed money order for Handbook. I am trying to learn to be a first class operator, but do not believe I can learn it from the operator here, as he either cannot or will not explain how he does anything. He is one of the kind that do not believe in schools for the operator, or anything of that sort. Would you please tell me what a course at the Taylor School would cost? I take great pleasure in the Moving Picture World each week.

It is, of course, very discouraging to the young man who is trying to learn a trade or profession to be up against the manager sort of a man who doesn't believe in learning anything himself, and does not believe in telling anybody else anything that he may happen to know; also one who doesn't believe in instruction books or instruction of any kind. If he is correct, then we might as well throw our libraries in the Atlantic Ocean and drive all the school teachers out of the country. As to the correspondence course in Mr. Taylor's school, I believe he charges only $5 fo rit, and it certainly is worth that amount of money. You must understand, however that the regular correspondence courses, such as for instance one of the ourses of the International Correspondence School gives, costs anywhere from $40 to $75 or $80. You cannot expect anything very complete for $5. All I would care to say is that I would consider it well worth that amount of money to the man seeking to learn.

Doesn't Explain.—Mr. Geo. Proux, Saginaw, W. Saginaw, Mich., writes: "Enclosed find sketch of a scheme which I thought might be of service to operators, assisting them to thread up more quickly, especially with a dark film, or during a song."

I hold the sketch and description for further information, Friend Proux. What I cannot make out is where you intend locating the lamp. Is it to be in front of the lens so as to throw light through to enable the operator to frame his picture properly? Or, is it simply a scheme to illuminate the operating room without bothering to turn on the lights with ones hand? Your description and sketch is quite clear, but I could not judge of its value without first knowing in just what way you propose using it.

Pittsburg.—From Pittsburg, Pa., comes a letter signed "Pittsburgh Operator," which certainly does hand the moving picture game of that city a terrific wallop; also, the License Board of Pittsburgh is lambasted. If the charges contained in the letter are true, there is certainly urgent need for a whole lot of fixing in the smoky city. Unsigned letters of this kind will not be printed. Moreover, I will not print that kind of a letter without proof of the facts. I should like to hear from Pittsburg, and if conditions are as described in the letter at hand, they will most certainly be given publicity in the Department. All I want to know is, does that letter contain absolute facts? If Pittsburg has an operator's union I will be glad to forward the letter to its president for verification.

CHICAGO FOR THE CONVENTION.

Chicago, the home of conventions, is starting to wake up at the prospect of a moving picture convention. If Chicago cannot offer the ocean waves and the boardwalk of Atlantic City, it is the most convenient city, being a great center easily reached from the East, West, North and South, and Chicago has a reputation for big things. Though Chicago can offer the best hospitality, big hotels, etc.—in fact, everything to make a convention a grand success—Chicago does not seem to be the ideal city for a reunion of moving picture men, unless the Chicago exhibitors decide to make quick improvements to their theaters. We have not in Chicago a single theater that can be called an ideal moving picture house, to be taken as a model. Sure, we have the Orpheum, the very best house to show first run pictures, with the most appropriate music and sound effects; but as the Orpheum was not built for moving pictures the picture can never be shown there at its best. The Lyric is good, but it is small and no better than what we find in other cities. Madison Street, in the loop district, offers us four houses with no special attraction, except poor music, bad curtains and a lot of cheap vaudeville. Another house in the loop is the Majestic, the well-known moving picture "chaser," and if we should invite the convention to visit the Majestic 95% of the members would run away and give up motion pictures for good. Let us hope that if the film men and exhibitors have the coming convetion in Chicago that the Chicago exhibitors do something to impress the visitors. J. M. B.

HERBST FULL LIGHT SCREEN.

Our representative was present at a demonstration, a day or so ago, of the Herbst Full Light Picture Screen. This took place at the New York Roof Garden, New York City, at about 2 P. M., when the afternoon sun was coming in strong at the southwest corner of the roof garden. This sun, coming through the windows, made a very strong factor against the projection of any picture. In fact, it was one of those sun glares that causes one to turn the eyes away from it. Through the north windows there came the usual soft north light, which, while not as strong as the sun glare from the south, was sufficient to enable anyone to read a newspaper in any part of the roof garden.

With this obstruction, or sunlight opposition, a picture was projected on a white screen, through the new Herbst machine, the throw being 93 feet from the machine to the curtain. We were looking at it with a very critical eye. Possibly, if we had not come there for critical purposes we would have watched the pictures and gone away with the idea that they were just as good as any pictures we ever saw projected. By this is meant that most people, when they look at a moving picture, do not take into consideration anything about extraneous light that may be diffused about an auditorium. The public, as a whole, knows very little about projection, as a fine art or a science. They judge only by the results, and, therefore, it is our intention to judge the Herbst Full Light Screen only by the result.

The result, as stated above, is that the Herbst apparatus projects a picture which equals, in a lighted auditorium, most pictures which you see in a thoroughly darkened auditorium. This result is brought about by definite principles of projection and with special machinery. There is no buncome or scientific secrecy about the Herbst process; it is a machine which you can see sitting in the operator's booth, alongside the regular projection machinery. There is no mysterious way of shading the house lights or of painting the screen, nor is it necessary for one man to install it alone. It is a simple proposition. The exhibitor buys the machine and installs it himself. It is not necessary to have a special wizard come on from New York with the magic "know how" and a lot of other occult stuff that attaches to some of these secret installations of daylight screens.

The Herbst Full Light Screen is just exactly what it claims to be—a full-light picture screen that is not affected by house lights or diffused daylight in any way. Everything is in plain sight. There are no great secrets visible to the eye, at least. It is something tangible and which no doubt will be an immediate success.

"HENRY VIII." ON THE SCREEN.

Last week we referred in tones of commendation to a British made motion picture which we think will be popular with this public. It was a fight picture. The Solax Company are, we understand, likely to put this fight picture on the United States market. We would like to write even more approvingly of a recently made English film, illustrated particulars of which we have just received from W. G. Barker, of the Barker Motion Picture Photography, Ltd., London. This is a film of "Henry VIII."—not a made-up studio picture, but a film photograph of the actual play as it is being staged at the present time at His Majesty's Theater, London, by Sir Herbert B. Tree and his company. In this play there are four great scenes, including Cardinal Wolsey's palace and Westminster Abbey. The principal speaking parts are enacted by thirty of the leading actors and actresses in Great Britain to-day. Mr. Bourchier played Henry VIII.; Sir Herbert Tree played Cardinal Wolsey; Miss Vanburgh, Queen Katharine, and Anne Boleyn is played by Miss Laura Cowie. The cast is full of names well known on both sides of the Atlantic.

Mr. Barker was successful in getting Sir Herbert Tree and his company, scenery, effects down to his studio; in fact, the entire production was shipped from theater to studio. So the film was made. We gather from our trans-Atlantic contemporaries that the picture is a great success. It is unique in the fact that it is good for all time, for the stage characteristics of the leading British actors and actresses are preserved in a moving picture.

We refer to this film in another article headed, "The Open Market," published elsewhere in this week's paper. We would like to see the picture here, and we hope we shall. We might mention that Mr. W. G. Barker himself will shortly come from England to the United States probably on business connected with this film and other matters. Such a picture, of course, is of great dramatic value, and also of some educational interest, for it teaches by means of the film some momentous periods of English history preceding the great reformation.

Airdrome and Picture Theatre Managers make new patrons for your Theatre, increase your business by offering them a brilliantly lighted theatre, and be the first one to install in your City the

Herbst Full Light Picture Machine not a curtain, not a sizing on a curtain, not a glass screen, but an Independent machine

Demonstrated on the N. Y. Theatre Roof Garden

the best money getter for the moving picture man, and absolute safeguard against loss of life through fire, stampede or other causes, and endorsed by Press and Clergy.

FOR TERMS

WRITE, WIRE OR CALL THE PAT CASEY AGENCY

Putnam Building, New York City

NESTOR FILMS — MADE BY DAVID HORSLEY

NESTO

"Rarely Equalled—Never

IF IT'S A NESTOR
IT'S GOOD

TREAT YOUR PATRONS

By Treating Yourself To The BIGGEST MONEY-GATHERER
and
The Greatest Foto-Military-Drama
Ever Produced

"IN THE COMMISSIONED RANKS"

RELEASED WEDNESDAY
March 8th, 1911

LENGTH, 978 FEET

ORDER IMMEDIATELY! FIGHT FOR IT, if you must, BUT GET IT! GET IT!

COMING!
Wednesday, March 15th, 1911
"WAS IT WORTH WHILE?"
A Film with a question mark,
But Absolutely Unquestionable.

IT PAYS TO GET
NESTOR FILMS

Scene from "IN THE

DAVID HORSLEY,

JOIN OUR

FILMS

urpassed—Often Imitated"

NESTOR FILMS — MADE BY DAVID HORSLEY

MSSIONED RANKS"

L.NG LIST!

"IN THE COMMISSIONED RANKS"

is a vivid, faithful portrayal of military life as found in America to-day. The plot is clearly and concisely brought out in a succession of soul-stirring scenes, which hold the onlooker breathless from beginning to end. Critics everywhere have sung the praise of this military picture, apostrophizing it as the best-acted and finest photographed film ever made.

The story deals with an army officer and his wife, and last, but not least, a big-hearted, festive colonel. The couple have an only child, a winsome little girl, whom the father worships. The mother, however, seems to lack the mother instincts, for she gives more time to parties, receptions and balls than to her babe. Of course the colonel is always on hand to play the gallant's part. The child becomes ill; grows rapidly worse and dies, while the father is away on duty and the mother enjoying herself at a ball. The bereaved father, mad with grief, blames his wife for the irreparable loss; and a tragedy is about to be enacted between the sorrow-laden pair, when the manly old colonel takes a hand. So diplomatically does he manage the situation that, after a scene pregnant with ineffable pathos—well, the climax is capped, and—Get the Picture and See for Yourself!

147 4th Avenue, New York

A. L. W., Washington. "I have only been playing for pictures about five or six weeks and want to tell you how helpful I find your page in the MOVING PICTURE WORLD. I think the work is fascinating, but am handicapped by lack of music to fit certain pictures. I have obtained all the selections you have mentioned from time to time, and as I notice others ask you for a list of names, I am going to do the same and I will gladly pay you whatever you ask." (There is no charge whatsoever for this service. Just enclose a stamp for postage, and don't get impatient if you do not get an immediate response, as I have many requests of this kind to answer.—C. E. S.) "I have no music suitable for heavy drama where there is agitation, despair and frantic haste all through the picture. Short passages are not so difficult. Stealthy, pursuit, mystery, hurries, good Indian music, heavy marches and music descriptive of different nationalities, nautical and Rube scenes I am in need of. Other needs will no doubt come to my mind later, but for the present I will be glad of suggestions along the foregoing lines. We run the Independent and Ambrosio films. What in your opinion is the best collection of patriotic songs of the different nations? I have a few, but, for instance, I needed something to fit a Japanese soldier kissing the flag and swearing allegiance to his ruler, and had nothing to play that was suitable."

In the first place, for one who has been playing the pictures for only five or six weeks, you seem to have a very comprehensive idea of music required. I have sent a brief list, which I hope will be of some service to you. The Japanese Triumphant March mentioned therein might have been useful in the last mentioned picture. As to collections of national and patriotic songs, there are many on the market all pretty much alike. I do not care to recommend any one in particular.

Alabama. "I have been reading your page each week with a great deal of interest. Beg to state that I am using music with my pictures, and the musicians I employ are very good, but they have one fault; that is, they are not capable of selecting appropriate music for the pictures. I would like to have you send me a list of music. If there are any charges, just mention them and I will forward a check without delay. Don't you think you could work up a profitable business among the musicians or managers of theaters by selecting each week appropriate music for each picture released. As I understand it, you see the pictures several days or weeks before they are released, which would give you ample time to prepare your list and mail it. I myself would be willing to pay $1, $1.50, or even $2 per week for appropriate music to fit each release. I don't mean for you to furnish the music, just state what music to use and when to use it. Think this matter over and let me have your views on same. In case you use this letter, please don't mention my name or even city, as my musicians read your page every week. I would hate for them to know the contents of this letter, as they are doing the best they know how. As I said before, they are good musicians, but they haven't had the experience in playing for the pictures. We use Association films."

I have prepared a small list of various numbers selected from different catalogues, which will be found useful in picture work. It will be mailed to anyone enclosing postage, without further charge. It must be understood that this list does not purport to cover the entire field of music necessary to this line of work, as that is almost unlimited. It embraces novelettes, sentimental and pathetic, national, characteristic, comedy, grotesque, etc. These have been tried, and proved satisfactory if used intelligently, and can be ordered through your local dealer. As to the last part of your letter, I take it for granted that a correspondent has no objection to the publication of his communication unless he stipulates it, when, of course, it shall be regarded as confidential. What interests one is very apt to interest others, and for that reason I like to insert the most essential parts of letters received. Your list will be forwarded in its turn. Many thanks for your kind appreciation.

Wellsville, Ohio. "I take the liberty of writing you from being a regular and careful reader of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD, which paper I admire very much in the position it takes. Along about Easter season we contemplate showing the best make of the 'Passion Play,' and I would like to know if I could secure appropriate music to run through the entire three reels. We expect to have violin and piano. I would also appreciate any information upon this subject and would thank you for a list of music sent to correspondents as per WORLD of Feb. 18, 1911."

The required list will reach the brother before he reads this. Carl Fischer's catalogue contains some very fine standard religiouso music for orchestra, which is effective with violin and piano. They include "March Pontificale," "Lord, God of Abraham," "Priests March," "Ave Maria," "Hearken Unto Me," "Sanctus," "To God On High," "Love Not The World," "Funeral March from Saul," "Holy City," "The King Of Love My Shepherd Is," and others; the catalogue numbers are respectively 258, 299, 502 and 560. I do not know of any music especially arranged for the "Passion Play," but I would suggest that in accompanying these pictures you avoid all suggestion of the lighter forms of religious music, such as "Gospel Hymns" and Salvation Army songs. While not wishing to discredit these songs, I believe they are not severe enough for the story of the "Passion." "The Palms" and "Holy City," although modern in character, are dignified, and may be used as a relief from the more classic numbers. I would also earnestly advise Wellsville and others who contemplate showing these pictures to procure a cabinet organ, unless they are already provided. The small cost is amply offset by the added value of your music.

Indiana. (Mgr. E. B.) "I take the liberty to write for a little information. We have started a little theater here with a seating capacity of 275. Our front is all white, made by the Chicago Decorative Company, and presents a beautiful appearance when lit up at night. We have strong competition, there being three other houses here running Licensed films. We are using Independent films and we and our patrons are well pleased. We have a new Powers No. 6 and our light and projection are well nigh perfect. The other shows run one new reel each day and carry one over, while we run two new reels each day. We have a very capable singer, Miss Frances Worth, of Indianapolis, and a fine pianist, Miss Ethel Kolmorgan, of this city. Miss Kolmorgan is a pianist of great ability and improvises music for the pictures with taste. On last Saturday we had the great Reliance picture 'The Vows,' and during the last scene where the young man is brought back to the church by his sweetheart, Miss Worth sang 'The Rosary' (Nevins) behind the screen, accompanied by Miss Kolmorgan on the organ, and Mr. Karl Kurtz (an efficient drummer) on the chimes, and the effect was beautiful and very much appreciated. We are very particular about trying to put on the effects at our place and we spare no trouble nor expense to properly do them. For church chimes we have hung up behind the screen various sizes of seamless steel tubing, six feet in length, suspended by heavy gut, and the tones are deep and sonorous and very appropriate for church scenes; and this brings me to the purpose of this letter. Will you kindly send me a short list of organ music of more or less andante movement that would be appropriate to use on like occasions? Of course, we have many beautiful themes for the piano—'Shubert's Serenade,' 'Traumerei,' 'Gottschalk's Last Hope,' 'Morris' Meditation,' 'Blumenlied,' etc., but what we want is some short high-class little melodies that can be used in the ordinary church scenes that are occasionally depicted on the screen. On last Saturday we showed to over one-sixth of the entire population of the town, and that in the face of the fact that there are three other picture shows here, and the church people with a special production of 'Esther' were playing at the opera house."

I don't happen to have the particular music asked for in my catalogues, but I will look for something to meet the correspondent's needs and forward it. He evidently knows what he wants, and judging by his letter he goes after it and gets it—including business. Speaking of chimes, I once experimented with the steel tubes; but with indifferent success, as they are exceedingly difficult to tune properly. I had better luck with brass tubes, but they are expensive and I found that, considering time, trouble and the waste in experimenting, it was about as cheap in the long run to buy them ready made; that is, if you want a good set of chimes in tune with the orchestra. One doesn't have to buy a whole octave—two or three will be very effective. Have you tuned yours, or do you just produce a general big-toned bell effect? The writer says he is located in a town of about 7,200 inhabitants; yet apparently he is able to find competent musicians. Is he unusually fortunate, or does he just go after them and get them?

"Drummer," New York, says: "In February 11th MOVING PICTURE WORLD you say, 'in straight dramatic pictures sound effects should be made to imitate as nearly as possible the real sounds which would naturally be heard in a real scene such as the picture portrays.' And in the same issue you give suggestions for music to the picture 'Father Love' and say 'Do not introduce baby cries in this picture.' The picture shows a crying baby in several scenes. Now, if you are supposed to 'imitate as nearly as possible the real sounds such as would naturally be heard, etc.,' why not imitate a crying baby when the picture shows one? Don't you think you are inconsistent?"

Not at all. It is true I did say both of the things you mention. I also said in one or two previous issues "don't try to get a laugh where none is intended." The average audience nearly always contains one or two who will laugh at a baby cry, and this will be enough to spoil a serious scene. If you used this effect in the picture "Father Love," it's dollars to doughnuts you got a laugh whether you intended to or not, and if my memory serves me right, the scenes in which this occurred were anything but hilarious. Use a little judgment.

Mrs. A. P. D., Nevada City, in the course of her letter says: "I would also like to add a few words of praise for your articles on 'Play for the Pictures.' You cannot imagine how they have already helped me. I followed to a dot your suggestions for playing to the picture 'The Golden Supper,' and have received praise for my music from every one. I hope your articles are continued, for I know they are appreciated by every reader of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD."

This letter reads good to me just as it stands, so I won't add any comments. Come again; I like to hear it.

ALL FOR GOLD. (Yankee).

1. Agitato till thrown out; subdue till change.
2. Mysterious till change.
3. Intermezzo or waltz till letter is shown.
4. Agitato till change.
5. Neutral till change.
6. Pathetic till title "Robbed."
7. Agitato softly (through four scenes) till title, "Frank Tells About Handkerchief."
8. Light allegretto till "The Panic."
9. Semi-agitato bordering on the mysterious till son enters office.
10. "Heart's Ease," "Spring Dreams" or any semi-plaintive till end.

THE OPEN ROAD. (Kalem).

1. "Come with the Gipsy Bride" (6/8 chorus from "Bohemian Girl") till Gipsies stop to make camp. Then
2. "In the Gipsy's Life You Read" (same opera) till young man (Darwin) is seen coming down road. Gradually diminish till change.
3. In a Shady Nook (light allegretto) till "14 Years Later."
4. Waltz till change, "Zora Meets Some of Her Own People."
5. Gipsy Love Song (from the "Fortune Teller") till camp scene.
6. Moments Musical (or some gipsy march) till gipsy and girl enter.

In the Gipsy Life (same as No. 2) till change.

8. Gipsy Love Song till camp scene.
9. Same as No. 2 till fortune teller discovers marks on girl's arm.
10. Agitato till girl turns from Darwin to gipsy.
11. Gipsy Love Song till title, "Zora Chooses the Open Road." Then "In the Gipsy's Life," etc., to end of picture.

MAX MAKES MUSIC (Pathe).

1. Lively till after handbill is shown. When merchant plays flute:
2. About four bars of reel for dance.
3. When Max plays for soldiers "La Sorella" till all off.
4. When he plays for girls, first time, "break;" second time, same.
5. Third time, slow cake walk till all off.
6. Eccentric for drunken men till Max enters; when he plays:
7. "Waltz Me Around Again Willie" till all off. Then:
8. Mysterious-pizzacato (staccato).
9. Short agitato for knockdown.
10. When Max plays, slow reel till both exit.
11. When he plays for dog, slow reel. (Any old reels or dances will answer, such as "Turkey in the Straw," "Chicken Reel," or "Arkansaw Traveler." Play them rather slowly and married.)
12. When he plays while in the bed, lively "Rag March" till finish. "Fill-in" ad libitum.

THE SANITARY THEATER.

Of most essential importance in the management of a theater is the absolutely sanitary condition of the auditorium—this with special regard to the average five-cent theater, with its continuous flow of people and generally insufficient system of ventilation.

The five-cent theater is a breeder of crime, according to the "societies" and certain picture inimical newspapers; the bachteriologist probably would say a breeder of microbes, and of the two camps fighting for the welfare of the people, the doctor is no doubt the more justified.

The sanitary condition of the average five-cent theater certainly could be vastly improved, especially so in New York City. Taking in some of the tenement districts on the lower East Side, the picture show is by no means an improvement to the surroundings. Some of these places are perfectly filthy, with an air so foul and thick that you can almost cut it with a knife. The floor is generally covered with peanut shells, and as there is no stove to spit on everybody spits on the floor. Imagine this in the summer time, and epidemics o fvarious kinds raging in the crowded districts. No wonder the societies and health authorities try to bar children from the moving picture shows!

There is no excuse whatever for such conditions, and to permit a constant exposure of the public to disease. The justfied criticism of the health authorities may prove disastrous one of these days. Should a malignant epidemic strike New York City, and these conditions prevail, the result might be a wholesale closing down of theses germ factories. Then, as usual, everybody would have to suffer, as our reformers very seldom discriminate, particularly so in case of the five-cent theater, which institution always has been a nail in the eyes of some people.

The only way to overcome this evil is the employment of a reliable disinfectant. Every theater should be thoroughly disinfected every day either with a sweeping compound or a spraying solution. There are many of these preparations in the market, and some of them are advertised in the columns of this paper. The colorless disinfectant is generally the most effective, but the perfumed is preferred by many exhibitors on account of its aromatic color. I have heard people in the audience complain, though, on account of the strong odor which, no doubt, with some individuals, will produce a headache, as would any strong perfume. But this is only exceptional. The majority of people will like a refreshing disinfectant sprayed around the aisles during the intermissions. Exhibitors would do well to advertise the fact on the curtain that the auditorium is thoroughly disinfected several times a day. People will no doubt appreciate such a solicitude by the management. G. F. v. H-s.

All over the world there is nightfall.
But never the "Fall of a Knight" like this.

THE FALL OF A KNIGHT

RELEASED THURSDAY, MARCH 9th

Something away from the "usual thing." A screaming comedy from the beginning to the end. A film, we know, is going to pack your house.

GET IT it's a REX

REX MOTION PICTURE COMPANY, 573-9 Eleventh Avenue, NEW YORK

LICENSED.

"A Tale of Two Cities" (Vitagraph).—The second part of the three reel release of this great story. This film introduces Lucy, Sidney Carton, the hero of the tale, De Farge and Darnay. The scene changes from the turbulence of Paris to the quiet, homelike attractions of London. The complications which beset these characters are faithfully reproduced. Of course, it must be understood that it is impossible to reproduce everything that is described in the book, but the selections have been made with care, and are indicative of a thorough understanding of the necessities of the story. The main features are sufficiently emphasized to serve as a guide in carrying the audience along, and their knowledge of the story itself will supply any deficiencies. Toward the last there are rumblings from Paris, with its unrest and turbulence, but the main feature of the picture is the quiet of the homes of London and the development of a portion of the love story which is included. It seems safe to say that those who see this film, in conjunction with the one which was released before, and the one to follow, will acquire a new impression of Dickens and will appreciate more fully than ever before the importance of the motion picture as showing the beauties of a good story. Managers will do well if they use these films together, though each one tells a story by itself, which has its interest.

"Tale of Two Cities" (Vitagraph).—The third and closing film in this series of remarkable reproductions. This picture takes the audience to Paris and shows them the mob at work destroying property and murdering Royalists and all suspected of being in sympathy with them. The story is followed closely in the main, the principal scenes being shown in strong contrast to the quiet, homelike scenes of the former film. It is here that Carton displays the act of heroism which will forever make him one of the greatest characters in fiction, the sacrifice of his life to save Darnay, who has been arrested and imprisoned because he is a relative of a Royalist, and will ultimately suffer upon the guillotine. The scene when the condemned prisoners are going to the guillotine in the tumbril cart, and Carton comforts the poor little seamstress condemned to die with him, is dramatic, and holds the attention so closely that the audience sits with tense nerves throughout the scene. But, after all, even though the turbulence of the murderous mob constitutes the theme of the picture, the closing scenes, where Carton dies for his friend lifts it above the ordinary level and makes it one of the greatest pictures of the month. The three should be shown in conjunction. In that way the story unfolds itself in consecutive order, and the connection is clearly perceived. The Vitagraph people have performed a notable achievement in presenting this story in such excellent form. It is a year when Dickens is being studied and considered more than for a long time, and such a contribution as this is a help, not alone to students of Dickens, but to the thousands who have, for one reason or another, perhaps, lost sight of his marvelous faculty for story telling.

"The Outlaw and the Child" (Essanay).—A story which has for a background the great Mojave desert of California. The principal character is a little girl, scarcely more than a baby, daughter of the sheriff. She is found by an outlaw whom the sheriff is pursuing and taken to her father's home. The terrible sufferings of the desert are too much for the man and he succumbs before he can be aided. The ending is commended. It never seems quite right for a sheriff to break the laws by allowing an outlaw to escape, as has been represented in some cases, merely because he performed some service for which the official might have felt indebted to him. This ending is more satisfactory. The sheriff is left under no obligation and the outlaw is removed from society which he menaces.

"The Changeling" (Pathe).—The story of a child left with a nurse, replaced by another. The end shows the mother of the substituted child marrying the father of the child that died. There isn't much in it to make it even interesting let alone holding the attention in any important degree. The mechanical work is good, but that is about all that can be said for the picture.

"Paganini and the Countess" (Gaumont).—A tale of the great violinist and some complications that arose through the passion which a Countess had for him. The latter part of the film is taken up with telling, in a rather interesting way, her endeavors to assist him in escaping from prison. It is one of those old-time love tales, with some adventure and much intrigue.

"His Daughter" (Biograph).—This picture has something of the spirit and character of the old Biograph stock company's work. It is a story of love which did not have to be thwarted to make it flow true. The girl's father is depicted as a despicable wretch, which he undoubtedly was, but the steadfast honesty of the young man in not only remembering his sweetheart, but in accepting her after he discovers that her father is a villain, is an episode that increases the interest of the film considerably. It is, perhaps, as good a love story as has been told by this company in some time, and the actors have caught the spirit of it so that it is interpreted with a clarity which leaves no room for misunderstanding. The staging is up to requirements and the photography could scarcely be improved.

"Dobbs, the Dauber" (Lubin).—A comedy representing the fool work of a janitor who has painting thrust upon him. The principal objection to his work is that he selects automobiles, pianos and similar things upon which to give evidence of his genius. This leads to a slap-stick ending which is both fast and furious, with the unfortunate individual tumbling eventually into the hands of the police as he jumps from a window.

"My Prairie Flower" (Melies).—The lively story of a young college scapegrace who is sent West to make a man of him. The latter encounters in the rough work among the cowboys and others around the ranch. A little deception in impersonation is practiced at the start, but this helps, not alone in the telling of the first part of the story, but in the love tale which develops afterward. The scene where the young college man whips the terror is characteristic and cannot fail to thrill the audience.

"The Seminole's Sacrifice" (Selig).—An Indian story beginning with the sale of an unfortunate squaw as a slave to a white trader, developing through an Indian uprising and ending with a marked display of the nobility of character of a chief, who, scorning the fetters of the officers, appears before the commanding general, free and unattended, to offer up his life as a sacrifice to save his people. The display of nobility of character on the part of the white general is quite as marked. He accepts the chief's hand and bids him go back to his people and lead them in the right way. It is a picture which arouses the emotions and causes unusual interest.

"The Price of Victory" (Edison).—A film that Carnegie should secure to assist in disseminating his peace propaganda. It represents an episode supposed to have occurred in the Napoleonic wars. And it gives in dramatic fashion the horrible side of war. The young man torn away from his old father and sent to battle to be killed. Then the search of the old man for his son's body. The weary struggle to get it home and the lone vigil by the dead. The Emperor appears, seeking rest and light with which to write the message of his victory to be sent to Paris. The old man attempts to kill him, but is prevented, and the climax—the Emperor placing the cross of the Legion of Honor upon the dead boy's breast. It is difficult to describe a picture of this character so as to convey the information intended, but it is perhaps sufficient to say that few pictures of recent months have been better conceived and rendered. The actors have interpreted the idea with precision, while the staging has been done with careful attention to details, and the photography is superior in every way.

"Priscilla and the Pequot" (Kalem).—A story of Colonial times, which derives its principal interest from the represen-

"THE SIGN OF THE FLYING A"

Dott Farley and Jack Campbell in "Hypnotising a Hypnotist"

Scene from "The Rich and the Poor."

AMERICAN RELEASES

TWO REELS EACH WEEK—MONDAYS AND THURSDAYS

Release of Monday, Mar. 6th.

"Hypnotising a Hypnotist" with "Memories"

"Hypnotising a Hypnotist" is undoubtedly as funny a farce comedy as the most discriminating exhibitor could desire. Dott Farley is particularly funny in her characterization of the old maid. The fun is fast and furious—the denouement extremely funny. "Memories" on the same reel is a short subject that is both quaint and original.

Release of Thursday, March 9th.

"The Rich and The Poor"

A film dealing with the never-ending conflict between capital and labor. The scenes of the tyranny exercised by the scheming and villainous capitalist over his employees do heart rending, but the eventual victory of the young foreman more than offsets the previous impression. This film will be acclaimed by the workingman as a timely and effective production and will prove a drawing card in any theater.

COMING

"The Harem Skirt"

The funniest funny film released in a twelve-month.

Write for our lobby display propositions—a display to suit every purse.

Get on our Mailing List for "FILM FACTS."

ALL Independent Exchanges Buy AMERICAN FILM.

AMERICAN FILM MANUFACTURING CO.

Bank Floor, Ashland Block, Chicago, Ill.

YANKEE WEST INDIES FILMS

Steiner's World-Tour Series

MONDAY, March 13.
"The Test of Love"
A story of woman's loyalty

FRIDAY, MARCH 17.
"His Double Treasure"
A tale of two great finds

YANKEE FILM CO.

344 East 32d St. New York City

OPERATORS, MANAGERS

Make your own film cement. Will patch both non-inflammable and inflammable. Will send formula for $1. Address

OTTO BOONE Elwood, Indiana

Care Superba Theatre

ALL RECORDS BROKEN

For a clear, sharp and flickerless picture. Improved Silent Gears, Action and Movement

$12.00

Satisfaction guaranteed. Testimonials furnished.

E. W. LAVEZZI

3042 N. Ashland Ave. Chicago, Ill.

tation of the character and manners of early days in the colonies. A Puritan maiden befriends an Indian, and he in turn warns her of an impending attack upon the settlement. The Indian method of fighting is clearly shown, and there is animation to the scenes in which the stockade is attacked. The whole story is redolent of the characteristics of both Puritans and Indians.

"Who Killed Max?" (Pathe).—A slap-stick comedy in which the house is wrecked and disturbance is created all along the line. As a rough house it is a success, but otherwise it has few claims to serious consideration.

"An Escape of Gas" (Pathe).—A comedy which represents more destruction than even the ordinary slap-stick variety is usually credited with. The house is wrecked and water is allowed to flow all over it from the bath-room. These pictures do not appeal to the public as they did formerly. In the theater where this was seen there was scarcely a laugh throughout.

"The Lily of the Tenements" (Biograph).—A story of what befalls some of the girls unfortunate enough to live in the tenements. Often they are forced, as was almost the case in this instance, to sacrifice themselves to secure the wherewithal to live. The graphic way in which this is represented here made a deep impression upon an audience, even in New York, where the thing is so common that a considerable proportion of the population wink at it as a necessity, and let it pass. The happy ending for the poor girl, following the denunciation of his father by the young man, is dramatic, but, unfortunately, few instances of this sort actually occur. The value of this picture will be in depicting the life history of some of the poor whose meed of trouble is too much sometimes for them to bear.

"Nan's Diplomacy" (Lubin).—A comedy which is built around a domestic misunderstanding that might have led to serious consequences. Perhaps other wives should bring wandering husbands to their senses in the same vigorous way. The insanity dodge has been worked in about everything else. It worked well in this, according to the picture. And the acting is excellent.

"Max Makes Music" (Pathe).—A comedy representing Max playing upon a magic flute which sets everybody and everything within hearing to dancing, and the dances are as varied as the individuals who perform them.

"Pots, Pans and Poetry" (Pathe).—The humorous story of an Irish cook who believed she had the divine afflatus and could make poetry or music at will. Some fun is extracted from the experience through which she goes in discovering her mistake.

"The Eye of Conscience" (Selig).—A simple story of a robbery. The dramatic strength lies in the gradual awakening of the conscience and the effect it has upon the thief. As the enormity of his crime is borne in upon him stronger and stronger he becomes a nervous wreck, startled at every little noise, and nearly going insane when he discovers an eye looking at him from the transom. Investigation discloses that it is only the eye of a mask, but the effect was quite the same as though it had been the eye of a person. It was the eye of conscience. The closing scene is different from some of these stories, showing the thief returning the money without detection. It is a film of unusual power and contains some of the best acting of the week.

"The Ironmaster" (Edison). — The famous French society drama, "The Ironmaster," transferred to the screen with no loss of its original strength. The Edison players have interpreted the various scenes quite as effectively as they have ever been interpreted upon the stage. All the original beauty of the play has been retained, while the silent drama affords opportunity for certain delicate touches in working out details impossible when upon the stage. The character of the young woman is admirably developed and the Ironmaster is a man of whom almost anyone might be proud. The staging and costuming have been supervised with care and are accurate even to the details and the work of the actors is performed with discretion. Altogether it forms an excellent picture which will be thoroughly enjoyed by almost any audience before whom it is presented.

"Taminig A Tyrant" (Essanay).—An interesting comedy representing the way a husband was tamed into submission and taught to treat his wife and daughter correctly. The young man who conducted the taming operation made love to the daughter successfully, but even though it was ultimately disclosed that the tamer was not what he pretended to be, the effects of his work remained. The tyrant husband was gone forever.

"A Matrimonial Epidemic" (Gaumont).—A lively comedy representing the effect of the love making of a young couple upon the sensibilities of several couples well along in years. The influence was so potent that they all go away and get married. The fun is in the scenes which lead up to this altogether desirable ending.

"Lafont and Pola's Last Flight" (Gaumont).—A sensational aviation film representing the crash of a flying machine with its passengers. The scene makes the audience catch its breath, so realistic does it appear.

"Capt. Barnacle's Courtship" (Vitagraph).—A comedy presenting Capt. Barnacle in the role of love maker with a pretty girl as the object. The girl objects and the brilliant way she adopts to outwit the captain and her designing Ma and get the man of her own choice supplies sufficient comedy to consume a long film. It doesn't get dull any of the way, and there is a laugh at the end when the captain discovers that he is attempting to marry the desired bride's brother. The piece is well staged, well acted and in most of the scenes the photography is good. Some of the interiors appear to be a trifle underexposed. The vagaries of an uneven current are sometimes responsible for apparent underexposure, and perhaps that was true in this case.

INDEPENDENT.

"Artful Kate" (Imp).—The second of the company's Cuban releases, and, not to make invidious comparisons, is probably considerably better than the first. There is the dash and spirit of the soldier, combined with the lively flirtation which is popularly supposed to be a part of the life of the Spanish or Cuban girl. The young soldier is later nonplussed with the indisputable evidence of his perfidy in the hands of his fiancee. But after the storm subsides a bit they make up and are unmindful of the rocks upon which their bark was almost wrecked. The picture is interesting in that it depicts Cuban manners and customs with close attention to the real truth, and there is a spirit shown by the actors which helps wonderfully in the development of the picture. Sometimes the pictures seem to almost talk in their strength and the excellence of the acting. The photography, too, leaves little to be desired. The company deserves congratulations upon producing such a good film.

"The Fate of Joe Dorr" (Bison).—The story of a young man who went wrong in the wild country of the West and was shot by a spring gun set by his father. The delineation of the rough character of the Western people is accurate, and the story is filled with the rough pathos which often accompanies the lives of those who make the frontier of civilization their home.

"A Child's Prayer" (Lux).—A touching story, representing a family in abject poverty, requiring the necessities of life, which is helped by the prayer and action of a winsome child. The pictures of children are always interesting, and in this instance the acting of the little one is unusually good, principally because it is so natural and unaffected.

"Matilda Chased" (Lux).—A comedy which includes a chase made funny by the presence of a considerable number of sandwich men. The picture is lively enough and numerous amusing situations are developed, but it is a bit rough to suit some patrons.

"Love's Test" (Solax).—A change from the ordinary run of pictures which show a young man or woman representing themselves as losing their fortunes to test the affections of their lovers or sweethearts. Both conceive the same thing here, and the beauty develops in the bluff both put up in attempting to live in Poverty Row. As may be imagined, there is a good deal of fun in this, though its development requires considerable space. It would be better if it were condensed somewhat. It is difficult to stretch a comedy through a long film without having it thin in places, and that condition prevails here to some extent.

"The Woman Who Dared" (Yankee.)—An excellent detective story, showing the famous girl detective in one of her most fascinating unraveling acts. It is mysterious up to the last scenes, when the solution is given. It is one of the best of this series and cannot fail to interest a large number who enjoy good detective stories. There is an interest which never flags from the time the picture begins until the last scene has disappeared from the screen. Acting, staging and photography have been maintained at a high standard of excellence.

"Strategy" (American).—A story that begins tragically, works out in a dramatic manner and ends with humor and laughter. The tale is told with directness that is worth emulating, and is interesting enough to hold the attention of the audience, while there is sufficient heart interest to keep the audience watching for the developments of the next scene. The stage manager and photographer both did their work well.

"Little Souls" (Itala).—A story acted by children which possesses dramatic qualities of a high order and develops a strong degree of interest among the audience.

"Across the Mexican Border" (Powers).—A love story of the Mexican border, in which the triangle includes a Mexican who intends to buy a girl who is already in love with an American soldier. The story is concerned with detailing the complications which arise before the young couple escape across the border into America. The acting and scenery are both good, while the mechanical work has been well done.

"Foolshead's Presents" (Itala).—Another of those Foolshead films which have made so many people laugh in the past. The trouble lately has been the pictures have been far too silly to please. This is better than some of its predecessors and need not suffer for the same reason as the others have done.

"Havana Cigar" (Itala).—A well photographed and interesting film. The mechanical work has been done with care and the result is a pleasing picture.

"His Great Duty" (Great Northern).—A strongly dramatic story, cleverly and sympathetically acted by players from the Royal Theater at Copenhagen. The work is so well done that criticism is unnecessary. As the story unfolds the audience becomes more and more absorbed in its narration, and this attention never flags throughout the running of the film. The photography is remarkably clear, offering a satisfactory improvement over some films which have been shown earlier in the season. The picture composition and the way it has been carried out cannot fail to please any audience.

"Ever the Accuser" (Reliance.)—A well-balanced and well-told story of the effects of an accusing conscience. The sympathy of the audience is early enlisted for the girl so hopelessly and unjustly entangled in the net of circumstantial evidence. The climax, when, as she tells her story in court, the real murderer rushes in and dramatically confesses, telling the story of his visions, supplies a fitting ending to this excellent production. The appearance of the spirit of the uncle and the death of the murderer constitute a scene which will never be forgotten. The acting is unusually good, even for the Reliance Company, and the photography is an improvement over some of the former films produced by the same company. A steady improvement, indeed, is noted in all departments of this company's work.

"Checkmate" (Thanhouser).—A somewhat complicated love story filled with exciting romances. Self-inflicted wounds send a rival to prison for a long term, but the girl works two clever ruses and succeeds in convicting the baron and also in securing the release of the imprisoned man.

"Her Birthday Surprise" (Yankee).—Tells the story of the jealousy of a wife when her artist husband was reported to be closeted with a strange woman all day. Ultimately the door of his studio is broken down, when they find to their chagrin that it is a portrait of his wife he was painting, and the woman was one of the domestics whom he pressed into service as a model. As an exhibition of unreasoning jealousy the picture is a success.

"A Warrior's Squaw" (Bison).—A picture representing some phases of life upon the plains, and indicating in interesting glimpses the life of the Indians. The photography is clear and the acting of the Indians is well done.

"Story of A Prayer Rug" (Rex).—A well worked out play, dealing with that mysterious land of Turkey. It is a love story and details how a young man rescued his sweetheart from a harem and spirited her away. The fact that it is difficult to escape in Turkey doesn't particularly injure the interest of the story itself, though it may raise a question of probability in the minds of those who consider conditions in that country. However, as a love story in strange and altogether interesting surroundings it has its uses and the audience plainly liked it. Perhaps that is, after all, the vital test. If the audience is pleased critics can allow any discrepancies to pass unnoticed. But the probabilities should be maintained. All will agree with that postulate.

"A Plain Tale" (Reliance).—A simple, homely story, depicting how an unfortunate woman was bothered by a rake, but maintained her dignity. Then came success to herself and her husband, which allowed of a complete reconciliation and a return to happier circumstances. It is not a strongly dramatic production, but it illustrates conditions which might occur in almost any household and plainly indicates what might happen under certain circumstances. The meddling busybody is in evidence and the result indicates what possibilities there are in the detailing of petty gossip of the character shown here.

"The Sheriff's Sweetheart" (Amerjcan).—A realistic Western picture with a background that will give a new idea of the West, or of some parts of it and will develop fresh impressions of what the scenic effects in certain localities are like. The acting is of the best, in harmony with the subject and depicting faithfully the characteristics of the people represented. It will rank with the best Western releases of the month. The character of the sheriff is an admirable piece of acting and deserves commendation. The other characters fill their respective parts with ability.

"The Silence System" (American).—A short, snappy comedy which tells an interesting story and at the same time gives the audience something to laugh about. It is worked out in the best manner of the company.

"Punch" (Eclair).—A story of poverty, detailing how a mother stole a Punch to gratify a sick child and how the possession of the toy made the little fellow better. But even though the proprietor of the toy store from which the Punch was taken sends policemen, when he understands the situation he fails to prosecute and allows the child to keep the Punch. It is a tender story of mother love and is acted with discretion. It is in Marcel Lauzin's best vein and should not fail to satisfy any audience. The photography is unusually good, even for an Eclair.

"Beware The Bomb" (Eclair).—A snappy comedy illustrating how some officials were deceived twice, the first time without injury, but the second time to their undoing. The play is well acted and develops a number of laughable situations.

"A Manly Man" (Imp).—Another rendering of the eternal triangle developing interesting situations, and closing with a dramatic scene when the young man leaves his sweetheart and clings to his semi-savage wife. The old problems which have beset human hearts since the beginning of time are retold and in the telling they develop a strength not always noticeable in subjects of this type. The question will rise in one's mind regarding the advisability of the young man leaving his sweetheart and taking a wife in the wilderness, but having done it he closed the incident in the right way by sticking to her. The real problems of life are quite like the problems in this film therefore the picture should prove interesting to every audience who sees it.

"A Warrior's Faith" (Bison).—An excellent picture giving views of Indian life and customs not often seen. Further, it illustrates some of the dangers to which missionaries to Indians have been subjected in times past. There are some thrills when the stake is prepared and it looks as though a few were to be burned. The fight between two Indian warriors is realistic and well carried out. The setting is admirable and the photography is clear and even. The audience plainly liked it.

"The Call of the Great" (Powers).—A rather complicated narrative which deals extensively with the name of Smith. The principle factor is a will to a missing heir of $5,000,000 provided she marries within a month after she is found. The terms of the testament are complied with, though it is not without tribulations and disturbances galore. The play while somewhat complicated, as intimated, is still slightly underexposed in places, but perhaps in future copies the printer can overcome that defect.

"The Little Mother" (Thanhouser).—While this picture possesses some elements of improbability it is, nevertheless, interesting because it represents an unfortunate child triumphing over difficulties. The kind hearted artist also befriended her and was rewarded with being saved from ignominy and shame through the machinations of an adventuress and quite right to accept the little girl and provide for her comfort. The audiences made their feeling in the matter very plain. The acting is well done and the photography is clear in the main, only one or two weak places showing in the film.

MOTION PICTURE MANAGERS

Fake notices. Make your screen as bright as a moving picture at a cost not to exceed $4.00. Make your pictures stand out like ice and one half hour light, with no exposure, cutting down electric bills. Will not smoke or peel.

I will mail the Formula to you on receipt of $1.00

WM. INMAN 202 Madison St., La Porte, Ind.

STORIES of the FILMS

BIOGRAPH.

A DECREE OF DESTINY.—Kenneth Marsden, a young artist in fading health is so led to go South where the balmy air is conducive to a betterment of his condition. Acting upon this advice he leaves his club friends after a little good-bye spread and is seen in New Orleans, where he expects to find accommodations with an old-time friend of his mother. The old lady receives the son of her dear friend with open arms, but her two convent-bred nieces, Mary and Edith, are horrified at the thought of a man in the house. However, it isn't long after his arrival that he has made a decided impression upon the young ladies, but no more than they have impressed him. Kenneth is at a loss to know which of the two he cares most for, as they are both so gentle and artless. Still, he feels that Mary likes him for he reads her more clearly than Edith. Still he is impartial in his attitude towards them. Some time later, while out for a stroll, he is caught in a rain-storm and drenched to the skin. The old lady is prompt in her solicitude for his condition, and though she administers preventives he is stricken down with pneumonia and for a time his life is despaired of. The two girls are at once in the extreme of anxiety and when the time of the crisis arrives, Mary's disquietude becomes so intense that she goes and kneels before the little shrine of the Blessed Virgin in her room and prays for his recovery, vowing to consecrate her life to the church if her prayers are answered. While she prays there is a turn for the better in Kenneth's condition, and the doctor assures them that he will recover. A few days later finds him convalescent, and relating that Mary's quickening interest by love he is about to make his choice between the two sisters, and in fact he at first receives encouragement until she reveals to him her vocal recolls. This episode is witnessed by Edith, who goes to her room almost heartbroken, and upon going to the room finds Edith in tears and learning the cause, plans a subterfuge to send Kenneth, that the outcome is that the weddings take place, the spiritual and the material. Mary is wedded to the church and we witness this beautiful ceremony of a postulant receiving the veil, while Edith is wedded to Kenneth. The receiving of the veil is presented with absolute authenticity.

CONSCIENCE.—Howard Raymond with his wife and little child are spending a few days at their hunting lodge. The bad coffee furnished for the first breakfast occasions a slight quarrel between Howard and his wife. Her child, by unreasonably hurt his wife's feelings, he playfully placates them and in a joke points to the time of day, exclaiming "Better coffee, or you die!" At this point the maid and the child enter and in alarm think him in earnest in the heat of the excitement of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond. Laughingly he starts off on his hunting trip. He has barely departed when the maid discovers he has forgotten his game-bag, so the wife hastens after him with it, arriving at his side just in time to see his first charge at a deer. The wife giving him the bag, turns to go back, when she is shot and killed by a bullet from the gun of a hidden hunter who has mistaken her through the bush for game. Her cry startles the hunter from his retir avenged. They write him to meet them at the mountain top and hide in a big barrel until they arrive. Max obeys and when they do finally come they quickly clamp the barrel top in place, and turning the barrel on its side, give it a shove and away it goes, landing finally in a swift stream. Here it floats rapidly along, over rapids and falls, and at last out to sea, and here Max breaks the top off and looks about him. In the barrel he finds a carrier pigeon placed there by the girls before they put the top on; so scribbling a note he fastens it on the bird which flies away to its home. Here the girls read the letter which thanks them for their courtesy and says that he's glad to be rid of both of them.

RED DEER'S DEVOTION.—The Station Agent at Coyote Junction has a charming daughter, May, who has her own troubles keeping the cowboys and loafers in their place. Once, when accosted by a big fellow, she is saved from his company by Red Deer, an Indian living near by. He takes the girl home and in their short walk falls in love with the "paleface lily." The next day May gives Red Deer her photograph, and following the custom of his people, to give gift for gift, Red Deer appears at May's home later with furs and blankets and a proposal of marriage. When he offers the latter Red Deer makes a quick exit through the window with May's daddy and a shotgun as a close second. May has become enamored, however, and decides to run away. This she attempts to do but, by a series of misadventures, falls into the hands of a bunch of desperadoes, chief of whom is the man Red Deer interfered with in the opening of the story. Red Deer also is captured. By a ruse both captives manage to escape.

UNDYING LOVE.—Folchetto, a troubadour attached to the castle of Count Raymond of Toulouse, falls deeply in love with Nelda, the niece of Count Raymond, who in turn has her own little love affair with the chevalier Bridonne. Nelda, however, obeys her uncle who desires her marriage with Folchetto, whom he raises to the rank of chevalier, and her poor little heart with the handsome chevalier Bridonne is, for the time, shattered. War breaks out to Austria, where Count Raymond has a great castle and his dependents on the estate send a message to the Count asking for help. Raymond selects Folchetto for the task, which he performs faithfully, returning victorious. On his return, however, he finds that his wife has found the attentions of Bridonne pleasant and he challenges him to a duel, in which he kills the chevalier. Nelda, crazed over the death of the man she loved, flags herself from a cliff into the sea. Folchetto became a monk and until the day of his death was haunted by the vision of his wife.

A LONELY LITTLE GIRL.—Mr. and Mrs. Marshall, having lost their only child, find home an empty place. One day Mrs. Marshall sees the little youngsters in an orphan asylum marching by and calling her husband, she goes to adopt one. They hurry away to the "Home" and find a beautiful little girl who appeals to their very souls and they take her home. The parting scene between the little girl and her brother, who is also in the asylum, is very pathetic. Some days later the foster parents of little Margaret notice that she doesn't seem well and are greatly worried. In her own room Margaret gets out her old rag dolly and lavishes her love upon it, turning aside from her new and costly toys. Finally, pining for her little playfellow of other days, she steals out of the house and starts for the orphanage, but loses her way and is found asleep by a mounted officer and returned to her adopted parents and put to bed. A big hearted physician, who is called in, diagnoses the case as one of lonesomeness and the little brother is brought. Now Margaret's recovery is rapid and in the final scene we see the happy children and their happier new parents.

URBAN ECLIPSE.

THE FURY OF A WOMAN SCORNED.—A finely staged story of the days of ancient Rome. In the opening scene the Emperor Justinian receives his victorious general, Belisarius, and shows favor. Belisarius makes his escape from the gay scenes at court, and hastens to his beloved Antonina, who is waiting for him. The Empress Theodora falls passionately in love with the handsome Belisarius and lets him know that she looks upon him with favor. He scorns her proffered love, and this retoff turns the passionate empress's love to hate. She blows two bravos to blind Belisarius with some powerful acid. Antonina hears of the plot, and while the bravos sleep, as they lie in wait for Belisarius, she substitutes some harmless liquid for the acid, and warns her lover. This he is emptied in Belisarius's face while he sleeps. He pretends he has really been blinded, waiting for an opportunity to leave the army and enjoy wedded happiness with Antonina. Dark days fall upon the State, and Justinian greatly misses the sage counsel of Belisarius. The people clamor for his return; he comes back to the Court, and denounces Theodora for her treachery. The wretched woman is hurried away to punishment, and Belisarius once more takes the helm of the ship of State.

SELIG.

THE OUTBREAK.—Two young women of a nearby ranch are riding, when seeing a man lying in the road, one of them dismounts and finds the man is dead. As she turns to tell her friend they are set upon by the Indians and are carried off.

A rancher, who has escaped the Indians, rides to arouse his neighbors. Coming to the girls' home he tells the news. Bob and Bill ride away and come across the man the girls had seen in the road. Bob discovers a comb belonging to one of them. They ride franticly back to the ranch, where cowboys and ranchers are now gathering. The two boys change horses and guide the band men accompanied by two Indian scouts. They soon overtake the marauding Indians. They leave their horses and follow on foot. They open fire on the Indians.

Taking advantage of an opportune moment, they gain the center of the camp and seizing the two Indians who are guarding the girls, hurl them into the river. The rest of the Indians commence firing, only to find themselves surrounded by a large posse. They jump into the water, and are shot by the enraged whites.

THE LITTLE SHEPHERDESS.—Maria, the little shepherdess, is tending her sheep on Italy when she receives a letter from a girl friend in America asking her to call her back and come to New York. She is delighted with the idea and is soon preparing to leave. Antonio, a national soldier and Maria's sweetheart, is disappointed in not having the chance to accompany her, but later and after the exchange of kisses sees her to join her.

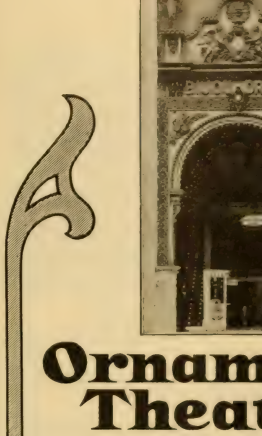
Upon arrival in New York she finds the husband of Maria, and to his disappointment, substitutes letters for those supposed to be from America telling her of the marriage of Maria to another. Driven by deception, the poor girl was put on to enjoy. Antonio arrives and finds his sweetheart in time to save her from the streets.

THE MEDALLION.—The story is laid in Italy during the 15th century, and centers around with the love and suffering of David, a great painter.

Unknown to David, his betrothed loves a brother in painting, and his shame is kept secret for the honor of the family. The brother, overcoming from his evil, goes to night to the sister's room, leaves, pending to another, and upon the finding leaves her suspicion, assuming her false, leaves her off, and she is too proud to let him the truth.

Years pass and David goes to a monastery to seek refuge from the world in seclusion. While there, he learns the truth. A great commotion at evening takes place in the monastery, and he sees his grief and hears them seek solace in praying a shelter place for the altar.

This he does, but is stricken to the heart. His castle on her way in chapel, sees him weak and ill, attending the Mass. She comes to the studio to the convent. There they come to understand each other, but too late.



Ornamental Theatres

PLASTER RELIEF DECORATIONS

Theatres Designed Everywhere

Write for Illustrated Theatre Catalog. Send us Sizes of Theatre for Special Designs

The Decorators Supply Co.

2549 Archer Avenue :: CHICAGO, ILL.

Mr. MOVING PICTURE MAN

Drop a postal to AMBURE AMUSEMENT PREMIUM CO., Inc., 141 to 147 West 47th Street, and learn of a proposition that will triple your day's business without a penny's expense on your part

GAUMONT.

THE TRAMP'S FIND.—Because of his honesty in returning a lost necklace to its owner, the hero wins a comfortable home for himself and two little waifs that he finds asleep in the street.

FORBIDDEN CIGARETTES.—The incidents that make a very interesting film revolve two youngsters, a boy and his sister, who "sample" their daddy's cigarettes.

That awful sickness, the result of a first attempt at smoking is their punishment.

THE BARBER'S DAUGHTER.—Maurice, a village gallant, after being properly punished by Louise, because of his impudence, wagers with the boys that he will steal a kiss from her.

He has no price coaxing or no gold or gaining his goal. She agrees to give him a kiss if he first allows her to cut his hair, and remove his beard and mustache. Maurice agrees, but decides ere long that he will gladly lose the wager.

THE AMBITIOUS BOOTBLACK.—WANTED—A negro page boy. Apply 76 Madame Blume. This is the sign a white bootblack reads, and decides to make up as a darky for the position. His troubles and joys will prove tremendously entertaining.

HIS FIRST SWEETHEART.—Visit your youthful days by seeing this clever enactment of Cupid's first effects upon young hearts.

The sweet maiden of our story is fortunately enabled to save his sweetheart's home from the vandalism of two bold robbers.

THE BEAUTIFUL DOMAINS OF TARN.—A trip along this famous tributary of the Garonne river in southwestern France. We ride about forty miles in boat, between wonderful cliffs and forest covered slopes.

MELIES.

IN THE HOT LANDS.—Nell, an independent and somewhat obstinate girl, receives an invitation to attend a dance. She asks her mother for money to buy a new dress. Her mother, a hard working woman, who has to toil early and late night, feels that her request involves an unnecessary extravagance and soon denies it. Nell answers her sharply and leaves in a sullen mood.

While working in the hot, broiling sun, the mother is overcome with the heat. The doctor is called and says that unless ice is produced within two hours, the mother's life cannot be saved. Nell determines to make amends for her harshness, mounts her pony and takes another horse as a relay, for she knows her journey will be away and rides like mad, secures the ice and returns upon her journey homeward.

She is attacked by a desperado, who steals her horse. Inspired with the urgency of her mission and the strength of her will to save, she starts out in the face of many obstacles, dangers and the distance to complete the journey on foot.

Dragging what remains of the ice and toiling under the burden, she reaches the door of her home with enough remaining strength to make her presence known, falling unconscious before the door step.

The door is opened and Nell with her precious burden is lifted into the house. The ice is applied to her mother's head and soon she recovers from the prostration and goes to Nell, who is suffering from the efforts she made to save her mother's life.

LUBIN.

VANITY AND ITS CURE.—John Hart and his wife Effie, were a fairly happy young couple. However, Effie was somewhat peevish and extravagant. These qualities finally led to a quarrel which resulted in Effie going home to her mother, Mrs. Jenkins, to obtain some advice and troubles. Now Mrs. Jenkins realized that there are always two sides to a question, so she called on her son-in-law and asked to have his side explained. After hearing it all, her sympathy was with John. She decided to cure her daughter. She told Effie that she could remain home as long as she liked. Then she discharged her hired girl and told Effie to do the work for her for board. Did result in Effie was weariness of body and soul and blistered hands. She then telegraphed for John to come and get her, but John wanted the cure to be complete and wired back that he was "too busy." Effie's mother had counseled her carefully, but by this time she was so desperate that she determined to return to her husband anyway. From an old trunk, she got the necessary railroad fare and made the trip in her old clothes. John received Effie's note which he read with a smile, and when she was again reinstated as mistress of his house and heart.

WOMAN'S CURIOSITY.—The postman handed little Willie a letter, which little Willie proceeded to lose. Then he went and told his mother, who was in a quandary to know what the letter could have been, so a search was started. A Chinaman was seen to stoop outside the house and pick up something. He was promptly overhauled, but was released when it was found that he had only picked up a laundry check. An old gentleman, in the park, stooped to pick up something and was almost driven to distraction by the time the searchers had satisfied themselves that it was not the missing letter. Other false scents were followed and many people inconvenienced and questioned closely before Willie found the letter and returned it to his mother, who had almost reached a hysterical condition. When mother opened the envelope she found that it contained only a gas bill. Then she had to be resuscitated.

FATHER'S BIRTHDAY RING.—Silas Scruggs was presented with a diamond ring by his wife. his daughter Sarah and his son Sam. Wearing it to his office, he accidentally drew it off and left it inside his glove. During the morning his daughter called with some photographs of Sam which she showed to her father. After she had gone, Mr. Scruggs also went out. When he returned, he surprised his stenographer, Maybelle Martin, looking at Sam's photograph. Now Maybelle had a feeling in her heart for Sam and didn't want Mr. Scruggs to see her examining the photograph, so she concealed it behind her back. A few moments later, Mr. Scruggs missed his diamond ring and remembering that his stenographer had concealed something when he came in, he jumped to the conclusion that it was the ring. He demanded that she show him the contents of her handbag. The young woman refused to do so and Mr. Scruggs suddenly entered the office. Then she refused to open her handbag because she had concealed Sam's photograph in it. When Mr. Scruggs discovered that night he told of the loss of his ring and of his suspicions of the stenographer. A few moments later, he found the ring in his glove. Now, Sam had a feeling in his heart for Maybelle too, and he quite evidently went to work and explained his father's mistake so well that he and Maybelle became engaged. The next day, however, morning Sam brought Maybelle to his father's office, where Mr. Scruggs had the double pleasure of apologizing and giving the young folks his blessing.

EDISON.

THE RIVAL CANDIDATES.—Both wifey and hubby are interested in local politics, but their views are so entirely different that both consider the other wrong. Hubby thinks that the only time when she tells him if women voted much of the graft would be eliminated from city politics. Immediately, hubby wants to know which women when she tells him if women voted much of the graft would be eliminated from city politics. Immediately, hubby wants to know which fashionable communities, police and fire boards, taxes, etc.

When the time comes for choosing a candidate for Mayor, hubby is nominated by his party. All seems to be going smoothly until wifey learns, until wifey is nominated on the opposition ticket, and then hubby gets cold feet.

Election day comes, you can see the adherents of each candidate working hard for votes. Hubby is working for his wife's election with them. When she smiles at a man, that's enough—with the women her gowns with more votes. It would not be right if he who wins out. That would spoil the interest of the film.

THE WRITING ON THE BLOTTER.—Through the thoughtlessness of a bank clerk, a man is falsely accused and sent to jail. His wife, who believes him innocent, secures employment as a stenographer, which becomes a source of trouble her husband's manager.

One day she becomes quite interested in a conversation he is having and thus finds out he is the criminal. She then lets it become known who she is, and the real thief is brought to justice.

Independent Film Stories.

AMERICAN.

THE SHERIFF'S SWEETHEART.—Out in the desolate desert towns of New Mexico, there is many an honorable citizen whose life is haunted by a past, which if read by others, would undoubtedly mean him a fugitive from his native heath and drove him into the wilds and open spaces of the far West. Even there, sometimes the law ferrets him out and drives him further and further from civilization, where there is a chance for reparation.

So it was with Dad Boulter, the much beloved old justice of Crazy Gulch. For years he has lived there with his daughter, the pride of the gulch, and then one day there came to him a letter from the East, warning him that the next mail would carry a letter appraising the community of his self-confessed crime and approaching the little western home, so acting upon an impulse of self-preservation, the justice buckled on his pistol and rode to the outskirts of the town, held up the stage and confiscated the mail bag. Then he fled into the mountains and the justice fled before the pursuit of the young sheriff and his posse.

It happened that the sheriff was betrothed to Nell, the daughter of the justice, and the strong struggle between love and duty when he realized who his fugitive was, makes an intense dramatic situation. The justice was wounded in the chase and staggering home by his horse, where his daughter bind his wound and hide him from the posse.

The loyal girl hid her father under a bundle of clothing and admitted the sheriff. Her ruse was a failure and the presence of the old man was discovered. It was apparently all up when the clever girl proposed that the father be allowed

NESTOR.

IN THE COMMISSIONED RANKS.—Jolly Col. Anderson was a big manly chap, but for all that he was something of a "spooney," and had never lost an opportunity of "dragging a feminine to a hop." Nor had gay, pleasure-loving Mildred Demarre ever lost an opportunity of attending one.

Still had she but dreamed that the captain spoke the truth when he insisted that their little Edith was really ill, nothing would have induced her to go. But the child had repeatedly assured her mother that she felt perfectly well, and Mildred flitted away happy and content.

Surgeon Blockwell had no sooner examined the little one, however, than he sent Private Wells in search of Captain Demarre, who was officer of the day, and instructed him to bring Mrs. Demarre home at once.

But no infuriated was the captain at what he considered the mother's neglect, that words passed between himself and Col. Anderson, and but for the interference of Captain Woods, might have resulted in blows. Instantly the colonel summoned Sergeant Kirby, his orderly, and the unhappy father was placed under arrest.

Without a moment's delay, kind-hearted Major Miller assisted the hysterical wife to her home. But alas, already it was too late! Little Edith had breathed her last.

Shocked at the tragedy, for which he felt in a manner responsible, Col. Anderson sent the captain, under guard, to his wife, instead of offering her the consolation of which she stood so sadly in need, however, the husband upbraided her so bitterly that a separation seemed inevitable.

Indeed, as soon as the little one was laid to rest, Mrs. Demarre packed her trunks and prepared to leave. Their mutual friends pleaded in vain; even on the day set for her departure. Col. Anderson called to bring about a reconciliation.

Here, he found the couple in a heated dispute over the child's little frocks and toys. But, succeeded, nevertheless, in getting them to promise that each would take half; then wisely slipped into the next room to await results.

With streaming eyes and loving hands, husband and wife grudgingly divided their little darling's things. Each held a memory of its own; each was so dear, so precious in the eyes of the bereaved parents.

At last her doll, the beloved companion of her childish joys and sorrows was disclosed. Hungrily they reached for the cherished toy, accidentally their hands met. For an instant the couple gazed into each other's eyes. Then suddenly the barrier was swept away! The wife clasped her arms about her husband's neck, while he gently and tenderly soothed her weeping.

GREAT NORTHERN.

THE SON OF THE EXECUTIONER.—The old executioner, nevertheless, feels a professional pride in his occupation, and designs that his son shall succeed him. Accordingly on the crown of his head is branded a cross such as his father wears. The young man, however, has a repugnance to this grim occupation, and he runs away to seek his fortune. However, no one will have anything to do with the man who bears the hated brand on his head, and the young man is at his wit's end to know what to do until a fellow traveler he renders some service, gives him a magic sword, with which he performs many deeds of valor and rescues a princess who is besieged by highwaymen. He is received at the palace and made much of. A devastating fire occurs there, accompanied by many thrilling scenes. The princess imperils her chosen maids is in danger of losing her life in the flames. The executioner's son goes to the rescue, but as he emerges bearing his unconscious burden, the cross off and the hideous cross is revealed. Instantly are immediately cries of execration at the thought that this "unclean" person has been in the confidence of the king, and the young man's life is in danger until the queen appears pleased for him. The king gets over the difficulty of the ignoble origin by making him a knight and he weds the princess.

IMP.

"THE FISHER MAID."—Paula, the fisher maid, meets her fellow as he returns from a fishing voyage, Ambrose Penten, the sweetheart of Paula, arrives and is greeted affectionately. Ambrose asks the girl to be his wife, she consents, and tells her father. The honest old fisherman is doubtful of the morals of Ambrose and his suspicions are confirmed when he sees his daughter's lover in the company of a woman of his own social set. The daughter is mercilessly summoned and locking through a gate, they see Ambrose kiss the girl.

Paula resolves to end her life and staggers to the beach, throws the oars out of a fishing boat and, seating herself in the boat, is washed out to sea. Her father noting her absence, procures a search, aided by the villagers. They discover the missing boat and the oars on the sand and Ambrose, missing his sweetheart, calls at the home of her father. He finally gathers from them that Paula, thinking him false, has gone to sea to end her life. He explains to the father, who fails unconscious.

Ambrose starts to find the girl, and is successful. Stumbling over rocks on an island, with the spray dashing over him, he finds Paula lying at the water's edge. He takes her in his arms and swims for the mainland, arriving at the home of the father, exhausted. Paula is revived. The face of Ambrose is the first one she sees when regaining consciousness. He tells her the supposed rival is his sister, and she is overjoyed.

The finale is a pretty scene, with Ambrose and Paula on the seashore. The latter maid has been transformed into a stylishly garbed woman. Ambrose draws her to him and with her parasol writes on the sand, "Mr. Wife."

"THE SECRET OF THE PALM."—Basil Alden is the foreman of the Candy fruit ranch in Cuba and also a favorite suitor for the hand of Bella, the daughter of the plantation owner.

The mother of Don Alvarez, an old time friend of Candy, sends her son to the region that the vicinity of her schoolmate of years ago. Don Alvarez sees Edna, and is smitten by her charms. He also sees Basil for the handsome foreman and plots his ruin. Basil is entrusted with the mail bag and rides away to the landing.

Count agrees Edna while scanning from the motorboat and that engage in a little tiff. The scene is broken in upon by the Spaniard, who steals forth and takes the mail pouch from Basil's horse. The rascals comes out for his theft is filed gone. Candy is accused of having robbed the mail pouch.

Don Alvarez decides to execute it in the topmost branches of a palm tree. Later, Don Alvarez receives a letter from his mother summoning his betrothed that she has sent him money in a former mail, and the villain discovers that it is in the sack that he has secreted in the tree.

Learning he is about to be executed Basil discovers Juan and Cecil. He hears his hard and false accusing with true the bag. He is found, untied and sent on the trail of the false Don and Cecil. The honest young fellow overtakes his rival to the ranch and Candy is summoned. Juan has picked up the mail bag and follows, meantime. Her entrance with the bag rouses the Spaniard to fury, with his dying breath, he confesses his crime absolving Cecil from all blame. Cecil is pardoned to the favor of Candy, and Juan is taken to his arms. Don Alvarez dies and the inference is, that Cecil is promoted from ranch manager to son-in-law.

BISON.

"OWANEE'S GREAT LOVE."—An Indian woman to whom Powerful Bear, a young warrior loves Owanee, a fair-faced maiden. The father of the girl for pecuniary has agreed to a marriage to accept without attending the Big Bear, but Owanee is surprised at the bridegroom and he and her lover arrange an elopement. Owanee visits the battleground at night and succeeds in finding the body of her lover. Her father gathers and friends for the attacking band and speedy sailing canoe and the Indians flee.

"A WARRIOR'S FAITH."—Indian custom is carried and made a matter. By custom a Medicine Man is required to marry. Upon some point of difficulty are taken between and are to be finished at the altar. The priest, consenting to consummate the rite of marriage. Red Eagle and Morning Star's guardians for the second and meet with a reception. Both young lovers are disappointed and the Medicine Man is soon found becoming aware and espouses the persons of Morning Star, the proceeding for which ceremony is meant to prove.

AMBROSIO

TWEEDLEDUM AS AVIATOR.—Tweedledum enters an aeroplane drawn by a team. Accessories are bundled about the fragments including pumps, a bicycle, a lawn mower, a sewing machine, and finally the machine operates. His first award flight ends when the lawn mower propellers through a roof and the finish down the latter and he emerges ends when the engine put him in a car.

ESCAPE OF THE VICTORY OF CAUCASUS.—A picked team of acrobats which performed startling feats on trapezes. Groups of two and six give thrilling exhibitions of gymnastics in pairs of twenty. Pedestals are placed off the ground at full ceiling, and altogether this subject forms a pleasing diversion from the ordinary program.

THEATRICAL ARCHITECT

FRANZ-CARL-KOENIG

OFFICE, STUDIO AND SHOPS 4912 TO 20 PARKSIDE AVE. PHILA.

We not only make Plans and build

Theatres and Vaudeville Houses

We also build

MOVING PICTURE THEATRES

We have built over 60 Theatres the last 5 years which are all ORIGINAL in Construction, Design and Decorations

Write and get your ADVERTISING SLIDE PROPOSITION and make money between reels. Slides are being placed for large advertisers by us. Let us hear from you.

Independent Ad. Co., 141-147 West 45th St., New York

Ambrosio is famous for these cavalry pictures, and this one compares favorably with previous efforts.

RELIANCE.

"TANGLED LINES."—Rosalind, a beautiful gypsy girl, is being baited by the town roughies, and in trying to escape falls and injures her arm. Dick Waite, appearing upon the scene, thrashes the girl's tormentors and takes her home to his mother, where she is tenderly cared for. Dick falls in love with Rosalind and she marries him, his aged parents approving of their new daughter-in-law. Some time later Dick, dabbling in chemistry, loses his sight by an explosion. Rosalind's wonderful voice has caused widespread comment, and she is visited by an operatic impresario, who develops her talents and presents her to the public. She makes an instantaneous hit, and is soon besieged by admirers. Her triumph in the metropolis and the wealth and luxury of her surroundings work a revulsion of feeling against her simple-hearted, stricken husband and his humble home, and listening to the fervid wooing of a wealthy young man, she decides to divorce Dick, and writes him to this effect. The next day, however, her accusing conscience brings a flood of memories, and she recoils in horror and remorse at her brutal action. Hoping to intercept the letter and prevent its receipt by Dick, she takes a fast train to the home town, to find that a mightier hand than the law has freed her from her bonds for the shock of her perfidy has broken poor Dick's heart and his lifeless form awaits her. Realizing the loss of Dick and his true, loyal love, she falls at his feet in a storm of tears and anguish.

LUX.

BILL IN LOVE AGAIN.—Bill, the comedian, becomes a sailor. He leaves his fond parents and goes in search of adventure and other species of

Released

TUESDAY

MARCH 14th, 1911

Come Back To Erin

A Real IRISH Picture full of COMEDY that will make you roar and laugh 'till you ache.

DON'T MISS IT

Synopsis elsewhere

flirtation which brought about an almost tragedy.

Just how she contrived to save the American's life at the risk of her own, and then proved her love for her Spanish sweetheart forms an excellent story which has been conveyed to film in a striking and original manner.

HIS DOUBLE TREASURE.—Imagine befriending an injured seaman and hearing from his lips the strange story of a buried treasure which had lain hidden for a great many years where even the old seaman who possessed a map of the location had not been able to find it. Then you begin to see an interesting plot with possibilities for many novel situations.

Upon the death of the seaman, the map was carefully gone over and sent to the nephew of the man, to whom it was bequeathed by the dead seaman, with minute instructions how to proceed with the search.

The nephew, fresh from college, was cruising about for his health, finally stopping off at Bermuda, where, fortunately, the map indicated the treasure might be found. Receiving his uncle's letter and instructions, he entered into the spirit of the quest for the excitement of the venture rather than in the belief that he would really find the hidden gold; but he little dreamed that a pretty girl and two murderous brigands would add to the excitement.

His experiences before locating the treasures were rather thrilling for a young college chap and the film is made to show them. That he lost the treasure the moment it reached his hands is also a part of the narrative, but the pretty girl through cleverness and bravery, not only saved his life but restored the treasure to him and you can guess what followed.

ECLAIR.

AN UNFORSEEN INTRODUCTION.—The young young Viscount is not anxious to marry; he is bored because tonight he is to meet the young woman his parents have chosen to be his wife! While out

Powers Picture Plays

Tuesday Saturday

trouble in disguise. One night, amid a terrible storm, his ship strikes a rock and Bill manages to save himself and reach an island. Before he is rescued from this island, he manages to fall in love with Princess Ohyonkiddo, a lady with a weakness for glass beads and a cannibal by profession. Bill persuades the royal personage to accompany him to his home in Flatbush and become his better fifty per cent. He then advises his parents that he will soon arrive with his intended. His parents are overjoyed at the prospect of seeing their "Little Willie" settle down, but they change their mind when he arrives with a parrot, who speaks excellent English and possesses a large vocabulary, a monkey, possessed of an insatiable thirst for knowledge, and a wife, with cannibalistic tendencies. Then the sport commenced and things reach a climax on the wedding day. Bill is finally prevailed upon to sell his intended to a travelling showman instead of marrying her. Heave ho! my hearties and that's what poor patrons will do if you only give them this chance.

JONES' REMEDY.—Jones wants to get married. He's got the time, he's got the place, and he's got the girl, but her pop won't let her, having had some experience himself in the matrimonial game. Jones, however, pays no heed to this friendly action, but determines to go still deeper into the realms of trouble and get married. How he does it is a secret, but still if I tell you keep it to yourself. He secures a powder and it makes everybody hustle when taken a dose. Paps and the whole What's-the-name family get on the hustle, and Jones gets married amid the condolences of his bachelor friends.

YANKEE.

THE TEST OF LOVE.—Carmencita, wild, carefree daughter of Spain, fair of face and with voluptuous form; the favorite dancer of Madrid's wine gardens, was fascinated by an American tourist and just to tease her lover, kept up a continuous

Released

SATURDAY

MARCH 18th, 1911

His Mind's Tragedy

A DRAMA

Full of intense situations and dramatic happenings that will soften the hardest heart.

Get Ready To Advertise

Ogallalah The Indian Play

The Powers Co.

241st St. and Richardson Ave.

New York City

walking, he notices a beautiful girl whom he loves at first sight; he immediately follows her, scheming some means for making his addresses to her. That evening, much the worse for his experience, he presents himself at the home of his bride-to-be —imagine his surprise when, by some odd chance, the young girl, just home from school, to whom he is forthwith presented, is none other than the young maiden whose beauty had attracted him earlier in the day and caused him so much agitation!

A DAY OF STORMS.—Jack has gone out without an umbrella! Before long a storm comes on and he is in a sad plight. He cannot wait until the rain stops, as he has a great many calls to make. In his dilemma, Jack seeks shelter under the umbrella of a passerby, but soon discovers that his company is violently objected to. Next he endeavors to take refuge under a shed, but there are already too many people there, and he cannot keep dry. Shoved out again into the storm, Jack rushes under a window hoping there to gain some protection from the elements. Alas! He leans too heavily against the sash, the window yields to his weight, and next moment Jack lands in a bath-tub with a mighty splash. Being pursued by a lodger, Jack is obliged once more to take refuge—this time in a baker's oven, whence he emerges dry—perhaps a little too dry.

CHAMPION.

THE GIRL AND THE OATH.—Amy and Helene are sisters. The boys on their father's ranch are about to commence the regular round-up, and are to be gone for almost a half year, for the boundaries of the old ranchman's lands are far between and his cattle number hundreds of thousands. Favorite among the boys is Tom, and this is true with the girls also, who are actually in love with him. However, Tom's love is bestowed on Helene.

As the boys, on this day, are bidding all good-by, Tom is upstairs being secretly wedded to Helene by the parson, who had entered through the window.

Not long after the boys had left the ranchman is mortally stricken. Before passing away he confides to Amy that Helene is not her sister.

The cowboys return eight months later and preparations are made for a rousing welcome by the girls. Then Amy realizes the love of Tom for Helene. Amy enters the festooned room alone, despairing everything her hands clutched and crying aloud the sister who had succeeded, and proclaims to the crowd that Helene is not her sister.

Tom then acknowledges his secret marriage, whereupon Amy utters a shriek and falls into the arms of the boys.

Weeks after, upon recovering from her illness, Amy attempts to leave, but is intercepted by Helene, who finds a bit of news which turns her sorrow into joy. She will stay and help care for the coming child. Whereupon love is again awakened to her.

POWERS.

COME BACK TO ERIN.—An American lawyer arrives on a scene of a party of merry-makers assembled for the purpose of crowning Molly Bawn queen of the May. He is in search of the heiress to the Blarney estate. Squire O'Neill, who has been in possession of this estate for some time, was informed by letter to aid the American lawyer to find Molly Bawn. The squire realizing if the heiress is found he will have to give up possession of the estate. Knowing there is a will he connives to get possession of it. Molly Bawn's father is waylay the post boy who has been entrusted with the will with instruction to deliver it to Judge Bankside. Regan attacks the boy and secures the claimed mistress of Blarney Castle. Regan is overjoyed to find that he is not a murderer, the squire promises to restore to her one of the rooms of the castle, who in turn takes unto herself the Squire's cousin as her husband.

SOLAX.

OUT OF THE ARCTIC.—Helen Morris is loved by Dr. Hartley, and while she does not care for the Doctor, she is so urgently begged by her father to accept him that she frankly consents to do so. Later she meets Walter Hamilton, a young couple fall in love. The doctor surprises them during a secret visit, the young lovers are oblivious to all the world and start to uphold Helen for her faithlessness.

Hereupon Hamilton tells the doctor that she cannot become his wife and returns his ring. An arctic expedition is being quietly organized of which the doctor is the head, and he continues to urge Helen to accept him by signing on for the voyage.

When Hartley learns the news of Walter not to go. Walter tells her that it would be impossible for him to back out now. Helen then seeks Dr. Hartley and begs him to release her lover. The doctor consents. Helen finally swears him upon a crucifix that she wears that he will release her lover to her unharmed. The doctor takes this oath and the expedition departs.

We next see the members of the expedition on their ship in the Arctic. The ship is crushed by the ice and an explosion occurs. The doctor and Walter are the only ones alive. They remain there for some time. Finally they go south. Walter is seized by snow blindness and succumbs to the snow house within which they seek shelter.

Far south a fete is in progress. Among the fair we see Helen. Suddenly she faints. The scene in the northern wilds is before her gaze. Wildly she turns to her father and requests him to take her away. The family, acting upon Helen's insistence depart for the north, and we see them in the hot house. Walter is heard from the outside of the door and finally Walter—the former having carried the sick boy on his back the whole distance. He staggers in with his burden and falls prone upon the floor.

REX.

THE FALL OF A KNIGHT.

All over the world there is a fall, but never the fall of a night like this. Many times since knighthood was in flower and seen after it withered, many times and many evening knights have come to pedestals, whereupon they fain would climb down to the floor of earth, but which they have not done.

Her parents desire her to marry a nobleman, but she and a certain lie do not agree with the old folks' decision. The father inserts an advertisement in the newspapers inviting noblemen to call at his home for matrimonial and monetary purposes. An impecunious waiter reads the ad and at once determines to enter the lists in the role of a nobleman. He writes that he will call, and the two young people forthwith arrange for his call. The "nobleman" gets a bottle to permit him to don his clothes and assume his role position in life the "count" engages Biddy the cook to impersonate herself, the heiress.

The count makes his entrance and is entranced by the elevated Biddy. Things go well, when Biddy's brave, the traditional policeman, passing the window, sees the love scene and makes a hasty and formidable appearance. After a strenuous strife while the Count finds himself on the cold, unsympathetic pavement, where, a little later, the girl's parents, returning home, find him. With profuse apologies they escort him back to the house—where suddenly the girl's lover recognizes him as a waiter at a favorite restaurant. That settles it. For the second time, and with worse results, through the window we see a "knight-fall."

AMONG THE EXHIBITORS

Wilkes-Barre, Pa.—The Empire Moving Picture Theatre, on East Market Street, has been purchased by H. W. Clouser.

Weatherly, Pa.—Mr. John McCollus has opened a moving picture show at Park View. He has fitted up Holly's Hall, which has a seating capacity of 400, and is now doing a good business.

Youngstown, Ohio.—Announcement has been made here that Messrs. Walter Hanlein and Paul Fitch have secured the lease of Keith's and Champion Street, to Messrs. Feller and Shea, the present lessees of the Park Theater. The new management will conduct the theater for moving picture and vaudeville house.

New York City.—A new moving picture theater has been purchased on Third Avenue, near Allen.

Cleveland, Ohio.—J. Klein will erect a new moving picture theater at Broadway avenue and East 55th Street, which will have a seating capacity of 500. The cost is to be $10,000.

Belleville Falls, Vt.—Mr. Frank Pickett has sold his Union Hall Picture Theater to the Rosenberg Theater and Amusement Company. This company operates the picture shows at Bucklaud, Vt., and in Rochester, N. H., and one in Swanton, Vt.

Bradford, Pa.—Mr. Budd Gordon has purchased the Parlor Motion Picture Theater, at 437 Penn Street, from George W. Bernstiehn for $1,000.

Charlestown, W. Va.—Mr. Klausmeier is making arrangements to open a moving picture theater at 510 Lowell Street, to be known as the Pastime.

Oakwood, Mo.—W. J. Hall has given information regarding the establishment of a new moving picture theater in Oakwood.

Philadelphia, Pa.—John Kreelim has had plans prepared by Architects Stearns & Kastor for the erection of a new moving picture theater, at 2360 Kensington Avenue.

Iowa City, Iowa.—Fred Bowers is preparing to open a new moving picture theater at 8 Dubuque Street.

Johnstown, Pa.—George Panagotacos is planning the erection of a new theater here.

New York, N. Y.—The Kesler Lyric Theater Company has secured a new theater at Fifth Avenue and 116th Street.

Vancouver, Wash.—Messrs. Rice & Rutenber, of Portland, Ore., have leased the Star Theater from William Rasmus.

Mount Iowa.—Messrs. Arthur A. Heffner are making arrangements to open a new vaudeville and moving picture theater here. It will be known as the Grand.

Montgomery, Pa.—Frank Kelly has purchased the interest of his partner, Benjamin Shelly, in the moving picture theater here.

Portland, Ore.—H. E. Bruns will erect a new moving picture theater on Rose Avenue.

Allison Hill, Pa.—M. A. Keiner, of Harrisburg, will erect a new moving picture theater at 7 South Fifteenth Street.

Hutchinson, Kan.—C. B. Yost has sold his interest in the Elite theater here to Wayne Martin.

Venice, Cal.—Messrs. Ocean Park Co. will erect a new theater at the corner of Horizon Avenue and Ocean Front.

Portage, Wis.—The Peerless Amusement Company is planning to establish moving picture theaters throughout the city of Portage, Wisconsin.

Prairie du Chien, Wis.—J. McWilliam has purchased the moving picture theater here.

Brighton, Ill.—W. R. Hunt and Mr. G. Hunt are making arrangements to open a new moving picture theater here.

Hastings, Minn.—H. J. Lovejoy has sold his interest in the moving picture theater at Chicago Heights to Harry Baskerville.

Portland, Ore.—Architects Bennes & Hendricks have completed the plans and specifications for the erection of a new theater for the Keating & Flood Company, to be located at the corner of West Park and Morrison Streets.

Minot, N. Dak.—R. H. Emerson & Son are having plans drawn for the erection of a new theater here.

Grand Rapids, Mich.—Charles H. Miles has purchased the Temple Theater.

Williamsport, Pa.—Mr. Robert Hancock has let the contract for the erection of a new moving picture theater on Liberty Avenue to the Central Construction Company.

Ferest in the Theater Royal lease to C. J. Morey.

Grand Forks, N. Dak.—Joseph H. Singer, of Towner, N. D., has purchased the Royal Theater here.

Allentown, Pa.—S. B. Walker has purchased the Lyric Theater here from Mark Sanderowitz, of Siegfried.

Sterling, Ill.—R. T. Ingrill is contemplating the establishment of a new moving picture theater here.

Greenview, Ill.—A. W. Ackerman is preparing to open a new moving picture theater here.

New York, N. Y.—The Eighty-sixth Street Theater Company has secured a permit for the erection of a new theater at the corner of 86th Street and Third Avenue.

Topeka, Kan.—Paul Mulvane and J. W. Elliott are making arrangements to open a new moving picture theater here.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Louis Becker will erect a new moving picture theater at 969 Jefferson Street.

Martinez, Cal.—Mr. Joseph A. Kelly is planning the erection of a new vaudeville and moving picture theater here.

Longmont, Colo.—A. H. Buckley is preparing to start a new moving picture theater here.

Silver City, Iowa.—E. H. Zanders has purchased from George A. Pratt the Malvern Theater outfit.

Portland, Ore.—A. Ferrin has secured a permit for the erection of a new moving picture theater on Grand Avenue.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Messrs. Lashner & Friedman have commenced the erection of a new moving picture theater at 1511 Fifth Street.

Liverpool, N. Y.—George L. Gramer, of Syracuse, is preparing to open a new moving picture theater here at the Hall Block.

Estherville, Iowa.—Charles Howe is making arrangements to open a new moving picture theater in the Aiken Building.

Roseville, Cal.—Griffith & Cox have purchased from Mr. Ed. Owens the Roseville Theater here.

Martinez, Cal.—Joseph A. Kelly is planning the erection of a new moving picture theater here.

Rhinelander, Wis.—Mr. Frank Bellows is planning the erection of a new theater here.

Chicago, Ill.—The Consumers Film and Supply Company, capital, $2,500. Incorporators, George Apfel, W. W. Mackey and F. C. Beers.

Denver, Col.—The Pantages Theater Company, capital, $25,000. Directors, H. Lloyd Lent, Oliver T. Cowgill and H. P. Rowe.

St. Louis, Mo.—The Hendricks Amusement Company, capital, $10,000. Directors, Ben E. Wheeler and Frederick Hendricks.

Indianapolis, Ind.—The Star Theater Company, Capital, $1,500. Directors, Mr. Harry Platt, Sam D. Smith and Mrs. Jessie Smith.

Web City, Mo.—The Mystic Theater Company, capital, $5,000. Directors, Nora Wineland, Benjamin F. Arter and A. Gordon.

Chicago, Ill.—The Ottawa Amusement Company, capital, $25,000. Incorporators, Simon G. Gay, George H. Hudnutte and Reese C. Hirt.

Toledo, Ohio.—The Empress Amusement Company. Capital, $5,000. Directors, J. B. Gardner, Laughlin and John C. Reed.

Chicago, Ill.—The Cosmos Brennan Bean Co.

New Bedford, Mass.—Announcement has been made that Mr. C. A. Gallivan will erect a new moving picture and vaudeville theater for the north end of the city. It will be ready for opening by the early part of May. The location of this new enterprise is on Acushnet Avenue between Coffin and Phillips Avenues.

Omaha, Neb.—Mr. Charles Bush has rented for five years the second floor of Mr. Hadley's restaurant and will convert it into a high-class moving picture theater.

Fairbury, Neb.—The Majestic Moving Picture Theater on B Street has added vaudeville features to its program.

New Haven, Conn.—Theater managers in Waterbury and Hartford have written letters to the legislature asking for permit to exhibit moving picture shows on Sunday.

Norfolk, Va.—The Olympic, a new moving picture show, will open in Brambleton this week under the management of Mr. Charles T. Bland, who has recently managed the Dreamland Theater for several years.

Neenah, Wis.—Messrs. W. E. McCanna and H. B. Smith have purchased from the Western Film Company, of Milwaukee, the Majestic Theater in Appleton, one of the largest in the State and will convert it into a high-class moving picture and vaudeville theater.

Emmett, Idaho.—Mr. J. Meyers has bought the moving picture show of Mr. Larkin and will combine the regular performances at the old stand for the present, but will soon move to the I. O. O. F. Hall on East Main Street.

Newton, Iowa.—The Star Theater, which was owned by W. J. Shriver was sold to Mr. Andy Armstrong.

Cincinnati, Ohio.—Building permits were issued to Thomas Maloney for the erection of a moving picture theater at the northeast corner of Bunnel and Hillsdale Avenue, $6,000.

Duluth, Minn.—The Rialto Theater which for about two years has been conducted by J. F. Fulda, has been sold to Messrs. Lund and Gallagher.

Helena, Mont.—Helena is to have a new moving picture theater, Mr. W. J. Harding, of the Orpheum circuit, having secured a lease on the property now occupied by the Great Northern Express Company on the corner at the east of Grand Street. All of the latest improved films will be exhibited here.

Aitkin, Minn.—A new moving picture theater is being erected which will be located in the former home of the Aitkin Theater. It is known as the Oriental Theater and under the proprietorship of Mr. Frank Cannon.

Creighton, Neb.—The owners of the Green Theater building are remodeling it into a modern store to being converted into a moving picture theater, which will be under the management and proprietorship of Mr. L. F. McDonald.

Hayward, Wis.—Mr. H. E. Vance has bought an interest in the Unique Motion Picture Theater.

Licensed Release Dates

BIOGRAPH.

Feb. 9—Pinkelli's Engagement Kiss (Com.)..997
Feb. 13—What Shall We Do With Our Old? (Dr.)..994
Feb. 16—Father Forks (Dr.)..998
Feb. 20—The Diamond Star (Dr.)..996
Feb. 23—His Daughter (Dr.)..997
Feb. 27—The Lad of the Mountains (Dr.)..999
Mar. 2—The Heart of a Savage (Dr.)..991
Mar. 6—A Decree of Destiny (Dr.)..995
Mar. 9—Conscience (Dr.)..998

EDISON.

Feb. 8—Two Valentines (Com.)..1000
Feb. 10—His Final Confession (Dr.)..999
Feb. 14—The Rajah (Dr.)..1000
Feb. 15—The Ransom of Red Chief (Dr.)..
Feb. 17—A Stage Romance (Dr.)..
Feb. 21—The Rival Singers (Dr.)..999
Feb. 22—Mr. Bumptious, Detective (Com.)..999
Feb. 24—The Price of Victory (Dr.)..1000
Feb. 28—The Iron Master (Dr.)..1000
Mar. 1—The Rival Candidates (Com.)..
Mar. 2—The Writing on the Letter (Dr.)..
Mar. 7—Love and The Stock Market (Dr.)..
Mar. 8—A Night of Terror (Com.)..
Mar. 8—The Old Family Bible (Dr.)..
Mar. 10—How Bella Was Won (Com.)..

ESSANAY.

Feb. 7—Ten Words for Twenty-five Cents (Com.)..425
Feb. 11—The Bad Man's Downfall (Dr.)..1000
Feb. 14—Getting Sister Married (Com.)..
Feb. 18—Cattleman's Daughter (Dr.)..
Feb. 21—Their Wedding Gifts (Com.)..550
Feb. 21—Just as the Clock Struck Nine (Com.) 412
Feb. 25—The Outlaw and the Child (W. Dr.)..1000
Feb. 28—Taming A Tyrant (Com.)..1000
Mar. 4—On The Desert's Edge (W. Dr.)..
Mar. 7—The Little Drudge (Dr.)..
Mar. 11—The Romance on "Bar O" (W. Dr.) 1000
Mar. 14—Oh You Teacher (Com.)..1000

GAUMONT.
G. Kleine.

Feb. 25—Paganini and the Countess Beatrice (Dr.)..998
Feb. 28—Matrimonial Epidemic (Com.)..813
Feb. 28—Zafont and Polas' Last Flight (Sc.)..185
Mar. 4—The Tramp's Find (Dr.)..980
Mar. 4—Forbidden Cigarettes (Com.)..335
Mar. 7—The Barber's Daughter (Com.)..505
Mar. 7—The Ambitious Bootblack (Com.)..450
Mar. 11—His First Sweetheart (Com.)..560
Mar. 11—The Beautiful Gorges of Tarn (Sc)..415

KALEM.

Feb. 1—The Sheriff's Sister (Dr.)..1000
Feb. 3—The Trail of the Poems Charm (Dr.)..1000
Feb. 8—Little Sister (Dr.)..970
Feb. 10—The Broken Trail (Dr.)..1000
Feb. 15—Grandmother's War Story (Dr.)..975
Feb. 17—The Lost Ribbon (Dr.)..1000
Feb. 22—The Open Road (Dr.)..995
Feb. 24—Priscilla and the Pequot (Dr.)..922
Mar. 1—Sailor Jack's Reformation (Dr.)..1005
Mar. 3—Mexican Filibusterers (Dr.)..1005
Mar. 8—The Irish Honeymoon (Com.)..950
Mar. 10—The Mission Carrier (Dr.)..1000

LUBIN.

Feb. 6—A Double Elopement (Dr.)..990
Feb. 9—The Petticoat Sheriff (Com.)..1000
Feb. 13—The Shoe-Girl's Stratagem (Dr.)..1000
Feb. 16—Getting Even (Com.)..600
Feb. 16—Schultz Has the Smallpox (Com.)..400
Feb. 20—The Test (Dr.)..1000
Feb. 23—Dobbs the Dauber..1000
Feb. 27—Man's Diplomacy..1000
Mar. 2—Uncle's Curiosity..400
Mar. 2—Father's Birthday Ring..600
Mar. 5—Vanity and Its Cure (Dr.)..1000
Mar. 9—His Friend the Burglar (Com.)..1000
Mar. 13—The Actress and The Singer (Dr.)..1000

MELIES.

Jan. 26—How Mary Met the Cowpunchers (Dr.)..980
Feb. 2—Only a Sister (Dr.)..
Feb. 9—Tony the Greaser (Dr.)..980
Feb. 16—Billy and His Pal (Dr.)..1000
Feb. 23—My Particle Flower (W. Com.)..980
Mar. 2—In the Hot Lands (W. Dr.)..960
Mar. 9—The Snake in the Grass (Dr.)..980

PATHE.

Feb. 20—A Buffalo Hunt (Sc.)..336
Feb. 22—Hubby's Troubles (Com.)..672
Feb. 22—Indo-China—Province of Laos (Sc.)..821
Feb. 24—Who Killed Max (Com.)..
Feb. 24—An Escape of Gas (Com.)..802
Feb. 25—The Changeling (Dr.)..1000
Feb. 27—Max Makes Music (Com.)..403
Feb. 27—Pots, Pans & Pastry (Com.)..591
Mar. 1—Oh! You Gilhman! (Com.)..965
Mar. 3—Satan Defeated (Dr.)..750
Mar. 3—Around Constantine, Algeria (Sc.)..200
Mar. 4—Jealousy Foiled (Dr.)..1000
Mar. 6—Max Embarrassed (Com.)..600
Mar. 6—After the Boxing Bout (Com.)..375
Mar. 10—Red Cloud's Devotion (Dr.)..1000
Mar. 10—Undying Love (Dr.)..740
Mar. 10—Regatta on the Mekong River (Sc.)..220
Mar. 11—A Lonely Little Girl (Dr.)..1000

SELIG.

Feb. 13—The Survival of the Fittest (Dr.)....1000
Feb. 16—The Buccaneers (Dr.)....1000
Feb. 20—The Padre (Dr.)....
Feb. 23—The Scoundrel's Sacrifice (Dr.)....
Feb. 27—The Eye of Conscience (Dr.)....
Mar. 2—The Outbreak (Dr.)....1000
Mar. 6—The Little Shepherdess (Dr.)....
Mar. 9—The Medallion (Dr.)....
Mar. 13—The Code of Honor (Dr.)....

URBAN-ECLIPSE.
(G. Kleine.)

Feb. 15—Catherine Howard (Dr.)....1005
Feb. 22—The Golden Sickle (Dr.)....882
Feb. 22—Making a Smokestack (Sc.)....113
Mar. 1—Comrades (Dr.)....638
Mar. 1—Beauties of Sans Souci (Sc.)....362
Mar. 4—The Fury of a Woman Scorned (Dr.)..720
Mar. 8—Beautiful Wye Valley, England (Sc.)..300
Mar. 15—Redemption (Dr.)....508
Mar. 15—The Thames from Oxford to Richmond (Sc.)....472

VITAGRAPH.

Feb. 11—At the White Man's Door (Dr.)....
Feb. 14—Consuming Love (Dr.)....
Feb. 17—The Mummy and the Ghost (Dr.)....
Feb. 18—The New Stenographer (Com.)....
Feb. 21—A Tale of Two Cities. (Part 1.) (Dr.)....1014
Feb. 24—A Tale of Two Cities. (Part 2.) (Dr.)....1013
Feb. 25—A Tale of Two Cities. (Part 3.) (Dr.)....994
Feb. 28—Captain Barnacle's Courtship (Com.)....
Mar. 3—Bertha's Mission (Dr.)....
Mar. 4—Mummy the Ghost....
Mar. 7—The Wild Cat Well (Dr.)....
Mar. 10—Bridegroom's Dilemma (Com.)....
Mar. 11—Red Eagle (Dr.)....

THIS WEEK'S PROGRAM OF LICENSED FILMS.

Monday, March 6th.

Biograph—A Decree of Destiny (Dr.)....995
Lubin—Vanity and its Cure (Dr.)....1000
Pathe—Max Embarrassed (Com.)....600
Pathe—After the Boxing Bout (Com.)....375
Selig—The Little Shepherdess (Dr.)....

Tuesday, March 7th.

Edison—Love and the Stock Market....
Essanay—The Little Drudge (Dr.)....
Gaumont—The Barber's Daughter (Com.)....505
Gaumont—The Ambitious Bootblack (Com.)....450
Vitagraph—The Wild Cat Well (Dr.)....

Wednesday, March 8th.

Edison—A Night of Terror (Com.)....
Edison—The Old Family Bible (Dr.)....
Kalem—The Irish Honeymoon (Com.)....950
Pathe—Red Cloud's Devotion (Dr.)....1000
Urban—The Fury of a Woman Scorned (Dr.)..720
Urban—Beautiful Wye Valley, England (Sc.)..300

Thursday, March 9th.

Biograph—Conscience (Dr.)....995
Lubin—His Friend the Burglar (Com.)....1000
Melies—The Snake in the Grass (Dr.)....980
Selig—The Medallion (Dr.)....

Friday, March 10th.

Edison—How Bella Was Won (Com.)....
Pathe—Undying Love (Dr.)....740
Pathe—Regatta on the Mekong River (Sc.)....220
Kalem—The Mission Carrier (Dr.)....1000
Vitagraph—Bridegroom's Dilemma (Com.)....

Saturday, March 11th.

Essanay—The Romance on "Bar O." (W. Dr.)..1000
Gaumont—His First Sweetheart (Com.)....560
Gaumont—The Beautiful Gorges of Tarn (Sc)..415
Pathe—A Lonely Little Girl (Dr.)....1000
Vitagraph—Red Eagle (Dr.)....

A "W" before the words drama or a comedy specifies that it is a Western drama or a comedy.

Classified Advertisements

[Classified advertisements, three cents per word, cash with order; 50 cents minimum; postage stamps accepted.]

SITUATIONS WANTED.

WANTED.—Good operator would like position anywhere in Vermont. Non-drinker and reliable. Pathe and Powers machines. Reasonable offer accepted with reliable people. F. A. ANTONIOTTI, Box 138, Montpelier, Vt.

AT LIBERTY—A-1 High Baritone singer. Illustrated or spel. Ten years' experience. Sober and reliable. References exchanged. Address, BARITONE, care Moving Picture World.

LADY PIANIST—Experienced, good sight reader, wants position, steady or substituting in moving picture theaters, Brooklyn or New York. Address, TILLOTSON, 1632 71st Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

THEATER FOR SALE.

FOR SALE.—Moving picture theater, the only picture house in a town of 5,000 population, seating capacity, 400. Good location, best reasons for selling. Address, S. A. M., care of Moving Picture World.

FOR SALE.—A profitable Moving Picture and Vaudeville Theater in Grand Forks, North Dakota. Reason for selling, death in family. Write for particulars. Manager, UNIQUE THEATER BEAUTIFUL, Grand Forks, N. Dak.

FOR SALE—Moving picture theater in a Massachusetts town of 100,000 to 125,000. Best location in the town on the main street and at an important transfer point. Seats 700, all on ground floor. T. & D. M., care Moving Picture World.

FOR SALE—One of the largest Moving Picture and Vaudeville Theaters in Washington, D. C. F. O. Box 270, Washington, D. C.

FOR SALE—Moving Picture Theater seating 250. Fine business. Must sell account sickness. Town 12,000. Near Detroit. Address, M. L. FISHER, Wyandotte Theater, Wyandotte, Mich.

EQUIPMENT FOR SALE.

FOR SALE—I will sell my new Edison Exhibition Style Machine complete for $100.00. Never been used. T. Mitchell, 4024 Lexington Street, Chicago, Ill.

EQUIPMENT WANTED.

WANTED—200 second hand theater seats, American Seating Company's preferred. Please state width and cash price. Address, F. RUPERT, 702 Portage Ave., So. Bend, Ind.

WANTED—Powers No. 9 Head. Must be in O. K. condition and cheap. Address, OPERATOR, Gem Theater, South Bend, Ind.

WANTED—New Model Motograph lamp and house complete. Must be cheap for cash. Address, OPERATOR, Gem Theater, South Bend, Ind.

MISCELLANEOUS.

HAND COLORED SLIDES made from any clipping, photo negative. Finest work guaranteed, fifty cents, excellent for vaudeville artists, any lettering included. Photo Specialty Co., Keeseville, N. Y.

WANTED—To rent, by experienced moving picture man, Moving Picture Theater, Hall or Opera House. Address, H. A. E., care Moving Picture World.

"Rex"

Learn to say it.
To the Exchange Man

THE PHILADELPHIA PROJECTION COMPANY

WE buy thirty (30) new reels every week (ask the Sales Co.) and double copies of all the feature reels.
Let us give you a service that will insure your box office receipts.

4 North Ninth St. PHILADELPHIA, PA.

SPECIAL ROLL TICKETS

The Big Ticket. Any Printing Any Colors

5,000 . . . . $1.25 | 20,000 . . . . $4.60 | 50,000 . . . . $7.50
10,000 . . . . $2.50 | 25,000 . . . . $5.50 | 100,000 . . . . $10.00

Get the Samples — Stock Tickets, 6 Cents

NATIONAL TICKET COMPANY - - - Shamokin, Pa.

CALCIUM GAS

Compressed in drums ready for operation for Moving Picture Shows where electricity cannot be had. Absolutely pure gas. Prompt shipments, freight or express.

WRITE FOR OUR TERMS

Complete stock of repair parts for machines and supplies.

Erker Bros. Optical Co.
604 Olive St., St. Louis, Mo.

MOVING PICTURE MACHINES

Stereopticons, Slides, Accessories

CHAS. M. STEBBINS
1028 Main St.
KANSAS CITY, MO
Large Line of Edison Goods
Established 1896

FOR BLANK LEADER, ANY KIND
Write to
WASTE UTILIZATION CO.
227 E. 150th St., New York
TO EXCHANGES: Send for sample bottle Stikwik Cement

St. Patrick's Day SOUVENIRS

No. 1 Metal Shamrock, long pin	$ .75
No. 2 Silk Spun Shamrock, Celtic Girl Harp	1.50
No. 3 Silk Bow Shamrock, Girl Harp Pin, fancy	2.00
No. 4 Satin Ribbon Rosettes, 2 Colored Ribbon	5.00
No. 5 Shamrock, Red Rose Center and Pin	1.15
No. 10 Large Enamel Silk Bow and Horseshoe Pin	2.00
No. 11 Orchid Bouquet Pin, Shamrock spray Silk	2.00
Celluloid Button & Green Hat Any One Seen Kelly	2.00
No. 21 Button and Streamers	2.00
Buttonhole Irish Flags, gross lots only	1.25
Large Catalogue FREE. Sample bow $1.00.
No goods C. O. D. Money order must be in full.

NEWMAN MFG. CO., Cleveland, Ohio

W. E. GREENE FILM EXCHANGE, Inc.

The Oldest and Largest Independent Film Exchange in New England

The House of Quality and Satisfaction

MR. EXHIBITOR :

If you are desirous of finding out how to improve your present service and increase your daily attendance call and have a confidential chat with us. If you are unable to call, drop us a line.

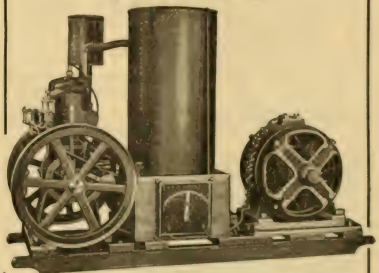
W. E. Greene Film Exchange

INCORPORATED

228 Tremont Street, Boston, Mass.

Telephone 3790 Oxford

Electric Light Plant Complete $210.35



Larger Plants at Proportionately Low Prices.

Including the celebrated DETROIT KEROSENE ENGINE and DYNAMO OF SUFFICIENT CAPACITY TO FURNISH CURRENT FOR YOUR ARC AND 10-16 c. p. TUNGSTEN LAMPS for illumination.

Total cost of operation from 5 to 25 cents per day. Gives you better light than you can buy. Gives you the same light in the afternoon as at night. Can be operated by a ten-year-old child.

CAN MAKE IMMEDIATE SHIPMENT.

DETROIT ENGINE WORKS, 406 Bellevue Avenue, Detroit, Mich., U.S.A.

THE ONE BEST SOUVENIR

S. R. O. EVERY NIGHT

This beautiful Souvenir Spoon is guaranteed Solid Silver Plated French Gray Finish and the latest design. Write today for sample and 3 plans that will fill your house to capacity.

5c. EACH

$5.00 Per Hundred

UNITED STATES FACTORIES CO. MANUFACTURERS 40 Dearborn Street, Chicago

MR. OPERATOR

You Want to Make Some Extra Money

SO DO I

Write Me for Particulars at Once

Give me your exact voltage, cycles, make of machine, length of throw, size of picture and make of carbons. If you have a current saver, state make. I will do the rest. Address Department W.

J. H. HALLBERG
36 East 23d Street New York City

Incandescent Lamps
For Theatres, Parks and Shows
Clear, 6 Cents Colored, 7 Cents
SAFETY ELECTRIC CO.
15 Michigan Ave., Chicago, Ill

Operators, Attention
Does your lamp work stiff? Use my Lubricant, and have it work easy. No smoke, no smell after applying, as it contains no oil. Keeps your lamp from getting rusty and carbon lamps from corroding. Have used it for ten years myself. Trial cake 25c.
W. A. REID, 31½ N. Penn Ave., Atlantic City, N. J.

Sound Effects

In Picture Machine Theaters it is very essential that the imitations and sound effects are of the kind that can be depended upon. We make only practical and serviceable imitations that will give the exact reproduction of the original. We also manufacture Chimes, Tympani, Bells, Xylophones, Drums and accessories.

LEEDY MANUFACTURING COMPANY
1055 E. Palmer St., INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

Cornet Only 15 Cents a Day

This great cornet, the world famous Lyon & Healy, American Standard Regent, will be sent you on approval, without a penny in advance. If you like it after 15 days' free trial, pay only 15 cents a day, or if you prefer, pay cash and we will allow you a liberal discount. Write today for a free trial and full information. Only $2, and cornet is yours. Write today for free trial and full information. Write today.
LYON & HEALY, 28-67 Adams Street, CHICAGO, ILL.

TRANSPLENDENCY
The only perfect amalgamation on the market
FOR MOVING PICTURE CURTAINS
It produces the brightest, clearest and absolutely perfect picture
Theatre fully illuminated during projection
One-third saving in your electric bill
Strictly guaranteed brilliancy
Permanent, cannot crack or peel
Operators and Managers wanted as agents
Write for circular
THE BENJAMIN-GENTER CO.
NEWB GH. N. Y.

"SILVERLIGHT"
Aluminum Motion Picture Curtain
Extraordinary Features Are: Permanent Brilliancy Economy, Flexibility
Non-cracking, Safety, Strength. Send for circular. Dept. M
Ralph J. Golson Supply Co. 84 Wabash Ave., Chicago

READY FOR DELIVERY
MOVING PICTURE WORLD
Bound Volume No 7
JULY TO DECEMBER, 1910
TWO DOLLARS, Each, $2.00 Express charges collect

NEW FIELD BIG MONEY EASY WORK
Why don't you think up plots for Motion Picture plays? It's easy, pays up to $50 a week for good work. Men and women. We teach you and help sell plots. Demand unlimited. Send for particulars.
ASS'D M. P. SCHOOLS
908 Chicago Opera House Bldg. CHICAGO

To the Trade

We are now prepared to manufacture films for educational and advertising purposes. We go anywhere on request. Printing and developing our specialty.

Write for particulars
Demonstrations free of charge

Educational Mov. Picture Mfg. and Adv. Co.
F. W. Hochstetter S. Robinson, Prop.
2226 W. Division St. 408 Smithfield St.
CHICAGO, ILL. PITTSBURGH, PA.

WURLITZER

55TH YEAR 55TH YEAR

Wurlitzer Piano Orchestra built in the front of the Gaither Theater, Cincinnati

The Leading Picture Theaters are Installing

Wurlitzer Automatic Musical Instruments

They furnish better music than musicians and cut out that great expense. 50 different styles. Call at nearest branch or write for big 84-page catalog

THE RUDOLPH WURLITZER COMPANY

CINCINNATI 117 to 121 E. 4th	CHICAGO 266 & 268 Wabash	NEW YORK 25 & 27 W. 32nd	PHILADELPHIA 1835 Chestnut
ST. LOUIS 912 Pine	CLEVELAND 206 Prospect	BUFFALO 701 Main	COLUMBUS, O. 57 E. Main

New Wurlitzer Store Opening Soon at Omaha, Neb.

INDEPENDENT Exclusive PROGRAM

FIRST RELEASE
MARCH 13th

COLUMBIA	CAPITAL
UNITED	FILM DE ART
COLONIAL	REVIER
COMERIO	CINES
MANHATTAN

Communicate immediately with

A. G. WHYTE, Sales Agent
127 East 23d St. New York

The Film Triumphant

Greatest success ever recorded in the annals of Picturedom marks the enthusiastic reception of

The International Sensation

"The Truth About the Pole"

An Absorbing Story of the Arctics Enacted by

Dr. Frederick A. Cook

and a notable supporting cast

Coming direct from its record-breaking New York engagement at

HAMMERSTEIN'S MANHATTAN OPERA HOUSE

where 42,000 spectators saw in motographic drama the hitherto untold story of the world's biggest conspiracy, about which the Nation is now talking.

A Truly Remarkable Film

whose value is multiplied by the appearance in the production of Dr. Cook himself, the most talked about and best advertised man in all the world. A film which both friends and enemies of the explorer will flock to see.

Now Selling State Rights and Booking Big Events

Elegant line of Lithographs, Window Cards, Heralds, Cuts and Lobby Photos ready

Bids for State Rights and other mail matter should be addressed

North Pole Picture Co.

Mosler Building CHICAGO, ILL.

Independent Release Dates

AMERICAN.

Feb. 9—On the Installment Plan (Com.).....560
Feb. 9—Tom Mitch Aunt (Com.).....430
Feb. 13—A Quiet Evening at Home (Com.).....1000
Feb. 16—In the Land of Cactus (Dr.).....1000
Feb. 20—The College Spendthrift (Dr.).....960
Feb. 23—Strategy (Dr.).....980
Feb. 27—The Sheriff's Sweetheart (W. Dr.)...800
Feb. 27—The Silence System (Com.).....200
Mar. 2—College Chums (Dr.).....975
Mar. 6—Hypnotising a Hypnotist (Com.).....615
Mar. 6—Memories (Dr.).....375
Mar. 9—The Rich and The Poor (Dr.).....1000

ATLAS.

Jan. 25—Irish Hearts (Dr.).....
Feb. 1—His Great Sacrifice (Dr.).....
Feb. 8—Sally, U. S. A. (Dr.).....
Feb. 15—Coals of Fire.....

CHAMPION.

Feb. 1—Judged by Higher Power (Dr.).....
Feb. 8—At Double Trouble Ranch (Dr.).....950
Feb. 15—Her Three Proposals (Com.).....950
Feb. 22—The Old Man and Jim (Dr.).....950
Mar. 1—A Western Girl's Choice (Dr.).....950
Mar. 8—The Vindication of John (Dr.).....950

COLUMBIA.

Dec. 24—The Cattlemen's Feud (Dr.).....
Dec. 31—Trapped (Dr.).....
Jan. 7—Queen of the Prairies (Dr.).....

ECLAIR.

Feb. 13—Mr. Faddleway is on Strike (Com.)..522
Feb. 13—The Elixir of Bravery 424
Feb. 20—The Heart of a Warrior (Dr.).....683
Feb. 20—Hospital for Small Animals (Spec.)....286
Feb. 27—Punch" (Dr.).....595
Feb. 27—Beware of the Bomb (Com.).....370
Mar. 6—King Phillip The Fair and the Templars (Dr.).....975

GREAT NORTHERN.

Feb. 11—Found Again (Dr.).....
Feb. 18—The Life of a Mumbik.....
Feb. 18—The False Alarm.....
Feb. 25—His Great Duty (Dr.).....
Mar. 4—The Rival Servants (Dr.).....
March 11—The Son of the Executioner (Dr.)..

IMP.

Feb. 13—Her Darkest Hour (Dr.).....1000
Feb. 17—The Convert (Dr.).....1000
Feb. 20—Pictureland 1000
Feb. 23—Artful Kate (Dr.).....1000
Feb. 27—A Manly Man (Dr.).....1000
Mar. 2—Army Manoeuvres in Cuba (Edc.)....500
Mar. 6—The Dynamiters (Com.).....500
Mar. 6—Tracked (Dr.).....1000
Mar. 9—The Message in the Bottle (Dr.).....1000
March 13—The Secret of the Palm (Dr.).....1000
March 16—The Fisher Maid (Dr.).....1000

LUX.

Feb. 10—That Horse Did Run (Com.).....272
Feb. 17—Bronco Bill, the Brave Cowboy (Dr.).. 639
Feb. 17—Matilda Lovestruck (Com.).....272
Feb. 24—A Child's Prayer (Dr.).....534
Feb. 24—Matilda Chased (Com.).....534
Mar. 3—Jack's Lucky Horseshoe (Dr.).....530
Mar. 3—On Their Honeymoon (Com.).....440
March 10—Bill in Love Again (Com.).....432
March 10—Jones's Remedy (Com.).....524

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO. (Bison.)

Feb. 14—A Deputy's Honor.....
Feb. 17—A Warrior's Sense (Dr.).....
Feb. 21—The Way of a Red Man (Dr.).....
Feb. 24—Fate of Joe Derr (Dr.).....
Feb. 28—A Warrior's Faith.....
Mar. 3—Owanee's Great Love.....
March 7—Dick Farrell's Pride (Dr.).....
March 10—Her Prisoner (Dr.).....

ITALA.
(By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

Feb. 16—Fatal Charm .....
Feb. 18—Who Will Eat the Turkey?.....
Feb. 23—Little Sonls.....770
Feb. 25—Foolshead Present .....
Feb. 25—Havana Cigar .....
Mar. 2—Nini's Doll .....
Mar. 4—Cato and the Flag.....
Mar. 4—Foolshead More than Usual.....
March 9—Nobility (Dr.).....
March 11—Foolshead Shooting (Com.).....

AMBROSIO.
(By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

Feb. 1—The Return from Sea Side Bathing....500
Feb. 8—The Savoy Cavalry.....500
Feb. 8—Tweedledum as a Detective.....500
Feb. 15—The Demon .....
Feb. 22—Redeeming Angel .....
Mar. 1—Tweedledum, Aviator.....
Mar. 1—War of the Cossacks.....
March 8—Prisoner of Caucasus (Dr.).....

NESTOR.

Feb. 8—The Transgressor (Dr.).....1000
Feb. 15—The Light Beyond (Dr.).....1000
Feb. 22—His Father's House (Dr.).....998
Mar. 1—The Professor's Romance (Com-Dr.)..990
Mar. 8—In the Commissioned Ranks (Dr.)....
March 15—Was It Worth While? (Dr.).....

POWERS PICTURE PLAYS.

Feb. 11—A Trip Through Mexico (Scenic)....
Feb. 14—An Unforeseen Complication (Com.)..
Feb. 18—Beneath Southern Skies (Dr.).....
Feb. 21—What Would You Do (Com.).....
Feb. 25—Across the Mexican Border (Dr.)....
Feb. 28—The Call of the Heart (Dr.).....950
Mar. 4—Home Sweet Home (Dr.).....950
Mar. 7—When Masons Meet.....
Mar. 7—The Bandit's Surprise.....
Mar. 11—A Gamble With Love.....

RELIANCE.

Feb. 11—The Little Avenger.....
Feb. 15—Three Men (Dr.).....
Feb. 15—Sons Courageous.....
Feb. 22—A Plan to Entrap.....
Feb. 25—Ever The Accuser .....
Mar. 1—The Trump Card .....
Mar. 4—From the Valley of Shadow.....
March 8—A Trick of Fortune.....
March 11—Ever the Accuser.....

REVIER.

Jan. 4—For Better Or Worse (Dr.).....
Jan. 11—The Cossack's Claim (Dr.).....
Jan. 18—For the Child's Sake (Dr.).....500
Jan. 18—You Try It (Com.).....500

REX.

Feb. 23—The Story of a Prayer Rug (Dr.).....
Mar. 2—By the Light of the Moon.....
March 9—The Fall of a Knight (Dr.).....958

SOLAX COMPANY.

Feb. 17—Corinne in Dollyland (Com.).....
Feb. 24—Love's Test (Dr.).....
Mar. 3—A Costly Pledge (Com.).....
Mar. 8—Out of the Arctic (Dr.).....
March 10—Out West .....
March 10—Caribou Hunting .....

THANHOUSER.

Feb. 10—The Norwood Necklace (Dr.).....
Feb. 14—For Her Sake (Dr.).....
Feb. 17—Checkmate (Dr.).....
Feb. 21—For Washington (Dr.).....1000
Feb. 24—A Newsboy Hero (Dr.).....1000
Feb. 28—The Little Mother (Dr.).....
Mar. 3—Stage struck (Dr.).....
Mar. 7—The Mummy (Dr.).....1000
Mar. 10—The Spirit Hand (Dr.).....1000

YANKEE.

Feb. 17—Her Birthday Surprise (Com.).....
Feb. 20—A Life-Time Penance (Dr.).....
Feb. 24—The Woman Who Dared (Dr.).....
Feb. 27—All for Gold (Dr.).....
Mar. 3—The Abduction of Parson Jones (Com.)
Mar. 6—Angel of the Bowery (Dr.).....
Mar. 10—The Senorita's Sacrifice (Dr.).....
March 13—The Test of Love (Dr.).....
March 17—His Double Treasure (Dr.).....

THIS WEEK'S PROGRAM OF INDEPENDENT FILMS.

Monday, March 6.

American—Hypnotising a Hynotist (Com).....615
American—Memories (Dr.).....375
Eclair—King Phillip the Fair and the Templars (Dr.).....975
Imp—Tracked (Dr.).....1000
Yankee—Angel of the Bowery (Dr.).....

Tuesday, March 7.

Bison—Dick Farrell's Pride.....
Powers—When Masons Meet.....
Powers—The Bandit's Surprise.....
Thanhouser—The Mummy (Dr.).....1000

Wednesday, March 8.

Ambrosio—Prisoner of Caucasus (Dr.).....
Champion—The Vindication of John (Dr.).....950
Nestor—In the Commissioned Ranks (Dr.).....
Reliance—A Trick of Fortune.....

Thursday, March 9.

American—The Rich and the Poor (Dr.).....1000
Imp—The Message in the Bottle (Dr.).....1000
Itala—Nobility (Dr.).....
Rex—The Fall of a Knight (Dr.).....958

Friday, March 10.

Bison—Her prisoner (Dr.).....
Lux—Bill in Love Again (Com.).....432
Lux—Jone's Remedy (Com.).....524
Solax—Put Out (Dr.).....
Solax—Caribou Hunting (Sc.).....
Thanhouser—The Spirit Hand (Dr.).....1000
Yankee—The Senorita's Sacrifice (Dr.).....

Saturday, March 11.

Great Northern—The Son of the Executioner (Dr.).....
Itala—Foolshead Shooting (Com.).....
Powers—A Gamble With Love.....
Reliance—Ever the Accuser.....

A "W" before the words drama and comedy specifies that it is a Western drama or a comedy.

THEATRE SALES CO.
217 Dearborn Street, Bank Floor
CHICAGO, ILLINOIS
Long Distance Phone, Harrison 341
Dealers in Theatres anywhere in the United States and especially Chicago. Write or Call. Make Known Your Wants

FOR SALE Edison, Power's one pin machines, new, $100; Model B, gasoutfits, $25; film, $5 to $25 per reel. If you rent film for me for six months, will give you a new machine free. Theatre at Waukesha and Portage, Wis., for sale cheap; doing good business. Will buy films, machines, Passion Play.
H. DAVIS, Watertown, Wis.

NEW ENGLAND EXHIBITORS
Can furnish nice Independent service of less than twenty-five day and commercial. Prompt personal attention.
THE PARK FILM COMPANY
1188 Main Street, :: Bridgeport, Conn.
W. M. Leighton, Prop.

The F. A. Film Cement
IT STICKS
Positively guaranteed to work on any film. It don't crack, dry up, or leave any coating on the emulsion; is fire-proof, and only requires about one-half as much as others.
Ask your Exchange for it.
Single bottle - - - 25 cents
Six bottles by express - $1.00
Send for our complete list of Film Announcement Titles.
French American Producing and Manufacturing Co.
918 Madison St., CHICAGO, ILL.

H. F. HOFFMAN
Lecturer of Special Releases
New York City and Vicinity
Care MOVING PICTURE WORLD
Telephone 1344 Gramercy

EAGLE FILM EXCHANGE
WE BUY the entire output of the Independent manufacturers. Ask about our Three-locked reel system.
Posters free. Prompt service. Day and night service Write, wire or phone
143 NORTH EIGHTH STREET, PHILADELPHIA, PA

G.W. Bradenburgh
CINEMATOGRAPH FILMS

233 N. 8th St. Phone Market 334 Philadelphia, Pa
Cable: Brad-films Phila. Code: A.B.C. 5th Edition

SALES LIST

TERMS: C.O.D. with privilege of examination and partial delivery, on receipt of express charges. When ordering state title and maker, also give second choice.

D: Drama. T: Travel. E: Educational.
C: Comic. TR: Trick. Top: Topical.

FILMS AT TEN DOLLARS PER REEL.

D—A Woman's Treachery (Eclair).
D—From Kidnapper to Rescuer (Eclair).
D—The Buffoon (Eclair).
C—Temptation (Cines). C—A—Capricious monument (G. N.).
D—Innocently Suspected (Lux).
D—A Country Girl's Peril (Pathe).
D—A False Friend-T.Trolhattan.
C—A Bitter Enemy (Lux). C—Interrupted Rendezvous (Italia).
C—Caught In the Act (Hepworth).
D—An Anarchical Attempt (G. N.). C—Dr.'s Monkey (Lux).
D—In the Prehistoric Age (Hepworth). C—Dinner of Lieutenant (Eclair).
D—The Jester's Daughter (Eclair).
D—Fatal Imprudence (Eclair).
D—Honesty Is Own Reward (Eclair).
D—Between Two Loves (Vesuive). C—Jockey's Bad Dream (Cosmo).
T—Beautiful Schleswig. C—Diversions (Hepworth).
D—Two Violins (G. N.).
D—Unfaithful Servant (Walturdaw).
D—Horrors of a Strike (Lux).
D—Faithful Unto Death (Bioscope).
D—Child as Benefactor (G. N.).
D—End of the Terror (Cosmo).
D—Nick Carter—The Kidnapper's Plot (Eclair).
D—Lazy Dick-D-Three Friends for Life (Hepworth).
D—Legend of the Erring Jew (Eclair). C—Pals (C. & M.).
T—In Peru. C—New Sign of the Globe Hotel (Itala).
C—Youthful Treasure Seekers. C—Bear in a Flat (G. N.).
C—Love of His Youth. C—How Father Minded Baby (Hepworth).
E—Stone Industry (Hepworth). C—Cupboard Courtship (Hepworth).

VERY GOOD FILMS AT $20 PER REEL.

The Carmelite—Sorry Can't Stop (Eclair).
Son of the Wilderness (Ambrosio).
Last of the Stuarts (Cines).
The Farmer's Son (Itala).
Delights of the Shoots (Itala).
The Time Lock Safe (Imp).
Father's Baby Boy—The Butcher Bill (Hepworth).
The Fighting Parson (Nestor).
The Honest Coachman—A Beggar's Ride (Lux).
A Daughter's Devotion (Cines).
The Tenderfoot (Nestor).
Legally Dead (Powers).
Lieut. Rose & The Brigands (Clarendon).
The White Lie (Itala).
The Convicting Shawl (Dunke). Faithful.
The Heir of Cloven Court Castle (Eclair).
Monte Cristo (Ambrosio).
Man in the Iron Mask (Cines).
Good for Evil (Itala). The Bubble (Itala).
His Second Wife (Imp). A Game for Two (Imp).
The Governor's Daughter (Thanhouser).
A Rural Romeo (Imp).
Little Hero of Holland (Thanhauser).
After the Fall of the Eagle—Theatre of Phenomenena (Eclair).

BARGAIN LIST A; CONDITION—WITH POSTERS GRATIS AT $35 PER REEL.

D—John Halifax Gentleman (Thanhouser).
C—The Revolving Doors (Imp).
C—Aspirations of Gerald and Percy (Imp).
D—The Poor Student (Imp).
D—A Brave Western Girl (Bison).
D—The Woodsman (Nestor).
D—A Plucky Western Kid (Powers).
D—Value Beyond Price (Thanhouser).
D—Rip Van Winkle (Thanhouser).
D—Cheyenne's Love for a Squaw (Bison).
D—Count's Ave Maria (Ambassy).
D—Women of the West (Yankee).
D—The Sabeah Poisonous Gase (Amer. W. W. Co.).
C—An Imaginary Elopement (Imp).
D—No Room On the Way—Reliance).
Kean or the Prince and the Actor (G. N.)
The Woman Hater (Powers).
C—A Windy Day—A Chinese Marksman (Italia).
D—Mistress and Maid (Thanhouser).

ONLY THE PICK OF THE SALES COMPANY STUFF OFFERED. NO "AMERICAN JUNK" IN STOCK. GOLD COPIES, BRAND NEW GOODS WITH POSTERS, ALWAYS ON HAND.

WRITE FOR SPECIAL PRICE.

TITLES MADE ON EASTMAN STOCK 2c PER FOOT. ANY FILMS NOT LISTED PLEASE MARK ENQUIRIES FOR AS THE ABOVE IS ONLY A SMALL PART OF OUR STOCK. ALL FILMS ARE INSPECTED BY US BEFORE SHIPMENT. LEADER AND SCRAP HELD FOR WORN OUT FILMS OFFERED. ALL FILMS SENT C. O. D. WITH PRIVILEGE OF EXAMINATION ON RECEIPT OF EXPRESS CHARGES. AGENTS WANTED. SPECIAL SUB RENTING RATES TO EXCHANGES.

The J. C. Coghlan Company
41 Union Square West NEW YORK CITY
Broadway and 17th St.

Second-hand Independent Films, all makes, 60 and 90 days old

The largest dealers in new and second-hand Association and Independent Films in the United States.

SECOND-HAND FILM
$5.00 per reel upwards
CAMERAPHONE FILM
new, with two sets records

All goods shipped subject to examination and partial acceptance on receipt of deposit covering express charges.

Complete lists sent free upon request

Holiday MATINEE To-DAY

MAKE YOUR LOBBY BRIGHT AND ATTRACTIVE BY USING

PAYNE'S SHOW CARDS
Write for circular

PAYNE SHOW CARD CO.
17 Dwight St. Springfield, Mass.

To Exchanges
Have your films redeveloped and renovated by the Hockstetter Process. Endorsed and recommended by leading Exchanges.

Also soften non-inflammable film and prolong the life of the reel. We are now prepared to install plants in your premises. Write for prices. Work done at our plant at 6oc per reel.

ORTHO FILM CO.
2726 W. Division St. Chicago, Ill.

LIGHT EFFECTS
Everything Electrical for Theatres, Parks, Productions and Vaudeville Acts.

UNIVERSAL ELECTRIC STAGE LIGHTING CO.

Kliegl Bros. PROPRIETORS
1393-5 Broadway, New York City

After he bought a Compensarc

When he used a Rheostat

Which Would YOU Rather Pay?

This man is on a 220 volt circuit and as his moving picture lamp only requires 35 volts at the arc, he formerly used a rheostat to reduce the voltage. Now he gets a cheaper, whiter, more intense unflickering light and his bill is only about 1/3 what they were before. The machine has three adjustments and the circuit can not break for even an instant in passing from one to another. No delays, no bother, no waste, no danger, no heat.

Send today for our 22 page booklet "Compensare vs. Rheostat." It tells you how you can get much better results at much less cost.

FORT WAYNE COMPENSARC
Now he gets a cheaper, whiter, more intense unflickering light and his bill is only about 1/3 what they were before. The machine has three adjustments and the circuit can not break for even an instant in passing from one to another. No delays, no bother, no waste, no danger, no heat.

Fort Wayne Electric Works, Fort Wayne, Ind.
1402 BROADWAY

Annual Subscription Moving Picture World $2.00

The Light That Never Fails

CINCINNATI CALCIUM LIGHT CO.
Established 1876.
Oxygen and Hydrogen Gas furnished in tanks for Stereopticon and Moving Picture Machines. All orders to any part of the United States filled.
Agents for all makes of Moving Picture Machines
SEND FOR TERMS.
CINCINNATI CALCIUM LIGHT CO.
108 W. 4th St., CINCINNATI, O.

FIRST MONEY ORDER FOR $150
Takes either of these bargains: Powers' No. 5 complete (used less than two weeks). American Standard (never used).
Write us for our machine proposition.
THE "R" CO. 396 Broadway, Albany, N. Y.
The Motion Picture Machine Repair and Supply Shop.

¶ Put in our Easels and Poster Frames and watch your attendance grow.

¶ We make mechanical attractions, Electric signs, or anything special in the theatrical line. ¶ Ideas developed—Low Prices — Best Work — DON'T DELAY but write to-day.

THE NEWMAN MFG. CO.
717-719 Sycamore St., Cincinnati, O.

WE HAVE IT

We have secured the exclusive rights of the

NATIONAL PROGRAM

for New York City and adjacent territory beginning March 13th. We will buy their entire output. You can't obtain the National Program anywhere in New York except at the

ACME FILM CO. 12 East 15th St., New York

AT LIBERTY!

HENRY BELMAR

LATE DRAMATIC DIRECTOR
Powers Picture Plays
Reliable! Energetic! Resourceful!
PRODUCER, WRITER, REVISER, INVENTOR OF PHOTOPLAYS

Write, Wire or Phone
HENRY BELMAR,
2779 Webster Avenue,
Phone 3444 Tremont. NEW YORK CITY.

FILMS FOR RENT 1000 Reels—No Rain. Every subject complete 12 Reels per week, $12.
E. M. P. FILM SERVICE, Rooms 523-4-5-6, 225 Dearborn St., Chicago

THE ENTERPRISE MODEL B
Portable Calcium Gas Outfit
is the only Substitute for Electricity for projecting Motion Picture or Stereopticon Views and is the Only Satisfactory Portable Outfit
because it operates by WATER PRESSURE, IS CONSTANT, REGULAR AND RELIABLE and has no complicated spring valves to corrode, choke up and otherwise get out of order. Is patented.
"OXONE" in SQUARE CAKES is most Satisfactory for the production of Oxygen Gas. Send for particulars.
For Sale by Dealers.
MANUFACTURERS AND SALES AGENTS
Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co. 564 and 572 W. Randolph Street, CHICAGO

The Chautauqua Film Exchange
Get Ready to Use the BEST Service.
Releases Begin Soon
Write to-day for our list and terms
356 Dearborn Street - CHICAGO, ILL.

Atlas Disinfectant

IS MADE IN TWO FORMS Odorless or Perfumed

1 gallon cans $1.50 per gallon
5 " " 1.40 " "
10 " " 1.30 " "

F.O.B. PHILA., PA.

Superior in quality to any disinfectant on the market

Ask your exchange for a circular or write us direct.

ATLAS SUPPLY CO.
Manayunk, Philadelphia, Pa.

Floroda—The Perfumed Disinfectant

(5 years the standard)

1 gallon can, $1.45
5 gallon can, $1.40
10 gallon can, $1.20

f. o. b. New York

SPECIAL PRICES IN QUANTITIES

Also Manufacturers of National Chlorides—Odorless Disinfectant.
Floorine—Floor Oil.
Anti-Dust Sweeping Compound.
Cedol Pine Oil Disinfectant.
Lustrolene Coal Tar Disinfectant.
Eucalyptus and Pine Drip fluids for toilet use.

Write for further particulars

FLORODA MANUFACTURING CO.
103 MAIDEN LANE NEW YORK CITY
Telephone John 1720

FOR LEASE

On Easy Weekly Terms
Original PICTURES Copyrighted

New York's Chinatown and Bowery

A complete work on the famous East Side, with its peculiar types, narrow streets, bustling throngs, crowded tenements, squalid lodging houses, tiresome sweat shops and all its lights and shadows.

Special Paper, Posters, Banners, Photographs, Street Advertising, etc.

A complete Picture Theatre Attraction

It will bear investigation

For terms and further information wire or write . . . .

CHINATOWN PICTURE CO.
601 Schiller Bldg. - - - Chicago, Ill.

WHY SEND TO EUROPE FOR

FILM PERFORATING DIES

When we can make them for you?
High-class repairing and alterations on Foreign Machines.

THE A. DEWES COMPANY
249 Centre Street, NEW YORK
'Phone, 2351 Spring

FILM EXCHANGES

The Stern Rewinder No. 4 is guaranteed to be the strongest and speediest rewinder made. All exhibitors like them and the demand is great. Price is so reasonable that you cannot afford to be without them. Send in a single order. We also have ready for shipping 25,000 reels knocked down. Price can't be beat.

THE STERN MFG. CO.
109 North Tenth St. Philadelphia, Pa.
Oldest and largest in the trade.

That Second and Third Reel Problem

Any exhibitor will accept a new reel of film, but how about a second and third reel? If your older reels are full of rain, what then? Our remedy cures films of that awful rainy habit.

Notify your customers that you are having your films renovated by

The New York Film Renovating Co.
(24 HOUR SERVICE)
12 Union Square, East New York

Don't Miss This Bargain

We have been fortunate enough to purchase a number of New Imported 9 hour Flaming Arc Lamps, D. C. and A. C., originally sold for $85.00, like cut.

Will close them out for

$37.50, FULLY GUARANTEED

The largest dealer in the country for Moving Picture Supplies and Machines.

WRITE FOR PRICE LISTS

Motion Picture Supply & Specialty Co.
46 East 14th Street NEW YORK CITY

TAYLOR'S THEATRICAL AGENCY.

THEATRICAL TALENT IN ALL LINES FURNISHED ON SHORT NOTICE

SINGERS, PIANO PLAYERS DRUMMERS, LECTURERS, CASHIERS, DOORMEN, MANAGERS AND OPERATORS

FREDERICK C. TAYLOR, PROPRIETOR

49 West 28th St., New York City.

READY FOR DELIVERY

Moving Picture World

BOUND VOLUME, No. 7.

July to December, 1910

TWO DOLLARS EACH, $2.00

Express charges collect

Moving Picture Men TAKE NOTICE

WE HAVE A NUMBER OF THE WELL KNOWN

10 hr. and 17 hr. "STAVE" A. C. or D. C.

FLAMING ARC LAMPS

which we will close out at from $20 to $35 each. These lamps have been rebuilt, and look and are equally as good as new.

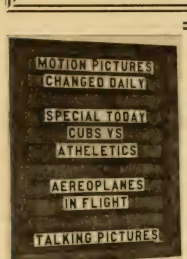
F.C.B. New York Net Cash, or 2% per cent. Cash, balance C.O.D.

We are the largest retailers and jobbers of Moving Picture Supplies in the country.

GET OUR PRICES

Motion Picture Supply & Specialty Co.

46 East 14th Street, NEW YORK



SAVE MONEY

and use our

Program Board

with Interchangeable Porcelain Letters

Make your own Program

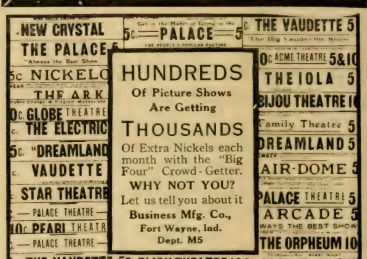
You cannot afford to be without one.

Announcements quickly changed. Prices and full particulars on application.

Agents Wanted.

THE CAMBRIDGE TILE MFG. CO.

COVINGTON, KY.



Mr. Exhibitor—Do You Cater to Both Sides of the Street?

To catch the eye of the passerby on either side you need a finishing touch to your outside display. We offer our

DURABLE ATTRACTIVE 3 x 12 Ft. DISPLAY BANNERS WITH THE TITLE IN 14 TO 20 In. LETTERS

As the best and cheapest way to get Mr. and Mrs. Passerby's trade.

HERE ARE THE REDUCED PRICES:

6 BANNERS PER WEEK $5.75 PREPAID EAST OF MISS. RIVER

(Formerly $6.00 plus charges)

90c. extra for each banner in excess of 6

6 for $6.50 Prepaid to points West of the Mississippi

SINGLE BANNERS, postpaid (in U. S.) $1.15 (formerly $1.35)

SPECIALS TO ORDER (prepaid) 12 ft. $1.70, 15 ft. $2.00, 18 ft. $2.30

FOR EITHER LICENSED OR INDEPENDENT SUBJECTS

The B. B. SIGN CO., Cleveland

SPECIAL PRICES IN QUANTITIES TERMS: Cash with order.

Corcoran Moving Picture Tanks

Develop your films to perfection. Save Time and Reduce Your Expenses by using a "Corcoran Film Development Tank." All up-to-date houses are now installing the "Corcoran System."

SEND FOR PRICE LIST No. 4.

A. J. CORCORAN, Inc.
No. 15 John Street - - - N. Y. City

SONG SLIDES

Non-Breakable—Non-Inflammable

Colored Song and Announcement Slides
Patent Applied For

Just the kind of a slide you have all been waiting for. Guaranteed against breaking from heat or the careless operator. Send for list. Made and sold only by the original inventors. None others genuine.

NORTH AMERICAN SLIDE CO., 143 North 8th Street PHILADELPHIA, PA.

SONG SLIDES

No Matter Your Location
From Maine to California, Gulf to Canada

We will stand all loss in transit, and furnish the same service that we do the large theatres in this city. Bill and feature your songs, and then note results in your box office. Week's supply in one shipment. Write to-day.
Yours for a better service,

CHICAGO SONG SLIDE EXCHANGE
Sixth Floor, Portland Block
107 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.
Dept. I
PHONOGRAPH RECORDS FURNISHED

GUNDLACH
Projection Lenses

Will Improve Your Picture
[make it sharper and increase the illumination

TO ORDER, give the height and width of the screen, width of picture wanted and distance from lens to center of screen. State make of machine.]

A complete stock is carried by
NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY, New York
ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MFG. CO., Chicago
Every lens is sold subject to approval.

Gundlach-Manhattan Optical Company
808 Clinton Ave., So. Rochester, N. Y.

Genre Motion Slides

Novelty Slides (10 subjects) $1.25 Ea.
Double Metal Carrier with Genre Motion Slide attachment (good for any slides) . $1.50 Ea.
Motion Advertising Slides will be ready soon.
You will need a carrier all the time.

GENRE TRANSPARENCY CO.
507 N. Clark St. Chicago, Ill.

THE "STANDARD"

The Machine That Gives Results

FULLY GUARANTEED

You do not take any chances when you install one of our machines. If it is not exactly as we represent it, your money will be refunded in full. Should any defect EVER develop, it is OUR loss, not YOURS.

AMERICAN MOVING PICTURE MACHINE COMPANY
101 BEEKMAN STREET - - - - NEW YORK CITY

FOLDING CHAIRS

For Moving Picture Shows, Grand Stands, Assembly Halls, etc. In sections if wanted.

Write for Catalog No. 2

The Kauffman Manufacturing Co.
ASHLAND, OHIO

OPERA CHAIRS

FOR EVERY PURPOSE
1,000 STYLES

ESTABLISHED 1865
WRITE FOR CAT. No. 31

The A. H. Andrews Co.
174-176 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.
Branches in all leading cities

CHEAP

STEEL FRAME
THEATRE CHAIRS
ABSOLUTELY
NON-BREAKABLE

Suitable for small Theatres and Moving Picture Shows. We carry these chairs in stock and can ship immediately.

Second Hand Chairs
Also seating for Out-of-door use.

Address
Dept. W.
GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

STEEL FURNITURE CO.,
New York Office: 150 Fifth Avenue

The Automatic Theatre Chair

It is a friend to the public.
It advertises your theatre and makes your business grow.
It folds automatically and can be revolving, stationary or self righting.
It is the only sanitary chair.
It is a space-saver, life-saver and money-saver.
It is the world's greatest theatre Chair.
If you have not seen our latest models, investigate.
Write today for circular A.

THE HARDESTY MFG. CO
Canal Dover, Ohio, U. S. A.

FILMS FOR SALE. 50 Reels of Films $8 to $16 per Reel
Second-hand one pin Edison machine. $100.00
Mayer Silverman, 105 4th Ave., Pittsburg, Pa.

Opera and Assembly Chairs

Most popular priced chairs on the market for picture show use.
Prompt Shipments. Write for Catalogue
PEABODY SCHOOL FURNITURE CO.
North Manchester - - Indiana
New York Agents: ROBERT J. EHLERS CO.
Lexington Ave. and 43d St. - New York, N. Y.

The Independent Film Exchange
of Pittsburg, Pa.

The Pioneer Independent Exchange of Western Pennsylvania buying the output of the Sales Company.

We have a few choice runs that we can let out at reasonable prices. Write us.

INDEPENDENT FILM EXCHANGE, Inc.
A. S. DAVIS, Manager
415 Ferry Street, PITTSBURG, PA.

WE WANT

ONE THOUSAND
Moving Picture Men

to operate PREMIUM pin machines and get rich, or if already so, to get more wealth. Why not you? PREMIUM pin machines have become an institution in every candy store. By placing a machine in your retailer's store you will monopolize his trade and squeeze out competition.

Mr. Flint of Mo. writes: "Kindly accept thanks for introducing me to a gold mine."

Ten machines will support you. Fifty machines operated will prove a mortgage lifter to you.

We make them out of Oak or Metal.

Percentage of winners arranged so that from every twenty dollars deposited in the machine twelve dollars will be your profit. If so advised will make it still more.

Write to-day for exclusive territory to

PREMIUM VENDING COMPANY
56-58 WALNUT ST. PITTSBURG, PA.

WE CAN HURRY

YOUR ORDER OUT.
STAFFORD Chairs excell all others.

HEAVY FIVE PLY
seats and backs.
The last-forever kind, that you are using long after you have forgotten the price.

STEEL CHAIRS TOO
We carry several kinds of good chairs in stock, all guaranteed.

ASK FOR CATALOG 305

E. H. STAFFORD MFG. CO.
CHICAGO, ILL.

UNIFORMS

FOR
USHERS, DOORMEN, &c.
We are originators of style and design
Catalogue "M" is ready
The Big House With Little Prices

RUSSELL UNIFORM COMPANY
128 W. 36th Street
NEW YORK
Five doors west of Broadway

NEW SLIDES

For the following Songs—JUST OUT

I'd Love to be Loved by a Girl Like You Yearning
Take Me Back to Baby-land.
Going Back to My Old Girl.
My! What a Funny Little World This Is! In Winter.
When the trees are dressed in crimson and in gold.
King Chanticleer.
Killarney, my Home o'er the Sea.
Dancing Starlight.
Broncho Nell.
For Killarney and You.
My Country Has First Call.
Mandy Lou.
Dolores.
The Best Place of All.
The Moon Swings Low
Springtime Brings Roses and You.
You're the Sweetest Girl in All This World To Me.

De WITT C. WHEELER
120 W. 31st St. New York City

OPERA CHAIRS

GEO. W. BENNETT
744 W. 5th Street
CINCINNATI OHIO

Xylophones, Orchestra Bells, Chimes, Forks, etc. Send for free illustrated catalogue.
J. C. DEAGAN
3800-3810 N. Clark St., Chicago, Ill.

If you are in the Market for

SECOND HAND FILMS

Write to the largest and most reliable Dealers and Importers of these goods in the U. S.

International Film Traders
German Savings Bank Building
147 Fourth Avenue, NEW YORK CITY

HAVE GOOD MUSIC

Singers, Pianists, Trap Drummers and Orchestras. Guaranteed Artists Always on the Wire.
AMERICAN THEATRICAL SINGERS AGCY.
59 Dearborn St., CHICAGO, ILL
Hilliard Campbell, Mgr.

Moving Picture Pianists

Are you "working up" your pictures? If not, why not? If so, you want some good melodramatic music. Send for free sample page of "Orpheum Collection of Moving Picture Music." Now being used and praised by many of the best houses in the country.
PRICE 75 CENTS
Also latest cue music Series 1910 for 10 parts and piano, $1.00.
1-4 discount on both numbers.
CLARENCE E. SINN
1501 Sedgwick St CHICAGO, ILL.

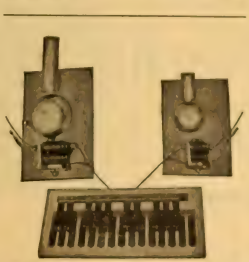
CLEAN YOUR FILMS WITH
The MORTIMER FILM CLEANER
It does the work while the operator is rewinding the film. Send for the Booklet.
MORTIMER FILM CLEANING CO.
Fidelity Building Portland, Maine

Opera Chairs

The Strongest Made
Most Attractive Designs
PERMANENTLY NOISELESS
More of our chairs used than all others combined
There Are Reasons
Large stocks constantly on hand, and we can make prompt shipments of rush orders
Write for Catalog V

American Seating Company

215 Wabash Avenue CHICAGO 19 West 18th Street NEW YORK
BOSTON PHILADELPHIA PITTSBURGH



OUR PATENT ELECTRIC BELLS create great enthusiasm in Moving Picture Houses, play from a keyboard as a solo instrument, or as an accompaniment to songs. Twenty-five Bells, two octaves chromatic, including resonators, magnets and keyboards, $75.00

J. C. DEAGAN
3800 3810 N. Clark St. CHICAGO, ILL.

FILMS FOR RENT

New Films High Class Service
The Pioneer House, With 8 Years' Experience and $250,000.00 Back Of It
Write Today for Terms
EUGENE CLINE
57 and 59 Dearborn St., Chicago

Operating manufacturing plants in the following cities:

WASHINGTON NEW YORK SALT LAKE CITY
MILAN ROME
PARIS LONDON

NATIONAL FILM MFG. AND LEASING CO.

To Exchanges:—

You are entitled to a reasonable profit.

Have you been making it?

Our plans insure it, by granting exclusive territory, thus eliminating destructive competition.

Contracts now being executed with desirable connections.

Address Exchange Department.

To Exhibitor:—

We advocate 10c. admission to picture shows. Our program and plans make this possible. We would appreciate the views of Exhibitors on this matter.

Fill in the coupon on this page and mail to us.

National Film Mfg. & Leasing Co.

INCORPORATED

12 East 15th Street New York City, U. S. A.

TEAR OFF HERE

National Film Mfg. & Leasing Company
12 East 15th St., New York

Exhibitors Department

I favor $\frac{5c.}{10c.}$ admission idea.

Signed.....

Name of Theatre..... .....

Save Tickets

AND

Eliminate Choppers

at the entrance to every Theatre and Amusement Place

GET THE COUNT WITH

JONES DUPLEX CHECK GATE

and you GET all the money

Ask us to send you further details

JONES CHANGE REGISTER CO.
INCORPORATED

18 BROADWAY NEW YORK CITY

Mackie's Asbestos Booths
ALL SIZES

Mackie's Post Card Protector

Mackie's Automatic Advertising Machine

Edison Machines
ALL MODELS AND PARTS

Mackie's Home Moving Picture Machine

MACKIE, Agent for the "MIRROR SCREEN"

YOU ARE INVITED
to visit my demonstrating room, and inspect all home and professional apparatus, in actual use.

ALL REPAIRS EXECUTED ON PREMISES

Harry A. Mackie

853 Broadway New York
PHONE 2478 STUY.

"Mirror Screens" Glass Curtains "Transparent Screens"

Daylight Pictures

Perspective and Clearness.

Rests the Eyes

New Process of Manufacturing makes them more perfect and more wonderful than ever.

We can tell you how to pay for one in two weeks by increased receipts.

CURTAIN OR WHITE WALL GLASS CURTAIN

Are you required to throw your picture from the rear?

Our new TRANSPARENT SCREEN has the world beat.

Nothing like it on the market.

Be the first in your city.

Like the "Mirror Screen" it is a Joy and Money Getter

Address all communications to

MOTION PICTURE SCREEN CO.

SHELBYVILLE, INDIANA

"ARCO-B"
BIOGRAPH CARBONS

ARE made expressly for Motion Picture Work. Are of the Highest Grade. Are Sold at right prices, commensurate with High Quality. Are Carried in stock by the leading Film Exchanges of the Country, and are Imported Exclusively by us.

¶ "Just as good as Arco-B" is the statement frequently made. A complimentary acknowledgment of the High merit of

ARCO BIOGRAPH CARBONS

¶ Insist upon getting the genuine article. Each individual Carbon bears our trade mark. - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - -

L. E. FRORUP & COMPANY, Importers

232-234 GREENWICH STREET NEW YORK

CAREY PRESS, N. Y.

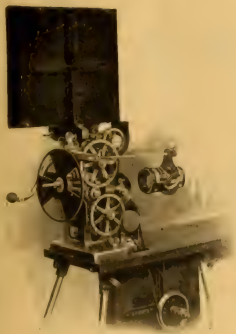
Vol. 8, No. 11 March 18, 1911 Price, 10 Cents

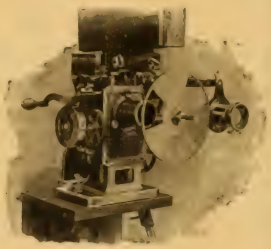
THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD

THE ORGAN OF THE PHOTOPLAY AND ALLIED INTERESTS

NEW YORK

POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH No.6





The Success of the Year

Flickerless Pictures
Steady Pictures

Guard against injuring or tiring the eyes of your patrons.

Heavy Gears
Thick Spindles
Wide Bearings

Insure long wear. Buy a machine which will stand a steady grind of many hours daily.

Rugged Intermittent Movement

Do away with your delicate star and pin wheel which requires such close, careful adjustment and wears out so fast.

Accessibility of All Parts

There is a distinct advantage in having all of the parts on the outside of your machine where they can be inspected or gotten at.

Absence of Noise

Don't give your patrons the idea you are running a threshing machine.

Evenly Balanced Movement

This will prevent vibration and consequent wear and strain, lengthening distance of easily projection.

Ease of Operation

These are some of the features that contribute to its popularity and enable us to give with each machine

An Unconditional Guarantee for one year from date of purchase.

WRITE FOR OUR LATEST CATALOG G

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY,

115 NASSAU STREET NEW YORK

"For thirteen years the leading makers of Moving Picture Machines."

"SILAS MARNER" IS COMING!

STILL Asking STILL Asking STILL Asking

THE THANHOUSER TWO-A-WEEK

FOR

RELEASED TUESDAY, MARCH 21

Another "Thanhouser 2-on-1."

DIVORCE

Is a well-plotted picture and a well-directed blow at the divorce evil. You will be gratified and surprised when you see how the home was saved. A doll did it! This may not sound reasonable, but it all looks logical on the screen and, indeed, the incident is taken from real life.

AND ON THE SAME REEL

Waiting at the Church

As a humorous description of a man's efforts to find the right wife, this will command laughs aplenty when it hits your screen. Especially will this "go" on a bill strong in drama. It depicts the wife-hunting experiences of a delightful dude and shows how he won out in the end—to lose out. How could he win out to lose out? Sounds queer, no doubt, but that's just what he did! And the picture proves it.

No. 195. Code Word, Vorce.

RELEASED FRIDAY, MARCH 24

A Noble Heart Beat Under His Ragged Shirt!

THE TRAMP

is a new thing in "Hobo" stories, one that throws aside the theory stamping him an out-and-out marauder, and shows him a man of honor who likes to rove but hasn't the money to do it in Pullmans. At least this holds good of one-half the knights of the road. Favored with wealth, they would be called globe-trotters. Minus gold (often because of motives that were too pure and too lofty to sanction the illicit, worldly ways of getting it) they are "bums," "hobos," outcasts whom "honest" men must shun, as, indeed, our hero was shunned.

No. 196. Code Word, Kniad.

The Thanhouser News the "Exhibitor's Guide," sent FREE OF CHARGE to all who can show connection with the Moving Picture business. Drop a card to PUBLISHER, THANHOUSER NEWS, NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y.

The Thanhouser Photoframe consisting of portraits of the famous Thanhouser "Stock," framed in solid oak, mission finish, 34 inches in width and 44 inches in depth, with glass and easel (6 feet high) GOES TO YOU FOR $3.50 with order. This is the prize outfit that tickled-to-death exhibitors the country over are calling THE GREATEST LOBBY-DISPLAY BARGAIN EVER KNOWN.

For System's Sake address Art Dept.

THANHOUSER COMPANY

NEW ROCHELLE NEW YORK

"SILAS MARNER" IS COMING!

UNEXCELLED PROGRAM

EVERY MONDAY
AMERICAN—American Film Manufacturing Company
ECLAIR—Eclair Film Company
IMP—Independent Moving Pictures Company
YANKEE—Yankee Film Company

EVERY TUESDAY
BISON—New York Motion Picture Company
POWERS—The Powers Company
THANHOUSER—Thanhouser Company

EVERY WEDNESDAY
AMBROSIO—New York Motion Picture Co.
ATLAS—Atlas Film Company
CHAMPION—The Champion Film Company
NESTOR—David Horsley
RELIANCE—Carlton Laboratories
SOLAX—Solax Company.

EVERY THURSDAY
AMERICAN—American Film Manufacturing Company
IMP—Independent Moving Pictures Co.
ITALA—New York Motion Picture Company
REX—Rex Moving Picture Mfg. Company

EVERY FRIDAY
BISON—New York Motion Picture Company
LUX—R. Prieur
SOLAX—Solax Company
THANHOUSER—Thanhouser Company
YANKEE—Yankee Film Co.

EVERY SATURDAY
GREAT NORTHERN—Great Northern Film Co.
ITALA—New York Motion Picture Company
POWERS—The Powers Company
RELIANCE—Carlton Laboratories

RETRENCHMENT

At the beginning of the struggle our adversaries gained temporary victories. They shouted these from the housetops and published them from one end of the land to the other.

BUT NOW

They are frantically importuning the exhibitor not to give attention to the most recent events in the patent litigation!

The shoe is on the other foot! They meekly acknowledge that it is they who are on the defensive.

The SALES COMPANY, however, pursues the even tenor of its way. Instead of neglecting quality in a fruitless quest for monopoly, we are pleasing our customers more and more every day with this

Unexcelled Program

Motion Picture Distributing & Sales Company

111 E. 14th St., New York City

SECOND TO NONE
IN THE FILM
QUALITY RACE
"Supreme in its Field"

NEW YORK · PARIS · LONDON

Release for Saturday, March 11

The Son of the Executioner

A beautiful feature film with a wealth of detail that will win the admiration of every audience. Many thrilling scenes—magnificent costumes—perfect photography and effective tinting and toning.

Release for Saturday, March 18

Between Love and Duty

A powerful dramatic film—splendidly enacted

Life and People Below the Equator

A charming travel picture of nomadic tribes in the torrid zone

EXHIBITORS: You cannot possibly afford to miss a single Great Northern release as they are drawing cards—every one of them.

ALL FIRST CLASS INDEPENDENT EXCHANGES HANDLE OUR PRODUCT

Great Northern Film Co.

7 East 14th Street New York

All Films Sold Through Sales Co.

Paste This in Your Hat

FIRST—If you are not getting

TWO Imps EVERY Week

you are not getting what you pay for.

NEXT—If you are not getting any IMPS FILMS at all you are THE EASIEST MARK IN THE BUSINESS.

"Get TWO IMPS A WEEK or Quit Your Exchange!"

"IN OLD MADRID"

Release of March 20

Impetuous Spanish lover finds his affection returned. The mother establishes an espionage over the daughter. True love finds a way and girl companion disguised assists in clever deception. Lover carries sweetheart to rocks in roaring torrent and consent and blessings of parents is obtained in unique manner. A pretty love story of old Spain in which "Little Mary" appears in nearly every scene. Gorgeous settings and splendid photography—the Imp sort.

"THE PENNILESS PRINCE"

Release of March 23

A young German nobleman, reduced to poverty, seeks employment on Cuban tobacco ranch. Is loved by planter's daughter, whom he repulses, and is humiliated in revenge. Lowly sweetheart sacrifices luxuriant hair to provide him funds. Expected letter arrives announcing he has fallen heir to vast estates. He rewards girl, who has been faithful, by announcing her as his bethrothed. Cuban scenery that has made Imp films the talk of moving picturedom.

Independent Moving Pictures Co. of America
102 W. 101st St. New York
Carl Laemmle, Pres.
All "Imp" Films Sold Through the Sales Co.

This is not an Advertisement.

Mr. Man:

I'm too busy this week to write ads.—too busy putting on new customers.

Seems as though several dozen of you exhibitors had conspired—yes, conspired to "try me out." All right, gentlemen, suits me to a T. The more, the merrier. I confess I like this sort of surprise. I'm prepared to take—but hold on, I said this wasn't going to be an advertisement, and you know me. Slip me that letter soon.

Carl Laemmle,
The biggest and best film renter in the world
PRESIDENT
The Laemmle Film Service

P. S.—Don't forget that I carry in stock, ready for instant delivery, Powers, Edison and Motiograph Projecting Machines.

Solax Solax Solax Solax Solax Solax Solax Solax Solax Solax

TWO EVERY WEEK Solax TWO EVERY WEEK

WHY—is Solax BOOMING

—AND—

EXHIBITORS WILD OVER

WEDNESDAY THE FUNNY DAY

FRIDAY THE FEATURE DAY

—QUALITY—

GOOD COMEDY on WEDNESDAYS

We beg to annouce that in future our Wednesday release will be Fine Comedy. We have four splendid comedies already prepared which are going to make a stir among the theatres. We want you to feature them.

WRITE US FOR LOBBY DISPLAYS AND PHOTOGRAPHS OF OUR STOCK COMPANY.

RELEASES

Wednesday March 15	Friday March 17	Wednesday March 22
"A MIDNIGHT VISITOR" (COMEDY)	"THE HINDOO PRINCE" (DRAMA)	"CUPID'S VICTORY" (COMEDY)

Solax Company

147 Fourth Avenue - - - - NEW YORK

Solax Solax Solax Solax Solax Solax Solax Solax Solax Solax

ECLAIR FILMS

THE FILMS OF PICTORIAL QUALITY

Combining Perfect Photography with Popular Plays

RELEASE OF MARCH 20th

"CAIN"

A Forceful Drama—Superb in every Phase—Handling a Most Vital Problem with Infinite Skill.

"The Rock Climbers"

An Educational Production of the highest Order—A film that envelopes one in the Magic Spell of Travel.

ECLAIR FILM COMPANY

NEW YORK: 31 East 27th St. CHICAGO: 35 East Randolph St.

THE CHAMP STAMP

Very Much Alive

CHAMPS BRISTLE WITH ACTIVITY. HERE'S ONE

On the way
=TWO= every 7 days

"The Payroll"

And Its Rock-lined Course

Released March 22nd, 1911

Note:—Ready, Champ "Photos"

Champion Film Co.

MARK M. DINTENFASS, Gen'l Mgr. :: 12 East 15th St., New York City

Rex Films

Where the Shamrock Grows

EVERYBODY HERE'S SEEN KELLY,
He with the Bonny Smile;
NOBODY YET HAS SEEN DANNY—
Danny from the Emerald Isle.

In the land "WHERE THE SHAMROCK GROWS," where hearts are as pure as the snows; where are romance and love, with the bright stars above, and the song of the bird can be heard.

In the land "WHERE THE SHAMROCK GROWS," and the river Shannon flows, is the scene of this film, and it certainly will fill-em, for Danny is the fellow who knows.

A Great Drama, well enacted and admirably executed, for it's a REX

See the Great FORGE SCENE

RELEASED THURSDAY, MARCH 16, 1911

P. S.—Ask the Sales Co. about the S. R. O. film.

Rex Films

EVERY FRIDAY THE WORLD'S BEST—BAR NONE EVERY FRIDAY

INDEPENDENT EXHIBITORS AND EXCHANGES

QUALITY WINS IN THE LONG RUN

GOOD—BETTER—BEST

Get the "World Best" Every Week

QUALITY
QUALITY QUALITY

LUX FILMS

Released, March 17th, 1911

DOGS NOT ADMITTED
COMEDY—534 Feet

BILL HAS KLEPTOMANIA
COMEDY—380 Feet

With this pair of comedies you may have all the rest of your program the keenest kind of dramatic and educational subjects. There is enough hilarity in this reel to satisfy every audience—just good, clean fun that will appeal to all.

SEE OTHER PAGES FOR SYNOPSES AND PAST RELEASES

GET LUX The World's Best—Bar None GET LUX

R. PRIEUR

10 East 15th Street Phone, 342 Stuyvesant New York City

Sold only through the Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company

"THE SIGN OF THE FLYING A"

COMING

"The Harem Skirt"

The funniest funny film ever released.

"The Penalty"

Release of Monday, Mar. 13th.

A sensationally dramatic exposition of the common results of gambling. An extremely interesting picture containing an original situation that will bring your audience out of their seats. The climax is particularly strong and the film points a moral that is more effective than a sermon. You'll be foolish if you do not write your exchange to book you this film "rush." There'll be a big demand for it.

"The Job and the Girl" with
"Do You Know this Woman"

Release of Thursday, March 16th.

"The Job and the Girl" is a pictured comedy of the adventures of a nervy youth. Warren Kerrigan in the character of the nervy one is a joy forever. If your audience has never had a real good laugh for a year you can guarantee this film will tickle them into a hearty roar. Get it. For your own good—get it. On the same reel "Do you know this Woman?" is a short comedy that gives Dott Farley an opportunity to show the stuff that laughter is really made of. She does it too. We honestly believe and know this split reel comedy will be acclaimed as a winner. Make your audience laugh. Get it.

COMING

"The Harem Skirt"

The funniest funny film ever released.

AMERICAN FILM MANUFACTURING CO.

Bank Floor, Ashland Block, Chicago, Ill.

START ON A SOUND BASIS

Get a machine that can DO the work—and do it now—and tomorrow—and for a good long time to come.

Let the idea about the original machine go.

BE MODERN—UP-TO-DATE—GET MACHINE WISE by installing the modern machine—THE MOTIOGRAPH.

This is a day of progress—Time keeps on coming and going—and old fashioned machines must be replaced with THE MOTIOGRAPH—THE MOST DURABLE—SIMPLE—ACCESSIBLE Motion Picture Machine on the market—and THE MACHINE THAT PROJECTS THE BEST PICTURE.

Manufactured and Jobbed by ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MANUFACTURING COMPANY, 571 West Randolph St., CHICAGO

AGENTS IN ALL PRINCIPAL CITIES

Moving Picture World

THE WORLD PHOTOGRAPHIC PUBLISHING COMPANY - 125 E. 23d Street, NEW YORK
(Beach Building) Telephone call, 1344 Gramercy

SUBSCRIPTION: $2.00 per year. Post free in the United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands. Canada $2.50. Foreign Countries, $3.00. Post Paid.

ADVERTISING RATES: Whole page, $60.00; half page, $30.00; quarter page, $15.00; eighth page, $7.50; one inch (3⅛ in. wide), $3.00; one inch (2¼ in. wide), $2.00; classified (no display), 3 cents per word.
TIME DISCOUNTS: 10% one months order, 15% six months, 20% twelve months.

WESTERN OFFICE: 160 Washington Street, (Post Building, Chicago). Telephone, Main 3145.

Entered at the General Post Office in New York City as Second-Class Matter.

Vol. 8 MARCH 18, 1911 No. 11

The Scenario School.

A school for scenario writers or rather for the teaching of the writers of scenarios, was inevitable. It has come and naturally we wish it success. In an article published last Fall we dealt editorially with this little problem, being instigated thereto by the receipt of many scenarios by writers who were unable to place them, and who asked our advise and guidance in the matter. We pointed out that the demand for scenarios is not so great as might have been imagined. We entered into a rough calculation which showed that in this country at any rate only about 60 or 70 scenarios a week were really required. In other words, the demand, the actual demand, for scenarios was no greater than that of two or three magazine which require short stories.

Our pages in late numbers and in our last volume were full of complaints as to the difficulty on the one hand of obtaining good scenarios, and on the other of placing scenarios. Exhibitors and others complain that the accepted scenarios or rather the stories of the films were lacking in freshness, originality and other features always to be desired in this kind of literary work.

The "cry of the rejected" is one which has been familiar for years in all kinds of newspaper and magazine work. You cannot please everybody in that business any more than you can in any other business. Mr. Louis Parker, the English dramatist who is meeting, just now, with such success in New York, is reported to have said that it was difficult enough for him to write a play; but far more difficult for him to sell it. If that applies to a man with a well established reputation in his branch of work, how much more closely must it apply to the people who write scenarios for the purpose of selling them to film makers? There always will be a great deal of disappointment in this and other kinds of literary work. "Each of us thinks his own Swan the whitest." The difficulty is to persuade the other fellow to entertain the same opinion. If we could all do that, life would be very different to what it is. But we cannot; and we never will.

Besides a school for scenario writing you have schools for novelists, dramatists, newspaper men and the like—in fact anybody who takes up the pen wherewith to make money by filling newspapers and magazines, by writing books, etc., etc., by writing plays, or by acting, can find a school for teaching them how to do this sort of thing. Whether the school succeeds or not, depends upon the aptitude of the individuals requiring the necessary instruction. Not everybody who thinks that he or she can write for a publication can really do so. Disillusion is bound to come sooner or later. But nobody will be convinced or persuaded to the contrary until this disillusion does come. The ranks of the disappointed and the rejected are therefore filled with people who would be more useful in taking up other kinds of work. The school to which we have given mention may accomplish some practical good if it will teach its students the formula or the technique of scenario writing. To a person of average intelligence it would not be a difficult matter to acquire these things; but even so, when the technique or the formula for the writing of a scenario has been acquired, it by no means follows that success is assured. The film maker has to be reckoned with. The film maker is just a plain man of business who buys what he wants or thinks he wants. He does not buy the best and produce the best according to many opinions; he just buys what will sell, what the public wants, or what he thinks the public wants. The measure of his success in this direction is the measure of his business success. He buys scenarios or plots that will help him to sell his films. That is what he is in the business for.

We have looked through a very large number of these rejected scenarios and if we made pictures we would not buy them. If we made pictures we should either write our own scenarios or keep a tame scenario writer on the premises. That is the simplest way. The demand for really high class scenarios is limited. Rostand's "Chantecleer" might look a very fine story in scenario form, but possibly it might not suit the producer. The producer is an important factor in this matter. He has to work with given materials and must fit his scenarios to these materials.

The scope for originality therefore in scenario writing is limited. Of necessity the old themes must be dealt with over and over again or altered or adapted to meet the exigencies of the case. The reason for this, we think, is obvious. The moving picture public of the world has not as yet been educated up to an acceptance or an understanding of anything unconventional on the moving picture screen. By "anything unconventional," we mean something like Chantecleer or the Pinero-Ibsen kind of plays. Over and over again in our past volumes we have given the formula for a successful moving picture. Let us repeat it: A simple story, plainly told, well acted and well photographed. The scenario writer should bear in mind the first part of this formula. His scenario should embody a simple, easily actable story, which can be easily handled by a producer and his staff of actors and actresses. If the school for scenario writing teaches its students this elementary truth then some good will have been achieved.

The Edison Company alone amongst manufacturers have gone into the open market and paid well known novelists and story writers to tender them scenarios. Whether the experiment was a success the books of the company alone can tell. The other film manufacturers do not appear to have followed suit in this matter. There is no doubt that in the cost of the film only a relatively small sum can be afforded for the scenario at present, so that the time looks at present very distant when more than a hundred dollars will be paid for film scenarios. People who do work which commands anything like one hundred dollars for a moving picture scenario can probably earn more money at newspaper hackwork. In conclusion, it appears to us that there is no real demand for high class unconventional scenarios, because, first of all, the makers cannot afford to pay the prices, and then, the public would not appreciate the stories when they are presented to them.

Toning and Tinting as an adjunct to the Picture.

The high pressure under which some film manufacturers have to work to keep up their regular releases prevents them from giving to their product many artistic touches that would otherwise be done if there was an open market and the competition was on the lines of quality instead of quantity. Occasionally a reel is seen that is appropriately toned or tinted or both, and it is a relief to the eye and frequently brings applause to a picture that would have been passed in silence if in cold black and white. We have heard manufacturers remark when this subject was mentioned that the people were already getting enough for their money. Rather a narrow-minded attitude, is it not?

Toning, of course, is a considerable added expense, as the photograph has to be developed in black and white, carefully washed and then treated with other chemicals which alter the color of the silver deposit; also the work has to be done by skilled labor. Tinting alone is both simple and inexpensive. Where both are used together and in colors appropriate to the subject the result is almost as satisfying as hand coloring or natural color photography. We have in mind some Great Northern subjects that were double toned and tinted, and the impression conveyed was that we were looking at the actual scene. The same can be said of some of the Gaumont scenic films and an occasional Eclair.

* * *

Pathe, of course, leads the world in artificial coloring, and some of their mechanically colored films d'art rival the hues of Kinemacolor, although, judging from the records of the patent office, we expect soon to see stencil colored films from an American manufacturer. But pigment coloring is of course vastly more expensive than toning and the latter suffices in most cases. Tinting is sometimes used as a cloak for poor photography but the photograph must be perfect if it is to be toned.

Of the American manufacturers, Selig, Edison and Vitagraph occasionally send out toned pictures, in some of which the various scenes were different toned, appropriate to the subject. Lubin has also, lately, sent out some very finely toned and tinted subjects which have greatly helped to establish a new standard of quality for the Lubin product. Thanhouser, Nestor and others have shown that they have the knowledge and the facilities for this work and no doubt they have had pleasing comments from their customers when they, if seldom, departed from the black and white.

* * *

We were prompted to draw attention at this time to the advisability of varying the tones of the photograph by reading a letter which was received by the Rex Company from an exhibitor who said that he would always demand Rex films if they were as beautifully toned as the one he had just run. Without in the least detracting from the literary or histrionic quality of the Rex product, we have no doubt that the great and sudden popularity that this film has already achieved is largely due to the careful toning and tinting which, of itself alone, was enough to stamp this new product as the work of an old master hand.

So it is evident that the exhibitor and the public like a change from the black and white and will ask for the brand of film that gives them the colors; therefore the manufacturer who hides behind the excuse that "the people are already getting enough for their money" may wake up some day and find his patronage gone. As we have said before, toning is not a great expense, and if it is done right it does not lessen the brilliancy of the picture, but in the tinting process, in which the dye is applied to the whole surface of the film, it is advisable, nay compulsory, to dilute it to such an extent that there is just the mere suggestion of color.

The Color Question

Our London correspondent sends us a communication with regard to a new method of making moving pictures in natural colors, which, on the face of it, deserves more than passing notice. The inventor, Mr. Fulton, is a man whom we know to be experienced in photography, and that is why we pay particular attention to what our London correspondent says.

If we understand our correspondent aright, Fulton has applied the principles of reflection to the projection of moving pictures in natural colors. No practical details are forthcoming, but at the same time, we do not entirely discredit what has been said as to the possibility of such a process.

It is not generally known that some of the earliest photographs were made by reflection. Daguerrotype cameras were made over 60 years ago in which a reflected image of the original was finally received on a sensitive plate. The well known camera obscura is an instance of the viewing of reflected images of nature. Mr. Fulton's process, therefore, has some basis of reason in it. Obscure though it necessarily looks to us at present without details, one thing is tolerably certain, the exposure and development of the negative must be made in the usual way. It is possible, we presume, to make a very thin positive, and then transmit color through that positive, so as to get some sort of harmonious color effect on the screen.

This looks to be, at first blush, a rough outline of the Fulton process. While waiting more particulars, we wish it to be understood that we neither applaud nor condemn the little information that has been sent us. As we have said over and over again, there are many minds at work on this natural color problem and when the problem is finally solved, we shall probably be saying "Who'd thought it," or some similar remark.

The Open Market—III.

Readers of the two preceding articles under this caption will have perceived that we have based our advocacy of an open market in the making and marketing of moving pictures, chiefly upon qualitative grounds. On grounds of quality, we recognize that a majority of the licensed makers have a moral right to their presence in the market. Their pictures are of a uniform average of excellence, which entitle them to respect on technical and artistic grounds. And they please the public. Judged by results, they are what the public or a majority of the public wants.

But frankly, while we concede, as we conceded two or three weeks ago, that the licensed product as a whole had not gone back in quality, yet we think that these photographs are susceptible, speaking generally, of great improvement in several respects. Many of the licensed manufacturers are intelligent enough themselves to know this. They know that they have not yet given the public the very best they could. They know that constant progress is essential and that is why they are always putting out new features and redoubling their enterprise. On broad general grounds these manufacturers are worthy of a place in the moving pictue market, irrespective of the protection they enjoy by their association with No. 80 Fifth Avenue.

But what of the Independent manufacturers? We are only quoting the exhibitor in saying that several Independent manufacturers of moving picture films are hardly entitled to a place in the market in respect of quality of picture. We could specifically mention these pictures. Everybody is mentioning them. We, and the reader know, who the people are that we have in mind.

But we do not want "to knock" these people. We do not want to "destroy" them or any other manufacturer of inferior moving picture films, but we do want to bring them to a realization of their position. One way of doing this, and we think a just way, is to drive home the necessity of an open market, especially on the Independent side of the business. On the score of quality some of the Independent manufacturers have no right in the market. They are making bad pictures, very bad pictures, indeed. They are harming the Independent side of the business; they are harming the business generally. We think these people should either make better films, or go out of the market into some other business. If they cannot or will not make better pictures, then the market should be open so that these people do not act as a handicap to their business associates. This is why we want to open the market. We want to open it to pictures of quality, whether those pictures come from the newly formed National Film Manufacturing and Leasing Company or the Associated Motion Picture Patents Company referred to elsewhere, or from the licensed, or from any other side. We do not want a restricted market, because, as we show conclusively, a restricted market, divided between two factions, or even united in one faction, operates against the public by promulgating pictures of inferior quality. To reiterate: There are pictures on the licensed side which have no right to equal sales, a privilege which the restricted program invests them with. Equally so there are pictures on the Independent side which have no right to a place on the program. They are qualitatively bad, and being bad they have a bad influence on the business.

Clearly, then, it is our duty to insist upon the vital urgency of opening the market to quality. This we do in the interest of American manufacturers themselves. It is commonly said that the foreign markets are more profitable to the American moving picture maker, than the home markets. In other words, that he can sell outside the United States more copies of his pictures than he sells in them. The Vitagraph-Biograph-Selig picture is selling, we are told, more largely in Europe than in this country. We are very glad to hear this. We should like all the manufacturers to be equally successful abroad. But this they can not if they can't or won't make good pictures. Hence they stand in their own light and degrade the business in the eyes of the world.

We are not going to let this question of the open market end with this article. Some of our friends may not be pleased with what we are writing. We are sorry for this, but we consider it a matter of duty to write what we write. We have refrained in mercy from stating why certain pictures we have in mind have no right on this market, or any market. We hope that we may not be called upon to do so. Still we are prepared to speak out, if it is necessary. Meanwhile we insist that the attitude we take up in advocating an open market is for the good of the business as a whole. Opening the market to qualitative competition would be to the advantage of the public. And if the public is not advantaged, then, by the law of reflex action, the manufacturers will not be advantaged. So that, on the whole, our advocacy of an open market is in the interest of manufacturers themselves, a fact which we hope they will recognize.

The Associated Motion Picture Patents Company.

A New Film Manufacturing Concern

Just at the moment of writing, when widespread interest is being evinced in the moving picture field over the desire, expressed in our pages, for an open market in the business of making and selling moving pictures, there comes along quietly and unannounced a new company, which we are sure is destined to figure largely in the new condition of things, that the open market, when it comes and it is bound to come, will bring about. This is the Associated Motion Picture Patents Company, a New York State Million Dollar corporation with offices at 1482 Broadway, and a manufacturing plant in course of erection.

What is the Associated Motion Picture Patents Company? Briefly, it is a combination of successful business men, that is, men who have been successful in other branches of business, who have entered the motion picture field fortified by their successes in other businesses. These men are about to apply to the business of making and selling moving pictures, the same principles which assured their success in other branches of commerce. At the outset, let us say that the General Manager and Secretary of the Company is Mr. J. Alexander Leggett, formerly identified with the Vitagraph Company of America. Mr. Leggett was attached to the commercial side of the Vitagraph Company, and is well known for the successful handling of his work.

* * *

Though still in its preliminary organizing stages, the Associated Company, for such it will probably in future be known, has been exceedingly busy. To begin with: Let us assure the reader and the trade in general that a great part of its capital is paid up, to the bank, and that the other is easily available. It is a solid business concern, backed up by real names. It has already started on the business of acquiring patents which are of commercial value in the moving picture field. It would be premature to indicate the direction of its negotiations; suffice it to say that we have personally satisfied ourselves that these are of a bona fide nature.

* * *

Here we will say that we think the formation of the Associated Company is to the advantage of the business as a whole. That is why we welcome it. The operations of the company include the erection of a special plant for printing from manufacturers' own negatives. The Associated Company intends to be a high class firm of trade printers, with a perfectly appointed factory of the newest and latest machinery and appliances, and the best technical help in printing, toning, tinting, etc., etc. The Associated Company lay themselves out to print for moving picture manufacturers, cheaper and better than these men can print for themselves. They invite printing from both licensed and independent manufacturers. They will print advertising pictures; educational pictures. They will print for individual persons, for anybody and for everybody. Their scheme is to produce perfect positives from whatever negatives are supplied.

Equally so, the Company intend entering the business of producing and releasing. With the enormous capital at their command they are in a position to engage the best available talent in the way of producers, actors, photographers. They propose sending out companies to various parts of the country, having the negatives made and releasing the positives in the ordinary way of business. They propose making industrial, educational, scientific pictures. Biblical subjects will also receive attention.

All their pictures will be carefully censored and nothing will leave the Associated Works, which is not of the highest excellence. If it is necessary in order to carry out this project to have half a dozen plants in various parts of the country, those plants will be erected. If it is necessary to further capitalize the company over and above the million dollar mark, the money will be forthcoming.

This is an important point which we desire in the interests of the business to emphasize. The Associated Company is no small mushroom concern, with a few thousand dollars at its command. It is, we have to again state, a solidly financed concern, backed up by business men of great reputation, determined to succeed in the making and marketing of the highest class moving picture which it is possible to prepare in the United States or any part of the world to-day.

* * *

The Associated Company is not entering the moving picture field tentatively or by way of experiment. It has some to stay and intends to stay. It has been quietly perfecting its organization for several months past. It not merely intends to have a share of the American market; it intends to have a share of the markets of the world. It is its object to secure this trade by one means, and one means only, that is by means of quality. The Associated Company releases will challenge comparison with the best made moving picture in the world, because they will be produced by the highest class talent available in the photographic, technical and producing ends. Quality, quality, quality is the slogan of the Associated Company.

The Associated Company has no politics; it is not out to antagonize any combination of individuals or any single individual at present in the moving picture business. The men at the back of the Associated Company have studied the field quietly and diligently for a long time. They have convinced themselves that there is room for the Associated Company's pictures. They have put down their money; they intend to succeed in their object, antagonizing none, interfering with none. The Associated Company has come into the business in response to a widespread desire for an open market. They intend to do their share in sustaining an open market by the only possible way, namely, by putting out none but the highest class pictures and by backing up their venture with plenty of money, experience, brains and enterprise. We have no doubt of the success of the Associated Company in this programme.

Sea Pictures.

The above is the title of an article that we have long had in mind. Just as we are about to write it, we find at our hand the March number of "American Photography," which, as many of our readers know, is devoted to stationary photography in its artistic and amateur aspects. The first article in this publication gives an account of the marine photography of F. J. Mortimer. Mr. Mortimer is a well known amateur photographer and Editor of an English publication of that name. This is the peculiarity and the distinction of his work. For years he has devoted himself to the photography of the sea. He is not the first to make a specialty of this kind of work, but he is, we think, the most successful. His field of work is in the southwest corner of England, that part of the British Isles first seen by the voyager from this side of the world. The coast is rocky and stormy, and gives opportunity for the making of not merely very fine photographs, but very fine paintings.

Mr. Mortimer's photographic life work deals with a tremendous subject. The sea, especially on the coast, is a thing of moods. It has infinite variety of form and aspect. As a subject it is popular with us all, whether in book, in poetry, in painting, in photography. We all love the sea. We love sea stories, sea adventures. The mysteries of the deep enthral us. The sea always interests us. In fact, to paraphrase an old saying, "If there were no sea, it would be necessary to invent one."

The enormous popularity of still photographs of the sea suggests to us that the makers of moving pictures might give us more sea subjects than they do. Now and again we get a drama enacted by the sea shore, but seldom, indeed, studies of the sea itself. Yet the subject is always fascinating. We observe that when a sea picture is shown on the moving picture screen, it vastly interests an audience. The sea tells its own stories. When it is placid, we know that calm sets upon its breast. When it is stormy, the imagination is excited by possibilities that beyond the dark scurry of the waves ships may be struggling and lives may be in danger. There is an infinite variety of waves, and wave forms. There are swells, combers, rollers. Sea spray, sea mist, sea fog are interesting to look at. The relationship between the sky and the sea is also an interesting subject for photography, for the sky is almost as varied in its effects as the sea.

Individual reputations in ordinary photography are many and varied. Here is a man whose reputation for sea photographs is world wide. Reputations in the production of moving pictures, that is, in the individualistic sense, are still in the making. If some clever moving picture photographer would take up the study of the sea with the moving picture camera, as Mortimer has done with the stationary camera, he would make a great reputation and he would make much money. Moreover, his pictures when shown on the screen would gratify many millions. As we have said before, we all love the sea and like to look at the sea itself, though mostly we must be satisfied by studying pictures of it. We hope this hint will be taken by the makers, and that we shall have more pictures of the sea than we have had so far.

A Unique Situation.

By Robert Grau.

NO greater illustration of the potency of the motion picture can be pointed to than to make observation of the meteoric rise and persistent uplift which characterizes the careers of the men who entered that field a few years ago.

The practically definite announcement that Marcus Loew is to absorb the William Morris theaters is perhaps the most important news of the last few years, and it is not to be doubted that the after effect will be momentous, if indeed it does not create a complete upheaval in the vaudeville and moving picture world. It must first be understood that William Morris has for more than ten years maintained, alone and unaided, a warfare against the allied vaudeville interests, better known as the United Booking Offices. Moreover, he has been their greatest menace, and during the last three years has been the only opponent with which the larger concern had to contend.

William Morris.

It has always been conceded in important vaudeville circles that the day when William Morris ceased to wage his battle, whether from defeat or compromise, the last vestige of what is known as "opposition" will have been cast into oblivion, and the eyes of the entire amusement world have always been intently fixed on the movements of this remarkable young man of whom Mr. Keith once said: "Morris is not to be counted out while he has a roll-top desk and one house to book for."

The "Moving Picture World" readers are, however, less interested in the new situation from a vaudeville viewpoint than from a desire to know what will be the effect on the moving picture industry, and, in a lesser degree, on what is known as "Pop" vaudeville. Mr. Loew has shown, up to this period, that while he is ambitious, and aims to raise the level of his theaters and performances, he is in no hurry to gratify the wishes of that element which is constantly predicting that he will turn all of his higher grade theatres into what is generally known as "Big time." He realizes that the great fortune he has accumulated has come from his grasping at the right time the opportunity offered by the great vogue of moving pictures. It is true that the addition of vaudeville acts became a necessity, but Mr. Loew is quick to see that the motion picture must be a vital, even a superior feature of his programmes, if he is to retain the tremendous patronage created gradually, for it cannot be denied that millions of new theatregoers have been attracted first by moving pictures and perhaps later were held fast by the addition of minor vaudeville acts.

But the serious phase in all these proceedings lies in the nature of the "deal" by which Mr. Loew is to absorb the Morris theaters, for while it seems certain that the United Booking Offices are factors therein, it is not believed that either Mr. Morris or Mr. Loew have removed from their possession the privilege of turning their houses into high grade vaudeville establishments.

Thus the situation is unique in that it brings about universal peace for some time to come and what is even more important, the utter abolition of the famous "black list," an embargo which served to make Mr. Morris' position tenable, and also has caused some of the most celebrated stars to appear in the low-priced theaters, for after they had appeared for a few weeks for Mr. Morris and were unwelcome with the U. B. O. people, they were forced to accept whatever engagements offered.

The entrance of William Morris, into the moving picture and "Pop" vaudeville field, is an event of vast importance, for he is the type of man who makes his presence felt in any surroundings, and he will prove an asset of very large dimensions, in fact his operations are extremely likely to be spectacular.

Marcus Loew.

The accession of such theaters as the American and the Plaza to Mr. Loew's already formidable list, is in itself a remarkable achievement. In five years this man has become not only enormously rich but his holdings are perhaps the largest of any single individual operating in the amusement world. If Mr. Loew can control his ambitions and refrain from activities which may mean his emerging into new and uncertain fields, then indeed is he likely to become the most interesting as well as the most powerful figure in the distinctly popular priced field of vaudeville combined with moving pictures.

BUFFALO JONES AT THE SPORTSMEN'S SHOW

One of the features of the Sportsmen's Show at Madison Square Garden is Buffalo Jones and his two associates on the African game hunting expedition, Messrs. Mears and Lowman. Colonel Jones is there with the moving pictures of his African hunt, entitled: "Lassoing Wild Animals in Africa." Mr. Jones is featuring these views in person, and we would advise exhibitors who live at no great distance from the Garden to see to booking this attraction for the coming week.

The demand for the Buffalo Jones pictures has not been what it should be, owing to the disappointment caused by the Roosevelt party. A few weeks ago in these columns we described the Buffalo Jones pictures in detail and asserted at that time that there really should be a luxury with the trade in order to get the best possible results with them. Exhibitors visiting the Garden will have the pleasure of hearing Buffalo Jones lecture these reels in person.

Carbon Setting for Projection Purposes.

By HENRY PHELPS GAGE, A.M., Cornell University.

Specially written for the Moving Picture World.

IT had always been my supposition that when using alternating current the best carbon setting would be the same as when using direct current; that is with the carbons tipped back from the vertical about 30°. The alternating arc when in operation usually looks like Fig. 1, which is a photograph natural size of an arc using 35 amperes alternating current under a pressure of 35 volts. Fig. 2 is a front view of the same. By a study of these pictures one would expect that as most of the light comes from the craters, some from the hot carbon ends, and but very little from the arc itself, most of the light would be thrown up or down and but little horizontally. Actual photometric measurements have shown a distribution of light as in Fig. 5, where the distance of the line from the center represents the candle power when measured in that direction from the center. The same thing may be shown by holding a paper in front of the arc. There will be two bright spots separated by a shadow. Fig. 4 is a photograph of this, the arc is just behind the cross.

Fig. 1. Projection arc lamp, using 35 amperes, 35 volts, alternating current side view, natural size.

If the carbons are vertical the least light will go along the axis of the lantern, that is towards the screen, and the result is apt to be a shadow in the middle of the picture. If the carbons are tipped back 30° the brightest light is in the direction of the axis of the lantern where it is wanted.

What I have said so far refers to an arc lamp trimmed with carbons in perfect alignment, the craters when operated on alternating current being flat and at right angles to the axis of the carbons, side drafts barred.

If the carbons are set vertical the natural drafts of air do not tend to push the crater to one side or the other. A condenser or other piece of glass put up near the arc will not disturb these air currents. Thinking that a side draft might change the position of the crater as it does when using a long direct current arc I tried placing the carbons horizontal.

Fig. 2. Projection arc lamp, front view showing crater.

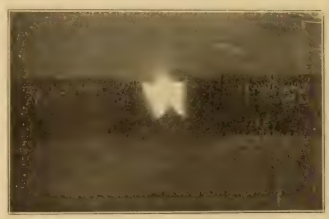

Fig. 3. Arc lamp with the carbons horizontal.

Here the upward air currents pushed the craters nearly to the top of the carbons (Fig 3), but they were still parallel to each other. That the craters are not at right angles to the axis of the carbons is merely an accident.

I know of no possible effect an alternating current transformer can have on the shape or position of the arc. A well designed choke coil will greatly reduce the power consumption, but that is another matter.

The "Blow magnet" principle used on flamming arcs, mentioned on page 427 of the March 4th number of this magazine can be used to hold the craters to the front of the carbons. This has three other effects. It raises the arc voltage, makes the arc noisy, and renders the arc delicate and hard to handle. If some enterprising manufacturer will take the trouble to make such a device and adjust it very carefully it might be made to work.

Now that the matter of carbon setting is being discussed I would like to say a few words about the best arrangement for direct current. With direct current practically all the available light comes from the positive crater; hence great care must be taken to hold the crater so it faces the condenser and to keep the arc long enough so the negative carbon does not cast a shadow. This is a perfectly general rule and applies to any type of direct current projection lamp.

The usual type of projection arc lamp holds the two carbons in alignment and tipped back about 30° as is shown in Fig. 1. When using direct current it is better to use a longer arc than this, which will enable the rising currents of air to carry the crater to the forward side of the upper carbon. This is illustrated in Fig. 2 of the article which appeared February 25, page 410. If the crater has a tendency to form anywhere else it will be necessary to "juggle things around" until it forms where it is wanted. A little experiment will show much quick-

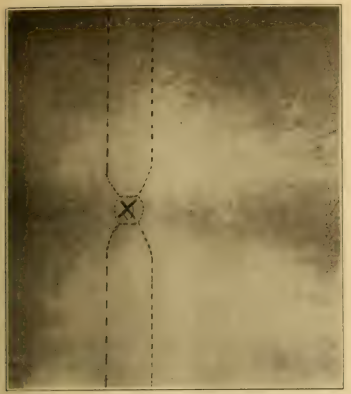

Fig. 4. Paper held in front of arc lamp. The dotted lines show the position of the carbons behind the paper. Note the shadow between the two spots of light from the two craters.

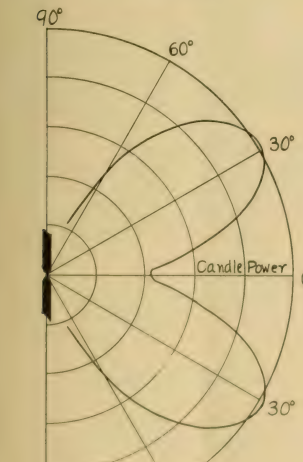

Fig. 5. Curve showing the distribution of light around an alternating current arc. With 55 amperes the outside circle is about 2,000 candle power.

er than many words can tell just how this is done; but the point is, to make the crater burn so as to face the condenser.

Another type of lamp, much used in stereopticon work but not often seen in moving picture equipment, is one which holds the carbons at right angles to each other. For many purposes, such as for use with a projection microscope, it is the only kind of lamp which does satisfactory work. With the right-angle lamp the positive crater can be made to form on the tip of the upper electrode. As the carbon burns back or feeds forward the arc always remains in the axis of the lamp and never needs centering. The right-angle lamp gives about 15% more light in the horizontal direction for the same current than does the inclined carbon lamp. It can be used with currents up to about 25 amperes before the "magnetic blow" effect becomes troublesome. This "magnetic blow" acts as if there were a strong blast of air blowing through the lamp. Practically, 25 amperes as an upper limit is not too low for good projection. Twenty-five amperes with a right-angle lamp should furnish 8,000 candle-power, more than one could get with 80 amperes alternating current. If 8,000 candle-power will not give good projection there is something wrong somewhere. That right-angle lamps are not used wherever there is direct current available is due mainly to the conservatism of the manufacturers.

The question of arc voltage as such need not cause much trouble. The arc voltage depends on the arc length, and it is the arc length that should be carefully watched.

In every case where resistance is used, either with alternating or direct current, hold the arc length so that as much as possible of the crater or craters shows in the forward direction. This can be seen by looking at the arc with a colored glass or other device. The power taken from the line depends only upon the amperage. The power which is not used in the arc is wasted in the rheostat, so it is better to use a fair arc strength and let the voltage come to what it will.

When using alternating current with a choke coil or an alternating current transformer the case is different. Here the power taken from the line is (practically) the product of the arc amperes times the arc volts. Now, while an increase in the arc length will increase the light, it will increase the arc voltage in greater proportion; hence under these conditions for the sake of economy it is better to use a short arc.

THE HANDLE TO HIS NAME.

By F. H. R.

At a banquet in Chicago, seated round the sparkling waters
While mutual admiration reached a hundred in the shade
Jack Harding rose and beamed upon the native who sat beside him.
Who writes the weekly dope which scares the Western licensed trade.

Said he: "Jimmie dear, I love you and desire to see you prosper.
Though you cannot hope to shine without a handle to your name.
'Doctor Eddie' seems to fit you, though 'E. P.' is rather manly.
And 'D. C. E.' also suits, because it is your game.

"But may Jimmie, at this banquet, MAY unfold the proper honors,
And fix you up with something out of ordinary run.
'F. M. O.' shall be your handle. 'What it stands for?' Shame upon you!
Jimmie, boy, 'tis obvious 'F. M.' means 'Feed Me Oats.'"

"Gee-whiz!" Jimmie interrupted, "may I have a 'P' before it?"
"Not," said Harding, "would dishonor you before the other mutts.
'F. M. O.' it is or nothing — for the three you are deserving Five cents out 'P. F. M. O.' Who are 'Please Feed Me Oats?'"

Panic and Its Prevention.

The newspapers this week have had lengthy accounts of an unfortunate disaster in a Russian moving picture theatre. An explosion, a fire and a panic, led to the death of a hundred persons and the injury of many more. The true details of this unfortunate occurrence will probably never be known. We are sorry to perceive that the New York papers, with their usual alarmist tendencies, seem to have deliberately set about frightening the public by printing more or less unnecessarily sensational accounts of this regrettable affair, which everybody having the best interests of the moving picture business at heart, strongly deplores.

One of our contemporaries, saner than the rest, recalls the interesting fact that since 1896, when the picture first became popular (that is fifteen years ago), only two disasters of magnitude have occurred, a comparatively small percentage. One was the Charity Bazaar fire in Paris; the other that at Boyertown, Pa. Of course there have been many minor accidents in moving picture theatres, and other buildings, but on the whole we think that, as compared with other forms of entertainment, the moving picture is not very dangerous or danger-provoking. With regard to the Russian disaster, it is permissible to assume that it may have been caused by the readily inflammable nature of some junk films. Here, on the assumption that this theory is tenable, we would like to warn all exhibitors throughout the world from incurring similar risks. Film of this nature, which has been in long practical use, is more readily inflammable than other films.

There is a general aspect of this matter, suggested by the Russian disaster, which we have long had in mind and to which we think it desirable to defer. It is this: Exhibitors cannot be too careful in exercising all care in taking means to avoid any explosions, fires or panics, in their theatres. Primarily, of course, in the protection of the lives of the people who frequent their theatres; secondarily, for the due conservation of the business. Disasters of the Russian and Boyertown nature frighten people and work harm to the business. The moving picture business has reached such a condition of stapleness and stability that it would be a thousand pities if by carelessness, or other cause, the occurrence of preventable accidents should repel the public at a time when it is desirable the public should be attracted to the moving picture.

"THE PRIESTESS OF CARTHAGE."

I have talked "Open Market No. 2;" many persons have opposed my views on the ground that an open market would open the doors to too many would-be manufacturers, and that an extra crop of new manufacturers would bring a slump in the prices.

I am ready to wage that Mr. Gaumont is not afraid of an open market. Why should he be? He holds the market. Some manufacturers, very few of them, they can be counted on the five fingers of the hand, can produce some good work but certainly none of them can excell, at least at this time, "The Priestess of Carthage" of Gaumont.

With such work on record, the capitalist who, approached by a new prospective manufacturer, can say to his borrower: "Have you the nerve to tell me that you can produce a better 'Priestess of Carthage' and this with a meagre capital at your disposition? Such work requires a great experience, a little fortune to produce and a lot of time and hard work. You will have to show me what you can do before I invest any money in a moving picture manufacturing plant, as I am not going to risk my capital unless you can prove me that you can do better than Gaumont."

No words can be found strong enough to express the agreeable impression left after the exhibition of such a wonderful production. The acting surpasses the most sanguine expectations, the gorgeous settings and costumes are correct to the epoch, the colors are admirably distributed.

The story is as follows:

The City of Carthage is at war with Rome. In the Temple of Eschmoun, the priests and the people are gathered together to pray for victory. Bent on the immolated victims, the sacrificer gives the following oracle: "Arizath, the priestess of Tanit, must come; she is the only one who can save us."

Airzath comes. The oracle promises victory if she will obtain from the barbarian chief, Gersaken, the moonstone that he carries in his turban. Arizath dresses herself most beautifully and preceded by a slave goets to see Gersaken, who falls in love with her and promises to give her the talismen, but after the next day's battle.

Arizath takes leave of Gersaken, but in her way meets a young and rich suitor, who makes her remember that she promised to marry him. "Too late," she said. "I am betrothed." The lover swears revenge and at night introduces himself to Gersaken's tent to steal the precious talisman.

Arizath is on her house's terrace when Gersaken brings her the severed head of her former lover. The priestess at first feels disgust, but she consults Tanit and taking the moonstone, she throws the head into the void. Then she gives the warrior's sword to the purifying flames, and, in company with Gersaken, she goes to the temple to bring the famous moonstone, talisman of the future victories of Carthage.

It is a masterpiece if any film can be called by this name. It is art in every sense of the word.

I am sorry to say that while the best classes clamor for better statures, our exhibitors, several of them do not seem to understand art, do not appreciate good work but have still in themselves, the uncultured tastes of the push-cart men. They do not think that a pcture can be a good comedy, unless there is a woman lifting her skirts, when in the act of falling. Cannot consider a drama a good one, unless there is a repulsive sensational scene or climax. These men are the ones retarding the uplifting of the business and discouraging the manufacturers.

We find them everywhere. At Mr. Geo. Kleine's exhibition room they were there. While "The Priestess of Carthage" was on the screen, they were passing some absurd comments, in a loud voice, without any consideration for the persons wishing to enjoy such a rare master-piece. It would be too long to enumerate some of these foolish comments. I will mention one of them, to give an idea of how silly some of our exhibitors can be. A certain exhibitor thought that he would show his high intelligence by making the following remark: "I see no cowboys in this picture." Other exhibitors thought that it was proper to laugh at such a stupid joke. Such men should have been asked to leave the room. They could not appreciate art and good work.

Mr. Gaumont can feel safe, no matter if we have 200 new manufacturers willing to cut the prices to five cents per foot. Mr. Gaumont will always find enough lovers of good art to pay him his price. High art pictures will make money for the few manufacturers able to produce them and will ruin the manufacturers that cannot produce the quality. An open market means quality and not quantity.

Mr. Kleine cannot deny that quality talks louder than quantity. He remembers that a year ago, we had the hardest time to show the "Penitent of Florence" at the Orpheum Theater, because the owners of said theater, were opposed to Gaumont pictures, but as during the past year, Mr. Gaumont released so many master-pieces, the Orpheum had no more objection and the Gaumont films are shown there, week after week. Excellent quality won the Orpheum Theater to the Gaumont productions as will eventually be the case, when quality rules over quantity.

J. M. BRADLET.

Casper, Wyo.—The Temple Theater here has just completed extensive alterations including the installation of a Mirror Screen and a Motiograph machine. Now using Independent service through Wm. H. Swanson Film Co. Denver office. One of the best five piece orchestras in the State has been secured and a program of pictures and music equal to the best is the standard now set by the management of the Temple Company.

Creston, Iowa—The Comet Theater of this city was lately opened under the management of Mr. H. L. Tucker. The building is new and the location is all that could be wished for. The seating capacity is 600 and all of the seats are needed most of the time. The Motiograph is the machine used, in conjunction with the Mercury Arc Rectifier. The projection is first class and the music is just what it ought to be for moving picture purposes, with special attention to proper sound effects. The house is doing very well in the face of strong opposition.

INDIANS WAR ON FILMS.

Delegation at Washington to Protest Against Alleged Libels in Moving Pictures.

Washington, Feb. 17.—Members of the two Chippewa delegations from Minnesota and Indians from other sections have joined in an "uprising" against the moving pictures. They charge that the moving picture promoters, in order to get thrilling pictures of wild western life, have used white men costumed as Indians, in depicting scenes that are not true pictures of the Indians, and are in fact grossly libelous. The Indians are contemplating a call at the White House tomorrow to lay the case before President Taft, and may ask for congressional action looking to the regulation of moving pictures in which Indians are shown.

One of the protesting Indians said to-day that he had gone into one of the motion picture theaters here, where a picture was shown in which a young Indian graduate of one of the non-reservation schools was the chief figure. He was shunned by the members of his tribe upon his return to them, took to drink, killed a man and fled, but was killed after a long chase. This was denounced as an untrue portrayal of the Indian.

Among those who have signed the protest against presenting these pictures to be shown are: Rev. John Eastman, Even Tall Chief, Benjamin Casswell, George Walters, A. H. Bow, E. Shig, John Ottoby, Red Bird, Scott Big Buck, John Washee, Bird Chief, Jr., Big Billy, John W. Carl, B. L. Fairbanks, Joe Critt, Thomas Swan, Rev. Chas. T. Wright, James Bassett, Jay Dugee Won, A. Y. Oush, Big Chief, Thomas Bell, Walton Arnold, Woodworth Sage, Jesse Roulledge Gustave H. Beaulieu, Julius Brown, William Potter, Big Ben and Captain Joseph Rouleau.

THE UNUSUAL THING.

New film manufacturing concerns have flitted across the horizon with such meteoric effect that when a new light appears the question first arises, "How long will it last?" As we have said before, the brief life of most of these aspirants was due to the fact that they set out to do "the usual thing," and that in a very perfunctory manner. It was, therefore, refreshing to look at the third release of the Rex Company, "By the Light of the Moon," and see how an ordinary theme could be adeptly handled with such daring originality as to give it absorbing interest. The silhouette style of picture runs the entire length of the film, which is beautifully tinted, as all Rex films are. It is taking as well the ten-cent theaters as the two previous Rex issues, "A Heroine of '76" and "The Story of a Prayer Rug," which means they are meeting with success, which is phenomena to a new concern.

MORE COMEDIES.

Wisely reasoning that the superfluity of Western films proclaimed a dearth of that other feature line, good comedy, the Solax people have laid themselves out to shine in this capacity. Producer Melville informs us that they now have ten good comedies ready for early release, and Advance Agent Solax Magie, just back from a two weeks' trip among the exchanges, wears a broad smile. Solax films are evidently not hard to sell

GENERAL FILM ENTERS LOS ANGELES.

The smaller exhibitors throughout Southern California have prevailed upon the General Film Company to establish a branch at Los Angeles. The licensed product in that part of the country has heretofore been in the hands of men who are very prominently identified with the exhibiting end and the small exhibitor had more or less grounds for complaining of unjust competition. It is the opinion of the Moving Picture World that the distributing and exhibiting ends of the business should be run separate.

TALKING PICTURES THAT ARE MARVELS.

The very latest developments in moving pictures are this week offered to the attention of Quebecers. Manager Abel, at the Auditorium, having secured a real novelty for his great crowd of patrons. Quebecers have seen talking pictures before, but the present is something altogether different, and is little short of wonderful. The figures on the screen seem animated and full of life, and when they sing, whistle talk or play a musical instrument every movement and action tends to make the presentation as lifelike as it can be. The Auditorium was packed to its utmost capacity last night, and the enthusiastic applause which greeted this novelty everywhere showed that it had won a remarkable success.—Quebec Chronicle.

NEW COURT THEATER, KANKAKEE, OPENED.

Opening of the New Court Theater, Kankakee, Ill. which apparently bids fair to be one of the most successful photoplay houses in the Mississippi Valley was an event for nearly 3,000 persons Saturday afternoon and evening February 18. Frank M. Howell, formerly of Springfield, Ill. but now representing the Baldwin Piano Company on the Pacific coast, who is a gifted pianist gave several solo numbers but featured the accompaniment of the pictures. In addition Bruner's orchestra gave a program of twelve numbers with William Dwyer of Chicago as baritone soloist. The paneled ceiling of the vestibule is studded with tungsten lights and the woodwork is of golden oak with Lincrusta Walton panels, heraldic design and in ivory colors. The auditorium proper has heavy beamed ceiling of Louis XIV. design and is colored in ivory white and decorated in gold. The ends of the beams are supported by capped Corinthian pilasters finished in the same decorations as the ceiling. The walls are paneled, in colors of light buff, with light blue-grey fields and decorated in gold and brown with heavy cornered Romanesque design. The curtain screen is suspended in a heavy frame finished in maroon, gold and white and hung between pedestals on which rest beautiful Sago palms.

All wiring is in electric conduits insuring safety. The lamphouse is lined throughout with five-ply asbestos and covered with twenty guage galvanized iron, lapped one and one-half inches and nailed every half inch complying with the strictest rules of the underwriters. The ceiling is lighted with holophane disk lights with 100-watt tungstens. The side lights are ordinary carbon lights with fancy shades to which are hung three inch gold fringe.

Five sixteenth inch fans and an exhaust fan capable of throwing out 8,000 cubic feet of air per minute are run by small motors.

The Court will be handled by Zet LaRocque, manager, Miss Lillian Tanner, cashier and operator Van Dyssen.

SHOW CARDS IN THE THEATRE.

The show card wherever it is used, should be a great business puller. Much, after all, depends upon the show card. For there are show cards and show cards. Some show cards should not be show cards at all, while others are a credit to themselves and their originators. They are artistic, concise, and to the point. And a show card must be pointed. It must be strictly original in design, neatly and simply produced, and say what it has to say in the fewest words.

The Payne Show Card Company of 17 Bright Street, Springfield Mass., specialize in show cards for moving picture theaters. The Company's list is before us. This list includes a number of cards which they have ready for immediate shipment. There are eighteen separate show cards in this list. The cards are just the things for the moving picture house. You use them in your lobby; you use them in your house, and they do the trick for you. They get the business once they get it house, and they get it all the time. The Payne Company sends us a number of original testimonials which they have received. These come from moving picture theaters in various parts of the United States, and they testify to the fact that the Payne Show Cards are all that they claim them to be. We advise our readers to write to the Payne Company at the address given, enclosing a test order for cards. They are as cheap as they are effective.

NEW INDEPENDENT EXCHANGE FOR SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA.

Miles Bros., Inc., who claim to have the largest film exchange west of Chicago at 100 Turk Street, San Francisco, have opened up a branch at 411 West Eighth Street Los Angeles.

The Olympic, formerly Hyde & Beymer's and latterly the Court Theater, situated on Adams Street, between Fulton Street and Myrtle Avenue, Brooklyn, has been turned into a well-ventilated and moving picture theater as operated by Mr. Wesley Stoompoort of the Fourteenth Street Theater, Manhattan.

Herbold's Acme Theater at Palm Haven, Pa. is one of those progressive moving picture houses that believes in extensive advertising. They have out in front of their entrance cards, together with a number of attractive stereopticon slides and original paper, as well as two fans of the size of the ordinary one sheet paper. The effect is said to be very striking indeed. Mr. Herbold insists that the independent manufacturers have missed him greatly in the advertising work by keeping him supplied with descriptions of film issues and portraits of their well known star. These two attributes of the Acme Theater resemble the bottom plate of the bellowing goat as circulated by some of the moving picture manufacturers.

They say that prosperity or adversity comes in bunches. I know it. That is, I know it so far as the moving pictures are concerned. Up to a very recent date the Public Press (the daily, weekly and Sunday newspapers) ignored moving pictures and, like the vaudevillian of about six years ago, laughed at them. It would be my delight to dwell upon the subject and tell of what I heard. The pictures were always the tailenders." Some people used to call them "the drive-out." And, strange as it may seem to most of us, the very people who stood in front, on and about the stage at that time, are now the proprietors or managers of some of the largest moving picture houses in the country. Why is it? Ask these very people. If you believe all you may hear you may be misled.

* * *

I met a friend one day and he said he had been studying a case all the previous day and night; finally he took up a pen, but his thoughts failed. Step by step he pushed on, and finally the manuscript was put in the hands of the proper party. When the curtain rose there was vociferous applause, and upon the close of the performance the author of the piece was called before the curtain and forced to "bow acknowledgments." The production was an immense success. Eventually it went "on the road." Of course the author did not go with it. He remained with the white lights and commenced, in spare moments, writing another play. "The road" has many rugged and unpleasant spaces and the first-born of our author suffered. He was not there with his influence and affluence to help make the path an easy one—and the poor thing died.

* * *

That is history in repeated form. The author with influence and money has been able to stage his product in the city, but when the same influence and affluence deserted the "success" as it went upon the road failure stepped in and played her part. In both cases the Public Press had its hands. In the first it appplauded; in the second it condemned. But how much more fortunate was that poor (?) author than the deserving one who wrote a good manuscript for a good moving picture play. Poor thing! The press was against the moving picture business on general principles. If fault could not be found with the story, then some fault would be found with the photography, the management or the operator of the projecting machine. At last the moving pictures are dignified by the Public Press; at least they are receiving dignified, if not intelligent, consideration. Some of the editors and reporters still persist in stating that a certain number of lives have been sacrificed by the exploding of a stereopticon, or that the over-heated celluloid in a moving picture machine ignited the films with dire results. Investigation has shown that the parties responsible for such reports are new acquisitions from New Jersey cranberry bogs or New Hampshire maple forests. The reporters are gradually becoming educated to the real conditions and will soon be able to give the public the news as it should be served. We have confident hopes that when a torch is dropped accidentally into a bundle of tinsel on the stage the moving picture machine innocently reclining in the front of the house will not be blamed for the damage.

* * *

The latest report is that almost a hundred children perished in the destruction of a moving picture theater by fire in St. Petersburg, Russia, a few days ago. Eighty per cent of the papers stated that the catastrophe was caused by "an explosion of the moving picture machine." The other papers, among them the New York Sun, state that the fire originated from a can of petroleum which was ignited in some unknown manner, presumably by a carelessly thrown match. Whether or not this be true, there is a standing offer of a fortune to anyone who can prove that a moving picture machine ever "exploded."

* * *

Be that as it may. Let us come nearer home. One of the most remarkable scenes in a court house was that enacted a few days ago in New York City. The incident may be classed as the most expensive moving picture exhibition ever given since the birth of motion photography. The case on trial was that of John R. Binns, better known to fame as "Jack" Binns (the hero wireless operator on the steamship Republic, sunk off Nantucket by the steamship Florida) against the Vitagraph Company of America. Soon after the event ocurred, the well known moving picture manufacturing concern issued a picture entitled "C.Q.D." The picture was issued about March, 1909. In July of the same year Binns sued for $25,000 damages, claiming that his reputation had been injured by a fake representation of the accident showing what was purported to be his personal participation. At the time the suit was brought Binns was employed in connection with a side show at Luna Park, Coney Island, N. Y., under the management of Thompson & Dundy. The show was called "Saved by Wireless." Binns went on the first trial, but on appeal a new trial was ordered. The second trial took place in the Supreme Court of New York before Justice Greenbaum and at the opening of the case the lawyers for Binns increased the claim for damages from $25,000 to $50,000. The trial occupied about two days and the jury returned a verdict for Binns for $12,500 after deliberating about four hours. The Vitagraph Company will appeal. During the trial it was decided to have the "C.Q.D." film produced before the court and jury, and for the first time to my knowledge in this or any other country a moving picture exhibition was given in a court house. See how prophetic moving pictures are! I remember seeing a moving picture subject a year or two ago depicting a robbery. The opening scene, or one of them, was an exterior showing an Italian organ-grinder, with a monkey, stopping in front of a mansion. As the Italian played the organ, the monkey climbed to an open window and entered the mansion. At the same time some moving picture people entered upon the scene in search of material for a play. This was a sort of prologue. Later scenes of the film told of a young man being accused of robbery. Conviction meant the loss of a bride. But some thoughtful angel brought forth the organ-grinder, his "monk" and the moving picture people. The picture taken at the time was reproduced in court and showed how the monkey committed the theft and turned over the proceeds to its master. Of course the hero was cut loose, only to be tied up again, but in a much more pleasant manner. If I am not mistaken this was the first moving picture production showing a moving picture within a moving picture, and if I am not again mistaken, the Vitagraph Company was the maker of it. I should be pleased to be informed on this. Oh! by the way, I said the Binns trial afforded the most expensive moving picture exhibition on record. Perhaps I have not qualified this declaration. To cinch the matter I will say that after the verdict was rendered Mr. Albert E. Smith, the treasurer of the Vitagraph Company, was asked what is the thought of the outcome. Mr. Smith, I might say, is a condensed wit. He says little but speaks much, if the expression may be permitted. Replying to the interviewer he said: "I have nothing to say at the present time about the verdict, except that it is the most expensive moving picture show I ever attended."

* * *

In reply to many inquiriers, the address of the makers of the F 1.9 moving picture camera lens, referred to in our article of February 18, "Exposing Moving Pictures Indoors," is J. H. Dallmeyer, Limited, 25 Newman Street, W., London.

* * *

Mr. Ludwig G. B. Erb, formerly treasurer of the Powers Company informs us that he has perfected a non-infringing camera, which will be sent on the market in due course. Mr. Erb's plans for the future are, at present, indefinite, but he proposes, we understand, to continue in the moving picture business.

* * *

Mr. Charles Fuller, formerly associated with the Film Import & Trading Company, starts this week on a business trip through the entire moving picture field of the country. He is to proceed as far as the coast, visiting exchanges, etc., en route. Mr. Fuller is popular in the moving picture field; he is a very good salesman, and is liked. We have no doubt that his business trip, which is undertaken in the interest of a new concern in the business, will be successful.

THE CONVENTION.

Convention time approaches. "J. M. B.," in Chicago, is talking and writing about the subject. We, here in New York City, also have our eyes upon it. The American moving picture trade is, as the Irishman might remark, a collection of wandering atoms; there is no union, no unanimity; no common purpose animating the trade as a whole. The two factions of which it is composed at present bid fair to be increased by a third faction, a fourth faction, a fifth faction and possibly others. Factionism is rife; factionism is rampant. It is time this state of things was ended. The convention to be held next July at Chicago will probably be a valuable step toward erecting a representative body of the American moving picture trade.

At present there is no really representative body in the United States competent to deal with the situation as it at present exists. While I am writing these paragraphs the Kinematograph & Lantern Weekly lies before me. It contains a lengthy account of the second annual dinner of the Kinematograph trade held in London on February 22. There were over 300 film men at that dinner, representing all branches of the industry. It has taken two or three years to get the film men of the British Isles together. This dinner will probably precede an annual convention which is talked of on the other side.

Something of the same sort seems to be desirable in this country. Dinners, as such, count for very little, though we know that they are often the means of smoothing the path of business. What is needed is a business gathering of all the constituents of the American film trade.

* * *

It seems to me desirable that the convention should primarily be organized by the principal exhibitors of the country; that they should meet, discuss their needs and requirements; that they should exchange business views, and that thousands of men who have sunk so much money in the business, should have some say about the way in which that business is conducted. At present the exhibitor is voiceless.

If Chicago is a suitable centre for a great gathering of exhibitors, then let Chicago be chosen. For the same reason, if St. Louis or New York City, or any other place, be preferable, let that place be chosen. But do, please, this summer, let us have a really representative gathering of exhibitors drawn from all over the country. That is the first step will have been taken toward forming a really national body of representative men of the American moving picture trade. Where the exhibitor will go the exchange man will surely follow. So will the film maker. So will the makers of machines. So will the makers of all accessories which the moving picture man uses in his business. But the first step should be taken, I am convinced, by, for and on behalf of the exhibitors, who are the backbone of the business.

The convention should not primarily be a manufacturers' convention, nor an exchange man's convention; it should be an exhibitors' convention. I hope every exhibiting reader of these paragraphs will make up his mind to be present at the convention wherever it is held. Hitherto, all conventions that have been held have been organized by and dictated to by the exchange and manufacturing interests. We do not want a repetition of this blunder. The exhibitor has been ignored. The film service man had his opportunity several of them, in fact; but oh, what failures they were to accomplish anything for the good of the business!

The convention should be primarily an exhibitors' gathering, benefiting the three branches of the trade. It should give the exchange man an opportunity of getting in touch with exhibitors, whilst the manufacturer could also have a little say. The manufacturer is certainly an important factor in the business, but he is not the whole thing. Without the exhibitor and the exchange man he would be a very unimportant person, indeed.

* * *

The moving picture industry is still in the making. Its endurance relies upon the concentration of all parties concerned. Incidentally, the exhibitor should be given an opportunity of voicing his ideas on the question of the time that of the open market. I have not the smallest doubt that if a canvass was made of the exhibitors throughout the United States, it would be for the open market. This would give them a greater choice of films than they have at the present time. So probably would the exchange man. He clearly would be benefited by being able to buy what he chose, instead of under present circumstances, having to restrict to his choice of market.

The moving picture trade is the only trade of any magnitude in the country, which, at the present time, is without a representative trade body. This body could very soon be formed at the first convention. There is no reason why both licensed and independent manufacturers should not be invited to attend, and show their films; why all the manufacturers should not also be invited to exhibit their goods. There is no reason why the freedom of the exhibitor should not be made, at the first convention, the dominant note of the gathering.

* * *

At the London gathering to which I have previously alluded, there were several members of Parliament present, and they discussed legislation as it affects the industry across the Atlantic. Probably at the first moving picture convention in this country, State Senators or Representatives might be present, and some unanimity of state legislation might be agreed upon. At present laws as affecting the American moving picture business are diverse, and in many cases contradictory. It is surely desirable that they be harmonized.

I am advocating a moving picture convention simply in the interests of the business as a whole. Besides Great Britain, France has a representative body; in Europe, too, there is a movable congress formed to deal with moving picture matters. Progressive United States alone lags behind in this important matter.

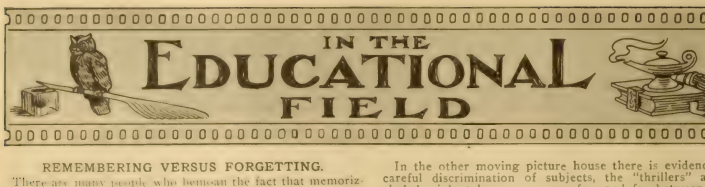
I perceive that our Chicago moving picture men occasionally get together in an informal manner. At a moving picture convention you could discuss these and other solemn subjects for the general good. But you can do something more; you could ask conundrums. For instance: "What is a license not a license" and "Is an independent made moving picture necessarily inferior to a licensed made moving picture?" and "What is the obligate to the film servant?"

* * *

The coming convention will give opportunity for the public display and demonstration of some unique and large display of non-inflammable cameras. There should be quite a dozen of these at the convention meeting at Chicago. On this ground alone the convention should be of distinct practical good. Much doubt seems to hang over the practicability of these non-inflammable moving picture cameras. At a convention they could be demonstrated.

An ideal condition of things would be the adoption at the first session of the convention of a resolution in favor of an open market, supported by representative moving picture exhibitors from all the States in the Union. The passage of some such resolution and the endorsement by the gathering of one or two really non-infringing cameras would mark two important steps in progress. Let us hope we shall see this state of things come to pass.

The present condition of things in the trade is glaring. It is ludicrous, that a really tremendous trade should be handicapped because human ingenuity is inimical to the best of preventing more than one kind of camera for the taking of the picture. That the public is tired of the restriction, that the exchange man, the exhibitor man and certainly every person of the public is not free to look at the best films or perhaps that it would like to see is also absurd. The absurdity of things would probably, I hope, be swept away by the first moving picture convention. I hope that I make myself clear here, and everybody who reads this will agree that the time when the abominable and antediluvian laws, framed will be swept away by the progress of enlightened Public Opinion, which is bound to result by means of a representative gathering of film men from all over the United States. Here's success to the first moving picture convention!



REMEMBERING VERSUS FORGETTING.

There are many people who bemoan the fact that memorizing is hard, poor memories, treacherous memories, mixed memories, what a host of difficulties surge about that precious memory! Young children find their earliest difficulties lie in memorizing; teachers find the course of tuition a hard one, tracing the hindrances of the uphill climb to those stumbling blocks various causes have placed in the pathway of the scholar's memory. "It is so hard to remember" has been the sigh of thousands in every walk of life. What a benefactor to the human mind would be the one who could reverse the old order—or disorder—and make forgetting hard and memorizing easy! The picture! The picture's the thing! Years ago the picture was discovered as an aid to the memory, as well as an illustrator and illuminator of the word, so that now one would be just as ready to blot out the memory as a human factor as to eradicate the picture from the books and walls of time. There is an old and evidently true saying that "in making many books there is no end, and much study is wearisome." How true! And the more the books the more wearisome the study; but, "lest we forget," not only have the books grown and grown beyond the memory—but the picture has grown and grown, growing ahead of the memory, until it has become the "living picture" unending, eternal. No longer is the picture confined to the page or the frame. It is continuous, running parallel with life and time, and as such it is doing in a surprising manner a two-fold work.

In the first place, the new picture is supplanting the book in a very large degree, and where it is not taking the place of the book it is supplementing it in an unlimited manner. This in the second place has revealed the welcome fact that as an aid to the memory it is supreme. Forgetting is rapidly becoming as difficult as remembering used to be. The picture and the memory are co-incident and co-eternal.

Words are hard to remember, pictures are hard to forget. What a wealth of learning and logic is stored in the uses of the picture. It is a strange truth that the eye is a more powerful aid to the memory than the ear, even as sight is more penetrating than sound. Thus added to its many and marvelous educational features this value as a memorizer is in itself one of the greatest blessings which the cinematograph has brought, making the picture with its teachings hard to forget.

A gentleman of some position in the educational world who recently saw some of the Pathe films illustrative of simple, every-day, scientific subjects, declared that "he had in five minutes seen and learned more than in the previous half century of his life." It should be noted that in this statement the films shown were upon subjects of which whole books had been written, only to be painfully read, soon forgotten and, consequently, valueless. The picture gave an instantaneous revelation, making a volume of explanatory words unnnecessary, and producing a non-forgettable impression.

A CONTRAST.

In a certain part of Brooklyn there are two moving picture places less than two blocks apart, owned by separate parties; they are, if anything, competitive, if not antagonistic. One is run upon the common plan of "anything goes that attracts the crowds," while advertising the "best films made" and "choicest illustrated songs," making it the "best moving picture place in the neighborhood." The writer thought a study of the situation might be interesting. The pictures selected are invariably of the more sensational or thrilling kind, a class so well known as to make special description unnecessary. The songs are always of the very "lovey-lovey" kind, "please repeat the chorus," etc, etc. There is a notable and conspicuous absence of any other class of film. It must, therefore, be concluded that these are evidently deliberately and carefully excluded. Doubtless the proprietor believes he knows his business and the public taste, also he knows (or thinks he knows) how to make the most dollars.

In the other moving picture house there is evidence of a careful discrimination of subjects, the "thrillers" are excluded, violent love scenes are few and far between—there would be still fewer if fewer were made—the most intelligent subjects are carefullly selected. Those to which good music can be given are preferable. Scenic, scientific, educational films are given a proper place and part. Little lectures or "talks" are occasionally given, or, if these are not so necessary, a few explanatory words are written on a slide and thrown upon the screen, the proprietor being obsessed of the strange idea (strange to some people) that that which is ambiguous to him may possibly be ambiguous to others, and believing that people enjoy intelligent pleasures he does his utmost to make them so. The illustrated songs are the best on the market—a very poor market—but such as at least do not offend or become questionably suggestive. What are the results and how are they measured? In the former place there is always "sitting room," and plenty of it. The class of people are the more morbid, listless type, incapable of showing any enthusiasm when that which is intelligent is before them, but aroused and alert with pistol shot, flashing lightning and roaring thunder or guns of battle, blood, thunder, tragedy and violent love accompanied by loud music, noise and excitement make a "good show." But those few empty seats and ample standing room show that the "crowds" are NOT there and the cash box knows its own secrets and keeps them.

In the other place, what a bright, alert class of people are present! Whole families of them; not a seat to be had—not even standing room. With positive truth born of necessity the screen periodically suggests that "for the sake of others will those who have seen all please pass out." With what results? Bright, intelligent pleasure. Not only have the people been entertained and pleased, they have learned something; they come and come again; they show the proprietor their appreciation, and he—his cash box has a dark secret to hide—says, "it pays me," and as long as you thus encourage me I am going to continue this way. What a testimony to the value of educational methods when applied to the moving picture business.

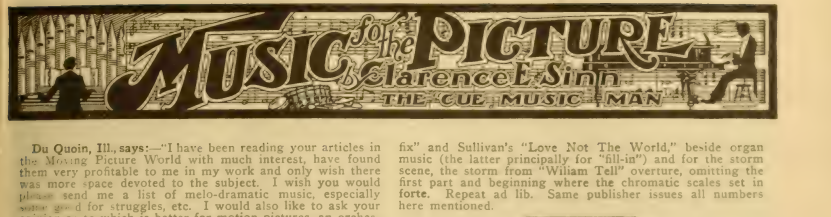
FILMS TO SHOW CANNING.

The moving picture film as an aid to the publicity campaigns of the National Canner's Association will be a fact if the recommendations made by Secretary Frank A. Gorrell, of Baltimore, at the convention in Milwaukee are adopted. So many cases of ptomaine poisoning are attributed to the use of canned goods that Mr. Gorrell urged the use of films showing in details the process of canning.

FILMS WITH A PURPOSE.

The great interest which the public displayed in the films, "The Man Who Learned" and "The Red Cross Seal," has shown the educational value of the picture in the care of health. Following these two successes the Edison Company announces another on the same lies, "The Wedding Bell," in which the danger of using articles of sweatshop maufacture is clearly brought out, together with a dramatic story contrasting riches and poverty. "The Wedding Bell" will be issued on March 17.

Germany has for many years been considered as leading in all kinds of educational advances. We learn from a foreign exchange that at a recent meeting of educational authorities a series of cinematograph films especially prepared for school purposes by the well-known firm of Ernemann, of Dresden, were exhibited. The science director of this firm, Dr. Julius Ane, gave an explanatory lecture with each film. The subjects shown included Agriculture, Poultry, Microscopy, the Silk Industry, Uses of Bamboo, Silver Mining, the Rise of Barbarini and certain biological films especially ordered by the Minister of Education for Saxony. The exhibition met with the warm approbation of those present, and similar ones are contemplated to be given in the immediate future in other large towns.



Du Quoin, Ill., says:—"I have been reading your articles in the Moving Picture World with much interest, have found them very profitable to me in my work and only wish there was more space devoted to the subject. I wish you would please send me a list of melo-dramatic music, especially some good for struggles, etc. I would also like to ask your opinion as to which is better for motion pictures, an orchestra that has to strictly stick to their music and render a selection, then stop awhile and render another, or the piano as we following the pictures in their action."

The required information regarding melo-dramatic music has been sent. As to the last part of your letter, I fear you haven't read my letters with so much interest, or you would have found your answer there. I am in favor of "working up the picture" always, whether the music be piano alone or orchestra. And working up the picture does not refer to the musical part alone; the sound effects are equally valuable in my opinion. As to the proposition advanced by Du Quoin there can be but one answer (if an answer is really necessary), and that is that an orchestra playing in the manner described is not working up the picture at all and therefore its product has no value as "Moving Picture Music." As given by the correspondent, the piano would be not only the better of the two—it would be the only one worth considering in the sense of moving picture music.

N. A. says:—"I have been reading your articles and find them very helpful. I am pianist at V—— Theater (name of town withheld) and have been in the business just one year. We have a three-piece orchestra; violin, clarinet and piano. We change pictures daily so it keeps me busy as I select all the music. Of course I have a great deal to learn about playing pictures, but it is a very interesting study and one which to me never becomes tiresome. I do not have an opportunity to see the pictures before we play them, but I always read a synopsis of each one which helps me a great deal. We have quite a library, as working in the same place a year and changing pictures daily we must have, but there is one class of music of which we have very little. Now what I want to ask you is to give me an idea what kind of music is suitable for heavy French dramas like "The Escape from the Tuilleries," etc., usually released by the Pathe Co. Now I do not want to trouble you for a list of titles as I guess you have enough of that to do, but if you will be so kind as to mention one or two I can find them for myself. I do not seem to find much difficulty with ordinary dramatic pictures, but these French and other foreign dramas puzzle me. However, I feel certain that after a few suggestions from you I will not have any further trouble. If you have already given titles of same in Moving Picture World I hope you will pardon me for asking, as I did not see them. I also want to ask if there is any very heavy music for such pictures as 'The Deluge" (Vitagraph), and what would you play for the storm scene of same."

It is certainly flattering to intimate that a few suggestions from me will eliminate all future troubles. I am afraid you overestimate my ability. However, I will do the best I can though I must limit myself to generalities. The drama, of a historical type, whether pertaining to France or any other nation, have a fair sprinkling of national airs. In the case of the picture mentioned, the "Marseillaise Hymn" or course will be included. "Mourir pour la Patrie" (Chant of the Girondins) can be used as a march (as original form) as tenderness for "allay" purposes and played slowly as a semi-pathetic. "Partout pon Sorra" makes a characteristic plaintive with the violin playing the melody and the piano a running accompaniment legato. For the dramatic music use the most serious you have to stock. Avoid ponderous "heavies" and light agitato or the long rests in the selections you have are the best. "Berliner gardin" (valse by Gillet), "La Cinquantaine" and "Royal Court Minuet Louis XIV" may sometimes be used to advantage though it all depends on the scenes. However, there are good numbers to have in stock. Published by Carl Fischer, N. Y. As to "The Deluge" it is prone to the religious class and must be treated like a religious picture. Mr. King's orchestra, Orpheum Theater, Chicago used "March Pontificale" (Pierne) "March" read fix" and Sullivan's "Love Not The World," beside organ music (the latter principally for "fill-in") and for the storm scene, the storm from "William Tell" overture, omitting the first part and beginning where the chromatic scales set in forte. Repeat ad lib. Same publisher issues all numbers here mentioned.

ARTISTIC POSTERS.

Great improvement has certainly been made in the posters issued by the various film manufacturers, and some of them are expending much money in this direction. In keeping with their films, the Rex Company have adopted a style of poster that is both novel and attractive. But the greatest novelty in this line is a poster just sent out by George Kleine for a scenic film, "The Beautiful Gorges of the Tarn." A scenic picture gives the litho artist much more latitude than a dramatic scene, and the very novelty and pictorial beauty of a scenic poster is such that we hope the responses will encourage Mr. Kleine to adhere to his bold innovation.

BUFFALO BILL PICTURES IN PHILADELPHIA.

Mr. B. A. Zerr, proprietor of the Crescent Theater, Reading, Pa., had as a special feature all last week the moving pictures of the Buffalo Bill Wild West and Pawnee Bill Far East show, booked a return date at the Crescent for another week later in the season. The Buffalo Bill pictures have not yet been exhibited in Philadelphia, or in that vicinity, and will not be released in that section until the advance forces of the Wild West show bill the Quaker City for Buffalo Bill's final engagement, which opens the middle of April. The film will then be exhibited in the Philadelphia theaters, and no doubt the pictures will be a special drawing card at that time on account of the announcement of the Wild West show playing in that city for its final engagement.

"THE TRUTH ABOUT THE POLE."

Much interest continues to center in the North Pole Picture Company's special film, "The Truth About the Pole," in which Dr. Frederick A. Cook appears as the principal acting character. The film subject, which was given its premiere at Hammerstein's Manhattan Opera House and excited theatergoers as perhaps no other moving picture has done previously, should prove an immense drawing card elsewhere if for no other reason than that Dr. Cook is without doubt the best advertised man in the world, and now that he offers as dramatic form, by means of the picture, the exposure of the North Pole "conspiracy" interest will be aroused, and both his friends and enemies will be eager to satisfy, if nothing else, their curiosity, and this will mean money for the exhibitor of these films.

Dr. Cook is now filling lecture engagements which should serve to prepare the various States for receiving the film production when bookings begin. Negotiations are under way for acquiring the Coliseum, in Chicago, and other large auditoriums in various cities for engagements of one week each. Dr. Cook will himself appear at these place, together with the film, giving a two hours' entertainment at standard prices.

Mr. H. E. Raver (Harry Raver) this week joins the North Pole Picture Company, especially for the purpose of exploiting the Dr. Cook picture. Mr. Raver promises to Chicago where he expects to remain for a period of three months. There is no doubt that Mr. Raver will be successful in his new enterprise, as he draws upon a very considerable experience as a showman. We are amused at those who wish Mr. Raver success. During his stay in New York City he has made many friends, he has many friends in the West and elsewhere. We foresee great things in the Cook picture in Mr. Raver's hands.

Incidentally, we hope the Mr. Wilbert Melville, the well-known producer for the Selig Company, accompanies Dr. Cook on his lecture tour. The present man is by far the most theatrical of the West feature film Cook pictures thus far in the course of time it will find its way into the smaller houses.

MORE ON THE OPEN MARKET.

Whether we want an open market or not, it is coming just the same. In fact, it is already in its first stages. The present market is partly an open one, not on the part of individual manufacturers trying to gain the favor of the public with good work, but on the part of several organizations fighting each other.

We have already four established organizations, with a fifth one on the eve of exploding their bomb, and several others looming up in the distance. Those already in the open are:

First—The Motion Picture Patents Company.

Second—The Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company.

Third—National Film Manufacturing and Leasing Company.

Fourth—Associated Moving Picture Patents Company.

The fifth one is a surprise in store for many persons, and if the rumors prove correct, we will see a new organization composed of men of money and influence with a long experience in the service of the licensed ranks.

With four organizations in the field and several others looming up, we have practically an open market, with the difference that the exhibitors cannot deal with the manufacturers directly, but have to transact their business through various organizations. A real open market would permit the exhibitor to show Biograph with a Rex and a Cines, selecting his programme to suit his patrons, and not be forced to show an inferior trio from the manufacturers under one organization. So the moment we have a sort of open market, we may as well work to have a real open market and do the thing right and not in a sort of half-way measure.

The licensed manufacturers tried to capture the lion's share of the market, and for the last two years they have fought the independents on a question of patents. This litigation has been very annoying to the industry in general, and has taken from the manufacturers vast sums of money to pay the lawyers' fees—money that, if properly invested in the manufacturing plants, would have greatly helped to improve the productions and would have placed the cinematographic art in the place it should occupy to-day, in leading instead of following the great improvements made in the construction of theaters.

* * *

It is a fact that cannot be denied that while the exhibitors have done their very best to replace all of the old little dumps with first-class houses, while they have done all that ingenuity could suggest for the comfort and the safeguard of the spectators, the manufacturers have not followed the same pace, and, consequently, the manufacturers may be said to have retarded the progress of the industry by still producing films of mediaeval quality.

So, without a real open market, we are getting there just the same, and the only way to stop so many new manufacturers and capitalists from entering the field is for our present manufacturers (licensed and independent) to stop fighting on points that they cannot settle, put all their energy in their work, and use all the advantages they have at their disposal, viz., experience, capital and well-equipped plants, to produce the very best pictures, to declare an open market and to sell the pictures on their merits alone. An open market does not necessarily mean unrestricted and unlimited bidders for trade.

When capitalists realize that the present manufacturers are producing pictures that cannot be surpassed, they will not be so willing to sink their money in new manufacturing plants.

To-day it is an easy matter for a new manufacturer to get any capital he needs, as the capitalist is easily convinced of the fact that the present-day pictures can be greatly improved upon; but this would be a different story if the capitalist had the conviction that the present manufacturers are producing the highest class work

* * *

The details are not watched. The manufacturers are guilty of much carelessness. They show us a man lighting a lamp to hunt something in the yard or in the woods, yet the scenes in the yard or in the woods are taken in bright sunlight—no night effect. Let me cite an example:

"Oh, you Clubman." The whole story is supposed to take place during the night. The first scene is correct. The clubman returns at a late hour, the street is dark. Although the bedroom is unusually bright for a night scene, we will pass it over, as no window, no lamps are in evidence to show whence the light comes from. The parlor scenes are wrong. We know that it is night, as the lady points twice to the clock; first time it is 12.30 A. M., the second time it is 2 A. M. There is a lamp on the table, yet it is not lighted, as from under the shade we fail to detect the glow of light, but, on the contrary, everything is dark, a proof that the lamp is not lighted. The whole room is bathed in a bright daylight, coming through the window. This is a fact, as everything close to the window is brighter than in the remote corners. Same with the scenes in the vestibule and on the staircase. No lamps are in evidence, yet everything is as bright as in daylight, and the light seems to come through the glass panes of the entrance door, so as to indicate that while Mr. Clubman returns at 2 A. M. it is daylight outside. The worst is still to come. When Mr. Clubman runs out of his house to look for a policeman the street is dark; it is night; but when he falls into the hands of two rogues the street is shown in a bright sunlight, throwing heavy shadows on the sidewalk. Same when the clubman runs down the street and walks into a pool of water; but when Mr. Clubman wants to enter a cab the street is dark, once more it is night. Sunshine is once more in order when the clubman falls into the arms of an officer. Is it not laughable? And with this work the manufacturers hope to maintain a closed market.

* * *

I could cite innumerable other discrepancies, but why particularize? Is it not reasonable to believe that the capitalist who is approached by a bluffer, who tells him that he will not make such blunders, that he will not fool his time turning a man into a dog after eating a dog biscuit, that he will paint better clouds and better golden gates of heaven than the ones shown in the film where a divorced couple is refused admittance—is a capitalist be willing, after such arguments, to invest his money? The capitalist is no fool; he knows that better work can be done, so, when he is approached by a man with a smooth tongue, the capitalist does not see why his borrower should not make good, and he opens the strings of his purse.

If the productions were better it would be another story, as the capitalist would say to the prospective manufacturer: "I do not doubt your ability to do good work, but the pictures of to-day are high class, they are masterpieces, and I do not see that you could improve much on them. If it is a question of entering into competition, I fear that the odds will be against you, as it will take a long time and much money to beat the manufacturers of to-day, and the market is fully supplied." Capitalists are not fools, they are keen, they are willing to invest when they see a possibility, but when they realize that the ground is already well covered they are not so willing, and then want real profits, not mere proofs.

* * *

Although I do not like to mention personalities, I wish to use the name of Mr. Selig to illustrate the point. Any new manufacturer can produce an "O, You Skeleton"—a cheap affair, poorly acted, etc.—but it is not every one that can produce a "Thelma." Now, if Mr. Selig wanted to stick to his high-class work (and he can do it, because he has done it in the past, and because he is admirably equipped to do it), instead of falling into the vulgarities of the obscure new manufacturer, Mr. Selig would discourage the capitalists from throwing their money away.

Competition is the life of business, and when there is no genuine competition, the energy of the manufacturer is dulled. This has been proven. When some eighty licensed exchanges were in existence we had some competition, as the licensed manufacturers, to sell to the eighty exchanges, were trying their best to beat each other. But when the eighty exchanges were consolidated in one General Film Company the competition disappeared, and as long as the General Film Company was ready to take an adequate number of copies, good or bad, the licensed manufacturers had no more reason to work hard to make good productions.

Mr. Selig has recognized his error, and to judge by his latest releases, he has started to resume the good quality that had made a name for him. I sincerely hope that he will persevere in this direction.

What I have said of Mr. Selig is merely as an illustration and can be applied to all the licensed and independent manufacturers alike. All the manufacturers fail to see the future of motion pictures the capitalists can see what money can be made in the near future, and they are only too willing to invest as soon as they can find a man able to bluff them that he can do much better. If the present manufacturers want to avoid a forced open market all that they have to do is to open the doors willingly before these doors are opened by force.

As stated in my first article, an open market will stop the crop of new manufacturers and reduce the present number of producing plants. It will not be long before the exhibitors will tire of the present state of affairs, will put their heads together and claim their rights to be at liberty to show what films they think best for their patrons, and not be forced to show anything that is passed out to them.

J. M. BRADLET.

LOS ANGELES NOTES.

By Richard V. Spencer.

(Pacific Coast Correspondent of the World.)

Biograph.—H. A. Anderson, manager of the Biograph Company, is stopping at the Hollenbeck.

Local Romance.—A romance of interest to local picture folk has just come to light which sets at naught the modern theory that every feminine heart has its commercial value, in the announcement of the engagement of Sara Quinn Mack, known to the theatrical profession as "Queenie" Mack, and Art Acord, champion broncho buster of the Southwest, and a member of the Bison Stock Company. Involved in the romance was the usual "eternal triangle" with the third angle in the person of a real count—Count Albert Von Freye. The count is, of course, a wealthy man, and by reason of this showered Miss Mack with costly tokens of affection and attentions unending. A rival to the ardent count was Art Acord, known all over the Southwest for his dare-devil riding, and all over the film world by his work in the pictures. Miss Mack when the time came to choose between them, thrust aside the glitter of a title and wealth and gave her heart to a man.

According to Miss Mack, the count could not be brought to realize that his rival had outplayed him and won the prize. Finally, she alleges, the count procured a revolver and threatened her life unless she would marry him. Miss Mack informed Acord of the state of affairs, and when the two rivals met harsh words and threats of gun play followed. In the end the count retired as gracefully as circumstances would permit. The young couple have not yet decided on the date of their wedding. They plan to spend their honeymoon on a ranch in Lower California, the southern one may settle down to ranch life, until such a time as the lure of the footlights or moving picture camera becomes too strong to be resisted.

California.—Mr. Duhem, manager of the California Motion Picture Manufacturing Company, recently made arrangements with the San Diego Chamber of Commerce for an advertising film advertising the southern city. He will take a series of pictures of points of interest in San Diego and vicinity, including the recent aquatic sports held on San Diego Bay showing the yacht, power boat and other features of the regatta.

Indians Protest Against Indian Pictures.—A recent dispatch from the Northwest announces the fact that the reservation Indians of the Yakima country are registering strenuous objections with the Indian Bureau at Washington regarding the portrayal of Indian life in the films. President Taft has been appealed to and urged to help the redmen in their fight against the moving picture theaters and the alleged misrepresentation of Indian life as shown in the moving picture films. Indian Commissioner Robert G. Valentine has also been displeased by the popular Indian pictures and has promised to aid the Indians in every way possible to eliminate the objectionable features of Indian life portrayals. Delegations from the Shoshone, Cheyenne and Arrapahoe reservations have gone to Washington to take the matter up with the government authorities.

Selig.—It is reported locally that the Selig Polyscope Company have just signed a contract with Street & Smith, the publishers, for the exclusive scenario rights of all the stories appearing in the Street & Smith publications, of which the most prominent are the well known magazines Popular, Argosy, Ainslee's, People's Smith's, etc.

Local Indians are Tame.—Mrs. M. F. Lynch of Elmford, N. Y., has written the local U. S. Land Bureau for information, apparently picturing in fancy Southern California as being a very "wild and woolly" place, which is to be entered only in fear and trepidation. Her letter follows:

"Please send some information regarding land, cattle, hogs, soil, rainfall, crops, cold and heat. Also if the land is level or hilly, and if it is very rocky. Are the Indians unfriendly, and if so, do they ever bother the settlers at any time? And any other information."

The local register and receiver will inform her that the lady will be in perfect safety during her stay here; that at present no buffalo are browsing among the city's twelve and fourteen story sky-scraper colony, that there are no Indians here save those working for the moving picture studios, and most of them are college and university graduates and therefore warranted harmless. The lady, judging from her letter, has been a close student of Los Angeles made moving pictures.

Cupid Busy Again.—Jack Conway, leading man with the Bison Company, and Viola Barry, ingenue with the Earlier Stock Company, recently eloped to Santa Ana, a land "Gretna Green," and were married last week. They kept the secret four days before the marriage became public. The bride's home is in Berkeley, Cal. She is the daughter of J. Stitt Wilson, a prominent Socialist politician, and candidate for Governor at the last state election. Miss Barry began her dramatic career in England playing leads in Shakespearian roles in the English metropolis. On coming to Los Angeles several months ago she joined the Belasco Stock Company, and lately the Burbank Stock Company. The week of the elopement Miss Barry was playing the ingenue role in "Is Matrimony a Failure?" When asked whether it were or not, she replied: "So far I should say that matrimony was not a failure."

AMONG THE LOS ANGELES EXHIBITORS.

Tally.—T. T. Tally, proprietor of Tally's New Broadway Theater, has gone East on business.

Isis.—Messrs. Hogan & Jensen, proprietors of the Isis, have long been dissatisfied with their music. They have previously employed a pianist to accompany the pictures. Recently they have decided to install an automatic piano. The piano has been purchased and is now on the way from the Chicago factory.

New Theater.—H. L. Suydam, a local real estate agent, has leased for Harry Gray to P. F. Henry, of the south store in the three-story building to be erected on the northeast corner of Fifth and Ruth streets. The exterior of the building will be of white glazed brick. Opera chairs will be installed, and the building made into one of the most comfortable and progressive of the local "nickel shows."

Moral Wave Hits Long Beach.—A sudden wave of ultra-morality has struck Long Beach, bringing with it consternation for the moving picture exhibitors and other concessionaires on the Long Beach boardwalk. Among the latter are two musical comedy companies. The Long Beach Ministers' Association, on the rampage and threatens to close every show in town. No longer can the pony ballet appear in short skirts, let alone nights, and hosiery displays and high kicking are tabooed. To say that the show managers were astonished, would be to put it mildly. Chief of Police Moyer served notice that hereafter ankle skirts must be worn, and threatened, unless these orders be obeyed, that he would have a board of censors appointed who would pass upon every musical comedy and moving picture show in town. Notice was also served on the moving picture shows that all bar room, murder, suicide and other scenes which might be considered as having a bad influence on the youth of Long Beach, would not be permitted under any circumstances. This, the exhibitors declare, will cause them a lot of trouble, as many of the films presented, which contain some of these scenes, have already been censored by the National Censorship Committee before being put on the market. The Long Beach exhibitors are organized and will try and make a satisfactory arrangement with the Ministers' Association, and, failing a peaceful settlement of the matter, may take it into the courts.

Visiting Exhibitors.—Mr. and Mrs. James B. Clark and Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Rowland are staying at a local hotel. The party are from Pittsburg Pa., where Rowland and Clark conduct an exchange.

NEW ENGLAND NOTES.

A New One Sprung.

A certain New England exhibitor of licensed pictures became imbued with the idea that his film service was in dire need of changes. Accordingly, he paid a visit to his exchange. The General Film Company, of Boston, and made known his complaint. It was decided that he would have a change of films either daily, or, at most, tri-weekly, in place of the usual change on Mondays and Thursdays. Furthermore, it was necessary that his weekly charge for the service be reduced. Otherwise, said the independent exchanges would welcome him gladly into their fold. The fearless officers of the General Film Company listened respectfully to their customer's complaints and stated that they would confer with their next week. In a few days the exhibitor came to be answer. He received a startling surprise which came in the shape of the total number of paid admissions to his theater for several days. By way of comparison, the exchange had also to offer the paid admissions of nearby competing theaters. It seemed that the exchange had stated a number of men to keep account and keep an accurate account of those entering the theater. The figures said the exchange showed several things, among which were these: "You are doing more business than your neighbors, therefore you need no change of film service, and are easily able to pay our moderate rates. That the figures presented by the exchange were correct, the exhibitor soon found does not state. At any rate he has not increased his exchange since.

It has been noticed in the advertisements (sometimes in this very journal) inserted by independent manufacturers that, in their opinion, the day was approaching when the "hated octopus" would seize the most flourishing of the moving pictures throughout the country, and thus be in control of three branches of the trade. If so, surely there can be no more easy and accurate way of finding out just which theaters are those to be taken, than by having their exchanges take occasional "stock," as it were, of the theaters in their district, by the means which were employed by the Boston office of the General Film Company in the incident just related. However, such a proceeding seems very distant just now, and the above was written by The World's New England representative more as an illustration of modern business methods of ascertaining correct data, etc., than as a grim shadow of what may be. However, the incident is unique, and shows how carefully things are watched by those who need to be informed as to true conditions.

The Pastime Theater, Quincy Adams, Mass., was closed last week for using vaudeville, which was contrary to the license issued to this house.

The Gundlach Manhattan Optical Company, of Rochester, N. Y., are doing considerable advertising work throughout the New England States, and as a result, are installing quite a number of the projection lenses in the moving picture theaters hereabouts.

The Colonial Theater, Lowell, Mass., formerly operated by Mr. A. B. Marcus has been taken over by John Dovey, former owner of the Boston National baseball team. This house has a seating capacity of 1,000, and has the name of being prosperous. Mr. Dovey is using licensed pictures from the Boston office of the General Film Company and vaudeville booked from the Merrill Amusement Company, of Boston. The opening picture attraction under the new management was the Buffalo Jones reels. The picture proved itself to be a good opener for the Colonial.

Louis M. Boas, general manager of the Bijou Theater, Fall River, Mass., has installed daylight moving pictures. The Palace Theater, also of Fall River, has had the daylight pictures installed. Both houses report as pleased with the results of this innovation.

Several theaters at Pittsfield, Mass., devoted to moving pictures have raised their admission rates on Sunday evenings to 10 cents, owing to the large business on hand for these "concerts." All houses report that business well justified this advance.

Mr. McDonald, formerly manager of the Opera House, Holyoke, Mass., has left that theater and taken a position with the Nelson Theater, Springfield, Mass. Mr. Grossman, of Chicago, is to succeed McDonald at the Opera House.

In these columns of February 11, The World's New England representative reported the fact that Sheedy's theater, Brockton, Mass., was forced to cut out their vaudeville, which was used in addition to their picture programme, because the Brockton Musicians' Union declared that any theater using vaudeville must install a five-piece orchestra. The union has now decided that a three-piece orchestra will do, instead of five musicians. Accordingly, the house has placed vaudeville in the theater again. It can be stated that the house is finding patronage better with the return of the vaudeville, as Mr. J. J. Cahill is sponsor for that statement.

Lynch's Theater, Woonsocket, R. I., closed Saturday, March 4, and will remain dark for two weeks for alterations. Mr. L. Barber is no longer at this house as manager, and Mr. Lynch has not as yet chosen his successor.

BOSTON.

Bill to Suppress "Crime" Pictures.

On Monday, February 27 Boston was treated to a "little more of the same," when the Committee on Legal Affairs heard a petition of the Federation of Catholic Societies of the Archdiocese of Boston for legislation to further regulate theatrical advertising and production, so as to suppress pictures of the commission of crime on bill boards and in moving picture theaters. Henry V. Cunningham, who drafted this bill, claimed that the intent behind the production was what the court would have to pass upon. While the suppression of obscene matter had been properly regulated, it was believed to be advisable to eliminate making crime scenes prominent features. There was no opposition, as the bill was introduced without the knowledge of any of the trade. The World's New England representative in these columns has more than once given detailed attention to the fact that the posters and general advertising methods of several Boston moving picture houses were extremely low-grade, and liable to be productive of such bills as the one mentioned above. The nucleus of the matter is that these picture houses so misrepresent the story and general make-up of the pictures they exhibit, that, when judged by their lobby work, it is thought that the pictures themselves are obscene and immoral. In other words, perfectly proper and moral pictures are deliberately advertised and painted on banners in such a way to form the impression which was evidently on the minds of those framing the above-mentioned bill. If such measures as these are the only means to make these theaters reform, it is best that they should come, and that Boston clean house in this respect.

Buffalo Jones a Personality.

Anent the attention centered upon Buffalo Jones, because of the pictures released by the Patents Company, of which he is the chief performer, it may be of interest to write a few words of this man, as he is personally known to The World's New England representative. Buffalo Jones appeared in Boston in 1909 and 1910 and exhibited two reels of pictures, besides a quantity of illustrated slides, on which he personally lectured. This great hunter of our Western life, even at his ripe age, has the vigor and vitality necessary to lecture for twenty to twenty-five minutes on his pictures. This he did in Boston for two weeks steady, and repeated his story seven times daily. As Buffalo Jones himself states, "I'm not a born lecturer, but I interest my audience because they know I'm telling them the truth." And the audiences did believe Buffalo Jones, because the note of absolute sincerity was always his predominating characteristic while lecturing. To show just how much he loved his plains and the great West, the following incident will make the fact plain: While lecturing on his pictures in 1908 at the Star Theater, Boston, an illustrated song was sung immediately following Buffalo Jones' lecture, named "In the Land of the Buffalo." Although tired from his recent discourse, the plainsman, nine times out of ten, would join in the chorus with the illustrated singer and greatly aid the song. As he stated: "I just can't help it—I love it all so much." Buffalo Jones is one of the finest products of the West, and his personality will be a great aid to all exhibitors using the reels just issued. Buffalo Jones was largely instrumental in keeping the buffalo from total extinction in America, and the animal will keep Buffalo Jones' name remembered in after years. At just about the same time that he appeared in Boston, Buffalo Jones had lectured with his pictures before Yale University. The letter of the President of Yale, congratulating him on his personal accomplishments in general, and his pictures and lecture in particular, are one of Buffalo Jones' most prized mementos. Col. Roosevelt also landed the plainsman after viewing his pictures.

The World's New England representative, in the issue of this journal of January 28, noted that Mayor John F. Fitzgerald, of Boston, had introduced a bill into the Massachusetts legislature requesting that the power of revoking or suspending all theatrical licenses should be invested in the Mayor alone. On Thursday, February 2, the Committee on Legal Affairs gave this bill "leave to withdraw." Therefore, the matter of revoking or suspending these licenses will remain jointly in the hands of the mayor and the state police. Under these conditions, both parties must agree on the step before such action is taken. Local exhibitors take the point well that the bill has been "killed," as they feel more at ease under the condition than as if the power were vested in the mayor alone.

The Olympia Theater, Bowdoin Square, featured the Vitagraph's "A Tale of Two Cities" March 6, 7 and 8. The three reels were shown in their order, and were well received. Manager Joe Ruthe stated that the pictures were "good for the box office."

The Boston office of the General Film Company has opened a "toy theater," as it is called, at 657 Washington Street, room 19. Licensed exhibitors throughout the state congregate in this hall on Tuesday and Friday mornings to view current releases and to choose their picture programme. The new exhibiting room has seats for 50 exhibitors, telephone connection and all needed accessories. It is a distinct improvement over the former exhibiting rooms of the film company, who are to be commended for this move. (Whisper to New England exhibitors who commute: Be at 657 Washington Street on time if you do not wish to sit close up to the screen.) It seems that there is a great scramble for the back rows, in order to lessen the strain on the eyes arising from viewing ten or twelve reels of film run in quick succession.

F. Eugene Farnsworth has completed his lectures at Tremont Temple. Aided by moving pictures, Mr. Farnsworth gave some unusually instructive travel talks, which were very well attended, with a range of price from 25 cents to $1. The Boston press were unusually kind to these lectures, as can be seen from the following: "Pictures best ever presented at a travel talk in Boston."—Globe. "Wonderfully colored pictures."—Herald. "Remarkable photographs."—Post.

HENRY.

ST. LOUIS, MO.

Frank L. Talbot, head of the Crawford-Talbot Theater Company, of St. Louis, announces that he cannot at this time state the policy of the new theater, which is to be erected at Sixth and Walnut Streets. It may be a monstrous picture show house or a strictly vaudeville theater. Twenty-year rights have been taken on two lots, and upon this site it is said a theater with a seating capacity of 3,000 will be erected this summer. The building, according to the plans announced, will be four stories high, designed mainly to furnish an auditorium, while the extra stories will be used for stores and offices. It will cost about $100,000. The Crawford-Talbot Company is also said to have taken a sixteen-year lease on the site at 1517 South Sixth Street, now occupied by the Lyceum Theater. The company already has a lease on this ground, which has about four years to run, the new lease making a twenty-year term.

The Cornelius Amusement Company has been incorporated with a captial stock of $60,000, to take over the lease on the site occupied by the Lyric Theater, on the east side of Sixth between Pine and Chestnut Streets. John W. Cornelius, who built the theater last fall, and has held the lease, is the principal stockholder. Other incorporators are Rose Cornelius and Claude B. Ricketts.

The White City Park Company of Springfield, Mo., has been incorporated with a capital stock of $27,500. The incorporators are L. S. Meyer, C. R. Fulbright and E. J. Robinson.

St. Louis firemen are using moving picture theaters in their campaign for shorter hours. In various photoplay houses throughout the city the following slide is shown: "St. Louis firemen work 6,000 hours out of 8,000 every year. Other cities work 2,000 hours and get more pay. Boost your city firemen!"

The Washington Amusement Company, of St. Louis, has been incorporated with capital stock of $6,000. The incorporators are S. L., Louis and Bertha Solomon.

IN THE MISSISSIPPI VALLEY.

Winterwood & Wood, of Oelwein, Ia., plan a moving picture show for that place, it is announced.

Weiser & Schuster have opened a moving picture theater in Corzine's Opera House, Stonington, Ill., making two for that village.

H. A. Ford, who has been appointed manager of the new auditorium in North Chicago, Ill., will open a moving picture theater, giving matinee and evening performances daily.

Peter Jacobs, formerly chief of the Fire Department in Springfield, Ill., has opened a second moving picture show in Quincy, Ill., which is to be known as the Gem. The place contains 400 seats and a feature of the decorations is the mural paintings, sixteen in number. One of them reproduces the entrance to the Illinois Soldiers' and Sailors' Home in Quincy.

C. C. Stofer of Fremont, Ohio, has purchased the Orpheum, a five-cent moving picture show at Elkhart, Ind., from A. D. Jacoby.

I. N. Martin, of Bloomington, Ill., has purchased the Majestic moving picture theater on Vermilion Street, Danville, Ill., from A. L. Willis. The place will be remodeled and enlarged.

The Gary Theater Company, of Gary, Ind., has been incorporated with capital stock of $16,000, to operate a theater. The directors are Marcus Hieman, J. M. Finn and V. U. Young.

Moving pictures were the feature of an entertainment given by the Summer Social Guild Center in Minneapolis, Minn. This was the first time films were used in a social center meeting in that city.

Decatur, Ill., school authorities are so impressed by the fact that 2,000,000 persons attend moving picture shows every day that there must be something meritorious in them and are already considering their introduction into the schools for the study of history and other subjects.

This was the statement of Superintendent H. B. Wilson of the Decatur city schools before a meeting of the Congregational church brotherhoods, at which a symposium on "Amusements" was a feature.

The auditoriums of three school buildings were recommended for the exhibitions. Taking children to really excellent moving picture performances was suggested as a means of winning them away from harmful and mediocre exhibitions.

Otto Meister and F. J. Reis will build a T-shaped moving picture theater to cost $20,000 at 212-214 Grand Avenue, Milwaukee, Wis.

Articles of incorporation have been filed at St. Louis by the Gravois Theater Company with capital stock of $12,000. The incorporators are J. M. Dubbs, W. L. Denham and E. E. Huff.

The recently incorporated Casa Blanca Amusement Company of St. Louis has secured a permit to build a one-story building to cost $30,000 at 3626-3634 Olive Street, that city, on a lot 94x150 feet. The building is to be used for a moving picture and vaudeville show with bowling alleys in basement.

Trustees and the pastor, Rev. J. H. Sowerby, of the Baptist Church of Canton, Ill., have announced the discontinuance of the motion picture feature at the Sunday evening services of the church. The pastor states the action is not due to the agitation for the Sunday opening of the photoplay theaters, but it might assist the aldermen in deciding that it would be unwise to rescind the penalty clause in the Sunday amusement ordinance. The situation appears to be one of the most fertile for arguments as to the value of motion pictures and the reputation of the moving picture theater.

J. H. Wilburn and Dave S. Hexter of Ashland, Ill., have purchased the old Holiness church building in Ashland, Ill., and will remodel it into a theater, to be known as the Lyric.

The Berkson Theater Company of Indiana Harbor, Ind., has been incorporated with a capital stock of $3,000, to conduct a moving picture and vaudeville show. The incorporators are Isaac, Gus and Fannie Berkson.

John Berscheidt and Edward Brick of Aurora, Ill., will open a moving picture show at 28 N. Broadway, in that city.

The Vaudeville Theater Construction Company has purchased four irregularly shaped lots at Fifteenth and Montgomery Streets, St. Louis, Mo., and will erect a vaudeville and moving picture theater. With balcony, it will have a capacity of 1,500 and will be a part of the O. T. Crawford circuit.

Assemblyman C. F. Viebahn of Watertown, Wis., formerly a school teacher, is active in a movement in the Wisconsin legislature to urge the use of moving pictures for the education and amusement of pupils in the rural districts. The innovation probably will be recommended by the joint committee on education.

G. Melies, the producer who recently has been in San Antonio, Tex., visited Kerryville, Tex. It is reported that he was looking for a camp ground for the Star Film Company, now located near Hot Wells. He did not say, however, that he purposed to remove the ranch soon. William F. Haddock, director of the company, is quoted as saying: "Mr. Melies has been looking about for a location in case it becomes necessary to move the Star Film ranch, but no move will be made this season. We have a lease on our present quarters and being pleased with the place, are quite likely to remain here if we can renew the lease at its expiration. This is not at all certain, however, so we will have a place selected to which we can remove if it becomes necessary for us to leave our present ranch."

Apropos of the current topic of misrepresenting the Indian, Mr. Haddock says it is shown that when the Indian is portrayed as bad whiskey is blamed for his downfall and no attempt is made at deceit. F. H. M.

IN THE SOUTHWEST.

Moving pictures and slides of the trip of the Abernathy boys, who rode on horseback from Guthrie, Okla., into New Mexico, and from Guthrie to New York City, will be the feature of entertainments which it is announced, will be staged by John E. Abernathy, a United States marshal who is noted as a friend of Theodore Roosevelt. J. S. Darnell of Rock Island, Ill., is said to be negotiating with Mr. Abernathy, and will take part in the production. Films of a wolf hunt in the Cache Mountains and a reproduction of the Indian massacre on Signal Mountain, near Fort Sill, in which Quannah Parker, the famous Indian chief, who recently died at his home in Oklahoma, took part, will be one of the reels.

The presence of negro employees in a moving picture show operated exclusively for negroes at Eleventh and Main Streets, Fort Worth, Tex., was the cause of a row that took in that city. Bricks were hurled through the rubber office and a demonstration took place and more damage was done in other parts of the city than in the photoplay theater. The place it is said, is owned by a white man.

Following a decision of Judge Pope, at Beaumont, Tex., that moving picture theaters were not prohibited by the Sunday law, the photoplay houses in that county opened for business on the Sabbath and were well patronized by the citizens.

From dispatches announcing that Bishop John B. Morris of the Catholic diocese of Little Rock, Ark., has issued a pastoral letter to the clergy prohibiting children of the diocese from attending moving picture shows. The bishop, according to the new paper stories, claims that the shows have a tendency to demoralize the children.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

His recent visit of Mr. Frampton, studio manager of the Edison Company, proved one of benefit to this individual as well as to the local managers. He visited the various moving picture houses, the General Film Exchange, and mingled among those interested in this industry. He exchanged ideas with them as well as with the man on the street in reference to their faults and praises of the Edison films. The general sentiment was good words in favor of the photoplay of this company, but there was one rather general discordant note and that was against any more Bumptious reels. It has almost gotten to be a case of "Too much Bumptious" for both manager and public. Mr. Frampton expressed himself as having enjoyed his visit and appreciated the courtesies tendered.

Sydney Fabian Jacobson, well known in many cities for his connection with the moving picture business during the past ten years, is now general manager of the Crystal, where he has just brought into use the crystal screen to be seen in the Capital City. This screen makes the pictures much clearer and is not affected by any conflicting lights. This feature of the Crystal has already increased the popularity of this house, which has the reputation of being one of the leading Independents. Mr. Jacobson will be remembered as being with the Edison Company from 1900 to 1905, then with the Shepard's road shows, and for some time past as a much interested man in the moving picture business in Washington.

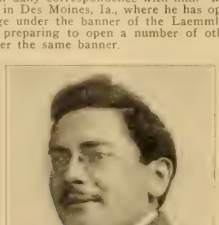
Mr. Jacobson has as his assistant of the Crystal Mrs. Marie Jacobson, who holds the reputation of being the only lady manager in the local moving picture houses. She can be seen about this theater every evening conducting the business as ably as her husband has done during the day.

During the recent conclave of the Boy Scouts in this city, Tom Moore, manager of the General Film Exchange, contributed to the entertainment of this body of young Americans by showing the film of the Boy Scouts of America. This was displayed while the boys were enjoying their banquet at the New Willard, and was thoroughly appreciated and aroused much enthusiasm.

The National Insane Asylum, of this city, St. Elizabeth's, is now using moving pictures for the entertainment of the inmates. The doctors find that it in no way tends to excite their patients, but provides them with a pleasure about which they do not have to think. Many of the films shown are of a geographic nature or comedy. These are being furnished by the General Film Exchange. W. H.

CHICAGO NOTES.

Mr. Julius Singer is absent from his desk at the Laemmle Film Service, but he is not gone neither forgotten, as his friends are in daily correspondence with him. Mr. Singer is now located in Des Moines, Ia., where he has opened a new film exchange under the banner of the Laemmle Film Service, and is preparing to open a number of other film exchanges under the same banner.



JULIUS SINGER.

There is no need to wish success to Julius Singer, as he is a man who makes friends wherever he goes, and is one of these progressive film men who know of no failure, but who work for a success and always win. Mr. Singer is badly missed in Chicago, as no matter under what circumstances you would visit the Laemmle offices you would always find Mr. Singer ready to greet you with a kindly smile.

No. 160 Washington Street has another great attraction for the exhibitors visiting Chicago. In the display rooms of The Moving Picture World Mr. J. C. Deagan has placed one set of his electric bells, worked by a piano keyboard. The twenty-six bells are placed all around the room, and when the keys are operated by a person with some knowledge of music the effects are so wonderful that the tenants of the building have to leave their desks and listen to the charming music. Mr. C. E. Sinn, of the Orpheum Theater, and the author of the music articles of The Moving Picture World, will gladly work the keys when visiting our display rooms, and the visitors present will realize how they can increase their gate receipts by purchasing one set of J. C. Deagan's bells. When worked properly by the drummer these bells will render better results than an expensive organ.

The Illinois Moving Picture Supply Company will open offices at 162 Washington Street, rooms 309 and 310, and will handle everything pertaining to a well equipped motion picture theater.

The Flashagraph Co. is opening a well equipped plant and offices at 507 North Clark Street, Chicago, where under the able management of Mr. Ben. Allann, so well known in the slide business, the new company will place on the market a high grade of advertising, announcement and special slides. Our best wishes to the new Flashagraph Company and its manager.

CINCINNATI.

The Auditorium Theater of Cincinnati has changed hands. It has been bought by the Queen Theater Company. They gave their first show last Saturday night under the management of Mr. M. A. Neff. This popular play house has been running as a ten-cent vaudeville and picture show. It has been the policy of the large theaters in Cincinnati to lease their theaters during the summer months for the purpose of running pictures and vaudeville, making them five and ten cent houses. This policy has been persued persistently, regardless of the injury of the business to the regular moving picture theaters.

Mr. Neff has taken time by the forelock and has bought the big Auditorium Theater located at Seventh and Elm Streets in Cincinnati, O., and has changed the policy of that theater from a ten-cent vaudeville house to a five-cent vaudeville and picture theater, giving special attractions on Sunday, Wednesday and all legal holidays. Mr. Neff proposes to give these big theaters, so-called five and ten cent vaudeville houses, a fight, and he has started in early in the season to show us that he means business. Three vaudeville acts and 3,000 feet of pictures for five cents is the biggest show in Cincinnati, and this is what the Auditorium is giving now for five cents with a change of pictures every day, and four changes of vaudeville a week. The policy adopted by the Queen Theater Co., managed by Mr. Neff, is for the sole purpose of trying to protect the regular picture shows, and to discourage the big theaters from opening, and any time that the big theaters will keep their doors closed and run only in their season, vaudeville and 3,000 feet of pictures will be stopped at the Auditorium at the price of five cents, but until then the fight will go on against the big interests.

Mr. A. F. Beck, of the Central Film Service Co., of Indianapolis, Ind., was in Cincinnati this week, made many friends, had a pleasant visit and secured several houses for his company. We understand Mr. Beck's company is now buying twenty-one reels a week. The weather has been very disagreeable the past week, and the attendance not nearly so good as desired.

CONNECTICUT.

Bridgeport is getting to be quite a center for moving pictures. There are eighteen places in this city of 100,000. Some of the exhibitors get their pictures from the local exchange and a number commute to New York every day.

The Comet Theater is now under the management of Mr. Merton Bundy, of Pennsylvania, and is doing a fine business. The Scenic has been sold by Mr. Flannery to Charles Hoffman, of New York.

The San Carolina Amusement Company, on Grand Avenue, New Haven, have opened with pictures and vaudeville.

Plans are being made here for a number of open-air shows around the State the coming season.

New Haven picture houses are watched very closely by Chief Coles, and if a poster is displayed showing a gun or knife he orders it covered.

"JOE" ENGEL, OF THE REX.

It is one thing nowadays to make a good moving picture, another to sell it. Offhand, we should say that the latter task is the more difficult of the two, especially having regard to the present condition of the market. But once in the market, the task is simplified, though all difficulties are not removed. Moving picture manufacturers have two sets of competitive conditions to deal with: The competition of quality and the competition of selling ability.

The Rex Company, as we made plain in our article two weeks ago, have overcome the first of these difficulties at the outset. They have made a good picture, and are making good pictures, which compete very well with existing high-class Independent products.

Now, as to the selling of the Rex pictures. Along comes genial, breezy Joe Engel with a satisfactory solution of the problem. Joe, who was christened Joseph some thirty years ago, represents the business side of the Rex enterprise, as Edwin Porter represents the producing side. Joe is succeeding as well in his branch of the work as Porter in his. Mr. Engel, for such we must sometimes formally style him, has been in the film business for about three years. He knows the exchange end of matters from A to Z. He has been in the manufacturing end about a year, a very large part of which has been devoted to the organizing of the Rex business. Nowadays he superintends the commercial side of the Rex concern, takes charge of the office end of matters, gets out the advertising and posters, sells the pictures and does all this so successfully that within a few weeks of releasing, the Rex picture is steadily making its way into the "forties." Good for you, Joe.

Hitherto, Mr. Engel has been in the background as regards newspaper publicity. He has been known to the few, to the untuated, as being identified with the Rex. It is now our pleasure to turn the full limelight of the Moving Picture World publicity upon him, so that he may be made known throughout the length and breadth of the American moving picture trade. We wish Joe success and we are persuaded he will achieve it.

It is not improbable that in the near future he may make a trip to London in the interest of the Rex films. He is such a good film man that he will be sure of a cordial reception across the Atlantic. Meanwhile, we want to get all out of him we can right here in this city. We want him to be successful for his own sake, for the sake of his company, and for the sake of the business in general. As we have said over and over again, the moving picture business is still a very youthful one, and it can do with many more men of the type of Joe Engel.

MR. ROBERT BOSWORTH.

The popular leading man for the Selig Company has turned author and producer for a change. Mr. Bosworth is the author of the recent Selig Indian drama, "Willie Boy." Willie Boy is a dramatization of a recent Southwest episode. Several years ago the original Willie Boy terrorized a county and led a small army of deputy sheriffs and type-writer carrying newspaper men a long, hard chase over some of the worst deserts and mountains of the southwest. The beginning of the story, in which Mr. Bosworth played the lead, showing the government Indian training school at Sherman Cal. Willie Boy is educated at the institution and returns to the tribe to accomplish what he believes to be needed reforms of tribal customs and ceremonies. One of the tribe falls ill and Willie Boy turns down the tribal medicine men for the modern medicine school. For this offence he is ostracised by the tribe. He falls in with bad companions and takes to drink to drown his troubles. In a burst of alcholic fury he commits a murder and is forced to flee to the desert mountains tracked by his own kind. There he is hemmed in and forced to commit suicide to avoid capture. Mr. Bosworth's death scene is a bit of photographic ghastliness rarely equalled in moving picture work. Mr. Bosworth, previous to his joining the Selig company, was known as one of the foremost legitimate actors of the Coast. Had it not been for his ill health, necessitating his choosing outdoor work, the moving picture world would never have known of him.

MME. PILAR MORIN.

Is it not a reproach against American moving picture makers that that fine artiste, Mme. Pilar Morin, is not now posing before the moving picture camera? She had a brilliant career with the Edison Company, which terminated, we believe, by mutual consent. Yet, in seeking other opportunities for the display of her wonderful talent, the admittedly finest artist in moving picture making is passed over. We think this is a slur upon the intelligence of American moving picture makers. Were Mme. Pilar Morin a resident in France, Italy, Spain or Portugal, she would surely be appearing in the pictures. It is only modern, ultra-progressive America that ignores the best available talent.

We write this apropos of certain references we have recently heard as to the wonderful success of the pictures in which Mme. Pilar Morin has appeared. These references come from all parts of the Old and New Worlds. That being the case, what are the American manufacturers about that they are leaving this fine artist out of their pictures at a time when all the talk is about the uplift of the dramatic quality of moving pictures?

PIERO CALZABINI.

Mr. Calzabini, whose clever work is attracting attention in the early Rex releases, has had a varied career in moving picture making. He is by turns cameraman and actor. In the latter respect, we believe, if given sufficient opportunity in the United States, he might rival the renowned Mr. Linder or Mr. Foolshead and other moving picture acting humorists. Mr. Calzabini figures prominently in the Rex "By the Light of the Moon."

Incidentally, we learn that Calzabini is a Count—an Italian Count. Now, here is an opportunity for moving picture makers to engage the services of a real live Italian Count. Enterprising Carl Laemmle, the other day, traded with Count de Beaufort, but at the risk of being accused of panning, this Count did not count for much. We will back Calzabini any day against de Beaufort. Calzabini understands his work, is a good workman and is an acquisition to any moving picture plant, whereas Beaufort was not.

MOVING PICTURE WORKERS' LOCAL NO. 442.

A charter has been duly granted the Industrial Union, Local No. 442, Motion Picture Theatre Workers of New York City. This charter guarantees the support of the new general labor organization known as the Industrial Workers of the World, which is a rival to the American Federation of Labor.

At present this branch of motion picture workers includes operators, doormen, pianist, performers, singers, specialists, usher, and, in fact, every one having business with moving pictures including exchange workers and clean managers. Later on when they are fully members of a certain kind of work in a city, they are entitled to have a branch of their own under that particular heading. Ten or more of these local branches will form a National Industrial Union of any one particular craft in the trade.

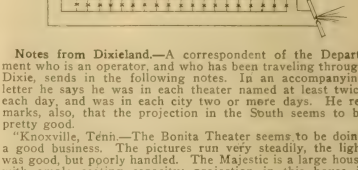
Two-wing Shutter.—Mr. Howard Johnson, Marissa, Ill., writes: "Enclosed find money order for Handbook. As this is my first letter, I shall trouble you with but one question: Does the N. Powers Lamp make and advise the use of the two-wing shutter on their No. 6 mechanism where 110-volt 60-cycle current is used? I am a constant reader of The World."

The Powers company makes a two-wing shutter for use with 60-cycle current, and you can procure one from them. At high speed, the three-wing shutter sometimes gets in synchronism with one side of the alternations of 60-cycle current. This is avoided with the use of the two-wing shutter.

Unique Question.—Mr. Leander L. Carr, Baker City, Ore., writes: "It is some time since I wrote you, but I am as ardent a reader of the Department as ever. I notice Lux Graphicus took a slam at you recently, and, while there are some things he says that will hold water, all right, at the same time there is a lot of room for argument. However, as such argument can do no good to operators or anyone else, as far as I can see, I am not going to take up your time in a lengthy harangue. I only wish to say that I think your endeavors are fully understood by all of those who have been following your articles during the past two years, and while there may be a few who benefit from the perusal of the Department who have no license to, there are thousands of others deriving genuine benefit therefrom at a minimum cost, and anything that outsiders or incompetents have learned I do not think will be counted against you when the last roll is called.

But what I really started to write about is this: Is a 50-foot volt D. C. generator a practical machine to use for projection purposes? If so, would any resistance be necessary? On 110-volt D. C., would it be practical to use the outside illumination of the theater for resistance, provided you use 50-volt lamps? How many 8 c. p. lights would be required for resistance, provided you use 30 amperes at the arc?"

So far as the first part of your letter is concerned, Neighbor Carr, it speaks for itself, requiring little comment. I might say, however, that there are thousands of manager-operators in the small towns to whom the employment of a really first-class operator, even though one could be obtained for all the thousands of such houses, would be entirely out of the question. It would be a financial impossibility, since the available possible business is strictly limited. These manager-owner-operators have had absolutely no opportunity to secure training in the manipulation of projection machinery and that which goes with it. Certainly I do not consider it a crime to have taught them how to improve their projection. But, as you say, there is not much use in arguing these propositions. I have no apologies or excuses to offer for anything I have done, and those who care to side with the destructive faction that offers nothing better, are entirely at liberty to do so. As to the 50-volt dynamo, it is not practical for projection work. A 60-volt dynamo, however, is practical, since there will then be a sufficient resistance cushion to enable you to handle the arc. As to the use of incandescent lamps for resistance, you have sprung a unique question in that. It would not be practical to use the regular outside illumination, for the reason that it would be extinguished every time you shut off your arc. I believe, however, it would be possible, and might even be practical, to install an auxiliary illumination system on the front of the theater, where, while acting as a rheostat or resistance for the arc, would furnish added brilliancy to the theater front at no expense whatever during the time the arc was burning. The only drawback to this would be that all the lamps would have to be wired in multiple, and that it would be necessary to use about 65-volt lamps, and I am not sure you could procure these. Given the 65-volt globes—16 c. p.—they would, I believe (I could not say certainly without looking the matter up) let through something like three-quarters of an ampere of current to the lamp, so that you would have to wire about 40 of them in multiple to get 30 amperes at the arc. The illumination furnished by these lamps would cost you nothing at all, since the energy would otherwise be consumed in the rheostat which they would displace. There would, however, of course, be considerable fluctuation in the brilliancy of the lamps, unless you held your arc very close to the same length al the time. I should very much like to see this scheme tried out. I really believe it is quite possible you have hit upon an idea that will put the waste energy heretofore expended in the rheostat to some practical use. The wiring would be as follows:



Notes from Dixieland.—A correspondent of the Department who is an operator, and who has been traveling through Dixie, sends in the following notes. In an accompanying letter he says he was in each theater named at least twice each day, and was in each city two or more days. He remarks, also, that the projection in the South seems to be pretty good.

"Knoxville, Tenn.—The Bonita Theater seems to be doing a good business. The pictures run very steadily, the light was good, but poorly handled. The Majestic is a large house with ample seating capacity; projection in this house is very good. The Crystal is one of the most popular houses in the city; projection is good; independent films are used in this house.

"Savannah, Ga.—In the Odeon the projection is very bad; travel ghosts galore; the bottom of the picture off the curtain about 4 inches. Projection in the Folly Theater is excellent; theater isn't yet completed, but when it is it will be the best in the city.

"Macon, Ga.—The Theatorium is one of the oldest houses in the city; projection very good.

"Athens, Ga.—This place has a population of about 20,000, with four picture theaters to its credit. The Lyric is a straight-forward picture house; a good business; projection is excellent. The Elite is a cozy little theater, enjoying good patronage; projection very good. The Majestic is the largest house in the city; uses a Powers No. 6 projector and the picture runs very steady, but the light is bad. The Crystal is the most popular house of that city; projection good.

"Jacksonville, Fla.—The best theater here is the Grand, which does a fine business under the management of F. Montgomery, the 'Moving Picture Man;' projection pretty good.

"Miami, Fla., can boast of one of the best photoplay theaters south of Jacksonville, the Arcade. It is a large house, and the pictures are well projected. The light is excellent and well handled.

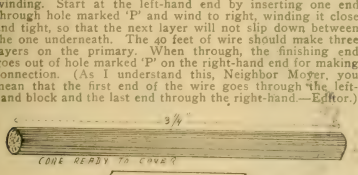
"Atlanta, Ga.—The largest house here is the Alcazar, in which the projection is very good. The Elite is a very large house, and the pictures are very well displayed. The Majestic, a small house, is always crowded; the pictures here are run very steady, but the light is bad; plenty of finger prints on the song slides. The Princess is one of the dirtiest and most unkempt houses I ever entered. The projection is simply awful, and the picture dances all over the screen; light very poor. The Alamo is the latest addition to Atlanta's photoplay theaters; the projection here was above the average; excellent light, well handled. In the Vaudette the projector has a hum similar to that of an electric fan. I do not know whether the fault lies with the manager or operator, but even when the house was only half filled the pictures were run at excessive speed—about 50 feet per minute. This, apparently, was the regular performance in that house, so, of course, the projection could not, by any stretch of the imagination, be said to be good. In the American the projection is good and the picture very steady; good light, well handled.

"West Palm Beach, Fla.—This place has a very nice little theater, the Bijou, in which the projection was excellent. This Dixie is doing a big business and the projection is to be commended.

"St. Augustine, Fla., has a combined vaudeville and picture house, the Jefferson, in which the projection is excellent."

We are obliged to you, Neighbor, for sending in these notes, which, while very brief, cover a good deal of territory. I am glad to know that in so large a percentage of cases you could pronounce "projection excellent."

Telephone Again.—Mr. H. A. Moyer, Waverly, Ia., writes: "On page 424, February 25 issue, I see a sketch of the telephone I sent in, and note that you ask for direction for making induction coil for same. All right, I'll do the best I can. Take soft iron wires, 30 gauge, if possible, though a little larger doesn't matter. Cut them 3¼ inches long; cut enough to make a bundle about 5/16 inch in size; make the bundle as round and compact as possible. Then, take a piece of thin cardboard the thickness of an ordinary blotter, and cut it so its edges will come together around the core thus made. Shellac it and put it over the core, leaving it to dry, or else bake in an oven until dry. Next, have blocks cut as shown in sketch, and insert each end of the core in one of the blocks, the core ends to be flush with the outside edge of the blocks. It is now ready for wiring. The primary wire should be 32 B. & S. gauge, single, silk-covered. It is sold by weight, and it takes ½-oz., or 40 feet, for primary winding. Start at the left-hand end by inserting one end through hole marked 'P' and wind to right, winding it close and tight, so that the next layer will not slip down between the one underneath. The 40 feet of wire should make three layers on the primary. When through, the finishing end goes out of hole marked 'P' on the right-hand end for making connection. (As I understand this, Neighbor Moyer, you mean that the first end of the wire goes through the left-hand block and the last end through the right-hand.—Editor.)



Next, take a piece of waxed paper, such as comes in cans of smoking tobacco, and drap it around the primary, winding so as to have three layers of paper, and then glue the edge down. Now, we are ready for the secondary winding. Start the same as with the primary, with end of wire out of small hole marked 'S.' For secondary winding use single cotton-covered wire, No. 36, B. & S. gauge. The secondary requires about 2½ ounces, or 200 feet, winding left to right, and close so that the next layer will not slip between the one beneath. When six or seven layers have been wound, take a piece of common writing paper and wrap three layers of paper around and then finish winding the rest of the wire, allowing finishing end to protrude through hole marked 'S.' in the right-hand block. Next, cover the hole with a piece of heavy paper and glue it fast, and the job is done. The winding is easily done on a turning lathe, or similar machine. The price of wire will be sent by any company that handles same. A good induction coil somewhat similar to the above can be bought of the Western Electric people of Chicago for about 50 cents."

We certainly are indebted to you, Friend Moyer, for your excellent description of method of making induction coil for telephone. With this added knowledge I believe anyone can construct the telephone shown on page 424. The block shown in the sketch is 1 inch square, by ¾-inch thick, with a 5/16 hole in centre for core, and very small holes for the two wires, one in each block. The blocks for both ends are the same.

A New Idea.—Mr. Jesse C. Long, Rochester, N. Y., contributes the following: "I have an idea for a new style of tension spring to be used on the Powers machine, and I desire to lay the same before you for consideration. Have two shoes made from tool steel, afterwards to be hardened glass hard. These shoes should a 2½ inches long, 1/16-inch thick and ¼-inch wide. In each of the shoes have a pin 3/16-inch long so placed that they will come opposite the holes in the door where the original springs came through. Next, put two flat straight springs of considerable strength on the back of the door, with screw holes in the middle to screw them fast in the same hole in which the screw went which fastened the original springs. Have screw holes in the end of the springs opposite the pins in the shoes and threads cut in the pins so as to screw the spring fast to the shoe. The shoes might be tapered from about ⅛-inch above the aperture on the side next to the film track to the top; also the shoes might be bracketed together with a light bar, thus holding same more rigid. I installed a three-wing shutter on Powers No. 5, getting the pattern from the Department. It cuts off considerable of the flicker. If the spring idea is worth anything I would be glad to have you work it out and patent it. If not, it may be published in the Department."

So far as the idea is concerned, Neighbor Long, I do not think it would be worth while trying to patent it. I happen to know that the Powers Company are just about ready to equip the No. 6 with a new style spring very similar to the one you have described, and even better, because it will allow the operator to adjust the tension by merely tightening or loosening two screws. The idea, however, shows decided cleverness on your part, and I have no doubt that such a spring will work very well indeed. I would favor the bridge across from one shoe to the other. There is no reason why this spring would not work equally as well on the Edison or most other machines, and I believe those using flexible springs will do exceedingly well to try this proposition out, no matter what their make of machine may be. The Department is indebted to you for the description of this spring.

Oil Trouble.—Mr. H. M. Boykin, Montgomery, Ala., sends in the following: "Enclosed herewith find check for Handbook. In looking over the Department, I notice where some operator was having trouble by reason of oil getting on his film. Will say that I had this same difficulty with my Powers No. 6, and after considerable experimenting I remedied the evil by taking off the prongs that keep the film from scratching on the apron and putting in its place a guide roller, which I made of sheet Metal. I trust this will be of value to operators using the Powers No. 6 with the old style carriage."

Many thanks of you, Friend Boykin, for the idea. What you mean, I suppose, is that you removed the stripper plate and in its place put on a guide roller. I wish, however, you would send a sketch of what you did, if possible. I do not exactly see what difference the substitution of a roller for the stripper plate would make as far as getting oil on the film is concerned. Possibly I have not grasped your idea. We await further explanations. The late model Powers No. 6 has a roller instead of a stripper plate.

Switch Installation.—Laredo, Tex., asks: "I had an argument here with an operator regarding the right way to place single and double throw knife switches. What are the underwriters' rules as regards the setting of switches?"

Laredo submits two rough sketches illustrating his idea. What he wants to know is, should the switch be placed on the wall so that the bars when pulled open will drop down or be raised up. I do not know, Laredo, that the code covers this point, and I cannot take time to look the matter up, since it is not necessary. Switches should always be installed either so that the bars swing sidewise or else drop down when opened. They should never be installed so that in pulling them open you raise the bars, since if the bars happen to be a little loose, or, in other words, work easily, the switch is then liable to fall shut, thus accidentally closing the circuit. This is correct, regardless of whether the point is covered by the code or not.

From Northland.—Mr. Fred W. Craig, Western Nova Scotia, writes: "I seem to have considerable trouble in getting my carbons set properly. Although set as close together as they will stand, they flame almost constantly and cause a shadow; light also jumps frequently. The picture will be as bright as might be desired one moment and suddenly becomes very dull without any warning. I use 110-volt current, about 30 amperes through an Edison rheostat, which is kept one inch from the highest, since on the highest contact it becomes very hot."

Really, Friend Craig, I hardly know what to say to you, since your statements are contradictory. You ought not to have much flaming of the carbons with only 30 amperes of current, if 30 amperes is really all you are pulling. I would suggest that you try some other make of carbon. You do not say whether your current is A. C. or D. C. Presuming, however, it is D. C., I would suggest that you should not keep your carbons too close together, since by so doing you will only cause an unnecessarily large amount of current without adding anything to the light. With 30 amperes your carbons should be separated quite considerable—almost be-

NESTOR FILMS — MADE BY DAVID HORSLEY

NESTO

"Rarely Equalled—Never

Scene from "WAS IT WORTH WHILE"

Brutus and Cassius said that Caesar was ambitious—too ambitious to live and—but, there; Roman history has nothing to do with "Was It Worth While?" Unless it be that the hero of this story happens to be inoculated with the germ of ambition, which causes him to do things that will interest and please you.

Get this well-rounded picture, for you are sure to find it worth while.

Release o

March

W

I T W

W H

1000 Feet of V

A Foto-D

: ONE :
NESTOR
A WEEK!

IF IT'S A
NESTOR
IT'S GOOD!

Keep Agoing! Stop On

JOIN OUR

IF HE'S A LEADING EXCHANGEM

DAVID HORSLEY, German Savings Ban

FILMS

urpassed—Often Imitated"

NESTOR FILMS — MADE BY DAVID HORSLEY

Wednesday
5, 1911

S
O R T H
L E ?

rh-While Film
aic Delight

WEDNESDAY
: : : IS : : :
NESTORDAY!

IT PAYS TO : : GET : :
NESTORS!

To Get Every Nestor Release!
ALING LIST!

COMING! Wednesday March 22d, 1911 COMING!

"COULD YOU BLAME HIM"

A Comedy Film of Unusual Merit

BOOK IT NOW! YOU NEED IT! GET IT!

Scene from "COULD YOU BLAME HIM"

, HE'LL GIVE YOU NESTOR FILMS!

Building, 4th Avenue and 14th Street, New York

inch [illegible] cord, of course. It is D. C.? Are you sure that the pressure of the voltage does not fluctuate? That would account, of course, for your light dying down. However, not knowing what kind of current you have, anything I may say would be largely guesswork. Kindly write again, telling me whether the current is A. C. or D. C., and whether or not the voltage is constant. I then may be able to offer you some [illegible] advice. Last Sunday I had Captain Hanshaw, of the steam liner Albemarle, who hails from your city, at the house to dinner.

Oil Trouble Remedied.—Mr. C. Leo Smeltzer, San Francisco, Calif., writes: "Accept thanks for your kind letter. And now for a helpful suggestion to users of the Powers No. 6 old style carriage, with which some trouble was experienced through leaking oil casing. I had that trouble myself and made up a special lubricant for the oil casing. I combined a 5-cent can of vaseline with the same quantity of Auto-Transmission grease, and a like bulk of Monogram cylinder oil, melting the whole together in a large oil can with short, thick spout, using the lamp-house heat. When cold, the combination was a thick, creamy substance, but not a paste, and a little heat will help it run from the can. The oil casing full to the top will last several days, doesn't leak, and has effectually stopped the 'too much oil' trouble. I drilled a 1/16-inch hole in the top of the oil casing toward the front, which lets the lubricant enter easily. For grease, I use the Monogram oil straight. Later, if you care for it, I shall be glad to go into details as to how I get D. C. light from A. C. straight, using 35 amperes. My best regards to yourself and the boys of the craft."

Many thanks to you. Neighbor Smeltzer, for the oil tip, which will be of benefit to those experiencing trouble with the Powers old style oil casing. I have no doubt but what such a lubricant would be very good also in Pathe or any other intermittent oil casing, though it might make the machine run just a little bit heavy at the start of the day's run until it got warmed up. We shall, of course, be only too glad to receive details of the method of securing good A. C. light. Send it on, not "after a while," but right away, provided, of course, it is convenient for you to do so. The party of whom I wrote you says that while everything is taken at this time, he will keep the matter in mind, and I have no doubt but what they will hear from him in time.

A Unique Wiring Scheme.—Mr. David Nagorsky, New York City, submits the following: "In some of the drawings submitted to the Department, I have observed that operators have two machines hooked up on a single service controlled by a double throw stitch, while still others have two rheostats on a single line also controlled by a doube throw switch. Why not combine both rheostats and lamps, using a single No. 6 two-wire feed and controlling them with two double throw switches so as to be able to change current from one lamp to the other and from one rheostat to the other? I would also suggest as an extra precaution that switches be fused. The accompanying diagram will speak for itself."

Your wiring scheme certainly is unique, Friend Nagorsky. At first glance I said: "That won't work," but after I had run a pencil around the lines I saw that I was mistaken. I submit it to the readers of the Department for their consideration, with the comment that I personally do not favor double-throw switches between machines. My personal preference is that each machine be wired entirely separate from and independent of the others. This for several reasons. In the first place, if you have two machines controlled by a double throw switch you are running a film with one machine, while your helper puts in a new set of carbons in the other. He should be able to light that lamp and burn a crater on the carbons while you are finishing up the reel in machine No. 1. He cannot do so, however, and you are obliged to start the second reel with new carbons, which means poor light until you get a crater burned. However, while the wiring scheme you submit is an oddity, it is entirely practical.

A Few Figures.—San Francisco submits the following: "Enclosed please find a few figures regarding variation of amperage with new carbons burning, and where the ammeter registers on a steady arc. I have the ammeter connected to my lamp switch and note the variations with changes of my rheostats. This may be of help to some of the boys and aid them to understand why their fuses blow after a few days' use, they being fused to the amperage ordinarily used. With two green carbons, 20 amperes normal, 48 amperes maximum; 45 amperes normal, 58 amperes maximum; 48 amperes normal, 61 amperes maximum. With upper carbons burned and lower carbons filed to a point, amperage goes up from 2 to 10 amperes, and if burning properly settles back to a normal pull."

I imagine, Frisco, you have some valuable data here, but I must confess myself unable to follow it; that is to say, I am not sure I understand just what you mean. Presumably, you wish to convey the idea that where 20 amperes is the normal pull, after the carbons have been heated and a crater burned, 48 amperes will be consumed when the arc is first struck with new carbons. If this is really what you mean, it is something that I certainly did not know. Where D. C. 45 amperes is the normal pull with the arc burning just barely long enough so that it does not "sing," the amperage will jump up to considerably above 50, if the arc is shortened enough to make it sing. That I have demonstrated several times with an ammeter. I wish you would come across with a little more detailed explanation. The data you submit, I believe, is of value, but you do not explain it enough. Please get busy with your pen again and go into this matter fully.

Information Wanted.—Shawnee, Okla., requests the following information: "Can the Edison Exhibition two-pin, remodeled to a one-pin mechanism, be removed from the regular wooden cabinet and placed in the latest cast-iron frame, making use of the outside shutter in the change? I thoroughly understand that the old take-up would have to be changed also, making use of the 'under-the-table' magazine. If this cannot be done, kindly state why. Our town contains about 13,000 population, and we have six shows, besides one under construction. Two run stock, two pictures and vaudeville, and two straight motion pictures. The new one intends running vaudeville and pictures, we understand. With one exception, projection here cannot be surpassed, if it can be equaled, in the new state, this exception using a Hot Air Rabbit's Foot Transformer. Wages here do not strike the $35 mark, nor do they go to the $8 figure."

The exhibition model mechanism can be changed into the Model B iron casing. You can buy one of the casings and do it yourself, providing the company will sell you the casing; also, the transfer being made, the company can readily install the outside shutter, but that would have to be done at the factory, I think. For a town of 13,000, you certainly are well supplied with amusement. The wonder is that they can all live and prosper. You made some reference to an article of page 369, February 18 issue, but I could not quite make out what you were driving at in this connection. It might be only fair to warn you that the Edison Company is, I understand, not at all favorable to changing the exhibition mechanism into the iron casting. Whether they carry this to the extent of refusing to sell iron casings to those desiring to change their mechanism, I cannot say.

Bad Business Policy.—Long Island (name of town suppressed) writes: "Kindly inform me whether it is against the law to run a moving picture machine on the main floor, locating it among the audience. The case in point is located outside of Greater New York, and is my competitor. If there is a way to prevent him operating under these conditions kindly inform me. To whom should I apply to stop such procedure?"

I do not think, Long Island, there is any law to prevent the operation of a moving picture machine located as your letter indicates, providing it is inside an approved booth. At any rate, that is hardly the way to go about getting your competitor's "goat." It is a line of procedure which the editor of this Department would in no wise recommend you to follow. If there is only sufficient business to maintain one house, and you cannot get that business legitimately, you had better close up and give your competitor the field. By "legitimately," I mean giving a better show than the other fellow. Attacking a competitor along the lines you suggest savors of —well, it isn't the thing to do, to say the least. My advice to you is, don't bother about your competitor, but get busy improving your own house and your own programme to such an extent that business naturally comes to you instead of to your competitor. If, as I said, there is only business enough to maintain one house. Ordinarily, however, you are taking the wrong view entirely. As a general proposition, where there are two 5 or 10-cent houses, each house will do practically the same amount of business, as though the other were not in existence, provided, of course, both shows are really worth the money. Those who go to one also attend the other, and vice versa. In fact, in hundreds upon hundreds of instances, showmen who have been frightened by the advent of a competitor have been hugely astonished to find that after the opening of the competing house their own business was actually improved, notwithstanding the fact that the other fellow did an excellent business also.

Trouble With Film.—Mr. John Weiss, Pottsville, Pa., writes: "I notice in your issue of March 4 a carbon holder, the invention of Mr. L. A. Davis, Perry, N. Y. I wish to say that this idea is not new, as Friend Davis seems to think I have been using the same article for two years past, but, nevertheless, new or old, it is a good thing, and I can run two or three reel shows with some of the carbon stubs which were waste before. I made the holder I am using myself. I am having quite a lot of trouble with making patches in Bison and Reliance films. The cross lines on the films are at different places, in relation to the sprocket holes, in different scenes. In one scene the line is at the bottom of the sprocket hole, and perhaps in the next it is at the top, which makes the difference of one hole where the two scenes are joined, causing a jump of from 12 to 14 inches on the screen, which, of course, is a very bad showing on the part of the operator, who, naturally, is blamed by the audience, although he is not at fault. If you know how this can be overcome, I would certainly like to have the information."

Neighbor Davis sends in a piece of film illustrating the trouble. I have had a great many complaints on this score, and will proceed at once to take the matter up with the companies at fault and see if something cannot be done. The fault is due, I believe, to either carelessness or ignorance on the part of the printer or camera man. As to the holder, it doesn't really matter who invented it if it does the work, as it evidently does. LATER: I am assured by the Bison and Reliance people that the fault complained of positively will not occur again, the cause of the trouble having been eliminated.

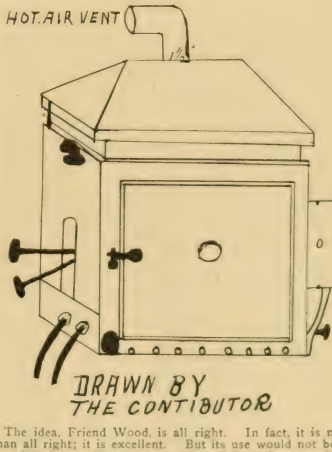
Good Advertising.—Mr. E. Graefnecker, San Francisco, writes: "Enclosed find copy of dodger we put out about twice a month. It certainly has proven a drawing card and a most excellent advertising stunt. Enclosed also find a small cartoon gotten up by me on the rabbit's foot hot air transformer. It might do some people good."

I had a good laugh over your cartoon, Frisco, but, really, what is the use? The rabbit's foot transformer has already had sufficient advertising through the columns of the Department. One part of the cartoon, though, I will have to print. In one corner of the drawing he says: "To get violet rays, secure some violets, scrape off the rays and lay them across the carbons. Use any old kind of hot air current." The cartoon certainly is a hot one, but we will let it go at that. The dodger spoken of begins: "We employ a union operator," and goes on to relate that the show lasts an hour and a half, and is the biggest and best in the city; that the house is absolutely fire-proof, flickerless pictures, etc., down to where the programme is given. In fact, it is a very well-gotten-up handbill, about 10 inches long by 5 inches wide.

Fireproofing Booths. On page 479, March 4 issue, Mr. Morton W. Dennis, Norwich, N. Y., asks what asbestos mill-board is, where it can be procured, what it costs, and will it pass inspection by the Board of Fire Underwriters of New York City for construction of moving picture booths? This question I was unable to answer. I, therefore, wrote the Electrical Department of the National Board of Fire Underwriters, asking them if there was any ruling in this connection, and asking, furthermore, if there was no ruling that one be made. I am just in receipt of the following reply: "Mr. F. H. Richardson, Editor, Trouble Department Moving Picture World, 125 East 23d Street, N. Y.: Dear sir—Due acknowledgment of your valued inquiry of the 14th instant has been delayed, as we have found it difficult to furnish the desired information owing to the proximity of the meeting of the Electrical Committee having in charge the discussion and settlement of all questions pertaining to National Electrical Code amendments. In view of the possibility of more definite specifications for the construction of moving picture machine booths which may, perhaps, be formulated at the approaching meeting above-mentioned, we feel that it might be well to avoid giving any decision upon the question raised in your letter at this time. Yours very truly, G. E. Bruen, Engineer and Superintendent Electrical Department."

The letter is self-explanatory, but the editor of this Department is now taking certain steps in this connection which he hopes will be to the lasting benefit, at least to some extent, of moving picture theater men all over the country.

Ventilation Scheme.—Mr. Chas. Wood, Dayton, O., writes: "Enclosed find sketch of the way I have my lamp-house fixed. I trust the idea will be of benefit to the Department readers. I haven't broken a condenser since I made this change. I simply placed 1½-inch elbow in the center of the top of the lamp-house."



The idea, Friend Wood, is all right. In fact, it is more than all right; it is excellent. But its use would not be allowed in large cities. As a matter of fact, there would be about as much danger of fire through any sparks which might issue from such a vent as there would be of setting the Pacific Ocean on fire with a box of matches. I haven't the slightest doubt but what the installation of such a vent would very largely decrease condenser breakage, and I would recommend its installation in any town where its use would be allowed by the authorities. It must be understood in this connection that simply because the authorities say a thing is not safe it doesn't at all follow that it really is not safe. As a general proposition, those who make the laws and rules governing operating rooms know very little about the subject with which they are attempting to deal, except in so far as concerns the electric wiring. The result of this has been the promulgation of a vast number of fool laws and "rules" which have added largely to the burden of the operator and manager.

Likes The World.—Phillipsburg, Kan., writes: "Enclosed find $1.50 for the Handbook, which I would like to have as soon as possible. I am a constant reader of The World, and like it very much, as I find it to be full of good sense."

Many thanks for your good opinion, Phillipsburg. We trust The World will continue to merit your approval in future as in the past.

Resistance.—Mr. John Houston, Des Moines, Ia., writes: "Can you give some simple method of ascertaining the resistance of copper wire any size? I would not expect such a rule to be absolutely accurate, since I know the purity of the copper, temperature, etc., enter into the question. It is some general rule approximately correct that I am after."

With the understanding that such rules are only approximately accurate, though near enough for small work, I guess I can fix you up, Friend Houston. Measure the diameter of the wire in mills (one mill is 1/1000 of an inch) and multiply the diameter by itself, which gives the circular mills the wire contains. Now, multiply the length of the wire in feet by 10.8 and divide the result by the circular mills. The final result will be the number of ohms resistance the wire will offer at ordinary temperatures. The above is by authority of Victor H. Tousley and Henry C. Horstman in "Modern Electrical Construction."

A Good Letter.—From Mr. W. B. Hamblen, Colfax, Wash. (New Ridgeway Theater), comes the following: "Would like to make a suggestion in behalf of Peoria, Ill. (page 420, Feb 25 issue), as regards his condenser trouble and light. A new No. 6 Power's machine was installed in the New Ridgeway Theater January 30, and I was placed in charge. I had the same trouble Peoria complains of. The manager was somewhat disappointed in the light at the start, but as I had operated for more than a year in another house in this town, he left it all to me. The machine was installed in a gallery with a 55-foot throw, the current coming direct from the main switchboard, A. C. 60-cyce, through a coil rheostat. The lenses sent with the machine were a 4½-inch projection lens and an 18-inch stereo.; condensers 6½ and 7½. The first trouble I discovered was that the springs in the condenser case did not hold the second condenser back in its proper place. Having remedied this, I lined up my machine as per the description furnished by Brother Kirk, of Galveston (page 421, Feb. 25 issue), except that I used a straight steel rod 3/8-inch in diameter, removing the lenses from both ends of the lens barrel. I found the front of the board was sprung, or "warped" a trifle, thus throwing the machine out of line, which, of course, I proceeded to remedy. I then got my old set of lenses, No. 2 and No. 2-A, making the picture 13 feet 3½ inches, but couldn't take out the travel ghost, or rainbow color. I began to change carbons, using Bio, Arco and Electra. Also used several focal length condensers, finally deciding 7½ back and front was best, though I didn't get my light correct. I finally set my carbons as per instructions in figure 33, page 88, of your Handbook, and now the only trouble is they must be correct as to the crater points all the time, squarely on each other. I trust this may assist Peoria and perhaps others. I should like to hear from Peoria personally, if he cares to write."

I do not think your letter requires much comment, Neighbor Hamblen. I have published it in full for the reason that there are things therein contained which may be of benefit to other operators in encountering similar experiences. Your shutter will have to be set very close with that short focal length projection lens. I think, however, that you will be able to eliminate all the travel ghost by close attention to the shutter setting. The Power Company has found it necessary, in a very few cases where a projection lens of exceedingly short focal length was used, to furnish a special type of shutter. This, I think, will not be necessary in your case.

Handbook a Help.—Mr. M. P. Williamson (the stenographer inquires if it is Moving Picture Williamson), Attica, Ind., writes: "I find the Handbook a great help. It explains many things for which I have heretofore been groping in the dark. I am using a Power's rheostat as per Figure 20, page 43, of the Handbook, on 110 volt D. C. If I cut in all resistance the rheostat doesn't heat to any great extent, but the light is weak. If I cut the resistance down I get a better light, but the coils get a bright cherry red. Could I get better light by connnecting the feed wire to both the binding post on the left of the adjustment lever and the outer binding post on the opposite side, connecting the arc with the inside binding post? Would this put the two divisions of the rheostat in multiple? If so, would the unequal number of coils on each side cause a greater amount of current to flow through the two-coil connection, eventually burning the coils. Could I get a better light by procuring another rheostat and connecting it and the one I have in multiple?"

The connection you propose would not work at all, Neighbor Williamson. Therefore, it is not necessary to take up space telling you why. The only thing for you to do is get another rheostat and connect it in multiple. I would suggest, however, that instead of another 25 ampere rheostat you get an 18 ampere rheostat, connecting it in multiple with the 25, which will give you an actual amperage of somewhere in the neighborhood of 33, since rheostats do not, as a rule, deliver their rated capacity after they have been used a short time.

OPERATORS TAKE NOTICE.—San Francisco is overrun with operators. I have already warned operators against piling into Frisco simply because conditions there are good. There are now in Frisco about three men to every job and, as President Woods says, about one operator gets off every train or out from underneath it. This is pure unadulterated foolishness. The union controls, absolutely, in San Francisco and naturally, while they are willing to do everything they can, they are not going to throw their own men out of jobs to furnish positions to strangers. Take this warning. Every job in Frisco is taken and there are now operators enough in that city to fill every job two or three times over. You cannot work in that city except by consent of the union, regardless of what you may offer to work for. Under these conditions, only a very, very foolish operator would head towards the "Golden Gate City."

Advice Wanted.—Texas (name of town suppressed) writes: "I will open an electrical theater in a park near this city about the first of April and would like to have a copy of your Handbook. I am not well posted in the business, though I hope to be, and my firends have got me rattled through a surplus of advice. One says buy one outfit, another insists that some other outfit is better and so it goes. Does it pay to have inductors, compensarcs and such things? I see many screens and others advertised. Which is best, cost not to exceed $25? My throw will be 65 feet, curtain 11 by 15, or 12 by 16, the house being 32 by 70. I wish you would kindly advise me, since by doing so I could make proper selection without giving offense to my friends."

Well, yours is rather a queer letter, Texas, and only a general answer can be given. As to machines, the only thing to do, if you cannot inspect each make, is to study the manufacturers' catalogues. See which is the best constructed; that is to say, which shows greatest mechanical excellence; which looks, taking all things into consideration, as if it would wear the best. Obviously I cannot recommend any make of machine. As to screens, I think you will hardly be able to get any of the patent screens for $25. If your appropriation for a screen is positively limited to that amount, I would suggest that you put up either a white plaster curtain or else use bleached bed-sheeting stretched perfectly tight. If you use sheeting make two curtains, putting up a clean one every two or three weeks and sending the dirty one to the laundry.

If the screen will be exposed to the weather you might use sheet metal, being careful to get the joints very smooth, painted with white lead, mixed 1/3 boiled linseed oil and 2/3 turpentine, to which just enough ultamarine blue should be aded to whiten it.

Union Wanted.—Superior, Neb., writes: "In the Tronble Department there is always something an operator can learn. I read it carefully every week. I have the Handbook and am here to say that it is a thing every operator should have. The prime reason of this letter, however, is that I wish to join some moving picture operators' union, but do not know where there is one I could get into. I can furnish best of references and have been in the business for four years, besides having run an electric plant for over a year. If you can tell me how to go about joining I shall be obliged."

I do not know exactly where Superior is, but presume the Moving Picture Operators' Union nearest to you would be Kansas City. I have the address of this union somewhere, but it is buried in a mass of letters from which it might require hours to dig it. I would suggest you send a special delivery letter addressing it to the president of the Kansas City Moving Picture Operators' Union, Labor Headquarters, Kansas City, Mo., which may or may not reach its destination. This is the best advice I am able to offer.

Mercury Arc Rectifyer.—Mr. N. H. Gibbons, Lawrence, Kan., sets forth his troubles as follows: "I have a new Powers No. 6 machine; our current is A. C., 60 cycle. I also have a mirror screen and am troubled with flicker when the machine is run at just the right speed, using a two-blade shutter. When using the three-blade shutter there is considerable 'flaring' of the light. On a calcimined curtain the flicker caused by the two-blade isn't so noticeable, but on an aluminum screen, and also on my new mirror screen, the flicker is quite marked. If a mercury arc rectifier were used would the pulsating current give it the same effect? I am endeavoring to put up a flickerless picture and as the rectifier is said to be practical and costs less than a generating outfit, I would like to hear from you on the above question."

It is a fact, Neighbor Gibbons, that all two-wing shutters have a more or less objectionable "flicker" when projecting on a mirror screen. It is also a fact that all three-wing shutters will, at certain speeds, get into synchronism with one side of the alternations, thus producing the "flaring" of which you complain. The mercury arc rectifier will obviate all of this difficulty, since it changes the alternating into direct, and you can then use your three-wing shutter, producing a flickerless picture on the mirror screen. The rectifier is beyond question a practicable machine. Its utility has been demonstrated and it is giving universal satisfaction wherever used.

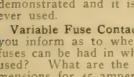
Variable Fuse Contacts.—Boise City, Idaho, writes: "Will you inform as to whether or no fuse blocks for cartridge fuses can be had in which fuses for various voltage may be used? What are the Underwriters' requirements as to dimensions for 45 ampere cartridge fuses?"



As to your first query, Boise, such an appliance may be had as is shown by sketch. It is not, however, approved. As to the dimensions, the 45-ampere 110-volt fuse must have the following: Length over all, 3 inches; diameter of paper barrel, ½ inch; diameter of brass end-pieces (contacts), 13-16 of an inch; length of brass end-pieces (contacts), ⅝ of an inch.

Letters to the Editor

Jackson, Mich., Feb. 25, 1911.

Editor, Moving Picture World:

I would like to write a few lines concerning some of the posters manufactured now that do an injustice to the picture they represent. I do not say all for there are some that are taken from the scenes proper and are business getters, but there seems to be a good many excellent pictures coming out lately with posters representing actually the poorest scenes, such as death scenes, etc., which I find to be very poor drawing cards. I find a poster of such a scene or title to the same effect does not fascinate the passerby but turns away a good many when there is really an excellent show inside. I think there is a good chance for perfection in poster manufacturing. I have been in the picture business for a number of years, and for the past two years an exhibitor of Jackson, using posters since they came into vogue, and I think this matter of poorly represented pictures should be taken care of for the welfare of the exhibitor. When we are helped to progress so is the manufacturer. Yours respectfully, L. H. GARDNER.

DETROIT LIGHTING PLANT MAKING GOOD.

Beeville, Tex., February 14, 1911.

Editors, Moving Picture World:

I just read Washington's inquiry concerning light plants and wish to say: I purchased from the Detroit Engine Works a three horse-power engine and 60-volt, 30-ampere dynamo; have been using same for three or four weeks. I have given it all the hard service and long runs possible, and can say during my continuous service of the past six years with all kinds of electrical and engine equipments, this is the best of them all. Engine regulation as perfect as any steam engine I ever handled. It simply is a marvel. Dynamos never heat. The little outfit has never given me a moment's trouble. Simply start it and run two or three shows with no attention. I throw a 10 x 12 picture 48 feet. I use the shows on five gallons of gasoline, a little less than 10 cents per show. As to shock to engine generator, it has never affected either. A practical idea on any kind of equipment would be to use a hand controlled rheostat or place a couple of switches under the base of machine and cut out coils by twos until you get proper amperes. House lighting I have not tried. Will give it a test in a few days and let you know the results. I intend to illuminate the house when are to off; with arc on don't need house light. Yours respectfully, R. S. COLEMAN.

Manager Vendom Theater, Beeville, Tex.

EXHIBITORS, TAKE NOTICE!

There is an operator traveling around by the name of Frank Maisch who has a Boston and New York license, who has worked for me. Upon his pretext of being broke I advanced him $12.00 for a railroad ticket, and then to let him pay his room and board I advanced him a week's salary. Not liking the town (as he says) he worked to leave at once after securing his salary, which I agreed to allow him to do, providing he would return the portion of salary he had not worked out. Not being content with that, after the show Saturday night he deliberately loosened every screw on the machine and lamps he even took down as he is took the key to the operating booth with him, leaving (to be thought) the place broke down for Sunday matinee.

If Mr. Maisch will communicate with the undersigned he may have the pleasure of getting another free trip to Rock Springs, Wyo. It is a strange thing that an operator who is HONEST has not enough money to pay his railroad fare to a job nor his board and room when he gets there, can pay $32.00 for a railroad ticket three days later, to get away.

A little free advertising like this may help get such lazy, good-for-nothing men as this out of the way of worthy men.

For further information apply to, yours truly,

NATHAN OFFER.

"NOTHING BUT TRUST PICTURES."

To the Editor, Moving Picture World, Sir: I clip the following from your "esteemed contemporary" "The Film Index" of February 25th:

PICTURES AT GRAND OPERA HOUSE.

"The Grand Opera House, Carterville, Ga., opened Monday night, February 6th, with moving pictures, which will run every night except when a show is in the city. Manager McLendon will run nothing but trust pictures, such as the Biograph, Vitagraph, Selig, Lubin, Pathe Freres and others.

"Is it really the case then, that the various companies named are, after all, merely members of a 'trust'? I thought they were members of an Association of Manufacturers.

Yours, etc

Exhibitor.

[Of course there is no such thing as a "trust" in the moving picture business. According to Mr. Hoff there is only a "dominant interest." (sic.) The Independent Manufacturers represent, we assume, the sub-dominant interests. But—"trust!" Perish the thought! Ed. M. P. W.]

"THE TALKING PICTURE."

Editor Moving Picture World:

Just a few lines from the man who has entertained the greatest amount of people with talking pictures, as you will remember the personal conversation we had, which must be more than a year ago, and I have been keeping at it for the Gaumont Company, with always the same result—making a great hit with the Chronophone, and the cause has always been a financial success from the manager's box-office point of view. I have been up here in Canada since last November and exhibited the Chronophone (talking pictures) sometimes to between 30,000 and 35,000 people per week.

Unfortunately, I was taken sick three weeks ago, and that was the only thing that interrupted me in that work, and I wish you would report it in your pages, as I am unable to correspond, and am not able to do so to-day, as I am recovering gradually from a severe attack of pneumonia and pleurisy. Was it not for the fact that I am too weak I would have some quite interesting news to relate, which would be of interest to your readers, but I hope to be able to do so when I will be well again.

I am inducing, whenever I find some manager of a theater who is not subscribing to The Moving Picture World, to become a subscriber at once, and the last whom I so succeeded in getting was the manager of the Gem Theater here in Fredericton, N. B.

Inclosed you will find a newspaper clipping from Quebec, and if you can use same to any purpose I will be glad if you will do so, as the same are bona fide, and I can assure you are not written by the house manager, as the reporters of that city come to the Auditorium every week, as it is the biggest amusement place in Quebec and plays pictures and vaudeville, too. Let me tell you that while the talking pictures were there vaudeville fell into an insignificant small sphere, and they want them back as soon as they can get them.

I might also tell you the reason why the chronophone is meeting with such universal success is, that the company has made quite some improvements which insure greater reliability in operation, and the sound qualities of the machine are such that the ordinary direct diaphragm sound box has sufficient volume to fill a house holding 2,000 people and everybody anywhere in the house seems finding and hearing everything plainly. It is not necessary any more to resort to the unsteady one which always had a tendency to be at its worst when mostly needed, and as now that has it is very complicated to keep it in its proper condition.

In my next letter I will report to you a little more fully of climatic conditions which are so very much different to those in the United States that unfortunately will interest you.

Wishing your paper an everlasting success, which is fully merited, I remain, yours very truly,

C. E. HARTING.

Permanent address: Care the Gaumont Company, Ltd., of Canada, 69 St. Catherine Street West, Montreal, Canada.

AN INDIAN CRITICISM OF AN INDIAN PORTRAYAL.

Rochester, N. Y.

Editors, Moving Picture World:

I am a lover of Kalem products, but do you believe that five pioneers could drive away ten or twelve Indians with guns without the latter offering any resistance, and occasionally, dodging the butts of, their enemies' guns? Well! I don't—I think it quite improbable. I know the way of my people, and am sure they would resist. The picture I have in mind is "Robby and the Redskins." I have had several years of Indian life with my tribe in Colorado. Outside of this I find their portrayals of Indian life very accurate, and I doubt whether I have ever seen better acting than that of Elsie Joyce and another man who takes so many of their parts. Very truly yours, I. LEE.

SCARCITY OF EDUCATIONAL FILMS.

Editor, Moving Picture World:

Dear Sir: It is generally conceded by the church and State that the pictorial method of instruction is the most successful method of any ever introduced. Many boards of education in almost every State of the union are now introducing the moving picture, or life motion pictorial method, in schools. In parochial schools the management have likewise been convinced of the importance of introducing this superior method of instruction. The only serious objection raised against this popular demand for instruction, in all schools and churches, as a means of educational, as well as religious instruction, is that film manufacturers do not respond to the demand made by the public for a larger percentage of educational subjects adapted for such purposes.

Surely no board of education would be justified in presenting many of the subjects now being manufactured and placed on the general market for school or church instruction. The important question is, how shall this difficulty be overcome? There is a demand by the baser element for subjects which are brutal and most demoralizing in appearance and most degrading in effect. Subjects such as depict bank robberies, train robberies, human brutalities, bull and dog fights, duels and innumerable kindred subjects are unfit for public, or even private use. The question naturally arises in the minds of the film manufacturers as to which class they can best afford to cater to.

The writer is quite convinced that it will be greatly to the benefit of all manufacturers to end their catering to the lower element, and to supply the demand of the large majority of those whose object and ambition in life is to educate and elevate humanity rather than to degrade and destroy. The writer is convinced that whatever disrepute into which moving pictures may have been brought is by such improper subjects as have been placed on the market for the last ten years. They have destroyed perhaps half of the demand which otherwise would have been the result. The proper make and sale of subjects for which there is such a popular demand would more than regain the decrease of 50 per cent. caused by the manufacturing of demoralizing subjects.

The writer makes a specialty of furnishing the Passion Play and Life of Our Saviour, together with many other educational subjects, including the Life of Moses, lecturing with the same in churches, schools and moving picture houses, and is daily confronted with the following statement: "We are fully convinced, as never before, that the pictorial method of instruction surpasses all others, and that this method should everywhere be introduced in churches and schools; but the trouble is, we cannot obtain a sufficient number of fit subjects to put on." They say that, barring the Passion Play, Life of Moses and a few others for churches, we are at our wits' end. How, then, shall we introduce this method of instruction in all schools of the entire country, when only a few subjects adapted for school use are manufactured. Respectfully,

S. C. FREED.

46 East 14th Street, N. Y.

WHAT DO THEY WANT—FIRST RUN?

San Francisco, Cal., February 3, 1911.

Editors, The Moving Picture World:

Dear Sirs.—Please allow me space in your esteemed paper to answer some of the absurd statements that J. J. Robinson has written in his "Letter from the Philippines," where he criticises American film exchanges for untrustworthy business methods. Perhaps he is not aware that when Philippine exhibitors come or send to the States for film that the most they will pay in rentals, and even to buy, is $12.50 to $15 per reel, and to be out three months and over—that is, one month to go, one month to be used in Manila, and one month returning—and then some to get through the customs, the exchange to pay expenses one way, out of that price, as well as packing, bills of lading, certificates of origin, which all takes time and labor. There are several exchanges here as well as one I know of in Chicago that are sending film to the islands by every steamer, and not one of them has been paid a price that would pay them to send anything but junk. I will refrain from names, but will take one exhibitor in Manila. Nearly two years ago he came here to rent film, to be sent to his brother there, he to remain here, and the most he wanted to pay was $12.50. After the reels were there he wanted to keep them over the stipulated time, and was quoted a price—a very cheap one. This firm kept sending every month as they were ordered, and the rentals were not kept paid up, nor the reels returned. When the amount got near the $1,000 mark the firm asked to have the amount settled, and finally was compelled to tell the party unless the bill for over-rentals was paid they could not send any more reels. However, the party went to another exchange (trust, by the way), and they are sending the reels. This same party has not returned the film nor paid the over-rentals. Consequently, the firm sending the reels will have to resort to the law to get what belongs to them. Now tell me, how can the Manila exhibitors expect brand new film to be sent to them?

Why don't they do as the exchange man does here? PAY for the reels and get them in good condition. I am sure the manufacturer, will sell the new film in Manila as well as any other place, provided he gets the money.

I think if J. J. Robinson was to turn his pen at the ones that are responsible for the class of film that is going into Manila and get them to pay the price for it he would not have any cause to write to the Moving Picture World, or any other paper here, as I am told the same parties that get the film from here to send to Manila, get about seven times for it as what they pay here. I am sure if the exchanges here could do that they would all be manufacturers in a little while.

Of course, these films were made years ago—what you could rent here for, say $12.50 for three months—junk and film that is without title and without ending. I wonder what they would do if they paid the price they do in the States for first-class film. At least, they would not be without endings; but I have been in theaters here that are getting first run pictures and they had rainy pictures as well as some without titles and endings.

I am afraid your correspondent does not read all the moving picture papers or he would see that Manila is not the only place where they run JUNK. There are two sides to every story, and this is the other to his. E. J. C.

POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH MAKING GOOD.

Springfield, Mass., Jan. 27, 1911.

Nicholas Power Co., New York.

Gentlemen: I received your two No. 6 Cameragraphs in good condition. This latest machine is certainly a marvel in every detail of technical ingenuity, strength, smoothness of operation and mechanical construction.

In combination with the Herbst Process "Full-Light" and "Mellowstone" pictures, as exhibited exclusively in this city at the Nelson Theater, your No. 6 machines are producing marvelous results and a picture not only absolutely free from flicker but so steady that it appears like a photograph framed upon the wall.

Yours very truly,

CHAS. E. SCHNEIDER,

LONG LIFE RECTIFIER TUBE.

The serviceability of the mercury arc rectifiers now being extensively used for changing alternating current into direct current, for use in moving picture lamps, largely depends upon the length of life of the rectifier tubes. Mr. Sweeney, chief operator of the Photo Play House, Market Street, San Francisco, Cal., reports an example which is of interest to managers of motion picture theaters. He has been using a mercury arc rectifier for nearly a year, running it thirteen hours a day, beginning at 10 o'clock every morning. Up to the last report the rectifier tube has been operated for 4,200 hours without showing any deterioration in the quality of the service. Mr. Sweeney hopes to break the record with this tube and does not expect to use the extra tube he received with the apparatus, for some time to come.

CONEY ISLAND WAKING UP.

The old Imperial Theater at Coney Island is being transformed into an up-to-date moving picture theater by Mr. Henry Connors. The mechanical department will be furnished by J. H. Hallberg and will consist of one Motiograph and one Powers Cameragraph No. 6 with double dissolver attachment. A specially built direct current economizer will take care of the current.

George Halsted has opened a theater in Oswego, N. Y., which is equipped by Mr. Hallberg with Powers No. 6, and a Hallberg economizer.

IT DRAWS THE CROWD
Music is What You Want
See this midget, yet powerful folding organ, adaptable to any occasion, sweet, rich and full tone. Built strong and durable. It is a big helper.
Send for full description.
BILHORN BROS.
152 Lake St., Chicago, Ill.

LEADERS for Sale, perfect condition, in original package rolls of about 150 feet. Will be shipped C. O. D. subject to examination at the following prices: 1,000 ft. $18; 5,000 ft. $16; 10,000 ft. $14, per 1,000. Send for samples.
PERFECT LEADER COMPANY
Rochester, N. Y.

At Last

it is possible to secure comfortable, even illumination throughout a theatre without a brilliant light in range of vision.

¶ The Eye Comfort System of Indirect Illumination is a notable success in the lighting of Moving Picture Houses.

¶ Theatres in all sections of the country installing this inexpensive and very desirable electric lighting system.

¶ You are undoubtedly interested in this important matter.

¶ Write us for full information. Our engineering department on receipt of particulars, will furnish free of expense, report and recommendations.

Sold by Electrical Trade Generally
WRITE TODAY
National X-Ray Reflector Co.
227 Jackson Boulevard
CHICAGO, ILL.

Holiday MATINEE To-Day

MAKE YOUR LOBBY BRIGHT AND ATTRACTIVE BY USING

PAYNE'S SHOW CARDS
Write for circular
PAYNE SHOW CARD CO.
17 Dwight St. Springfield, Mass.

THE KLEINE

Carbon Holder

APPROVED MARCH 1st, 1911
By the Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity of New York City Manufactured by
C. B. KLEINE
19 East 21st Street New York

Important to Exhibitors and Operators

Can you afford to ruin that new machine for which you paid a good price, by using cheap oils? Take no chances and oil your machine with

ONE DROP OIL

One Drop Oil is scientifically compounded and has a heavy rich lubricating body, is fire proof, will not burn, smoke or smell.

Ask your Exchange for One Drop Oil and Bull Dog Cement

If you want to make patches that will never come apart

Use BULL DOG FILM CEMENT
Sticks any kind of films

To introduce our goods to exhibitors we make the following offer, good only. Agent sells a one Bottles Ohio Drop Oil ... 1 pounds ... Bottles Bull Dog Cement 1 ... Bottle

THE ONE DROP OIL CO.
620 Jackson Boul. Chicago, Ill.

TO EXCHANGES

We furnish Bull Dog Film Cement in addition to inflammable and N. I. films.

SPECIALTY:
Prompt Shipments

Opera Chairs

The Wisconsin Lumber and Veneer Co.
Port Washington, Wis.

Managers & Operators

Make your own Film Cement for 5c. per oz. You can buy the ingredients at any drug store. Works equally well on inflammable and non-inflammable Film and has stood the test for two years. Guaranteed or money refunded. Formula, complete instructions, sent for one dollar, check or money order. Satisfy you.

I also manufacture the best and simplest Stereopticon Dissolving Shutter in the country, fits any lamp and lens.

Ready for shipment for only six dollars ($6.00). A bargain. Send for one at once.

JOHN F. METH,
509 E. Washington St., Springfield, Ill.

CALCIUM GAS

Compressed in drums ready for operation for Moving Picture Shows where electricity cannot be had. Absolutely pure gas. Prompt shipments, freight or express.

WRITE FOR OUR TERMS

Complete stock of repair parts for machines and supplies.

Erker Bros. Optical Co.
604 Olive St., St. Louis, Mo.

St. Patrick's Day SOUVENIRS

No. 1 Metal Shamrock, long pin ... $ .75
No. 2 Silk Rose Shamrock, Fancy Gilt Harp.. 1.50
No. 3 Silk Bow Shamrock, Gilt Harp Pin, fancy 2.00
No. 4 Satin Ribbon Rosettes, 3 Colored Buttons. 5.00
No. 5 Shamrock, Red Rose Center and Pin.. 1.15
No. 7 Large Fancy Silk Bow and Rosettes Pin 3.00
No. 11 Orchid Bisque Rose Shamrock Spun Silk 2.00
Celluloid Button & Green Hat And One Sheet Kelly ... 2.00
No. 21 Button and Streamers ... 5.00
Buttonhole Irish Flags, gross lots only ... 1.25
Large Catalogue FREE Sample Box $1.00
No goods C. O. D. Money order must be in full.

NEWMAN MFG. CO., Cleveland, Ohio

MR. OPERATOR

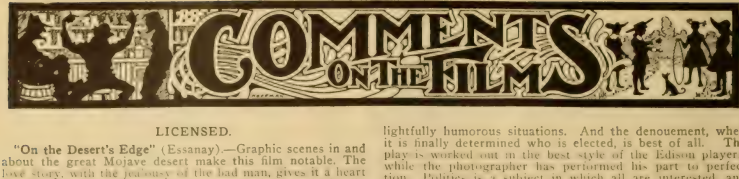
You Want to Make Some Extra Money

SO DO I

Write Me for Particulars at Once

Give me your exact voltage, cycles, make of machine, length of throw, size of picture and make of rectifier. If you have a current saver state make. I will do the rest. Address Department W.

J. H. HALLBERG
36 East 23d Street New York City



LICENSED.

"On the Desert's Edge" (Essanay).—Graphic scenes in and about the great Mojave desert make this film notable. The love story, with the jealousy of the bad man, gives it a heart touch which helps in the attraction, but it is undoubtedly true that the principal interest is in the desert scenes. The actors perform their parts well and the photography is excellent.

"The Tramp's Find" (Gaumont).—A pleasant story of a tramp who found a lost article and arranged it so two waifs received the reward. The story seems improbable, but is not unpleasant. In fact, there is always something interesting about seeing children relieved of their distress. This picture performs that to good advantage, and is, therefore, attractive.

"Forbidden Cigarettes" (Gaumont).—A humorous story, telling what two boys got for smoking cigarettes. The last scene, showing the father administering just punishment, will arouse unpleasant memories of similar experiences in the past.

"Jealousy Foiled" (Pathe).—A love tale which also involves a bank robbery and imprisonment for the crime. The complications which follow are almost reproductions of the original crime, and are acted with much sympathy and discretion. The heart interest is well developed, and the way the villain is ultimately foiled serves to make a thrilling denouement.

"Mammy's Ghost" (Vitagraph). A war story based upon the way a colored mammy drove away the Union soldiers seeking her master. Her strategem of working upon their superstitious fears while they were under the influence of drink worked admirably and accomplished her purpose.

"The Writing on the Blotter" (Edison).—A story of clever detective work by a woman whose husband was falsely imprisoned for a crime he did not commit. The story is clearly told and there is a convincing quality to the work of the actors. The wife of the wrongly accused man does some clever work in bringing the real criminals to justice and wins the applause of the audience.

"Mexican Filibusters" (Kalem).—A picture representing scenes in the late Mexican uprising. It is built around an attempt to run arms and other contraband across the border. Love and jealousy fill an important part in the play. The heroine, to help the man she loves, undertakes a very perilous bit of work in uncoupling the car containing the contraband and getting it across the border. The picture is somewhat melo-dramatic, but, nevertheless, holds the attention of the audience. It attracts more than ordinary attention because it depicts possible scenes in a disturbance actually in progress.

"Satan Defeated" (Pathe).—A picture with something of the flavor of Faust in that it tells the story of a man whose soul Satan wanted. It is worked out with care, and the man does not succumb to the temptation. At last he holds up the crucifix and Satan disappears forever.

"Around Constantin, Algeria" (Pathe).—An interesting scenes of a city founded by Constantine the Great, and still retaining much of its Moorish splendor. The viewpoints were chosen with excellent discretion, and the mechanical work was done better than with some of this class of pictures. It is a good addition to the list of travelogues which the Pathes have on their shelves.

"Bertha's Mission" (Vitagraph).—A humorous story dealing with the adventures of a society girl who thought she was chosen to reform the world. Her experience in making the attempt is, perhaps, a bit more strenuous than the average worker, but there is considerable truth in it, nevertheless. It emphasizes the fact that often these society workers fail utterly to get the viewpoint of the people they expect, and want, to help. This girl faithfully reproduces a type which has attempted much and has often failed in accomplishing what they undertook because of misunderstanding of the position of the party they expected to assist.

"The Rival Candidates" (Edison).—A comedy drama illustrating the possibilities of politics when women take a hand. The fun in this arises from the fact that a husband and wife are nominated for mayor upon opposing tickets. The exigencies of the canvas allow opportunity for some delightfully humorous situations. And the denouement, when it is finally determined who is elected, is best of all. The play is worked out in the best style of the Edison players, while the photographer has performed his part to perfection. Politics is a subject in which all are interested, and the theme of this picture insures a cordial reception for it everywhere.

"Sailor Jack's Reformation" (Kalem).—A photoplay with a moral purpose. It tells graphically the story of a sailor's wedding, his desertion of his wife through the influence of unreasoning jealousy, and his return to his senses. The acting is in harmony with the subject. The story is simple and directly told, while the accessories are illustrative of the subject.

"Oh, You Clubman!" (Pathe).— humorous skit detailing the story of a clubman who insisted upon leaving his wife alone evenings, and how she cured him of the habit. A supposed burglar gave him an awful shock, but it was sufficiently powerful to make him change his ways.

"Comrades" (Urban).—A picture detailing some of the horros of war. It is scarcely necessary to describe it. The subject is too disagreeable to be made more of than is necessary. Undoubtedly these grewsome occurrences are common in war, but why inflict reproductions of them upon motion picture audiences who want most of all to be amused? If the film has some moral purpose such representations are permissible; but for amusement alone few would select such scenes. The peace propaganda might profitably employ such pictures. They seem to have little use otherwise.

"Beauties of San Souci" (Urban).—Glimpses in one of the most famous and beautiful of the European parks. The photography is as good as Urban usually puts out in his outdoor pictures, and the selections of the viewpoints were made by an artist.

"The Heart of a Savage" (Biograph).—A story based upon the oft-repeated declaration that an Indian always fulfils his moral obligations, particularly those which are influenced by gratitude. In doing this, the Indian here represented gives his life. The picture of the uprising, the attempted warning and the misunderstood action of the Indian, ending with his tragic death, are events in a good Indian tale. The characterization seems to be good and there is a naturalness about the entire picture which appeals to an audience because it depicts what seems to be true human emotions.

"Father's Birthday Ring" (Lubin).—A comedy representing some of the interesting complications which arose through father losing his ring. He really pulled it off with his glove, but he thought the stenographer took it, because of her peculiar actions when he entered the office. That was for another reason, which developed later and supplies the heart interest in the picture. The story is well told, and there is much humor concealed about it, some of which escapes.

"Woman's Curiosity" (Lubin).—A comedy of the slapstock order, which is based upon the fact that a woman wanted to know what was in a lost letter. After all sorts of disturbances she discovers that it is only a gas bill.

"The Outbreak" (Selig).—An Indian picture developed in Selig's best style. It represents an Indian uprising and bears the marks of being correct. Like Selig's ranch and Western pictures, it has the atmosphere of reality and the characters perform their parts as they might be expected to perform them in real life. The picture is rather sanguinary, but maybe an occasional one like this will not be amiss. The scenic effects are natural and the photography has been cared for by a master.

"Love and the Stock Market" (Edison).—A story of the fashionable part of New York in conjunction with the Wall Street stock market. It concerns the love affairs of a woman and two men, both of whom wanted her. The young man could not have won in any other game than that directed by Cupid, but in his winning, his sweetheart taught him a lesson in stock deals which prevented his continuing in the business. The story is clearly told, there is a close connection between the scenes, which carry the spectator along logically, and when at the end the young man wins, the audience does not hesitate to express its satisfaction. Staging and acting are both good, while the photographer has performed his part with ability.

"The Little Drudge" (Essanay).—A domestic story representing the ill temper of a sister-in-law and her abuse of an unfortunate motherless girl. But eventually her perfidy is dissolved and the little girl is restored to her place in her brother's affections.

"The Barber's Daughter" (Gaumont).—A comedy purporting to represent the result of a wager that a young man would kiss a certain girl. It is hard to understand how a firm of such high standing would waste good material in preparing a film of this character. If it is funny at all, it descends of silliness, and that is never desirable in a motion picture. Good comedies are always desirable, but films of silliness like this have no place in the programmes of to-day.

"An Ambitious Bootblack" (Gaumont).—Purporting to be a comedy showing how a young man obtained work, namely, by blacking his face. The fun is supposed to appear when the black begins to run and it is discovered what the fellow has done. The audience didn't seem to consider it as especially funny.

"The Wild Cat Well" (Vitagraph).—The story of a clever villain who was foiled in his nefarious schemes and finally brought to justice. The principal interest in the picture lies in the settings, since the story is woven around an oil well and the scenes are laid in the oil fields.

"Hypnotizing a Hypnotist" (American).—A funny film which shows how a hypnotist was badly beaten by an old maid. The picture is funny and creates a good deal of sport before it is finished. The character of the old maid is admirably done, while the hypnotist will keep the audience in good humor throughout. The photography has been well done. Only slight under-exposure appears in one or two places. The setting is in harmony with the subject.

"Memories" (American).—A short film presenting a novel subject in a satisfactory manner. The actors interpret their parts with sympathy and the picture holds the interest of the audience without trouble.

"Tracked" (Imp).—A Cuban subject, whose interest is heightened by the admirable reproductions of tropical scenery. It is a story of villainy, which involves the apparent perfidy of a wife. While the tale unfolds with considerable claims to dramatic force in telling, the fact that the husband condemned the wife without a hearing goes unlike what actually occurs in real life. In isolated instances this might be true, but in a majority of cases the husband would at least hear the story without condemning first. The story is a bit mixed in places, but otherwise it moves forward without interruption. Photography is good and the actors perform their parts with credit.

"Angel of the Bowery" (Yankee).—A story of a Salvation Army lassie which begins unpleasantly, depicting the difficulties of a drunkard's daughter, but it ends with the girl and her lover united on the Bowery, where she has become a Salvation Army worker and he has fallen under the influence of drink. There is a wedding at the barracks. Perhaps this tells the story plainly enough. Those unfamiliar with such surroundings will acquire a reasonably accurate idea of the Bowery and some of its dives as it used to be. Such resorts have almost wholly disappeared these later years, but they have not lost their interest, and this picture will be a factor in showing them to persons outside of New York as they exist.

"A Decree of Destiny" (Biograph).—A love story woven around two girls and a man, and told with admirable clearness and pathos. One sister vows to devote her life to the church if the man recovers from a severe illness, fulfills her vow. The principal point of interest is the reproduction of the ceremony when a novitiate takes the vows. The scene here represented is authentic in every detail. Many will question the advisibility of placing it on the screen for the curious to see and criticize. It is considered by such persons too sacred for public presentation.

"Vanity and Its Cure" (Lubin).—An interesting domestic story of how a young wife was cured of extravagant habits through the assistance of her mother. It has no dramatic interest, but tells a homely tale in clearly understood scenes.

"Max Embarrassed" (Pathé).—Max has his troubles with two girls, but when they roll him down a mountain into a stream and out to sea in a barrel, he loses no time in conveying information to them that he is well rid of both.

"After the Boxing Bout" (Pathé).—A short film giving an illustration of what happened after the boxing bout was over. It is short and lively, which is its principal merit.

"The little Shepardess" (Selig).—A love story beginning with a girl tending sheep in Italy and ending with her wedding to her lover in America, after a jealous rival has attempted to separate them. There is little opportunity for dramatic work, but the story is clearly told and the end is present, both important considerations in holding the attention of the audience.

INDEPENDENT.

"A Western Girl's Choice" (Champion).—A lively Western comedy, having for its subject the difference between a Western man and an Eastern man, in a matter where bravery was required. The girl forgot her rough sweetheart for a time, but later learned the difference between the men and accepted the one with the noblest qualities, regardless of the money involved. It is a simple tale, clearly told, and abounding with those touches of human nature which make it interesting.

"The Professor's Romance" (Nestor).—Sometimes the man of books breaks away from his environment and attempts to make love. The professor did in this instance, but eventually he woke up. The telling of the story is well done and involves numerous little human touches that add to its interest and reveal the fact that those who represent the characters are human, too. The staging and photography are both of the quality that characterize Nestor films.

"Tweedledum—Aviator" (Ambrosio). — He succeeded in rising, all right, but he descended much too suddenly for comfort. The telling of the story of his mishaps forms an interesting story. There is much of humor in it, too.

"Escort of the Viceroy of Caucasus" (Ambrosio).—An interesting film showing the manoeuvres of a band of Cossacks, with their wonderful riding and their marvelous evolutions on horseback. The photography has been well done, excepting in one or two particulars, where the lenses were permitted to come too near the camera and too straight toward it. The background is quite in keeping with the subject and the entire picture is of the sort that will appeal to those who are interested in the curious life of some distant country.

"Tangled Lines" (Reliance).—The story of a Gypsy girl befriended by a young man who afterward marries her, and she deserts him when he is blinded by an explosion and she has gained triumphs in music. Too late remorse affects her and she returns only to find him dead of a broken heart. The picture closes with her sobbing at his feet. This is an intensely emotional picture, developing several interesting phases in character which are admirably reproduced. The part taken by Miss Marion Leonard gives her opportunity to display to advantage her emotional acting, always of a high order and never better than in this film. Indeed, it would be hard to suggest any improvement in this direction. While Miss Leonard's part is the principal one, the others do well and are careful in their work. In fact, it is hard to conceive of any improvement in the acting. The photography is not quite clear in some of the scenes, or, to be more accurate, in the parts of some scenes, but this is due to under-exposure, probably, and maybe might be remedied in the printing. It is not sufficient to cause any serious distraction, but the film is so near perfection otherwise that it shows more prominently than it otherwise would. The picture is excellent of its type, and the producer is to be congratulated upon its success.

"Army Manoeuvers in Cuba" (Imp).—An excellently photographed picture of the Cuban army in review. The picture gives the audience a pleasant thrill as the well disciplined and well uniformed body of men go through their manoeuvres before the superior officers. The picture is taken amid tropical surroundings, which add to its attractiveness, and the operations of the troops is so excellent that the scenes bring applause.

"The Dynamiters" (Imp).—A comedy drama which tells how an industrious chilman was initiated into an Anarchist lodge and chosen to set off the bomb which was to wreck a factory. He turns the tables by sending a dog to place it at their door. The resulting explosion is an outcome of devastation in which Jenkins shares to some extent.

"College Chums" (American).—A well-worked out drama of college life, love and jealousy which cannot fail to interest because of its excellent acting and its clear photography. The picture has been well chosen in all its processes, and wins the regard of the audience from the first.

"Nobility" (Italia).—A painting which attracts more than ordinary attention because of its excellent mechanical work and the fine staging of the scenes. The painting as well features worth considering. The picture seemed to please the audience where the writer saw it.

"Home Sweet Home" (Powers).—A variation of the old story of elopement with a married man, though in this instance the girl is saved suicide. The tale has little of dramatic interest in it though perhaps, because it tells a domestic story, it will appeal to the average audience quite as strongly as would a drama. The interesting feature is received when the girl's lover takes her home and she is received with open arms by her family. It is a bit strange to see her disappear without as much as a greeting, still this may be done to emphasize the joy of the mother and sister to have the home again safe. The acting seems to be in harmony with the subject, but the photography is scarcely up to the standard.

"From the Valley of the Shadows" (Reliance).—A strong temperance drama acted by the stars of this company. Miss Leonard appears in either as a drunkard's wife and plays the part quite as successfully as she has played other emotional roles before. The drunkard is well acted, though there is a lack of vigor, perhaps, in some of the scenes where he is represented as being under the influence of drink. The wife's appeal to the saloonkeeper is a dramatic bit of work. He thinks of his own dead baby and induces the husband to go with him. There the scene worked out over the dead child's bier leaves scarcely a dry eye in the house. The pledge follows, and there is a reward in the smile of the poor wife when she hears of the change. The picture is meritorious and deserves the applause it receives. There is, however, room for improvement in the mechanical department.

"Toto and the Flag" (Itala).—A trick picture, representing the unfortunate Toto undergoing all sorts of troubles and creating many serious disturbances in his endeavors to hang out a flag. It is of a slapstick comedy order, and there is rather too much of the rough-house before it ends. The audience did not receive it very vociferously.

"Foolshead More Than Ever" (Itala).—The difference between this and other Foolshead pictures is the fact that Foolshead himself does more indescribable and altogether foolish things than he has in some of the others. It is about the same, with that exception, as many which have gone before.

"The Rival Servants" (Great Northern).—The story of a servant wrongfully accused of theft vindicated and the real thief brought to justice through the discovery of a servant elsewhere. The picture is not particularly dramatic, but the story has a human interest which will make it popular with any audience.

"Owanee's Great Love" (Bison).—An Indian story which contains a number of thrills that will appeal to the average audience as unusually good. The chief objection, if it is considered an objection, is that there is too much death in it. To kill both lovers and allow the girl to commit suicide is pushing it to the limit.

"Jack's Lucky Horseshoe" (Lux).—Not often does a horseshoe, however lucky it may be, have the beneficial effect shown in this comedy drama. Jack not only secures work after finding the shoe, but after a time he also secures a bride. The story is well told and the photography is clear and of good tonal values in most of the scenes.

"On Their Honeymoon" (Lux).—A new idea in honeymoons. The young people were heralded as wishing to commit suicide. Consequently, they were not alone for a minute. The effect of a combination of circumstances like this affords opportunity for a good deal of fun.

"Stage Struck" (Thanhouser).—What happened to a girl who got stage struck would not ordinarily interest an audience, but the little love story which is interwoven with this one saves the picture and makes it really interesting. The representation of the standard theatrical company is said by those who have been similarly situated to be extremely good.

"The Abduction of Parson Jones" (Yankee).—A roaring farce which has some elements of unusual interest. Whether it was an elopement or an abduction does not appear until almost the final scene. The working out is ingenious and holds the attention of the audience throughout.

"A Costly Pledge" (Solax).—John signed the pledge with a $500 dollar penalty attached. All went well until he fell from grace. Then his wife made him pay in full. The manner of the working out is interesting, and affords a full reel of fun. The subterfuge of the nurse and the sick man goes well for a time, but eventually the wife discovers the real difficulty and exacts the full amount.

"When Masons Meet" (Powers).—A humorous skit depicting what happened when two young men, to gain the hand of a woman, masquerade as Masons. The real Mason, already favored by the girl, speedily proves them imposters and walks away with the young lady. The peculiar signs they make supply considerable humor to real Masons.

"The Bandit's Surprise" (Powers).—A bandit starts out to capture a railroad president and succeeds only in getting a rather common-place individual. The aforesaid common-place individual gets a very desirable Western girl, however, and the bandit gets left.

"The Mummy" (Thanhouser).—A picture that is funny because of its novelty. To see a mummy walk out of a case as a beautiful Egyptian Princess is sufficiently unusual to create interest, and this interest is increased when, after the young man has spurned her love, she forces him into the case and he becomes a mummy. The love tale in it is well sustained, and when the professor marries the princess and Jack marries the professor's daughter, it is quite evident that the happiness of the future is destined to surpass that of the past.

FILM MANUFACTURERS.

FOR SALE—Equipped manufacturing plant within New York City limits, consisting of 3 printers, 2 perforators, drums and tanks and power equipment, all ready to start up; rent and electric light, $100 per month; will sell to quick cash buyer for $2,500 cash. Don't write unless you mean business. Address F. M. G., care of Moving Picture World.

Motion Picture Theatre Handbook
For
Managers and Operators
PRICE $1.50
POSTAGE PREPAID
Moving Picture World
125 East 23rd Street NEW YORK

SAVE MONEY
and use our Program Board
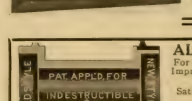
with Interchangeable Porcelain Letters
Make your own Program
You cannot afford to be without one.
Announcements quickly changed. Prices and full particulars on application.
Agents Wanted.
THE CAMBRIDGE TILE MFG. CO.
COVINGTON, KY.



ALL RECORDS BROKEN
For a clear, sharp and flickerless picture. Improved Star, Cam, Arbor and Sprocket $12.00
Satisfaction guaranteed. Testimonials furnished.
E. W. LAVEZZI
3042 N. Ashland Ave.! Chicago, Ill.

FILM EXHIBITORS
We have a Lubin 1908 complete machine, as good as new. We guarantee this to be in perfect running order and give satisfaction; equipped with both lenses; price $65, including magazines etc. Will refund money if not satisfactory; privilege of examination; $5 on account with order. We have all kinds of moving picture supplies. List for the asking ROYAL M. P. SUPPLY CO.
1346 Moore St. Philadelphia, Pa.

FILM TITLES 3 Ft. Lengths, 25c. | Announcements Made To your Order 8c. per ft.

[Printing, Developing, Etc., for the Trade

LOW RATES

NO ORDER Too Small Too Large GUNBY 199 3d Ave. New York

That Second and Third Reel Problem

Any exhibitor will accept a new reel of film, but how about a second and third reel? If your older reels are full of rain, what then? Our remedy cures films of that awful rainy habit.

Notify your customers that you are having your films renovated by

The New York Film Renovating Co.

(24 HOUR SERVICE)

12 Union Square, East New York

YANKEE FILMS

MONDAY, March 20,

"The Open Gate"

A story of land and sea

FRIDAY, MARCH 24,

"Love's Ebb and Flood"

How an abused wife finds the Harbor of Love

YANKEE FILM CO.

344 East 32d St. New York City

Floroda—The Perfumed Disinfectant

(5 years the standard)

1 gallon can, $1.45
5 gallon can, $1.40
10 gallon can, $1.20

F. O. B. New York

Also Manufacturers of National Chlorides—Odorless Disinfectant.
Floorine—Floor Oil.
Anti-Dust Sweeping Compound.
Cedol Pine Oil Disinfectant.
Eustrolene Coal Tar Disinfectant.
Eucalyptus and Pine Drip fluids for toilet use.
Lavender Liquid Soap

FLORODA MANUFACTURING CO.

103 MAIDEN LANE NEW YORK CITY

Telephone John 1729

GENRE MOTION SLIDES

St. Patrick's Day Special

Irish Motion Slide - - - - - - $1.25
Genre Motion Slide Carrier - - - - 1.50

EVERY Theatre will have to have a carrier sooner or later

GENRE TRANSPARENCY CO.

507 North Clark Street Chicago, Ill.

See What They Say About

SILVO KURTAIN KOAT

Pottsville, Pa., Dec. 8, '10.

Please ship C. O. D. one can of Kurtain Koat, as I have used the other can and found it to be the greatest thing I ever saw.

Kansas City, Mo., Dec. 17, '10.

We have examined Mr. ———'s curtain and have nothing but praise for the results in comparison to other curtains.

$6.00

and following directions will give you the same results as above. One can covers 350 square feet. Order from your exchange or C. O. D.

KURTAIN KOAT CO.

2109 W. LAKE STREET CHICAGO, ILL.

FOR YOUR SPRING TONIC

Use Our Supreme Song Slide Service

Relieves that feeling of depression when checking box office receipts. Positively makes you forget that you have competition. Yours for an exclusive service.

CHICAGO SONG SLIDE EXCHANGE

Sixth Floor, Portland Block

107 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

Dept. 1

PHONOGRAPH RECORDS FURNISHED

STORIES of the FILMS

URBAN.

REDEMPTION.—Conveying a moral in an interesting fashion, and somewhat for a very pretty setting, scenic and manner, setting in a beautiful garden, reserve a visit from grandmamma, who relies a present of a nice new doll for her little grand-daughter. The latter party is interrupted by a family man who brings with him a very small specimen of same. The young heroine the youngest and who can go, but can be, earning resentment nevertheless, takes the opportunity when the little girl ventures away to give her new doll a walk, to snatch from her the handsome toy. He finds a corner, sweeps and dismantles that the doll shows him the title of end-dress. Minds impressed, he takes the doll home again, and the little girl drins her tears.

THE THAMES FROM OXFORD TO RICHMOND.—Along the banks of the Upper Thames there is so much to charm the eye that the difficulty is to know what to include and what to omit. An excellent selection of the most characteristic scenes is given in this picture in less than one foot. Beginning with the principal sights of the University City of Oxford, we glide along the broad bosom of old Father Thames, lusting with delight the new beauties that meet our gaze at every bend. We call at Henley and Windsor, getting a magnificent view of the Castle from the river, and passing Hampton, disembark at Teddington before the city's smoke and grime come to mar our pleasure.

SELIG.

THE MAN FROM THE EAST.—Jack Manning is a young man, one year out of college. His father, recently died, leaving him a fortune. And as the father was a retired banker, Jack has nothing to keep him in New York with the exception of Elsie Dean, a rich banker's daughter. Jack is desperately in love with Elsie. He is a trained athlete—was captain of the football team at college. When he was seventeen years old his father took him to spend his vacation on a cattle ranch in the west. One of the cowboys took a liking to him and taught him how to ride and throw the lariat. So, at the first tiff with Elsie, Jack likes for the west—heralded as a tenderfoot, he is given a royal reception by the cowboys. Proving that a man's courage and daring can not always be judged from the clothes he wears. Elsie and her father visit the ranch, and leaves from Jack's self-commanding in a revival of their childhood love.

THE CODE OF HONOR.—The Code of Honor is a story concerning itself with the various forms of duelling current in Berlin, and is in a measure educational as well as pleasing in its dramatic sense.

All the details were carefully worked out and superintended by Lieutenant Wendt and Count Alberti, both of the German army, and great attention was paid to correctness of uniform as well as the prescribed forms of code. Uniforms in every case absolutely authentic.

A young nobleman whose eyes become strained through too close application to his books. Seated before one of the typical cafes that line Unter den Linden, he saves a young lady from insult at the hands of a military swaggerer, and purposely insults him by spilling wine upon him. Cards are exchanged and he calls upon his friend, Col. von Neuhoff, to act as his second. Von Neuhoff, in an effort to save his friend's life, endeavors to settle by slapping his face, and the Board of Adjudication in Affairs of Honor rules the duel the preference as his was the grosser insult.

PATHE.

MAX'S FEET ARE PINCHED.—Max is invited to the home of his sweetheart for dinner, and as he dresses he finds that his shoes are scarcely all that they should be, so he decides to invest in a new pair. Slipping out of the house in a pair of carpet slippers, he makes his way to the nearest shoe store, and after considerable time, gets a pair of shoes which the shoemaker assures him are a perfect fit. Although they are a trifle tight, Max decides to accept them and proceeds on his way. Every step brings its quota of pain, and finally to desperation Max takes off the shoe that hurts the worst and ambles along in his stocking feet. Arriving at his sweetheart's house, he slips his shoe on but suffers so much that it is necessary to take it off again. While at the dinner table, his sweetheart's pet dog runs off with it and Max is in a dilemma. Finally he fits a wine basket on his foot and gets along very favorably until the guests commence to dine. Just how Max accomplishes this stunt and how he regains possession of his shoe makes a most interesting film.

OH, YOU KIDS.—Willie and Tommy live in a little country place where the excitement which does so much to make up the life of the small boy is in large town is wanting. Consequently they have to dig up their own excitement, which they do most successfully. After harassing the cook, on a stifling hot day where the ground is covered with snow, until the poor domestic is wild with rage, they take their sleds and run if for the hill. At their way they manage to get a Chinaman and a Negro involved in a magnificent dispute, which ends on the public place. The arrival of the policeman spoil the boys at the same moment as the boys spot them and there follows a fine chase ending in the capture of the boys at the bottom of descent, however, is somewhat different, the Chinaman and the Negro, aided and the policeman going most of the way on their backs. The officers finally catch the boys by a clever ruse, in which a couple of enormous snowmen are used, and administer a well deserved spanking to both boys.

THE INVENTOR'S RIGHTS.—After years of labor, which has taxed his mental and his entire fortune in search of a discovery which, he believes, will be a great value to him, he culminates across the secret. Highly elated, he calls to him his wife and child, who, though in destitute circumstances, are happy in his good fortune. Hurrying to see the nearest manufacturer of any size, he offers his patent for sale, and being in desperate financial straits he accepts a mere trifle of what it is worth. Later, discovering how he has been duped, he attempts to take his life at the expense of his wife and is arrested and brought to trial. In a dramatic scene the whole story of his labor is brought out and vindication and happiness come to him rapidly.

THE SHERIFF'S DAUGHTER.—Ramirez, the bandit, falls in love with Lillian, the daughter of the Sheriff, though neither knows the identity of the other. Lillian then insists upon his calling at her home or discontinuing their clandestine meetings altogether. This Ramirez does, and while there sees a picture of the sheriff, whom he proves to be the sheriff. Realizing that the sheriff is on his trail for a deed of violence, he attempts to make his escape, but is surprised by Lillian and hides in a closet. A search leads to his discovery, but the daughter allows him to escape, after struggling with her father and he succeeds in getting out of the door but is badly wounded from the sheriff's revolver. Lillian finds and binds him wounded and alone, and disguising herself in his clothes starts out to find someone for help. She is seen by the sheriff and mistaken for Ramirez and shot. When the sheriff gets her home he is heartbroken and is willing to grant her anything. Lillian sends for Ramirez and in a most touching scene begs her father to let him go. The sheriff recognizes and frees Ramirez on the spot. The girl dies and the old sheriff, feeling that he has committed a crime to his country, lays down his authority and lets it fall upon the floor in abdication of all that he now has left to hold dear, his honor.

BIOGRAPH

WAS HE A COWARD?—Norris Hilton, a young novelist, is a successful author of western romances and leaves for a western ranch that is in need of funds. His refined clean-cut appearance rather amuses the ranch man and he is subjected to the spirit of a joke than anything else, but when introduced to the cantonments family he meets the pretty daughter and it is a case of love at first sight. This upsets the foreman who is sweet on the girl himself and he plainly shows by his manner on the tenderfoot hoping to drive him away or ridicule him before the girl. Hilton swallows all for the girl's sake, though naturally quick is the artless little ranch girl. As this has no effect the foreman, who is a coward at heart, endeavors with the effort to force him to fight, but personal combat is not his idea of bravery, and he refuses to fight. Finally the foreman goes to the extreme in his provocations. The girl, with her Western ideas, is awfully disappointed in him, and scorns him as a coward. This is elation for the foreman. However, there is the real kind of bravery and Hilton possesses that. A poor Indian is stricken with smallpox, and the gang would have thrown him into a ditch to die, had not Hilton come up and taken the poor fellow in his arms and carried him to a deserted shack, where he cares for him, bringing about a change for the step. Seeing the dead-line the gang has drawn and guarded. The next day the father of the girl is afflicted with the direst disease, and the boys are just as merciless with him as they were with the Indian—afraid to go near him—forcing him at the points of pitchforks and revolvers across the dead-line, where he is picked up and tenderly cared for by Hilton, who is now himself showing symptoms of the disease. Hilton, with the assistance of a doctor who has come from town, nurses the victims back to perfect health, but he has neglected himself in the care of them and, although cured is marked for life. The boys now realize what real bravery is and Hilton is regarded as the hero of the ranch. Of course, the girl has now no thought of scorn, she, despite his marked face, regards him as her hero.

COMRADES.—Our introduction to these gentlemen is while they are enjoying their sleep in the hay loft. The morning paper has fallen into the hands of Mack and an article in the paper's news interests him. It gives the intelligence that a member of Parliament is expected to be the guest of Mr. Franklin. Jack impersonates this gentleman and gets there first. Jack in his makeup has little difficulty in passing for the gentleman he is the M. P. and the Franklins his extreme in their efforts to entertain him, having a match with their daughter in view. Jack sees this and immediately makes up to the fair young lady. A splendid dinner is laid for the guest of honor. Fine wines, fine cigars, etc., fall to Jack, while poor Mack is allowed to play the part of Hannah in the farce. Mack's chagrin is becoming overwhelming and he loses control of his good nature when Jack is shown to his bedroom the same room as Mack's side. Mack revolts. So getting a ladder he climbs up to the window, and notwithstanding the objections offered by Jack he overtakes poodle Jack, however, denies him a place in the bed. At this moment the maid servant of the household arrives, and Mack hearing some one approaching sneaks under the bed. Jack is unceremoniously bounced before the maid, a chamber in the house, Mack waits until they have left the room before coming from the bed. He gets into the bed and decides to at least enjoy a peaceful night's sleep, while Jack is forced to pass the same time shivering below the window, clothed only as a high hat and suit of pajamas.

GAUMONT.

THE PRIVATEER'S TREASURE.—On the death of Daniel Hardy, Robert and Lillian, his son and daughter, face financial ruin, when a messenger arrives with the following:

"I, Thomas Wood, Privateer, declare that I called Daniel Hardy and sold his ship. I am stricken with remorse and hereby bequeath to his son and daughter the treasure buried by me in the Island of Loss.

"Read the document enclosed which will direct you to the spot.

"Thomas Wood, the Red Privateer."

Robert borrows money with which he equips a brig and sails in search of the treasure. During the voyage the captain, an adventurer, forms a plot to capture the riches.

The plot is foiled through the intervention of an honest sailor, who not only warns them of their danger, but aids them in the thrilling adventures which come in pursuance of his dishonest officer.

ROCKY CAVES OF FRANCE (Colored).—A scenic film of unusual photographic quality. It offers a few moment's visit to the Historic Grotto of Lanzon.

THE SWORD AND THE CROSS.—Albanus, the Prefect's son, meets and loves Fabiola, a beautiful Christian maiden. The Prefect would cheer Albanus, who seems ill and melancholy. The nobleman sends many entertainers to the youth. Albanus sees Fabiola and declares his love for her. She insists upon his becoming a Christian. Albanus becomes a Christian in order to win the fair girl. Fabiola, knowing the Potter also loves the Christian maiden and though an old man, declares his love. He rejected. Seeing his victory the Christians in order to avenge the attitude of Fabiola toward him. The cave in the hills, where the Christians are wont to hold their services. The last Hymn. The Roman soldiers, led by the betrayer Lysias, surround and capture the group of worshippers. Dungeon of the Amphitheatre. The prisoners, though maltreated, are cuffed to their beds. Fabiola's wedding. Fabiola dressed as the trial in which he is forced to condemn his own son. The Father's Forgiveness. The old man goes to the amphitheatre, where he finds his son has been crucified, as he had ordered.

EDISON.

LOVE AND THE STOCK MARKET.—There is a delightful heroine who is interested in a young chap whose one failing seems to be his passion for stock gambling. He knows exactly what he can afford. Another suitor of hers is a man of the world, of wealth almost equal to her own, and one whose worldly experience would naturally give him a pretty solid advantage over the boy in any game.

Early in the story we see the girl warn the boy against his propensity and try to elicit from him the promise to stop his operations with the stock market. A little later the older man sees an order which the young man has just made for the buying of some shares of a certain traction stock—S. Y. & B. He considers the time of putting the bee out of business.

The plan succeeds admirably and the boy is re-

THE PHILADELPHIA FILM EXCHANGE, 934 Arch St., Philadelphia
The largest Independent Exchange in the East. The house where you can get quality and a square deal. We buy the entire output of the Sales Company. A trial will convince you. Open day and night. Call, write or phone.
Baltimore Office 610 East Baltimore Street Baltimore, Md.

duced to the verge of desperation. Both men tell of their acquaintance and the girl decides to take a hand in the game herself, and going to her own broker instructs him to buy K. Y. & E. until the market turns and climbs up again. He does so, and of course the young man is thus rescued and the older one put to confusion.

And then, and besides is able to tell her young friend that his stock speculations were not so successful as he thought—in fact that he is indebted for his success entirely to her own handling of the matter for him, by which manipulation she has acquired the title of the "great bull," although her transactions have been carried on entirely through the broker and without anyone else knowing save the "great bull" was. In this way she cures the boy of his infatuation, and of course she cures the boy of his infatuation, and of course when the other man learns who the "great bull" was and how his plans have been defeated, the only thing left to him to do is to gracefully withdraw from the case, which he does.

A NIGHT OF TERROR.—Two young men from the East while on a little prospecting trip in the Rocky Mountains seek shelter for the night in the old log shack which answers the purpose of an inn on that rough-and-ready country. It is conducted by a rather three looking but harmless man and his mulatto wife. The tenderfoot are received and are given two banks in the attic which to also used as a store room for hams and dried meats, which on such unsatisfactory and under such unfavorable conditions seems almost impossible especially for the more timid one of the two who, person and apprehensive of danger, sets up all night.

At four o'clock in the morning the landlord and his wife arise and kill two chickens for breakfast. "Have we got them both?" is the question asked by the man, to which the wife replies in the affirmative. The tenderfoot in the dingy attic above, hearing this is nearly frightened out of his wits.

A few minutes later the landlord goes to the attic for ham. The trembling tenderfoot seeing this form looking individual with a huge carving knife coming up the attic ladder, jumps to the conclusion that his last moment on earth has come. He hastily scrambles into his bunk and, pulling the blankets over his head awaits the slaughter of himself and friend.

After carving off a slice of ham the landlord calmly stands out of the attic and shortly after serves his guests for breakfast. Still trembling with fear the tenderfoot go to the room below, where they are served with roasted chicken and ham. Around what were leftover for their special benefit. It was droll to see them that their fears were groundless and that the terrible fate, so under a severe mistake after—a night of terror.

THE OLD FAMILY BIBLE.—Mary Brash and Ray Agnew are engaged to be married. Just before leaving his home to attend a ball with Mary Ray discovers that he has forgotten to remove the valuable papers from his pocket and being in a hurry and not wishing to go back to his room, he hides the papers in the most available place—the old family Bible—and hurries out.

At the ball he becomes insanely jealous of Clem Hanna, who pays very attention to Mary, and he accuses her of showing partiality toward Clem in allowing him to put his name on her dance program. After a number of dances Ray and Mary again meet and explain the misunderstanding and all is right.

The next day a book agent calls at the Carroll home. He explains to the servant that he is selling Bibles and now plan—he will take the old family Bible as part payment for a new one. The servant, thinking this a remarkable bargain, hands the book to the book agent, who, seeing him coming, hands it to Mary.

During the afternoon while the agent arrives at Mary's room and explains his plan showing her the old Bible he has taken in exchange on the account Mary is anxious to secure the old Bible that it belongs to. Tom's family and he at once formulate a scheme to get the Bible back. Tom will strike a bargain with the agent for the sale of the old Bible and succeeds award her treasure.

As the matter has not yet been settled the valuable papers are all safe and one day the servant girl, thinking she was wonderfully clever, explains that she exchanged it for the old family Bible. Tom at once realizes that he has put one over on Mary and Ray and hurries to the house to see Mary. Mary is overjoyed at receiving the papers and Ray is overjoyed at getting his consent to marry Mary.

Tom has by now quite embarrassed at meeting Mary agrees for reasons unknown to explain his original visit and has made up his mind to say nothing to the papers were safe in such. They both realize in this moment that Ray should have been and their love meeting remained unchanged, they are happily brought together,—thanks to the old family Bible.

Ornamental Theatres

PLASTER RELIEF DECORATIONS

Theatres Designed Everywhere

Write for Illustrated Theatre Catalog. Send us Sizes of Theatre for Special Designs

The Decorators Supply Co.

2549 Archer Avenue :: CHICAGO, ILL.

ESSANAY.

THE FAITHFUL INDIAN.—Will Talbot, a miner, is severely injured in an explosion of dynamite on his claim and his life is saved through the aid of his faithful Indian servant. The Indian carries him to their shack and rides to town for the doctor. When the latter arrives he finds that Talbot has not only suffered severe fore burns, but seems to have also lost all knowledge of his identity, a species of insanity overcoming the result of a violent shock. The doctor and Talbot picking the bits of stone and powder from his patient's face. Going to his surprise he finds among the tiny particles a few grains of goldust. Talbot has made a strike! The scheming doctor plans to cheat the stricken miner out of his rich claim, but his inquiries from the Indian result in failure. Later the doctor returns with a following of town ruffians who endeavor to wring a confession from the Indian through torture. Incensed beyond by a cruel blow from the butt end of the doctor's revolver to rouse aid. His services restored. Single-handed he fights the baddies and after driving them into the cabin, fires the place, results in Talbot giving the faithful Indian a partnership in the valuable claim.

HANS MILLIONS.—Hans Schmidt starts up Jacob Schmidt's grocery and disbusiness in the changed because he use the groceries to make free to Hans. His sweetheart discovers. Hans has Hans left the house every Mrs. Schmidt sends in the prospect that Hans is a relative of rich spender the steel king of Essen, consumption lately deceased. Hans it is. Although is one of the heirs to the vast fortune. Inquiries follow. The faces of both the storekeeper and his wife fall their faces are long indeed. Hans finds the Spanish worried. Schmidt, incensed to see Hans took at any cost to his pride, goes to the young man's lodgings, and getting wise affectionately to the hack, drags him back to the store, where he is immediately married to Lena. It is not until then that he is apprised of his good fortune. As it is necessary for Hans to go to Germany to claim his share of the fortune Schmidt writes [illegible] and after Hans steamer tickets for Lena and himself. A few weeks after Mr. and Mrs. Schmidt receive the following note: "Dear Mr. and Mrs. Schmidt—Dear Mother and Father: The berths of Lena [illegible] most satisfied, owing to the [illegible] debts and the fact that we are only one out of [illegible] our share is only one dollar. With love, Lena and Hans."

VITAGRAPH.

THE WILD CAT WELL.—Frank Hunter is trying to win the affections of Jessie Farnsworth, but to no avail. Jessie's father and Frank Farnsworth, a local business man, who was owned considerable property and [illegible] Jessie's hand. Frank agrees to invest it. Following Farmer Farnsworth [illegible] Hunter's machinations, and finds to [illegible] property [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] sickens and he doesn't a second pass at pants and finds it impossible to wrestle a pair. He thinks up the idea of having the legs of his trousers sent to his dressmaker, pants on his fresh event and looks at Page.

He goes to the church, is married but during the wedding feast, at the home of his bride, the bridegroom in his costume is discovered, and he goes on the wedding with his bride to his fathers-in-law and the guests. He escapes from the scene dressed in his wife's picture, to whom he explains the situation on his disconsolate. Mrs. Gold promises some time a pair of trousers, enabling him to remove to his wife and to continue the festivities with his friends and guests.

RED EAGLE.—Ditto, an Indian princess discovers a red eagle and tells her father and Brave Heart, her lover. The latter tells her that the one who kills the red eagle shall marry his daughter.

Jim Smith, a half breed, admires Minn. She despises him and he tries to overpower her.

Brave Heart, taking his bow and arrow, shoots one to kill the bird. He sees it perched on a cliff, shoots the arrow and the bird falls dead, thereby breaking the baleful charm. The young brave succeeds with the dead eagle to the wigwam of Minn's father and claims the princess as his wife.

A week after their marriage, they are living in their own wigwam, when again appears the dead eagle's mate. Jim Smith follows the girl to her own home and while she is engaged in laughing, he takes off his coat, throws it over the eagle and tears her struggling away. Making his way to the edge of a cliff, he climbs up the jagged side with Outta, tied hands and feet, in his arms, making a most perilous descent, until he reaches a projecting ledge and lays the unconscious princess down.

Brave Heart kills the red eagle's mate and as it falls down the cliff it passes Smith, who startled, loses his balance and falls in a lifeless mass on the rocks below, beside the gurgling rapids. Brave Heart looks over the cliff, sees Outta, makes his way down the steep side of the precipice and when he reaches her, removes her bonds, clasps her to his arms and raises his eyes toward Heaven in gratitude and thanksgiving to the great Father.

MELIES.

THE SNAKE IN THE GRASS.—Margie, of the "Flying B" ranch, knew what it was to run across a snake in the tall grasses, although she did not realize that there are people who, like snakes, conceal themselves until they are ready to sting. Consequently, when a well-looking tenderfoot asked to become a boarder at the "Flying B" Margie favored him, though her father was suspicious.

Margie is soon smitten with the stranger, much to the chagrin of Jack, the foreman, with whom Margie had previously been very friendly. Jack does not get ugly over the matter, but keeps his eyes open. He knows that the man is out for "Texas Ed," a desperado, and he soon observes that the sleek tenderfoot keeps a villainous snapper of hardware under his belt.

Finally the day for cattle shipping comes, and all know that there will be a large amount of money at the ranch house after the sale. The tenderfoot now becomes even more tender than before.

The cattle are rounded up and shipped, and Margie's father deposits the money in the old family chest. The tenderfoot, who sits up late to read an innocent novel, observes this, and is seen giving mysterious signals from a certain window.

Jack is watching, however, and just as a desperate gang thinks it has the ranch held up, Jack and the punchers are on the job with big guns, and after some exciting times the tenderfoot is revealed as "Texas Ed," the bandit, and snake in the grass.

It is needless to say that Margie has learned her lesson and takes immediate steps to square herself with Foreman Jack.

KALEM.

A WAR TIME ESCAPE.—At a party Mrs. Allsed announces her daughter Millie's engagement to Sir Dunrae. A few days later war breaks out between the North and South. Richard Millbeck's brother casts his lot with the Confederacy, while her sweetheart, Jim Turner, believes his duty lies with the North. Three years later Richard is ordered to the enemy's camp to secure information. Disguised as an escaped Union prisoner he gains admission to the camp and secures important documents. The loss is discovered by the Union officers. Jim Turner, in charge of the regiment, is detailed to pursue the unknown spy. His search leads Richard, who has been wounded while crossing the lines, seeks protection in his sweetheart's home, which happens to be within the field of action. Jim, pursuing the fleeing Confederate, recognizes Millie's brother, who through the courage of the ladies of the household, successfully escapes.

After the war Jim Turner returns to the South to claim Millie his sweetheart. At first she refuses to forgive him for having fought against her people, but through the influence of Richard, her brother, they decide to forgive and forget.

THE DIVER.—This remarkably interesting film gives a graphic insight into the work of the professional diver. We see him adjusting his suit, putting on and marking fast the metal and brass helmet, also the operation of the air pump which conveys air to the diver when under water. We see the diver slowly and solemnly descend, the diver to the river's bottom, and the method by which submarine is planted and the spectacular feat of blowing up a wreck in St. John's River. The son of a professional diver is one of great danger, to portray a character which requires a man of nerve.

We believe this film will prove of great interest to all patrons of the motion picture theater.

THE HUNTER'S DOG.—Hunting about to go on a hunting trip, takes a nap and has a dream. What occurs during this dream causes Rosenfeld to present a beautiful dog to his better man, eschewing all liquors and Welsh rarebits.

LUBIN.

THE ACTRESS AND THE SINGER.—A young tenor and his friend, a music director, were very "hard up." One day the tenor went and sang for the phonographic records. It was a pleasant way to pass hours. A celebrated prima donna happened to be in the next room and heard him sing and fell in love with his voice. She gave a glimpse of him as he left the place and her good opinion became very valuable. It was the beginning of many visits which grew found and took home with her. The prima donna was not able to forget the young tenor and finally she left her magnificent apartments at the house where the tenor lived and in which the two friends' finances were growing worse and worse. One morning they had nothing with which to buy breakfast. The two friends were startled by a ordered breakfast brought to their rooms. The waiter is mistaken for the apartments of the young men. Of course, the young man pounced upon the breakfast and fairly devoured it. Just then, the prima donna herself appeared, pounded in vain upon their door. Before long the prima donna heard what had become of her breakfast. She was finally able to get in touch with the very poor and longed more than ever to help them. Finally the tenor manager that she had discovered a real star for the leading tenor role in her new opera. There was rejoicing when the young man received a letter and when he called on the great manager. There he met the prima donna and she was overjoyed to see him. There he signed a contract not only to join the vaudeville with hers in opera, but to join his heart with hers in life.

HIS FRIEND, THE BURGLAR.—Tom Dayton was very anxious to get away to the club, but Mrs. Dayton's mother-in-law refused to visit that night. He sent a note to his friends at the club telling them that he would be delayed by his better half, and asking them to maneuver in some way to secure his release. It so happened that shortly after the note was received by the club members dressed up in the burglar's costume and armed with a jimmy, repaired to the Dayton home, where he climbed in the window and gave a secret club signal to the members present at once. Dayton was not slow to "catch on." He sneaked into the room, put a large cardigan vest full of flowers into the burglar's arm and told him to beat it. Then he proceeded to do the "there" act, yelling "help, murder, or fire" and similar commands. He ran after the thief with great courage and absolute fearlessness. Mrs. Dayton screamed, and calling after Dayton to mind the wise injunction not to let the burglar kill him, he continued in the pursuit. The burglar led his pursuer quickly to the clubhouse. When the detectives took up the trail they had no difficulty in finding the club. They entered. The joke was explained to them and the anxious Mrs. Dayton was notified that her husband had captured the burglar.

MANDY'S SOCIAL WHIRL.—Mandy Hawkins received a letter from an employment office in her home town notifying her that her application for a position as maid of all "work had been received and that she should come to a certain address in the city where she would be employed. Mandy put on her best clothes and departed for the railroad station.

Now, it so happened that Joe Blackton, who had just become engaged to his employer's stenographer on a visit to his parents, who also lived in the city. It also happened that Miss Jordan was to take the same train as Mandy. On the way to the station Miss Jordan lost the letter of introduction which Joe had given her to his parents.

Mandy found it and put it in her pocket. Arriving in the city the simple-minded Mandy drew the letter out of her pocket and presented it to some people who were waiting in a large touring car. By mistake she gave them the letter which Miss Jordan had lost instead of the one from the employment office.

The folks could hardly believe that their son had been attracted by such a crude girl as Mandy, but they knew that Joe would arrive in the evening, and decided to make the best of things until he arrived. Mandy was entertained royally with automobile rides, a big dinner and so on. She was just about deciding that being a maid of all work was the finest position in the world when Joe arrived, accompanied by his fiancee.

The explanations were made. The old folks were satisfied with their son's choice. Mandy showed her letter from the employment office and went to work in earnest.

Independent Film Stories.

THANHOUSER.

HIS YOUNGER BROTHER.—A young clerk employed in a department store weekly yields to the temptations of city life, and squanders some of the money entrusted to his care. He is found out, of course, and is thrown by his employer. He arrives at his home and passes into under cover of night. In his efforts to hide his disgrace from his loving sister and mother he makes himself a slave to the victim of a pistol, and is being surrounded to prison for the sins of his employer.

The sister believes him, as sisters will, and forms a daring plan to save him. She decides to disguise herself as a lady, secure employment with the broker, and discover his secrets. Then she will free her darling brother.

Part of her scheme is successful. She lands the job, and wins the broker's confidence. Against one evil day by day finds it harder to keep on hating him. He is kind hearted, charitable and considerate, not at all what she had expected him to be. The broker even goes so far as to decide to free the young embezzler. He reads with her in the letter that gives the young man a chance to retrieve his folly, and the girl leaves prison. Full of gratitude he accompanies his daughter and a friend to the prison to commits all his wrongdoing. The new clerk's intent with terror. She realizes that the broker was unjustly accused and that her brother had lied to her. Overpowered by emotion, her condition finally causes her to faint, and the broker has to see his sister he loves gazing sorrowfully at him, and realizes that the sacrifice she has made in a misguided effort to "clear" a bad man deserves a better lad.

The brother's cry of recognition gives the broker his first clue to the truth. He realizes that the bright boy who has recently come into his employ, was no other than the sister of his former clerk. The discovery of the whole case follows the brother and sister to leave the office with one of the broker's friends. When they leave gone, he sends after them a note informing her that that he is to have a fresh start as the broker's agent in Brazil, and that the embezzler's sister will consent she can fill his old position. For the broker realized that the supposed boy had found a place in his office it never thought would be pierced by cupid's arrow.

ROBERT EMMET.—Robert Emmet, although he died at the age of 25, made a record that has always keep his memory green among his countrymen. Since his execution his heart was set on freeing Ireland from English rule. He entered Trinity College and made a brilliant name for himself there. He was expelled for complicity in a recovery of his affiliation with the United Irishmen.

He spent several years in exile, during which period he was constantly under official surveillance and effort to save him, he was executed in Dublin.

The pathetic love story of Emmet and Sarah Curran is one of the most beautiful that will never be forgotten by their countrymen.

ECLAIR.

CAIN.—Jack and Peter are both employed at the farm of a widow, whose daughter, Nellie, is in love with Jack, and has obtained the consent of her mother to their marriage. Peter becomes jealous when he learns of the betrothal and wounds his rival. Nellie becomes prostrate with grief. Time passes and Peter thinks he may now risk asking for the hand of Nellie. But she has not forgotten, and he meets a final and angry refusal. This proves too much to bear, and he resolves to leave the place. It chances that the widow and her daughter see Peter on the road to the railroad, and are horrified at his ghastly face and wild demeanor. Upon being told of them, he falls on his knees, confessing and imploring forgiveness they bid him die if he would have freedom. He turns toward the lake and in a moment more he is in his watery grave.

THE ROCK CLIMBERS.—This film affords a wonderful appreciation of the Pyrenees, we visit the most famous peaks of this world-renowned range of mountains, following the guides as they clamber up hazardous cliffs, and down deep, seemingly bottomless chasms. We are afforded ample opportunity to observe the dangers travelers undertaken by the guides, and the skillful and praiseworthy manner in which they handle their charges.

POWERS.

HIS MIND'S TRAGEDY.—Dr. Edwards, of Rockaway Cliff, L. I., is entertaining friends at dinner and is unexpectedly called to the city. En route he is struck by an automobile and taken to the

THEATRICAL ARCHITECT

OFFICE, STUDIO, AND SHOPS 4912 TO 20 PARKSIDE AVE. PHILA.

We not only make Plans and build

Theatres and Vaudeville Houses

We also build

MOVING PICTURE THEATRES

We have built over 60 Theatres the last 5 years which are all ORIGINAL in Construction, Design and Decorations bandits, from which he is later dismissed. After his release he becomes apathetic of Ed Edwards in Big Frank, the burglar. His wife and daughter having spent their savings in his vain search for him are taken in by friends and cared for. By some strange co-incident Big Frank, the burglar comes to this very house and starts to ransack the apartments. Mr. Williams has not yet returned for the night and hearing a noise enters the room in search of the same. He encounters Big Frank, the burglar, and in the struggle Mr. Williams disarms him and strikes the burglar on the head. Big Frank slowly comes to himself, but in the struggle he has lost his mask and stands revealed. Mr. Williams recognizes his old friend, speaks to him, but Big Frank merely stands amazed. Mr. Williams brings forth Mrs. Edwards and their child and standing the little girl in front of Big Frank she recognizes him and putting out her arms calls him "Papa." This brings back the past and he regains his complete memory. His wife comes to him and clasping each other in their arms there is a joyful reconciliation.

SOLAX.

PUT OUT.—Going away upon business Scroggins bids wife a fond goodbye. Returning to the room after her husband's departure, Mrs. Scroggins finds Mary, the maid, engaged in a flirtation from the window. The manner with whom Mary has been flirting determines to see the fair lady who has invited his attentions, and so securing a ladder she climbs in through a window.

Mrs. Scroggins coming into the room is amazed and alarmed to find an intruder in the room. The maiden, supposing that Mrs. Scroggins is the girl with whom he has been flirting, begins to make love to her. Hearing a noise outside, Mrs. Scroggins runs frantically through the house and coming finally to the kitchen, finds Mary engaged in a quiet tete-a-tete with a lusty plumber who has come to fix the pipes.

The plumber readily consents to come to the assistance of Mrs. Scroggins. The two women remain in the kitchen while the plumber goes to dispose of the intruder. In the meantime Scroggins, who has missed his train returns to his house. The maiden hearing his approach, secretes himself. Scroggins and the plumber entering the room at the same time, collide. The plumber, thinking that Scroggins is the one to be evicted, promptly proceeds to throw him out of the window.

CARIBOU HUNTING.—This film shows the great northern wilderness in all its autumn beauty. The scenic views in this film are absolutely without a peer, the tinting and toning is wonderful, and the beautiful scenes depicted give an accurate portrayal of the grandeur and beauty of the virgin forests.

RELIANCE.

A TRICK OF FORTUNE.—Discouraged and despondent over his failure to secure employment, and without funds, Harry Wilson decides to end his life. His remaining assets are a ticket for a small town and some small change, and wishing to make his exit from the world as quickly as possible he utilizes the ticket, and goes to the little hotel. A capitalist has been expected in town on a factory site, and Wilson is suspected as being that gentleman traveling incog. This suspicion is confirmed by the initials on his suitcase, which coincide with those of the suspected individual. Harry has a royal time and is wined and dined by the land agents. At first he tries to convince them of their error, but they refuse to believe him and wink knowingly. In the meantime the real capitalist has arrived and upon being pestered engages Harry to carry out the deception further. While the agents are interviewing each other themselves and unsuccessfully leaving Harry in distraction with their attentions, the mystified visitor seeing the tract he wanted at a low figure, and thus the denouement takes place. The wrath of the land sharks and the quick change of allegiance of the hotel employees from Harry to the new idol is most laughable and cleverly acted. Harry is handsomely rewarded and with a new lease of life and rejuvenated courage starts back to the city to manfully fight Life's battle.

IN OLD MADRID.—Don Gomez writes a letter to the parents of Zelda, a young Spanish girl, forgetting his inability to pay them a visit, but sends his son Jose, instead.

Jose arrives and is immediately smitten by the charms of Zelda. Zelda indulges in a little flirtation. Her mother inaugurates a system of espionage that is very inconvenient for the lovers. They are surprised by the duenna-like mother and are driven to desperation.

Zelda has a girl friend about her age who resembles her and is attired to represent a clever counterpart of Zelda. The mother walks in the garden accompanied by Zelda. Seating herself on a bench, she commands the girl to please be-side her. Finding the vigil rather tiresome, the older woman lapses into a state of drowsiness and the companions of Zelda beckon her to join them.

So clever is the disguise of Rosa that Jose is deceived and he kisses her. The father of Zelda discovers the act and hastens to the mother to inform her of the love Zelda is making beside his wife on the bench. Exhausted, the guardian falls asleep, and Rosa exchanges places with Zelda, who joins her lover.

Jose induces Zelda to accompany him to the seashore. He gathers the girl in his arms and wades across a stretch of water, and they take a perilous position on the rocks.

A search is instituted and Zelda and Jose are discovered on the rocks. Jose has a scheme which he quickly imparts to Zelda and they acquiesce. The irate parents see the daughter and her lover. Jose is firm and threatens to throw Zelda into the roaring torrent, unless the parents consent to their immediate marriage. The agonized parents relent. The obdurate parents have been outwitted by the scheming lovers.

THE PENNILESS PRINCE.—Prince Gustave, a young German nobleman, attends from a vessel at Havana, Cuba, to claim a bewitched ——.

He sends an advertisement in a paper that funds are awaited on a banking establishment and he applies in person for the job as the office of the company, plumber.

Jose, the daughter of the governor, is to the office now and is immediately infatuated with the fair young foreigner, whose use takes to business. Prince Gustave is indifferent to her and the fame of a seasoned woman is assumed.

Prince Gustave is given a position as porter in the office and on the governor's return, the titled bankrupt has become one of the most trusted employees on the plantations. The secrets of their interest and our business are soon known to rivals from the office and put him to manual work on the plantation among the tobacco stalks. There he again meets buleros and there is a mutual affectionate.

Jose mails Gustave a letter informing him his presence is required at the office of the tobacco farm. There he meets some betting over prince and buleros in the tobacco field. He set boo-coth Zelda for the needle fondle.

Buleros visits the office of a lawyer in this and shortness for matrimony consents, marrying from the same notary engaged next door. He goes to Gustave, who is surprised, and astonished. Gustave visits the consent and he tells that nothing can be done for him, and refuses pleads and returns to the tobacco fields, but never receives a visit from his representative for many, who informs him of the death of his many brother, and that he now owns not, his own is left to the estate of the father. The deed of the consent is witnessed by Jose and now Gustave finished pleased to find that all his losses and tales from that he is a titled nobleman with vast resources. Jose is an attendant. She takes to him a smile and he goes to see the prince, but he meets not his wife to the tobacco farmers, and takes her to the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Walter's arrival sowed the seed of discord, for Eva's preference for Ray's handsome chum soon became apparent and a serious breach occurred, which was gradually widened through the use of repose, by Esther Williams, a friend of Eva's, who sends an anonymous communication to Ray, appraising him of the fact that Walter had proposed to Eva and was accepted.

Walter, loyal to his promise to Eva, marries her. His trend and desires did not point to a commercial or professional life, so he drifted into Wall Street with a fortune left him by his parents. He soon finds himself a victim of frenzied finance and drifts into absolute poverty through one final investment in a worthless mine.

Ray, who had drifted westward, smarting under the lash of a disappointed love, after engaging in various ventures, finally purchased some mining interests, which developed into fabulous dimensions and made him a multi-millionaire.

While seated in his library, Ray picked up a newspaper from a convenient table and scanned its columns. An expression of surprise followed by sadness diffused his countenance. The paragraph he had read divulged the fact that Walter, old-time chum and met with reverses and had been reduced to abject poverty.

He immediately sought his broker and investigation discloses the fact that Walter holds large interests in a mining property with great possibilities; but lack of funds had retarded its development.

Ray comes to the rescue, but does not disclose his identity, until the deal is consummated. When he is finally recognized by Walter the fact that latter is inclined to resent his interference, until called to his sense of duty by Eva, his wife.

HYPNOTIZING A HYPNOTIST.—A certain learned professor took up the study of hypnotism. In a sanitarium he found a lot of likely subjects, and without their knowledge or consent, placed them all under his spell. After satisfying himself of his ability to hypnotize, he brought them back to a normal state of being, and finding themselves

Released

TUESDAY, March 21st.

2 on 1

Just Kids AND A Trip About Christiana

2 on 1

A corking good Comedy and enough scenic and educational to be interesting.

Hundreds of Exhibitors have requested Comedy and Scenic.

HERE IT IS

12 minutes of laughter and 7 minutes in foreign climes.

Synopsis Page

in many undignified positions, fall on the professor and almost beat him to a pulp. They leave him helpless and an easy prey for his landlady, an unattractive spinster. She found the volume on hypnotism which he has been studying, and as soon as she spies the helpless professor, resolves to try an experiment on her own account. She places him in an hypnotic trance and to make assurance doubly sure, leads him to a justice of the peace. She takes her newly wed spouse to their home, where she tries to bring him back to his original condition, but is unable to, so she decides all the edicts of the code and resorts to a bed slat.

She beats him back to life again, shows him her proof of claim on his heart and home, and he swallows the bitter pill. Then for to his unwilling arms and decides to make the best of what must be endured.

BISON.

HER PRISONER.—Bud, a rejected suitor, tries to force his unwelcome attentions upon Mattie. She throws a pan of soft dough over his head, and later, her sweetheart, Ned, thrashes Bud. In revenge he waylays and shoots Ned, who staggers back to the house. As he is being cared for by Mattie and her folks Bud peeks in the window. The girl grabs Ned's gun, and jumping on a horse pursues Bud, captures him at the point of the revolver, and turns him over to the sheriff. She then takes her place at Ned's bedside and becomes a gentle nurse.

DICK FARRELL'S PRIZE.—Dick Farrell and his chum, Frank, camp in the west on a vacation. Tiger are treated as a joke at first by the forest communities, but make friends after showing their mettle. Dick incurs the enmity of Slick Pete after beating him in a physical encounter, and, later, Slick Pete escaping after successfully holding up a stage coach surprises Dick and captures

Released

SATURDAY, March 25th.

OGALLALAH

The Greatest Indian Play ever made. A broad assertion but we mean every word. We stake our reputation on this picture.

Feature, Advertise and Yell OGALLALAH

The Tale of an Indian's Love

Demand Demand Demand

OGALLALAH

Special Music for the Picture

WRITE US

The Powers Co.

241st St. and Richardson Ave.
New York City

him. He effects a thrilling escape with a girl prisoner and is pursued. In the conflict that follows the robbers are captured by the posse. Dick himself vanquishing Slick Pete. Dick wins the hand of the girl as a reward for rescuing her.

AMBROSIO.

THE PRISONER OF THE CAUCASUS.—A Russian officer is captured by the Circassians, and is brought to the village as a festival is being held, where feats of prowess and strength are being performed. A Circassian maid falls in love with the handsome officer, and when the men leave gone forth to meet the attacking Russians she releases him from prison, and he escapes by swimming across the river. Unable to endure life without him, she finds oblivion beneath the waves.

CHAMPION.

THE PAY-ROLL.—Chas. Wilson, on his way back to the ranch with the payroll for the boys, is suddenly stopped by highwaymen. The cowboys of circle C ranch, returning from a spree, dash down upon the surprised outlaws. Headed by Wilson, they chase the outwitted bandits into their very home. The wife of the leader of the gang is mortally wounded by a shot fired from Wilson's gun.

Feeling that he is indirectly responsible for the death of the mother, Wilson promises to adopt and take care of her baby girl. Wilson's wife also swears to be a mother to the child.

Sixteen years later Kate, the adopted girl starting out for a canter through the woods, is kidnapped. Upon the failure of Kate's return home at her accustomed hour, Wilson goes in search of her. Discovering her horse riderless, he follows the trail that soon leads him to the kidnapper's cabin. Stealing into the place, he is horrified in discovering that the man is Kate's own father. He makes known the truth to both of them, and gives the girl her privilege of choice between himself who has taken care of her, and the man who had deserted her. Without a second's hesitation, the girl leaves the cabin under the protection of Wilson.

NESTOR.

WAS IT WORTH WHILE?—Since the hour he entered the law firm of Robert Eldridge as a junior clerk, Ned Fosters's dream had been to one day become a partner of the old gentleman.

Partly through his own industry, and partly through Helen Eldridge's influence over her father, Ned had progressed step by step, and now that the young man had won the girl's consent to an early marriage, he felt that his dream to be taken into the firm would soon be realized.

His country sweetheart, Lucy Abbott, was forgotten, and within a few weeks Helen might have become his wife, had not his brother, John, read the announcement of their engagement, and hastened to the city in the hope of recalling Ned to his senses. But the young man stubbornly declared he had now gone too far to withdraw; so, in anger and desperation, John hastened to the Eldridge home to be told by Helen that she would give Ned up at once. Were she sure he really loved another.

This was all that John asked. Immediately he despatched a letter to Lucy, telling her to take the first train; so that the next day when his brother called upon Miss Eldridge, it was Lucy who greeted him.

From her place behind the screen, Helen was not long in ascertaining the true state of Ned's feelings. John had spoken the truth, and although more difficult than she believed. Ned was given back his ring and awakened to the wrong he had so nearly done to both.

TUESDAY SATURDAY

Powers Picture Plays

2==EACH WEEK==2

YANKEE.

THE OPEN GATE.—A seafaring man of middle age had been paying attention to a young lady for a number of years, and finally mustered up enough courage to propose. This is accepted, with the stipulation that he will forsake his convivial companions, his pipe and tobacco. These conditions seem difficult to fulfill. Armed with the best set of resolutions ever adopted, he sallies forth to prepare for a six months' cruise.

Meeting a number of cronies, who congratulate him upon his successful wooing, he is enticed into a saloon, to drink a toast to his fiancee; they load him to the guards and while in this condition, an idea occurs to him that it would be quite proper to pay his sweetheart a final visit and pinning a five dollar bill on the window frame, he opens the sash and it looks as if "Love's Young Dreams" is over.

We see him next day starting for his vessel full of "remorse and regret"—those tuneful companions depicted upon his countenance. His little cabin mate, the parrot, is greeted with words witnesses of the betrothal, which makes his regret more poignant.

Twelve years later the captain returns from his voyages to find that his early love is still true and has left the "open gate." The young couple have grown up and are engaged to be married—he is timid, however, and afraid of losing the key to the house—he makes himself known to his nephew, who endeavors to adjust matters, and assures him that the sweetheart of yore is the sweetheart of to-day. After several laughable incidents the old couple are seen coming from church, as the young couple start to enter upon the "open gate of matrimony—they sail down life's stream together.

LOVE'S EBB AND FLOOD.—Neglected and abused by her husband, May Sommers has submitted to the indignities heaped upon her as only a good and loyal wife can, when he brutally drives her from home—broken-hearted, she sought peace and happiness in the waters of the sea.

But fate had other designs for her future and she is rescued by the son and daughter of a wealthy planter. In his family she is cared for and after a long convalescence is induced to remain as a companion to the planter's invalid daughter. Her past was forgotten, care and tenderness restored the girlish beauty that she possessed at the time of her marriage.

Thrown into daily companionship with the son of her benefactors, there could be but one outcome—love—and the very opposite of her first affection and asked her to become his wife. May does not endure her terrible secret, and allowed her suitor to think that his love was returned and accepted. So time passes, until May's husband appears upon the scene as a soldier. The father of the daughter of the family in which his wife has found a home.

May's wayward her husband and threatens him with exposure unless he takes his departure, and said with rage at his interference, this brute beats and clashes his wife whose life is perhaps saved by the timely arrival of her admirer.

At her husband's sight of his wife's vengeance, but meets his just deserts. Being unfamiliar with the neighborhood, he loses his way in the night and falls over a cliff where the tide happens to flood next morning. A very keen May's knowledge the reward he so long waited for.

REX.

WHERE THE SHAMROCK GROWS.—Her foster father thinks her losing his money is the only event that she marry within six months after his death and if she fail to do so, the money goes to the society's treasury. So when Rex comes to woo between the girl and the stately young blacksmith, he is up to strive between the two lovers. When he learns that the managing of the two has already been announced for an early date, his desire to interfere with their happiness is complete.

He shadows the girl and learns the faithful helper of the blacksmith, understands and resolves to foil the villain. So disguised as an old hag, he ventures into the lower where she is held, fascinates the keeper with whiskey and makes his way to Nora. Disguising clothes, the girl effecting an escape and Barney substituted in the role of the prisoner.

By the aid of the nephew, determined to force her to consent to a marriage. At last Barney consents and the nephew immediately escorts him to the church, only to see Nora and the blacksmith leaving, already made one.

LUX.

BILL HAS KLEPTOMANIA.—Poor Bill is a kleptomaniac, even on his own home, and in consequence he robs himself, being quite unable to curb the situation. His affliction is well-known to his wife and accordingly she follows him out of doors and requests two plain clothes detectives to follow him, and pay for anything he steals. The detectives set off in pursuit. Bill heads them in a book dance, for they have to compensate a soul-keeper, a blind dealer, a horse with a sulfid. Bill having stolen the baby's bottle, secured sleep keepers etc. Finally Bill, who has stored the stolen goods in his large overcoat, tricks the detectives, and steals the pocketbook from the tall man. The loss is quickly discovered, and Bill is captured and dragged to the station. Here he is searched, and a huge number of articles are brought to light. To add to Bill's misery, his wife appears and proceeds to give her erring husband a most business-like punishment.

DOGS NOT ADMITTED.—Jones finds a stray dog and takes it home. His landlord is a grouch and objects to animals, and Jones has to leave his comfortable apartment and search for a new home where dogs are tolerated. He finds a new retreat and with it a good idea to make the dog barter yell "stung." He and a regular army of dogs and places collars round their necks bearing the address of his late landlord. Several gentlemen in a hotel lobby find the barking and thinking there is trouble. Broom dogs, whose dogs and soon hitch their dogs to the same railing. Some on the end of a piece of string. They are when a man is lonely God sends him a dog, but nevertheless knows how what to do if they want it to ruin dogs.

GREAT NORTHERN.

BETWEEN LOVE AND DUTY.—A soldier dealing with a doctor's substitution for a dancer his wife's daughter's husband and the startling episodes resulting. The doctor, on being summoned by his wife, in his tenacious attempts stumble, and is saved by the timely arrival of a patient, the doctor and wife are brought together after a long and severe seen them commencing their lives anew.

LIFE AND PEOPLE SOUTH OF THE EQUATOR.—A charming travel subject depicting the life of nomadic tribes in the Lands Zone.

AMONG THE EXHIBITORS

Chicago, Ill.—Mr. P. D. Houze has sold his two big picture theater to Mr. Robert Roth.

Burlington, Wis.—The management of the Crystal Moving Picture Theater have moved from their old quarters to the Brown Building.

Wareing, W. S. and Wood K. Bowers, proprietor of the Snyder House, has purchased the old Thestorium formerly occupied by C. B. Cowles, and will convert it into a moving picture theater.

Stevens Point, Wis.—A new picture theater is being planned for this section which will run vaudeville and pictures.

Centralia, Wash.—The Washington Hotel, one of the best in the county, owned by Centralia capitalists, is being converted into a high-class vaudeville and moving picture theater, which will be under the management of Mr. Ed. Hall.

New Albany, Ind.—The Victoria Moving Picture Theater on East Market Street between Vincennes and Bank Street has been purchased by the Fehr Brothers last Saturday, and is the latest of the chain of moving picture theaters now owned by them in the Fall cities by M. Switow, and is considered as one of the handsomest and most attractive places of its kind in this section.

Courtland, N. Y.—Messrs. Fred Tanner and George Ripley have purchased the Wonderland Motion Picture Palace.

Red Bank, N. J.—The Geran Building on Front Street has been leased to a moving picture company who will convert it into a moving picture theater.

Salem, N. J.—A new moving picture theater is being erected in Swedesboro, which will be under the direction of Aaron L. Miller.

Cleveland, Ohio.—Cleveland has 240 moving picture theaters.

Bryan, Texas.—Messrs. Fulman & Lang have leased the Harrison Building and will open it as a moving picture theater.

Milwaukee, Wis.—A. Wasserwait is planning the erection of a new theater on Third Ave.

Norfolk, Va.—Captain Charles T. Boland, is making arrangements to erect a new moving picture theater at 319 High Street, which will only run the best of moving pictures.

Boston, Mass.—The Olympia Theater, No. 6 Bowdoin Square, has been leased by a large theatrical syndicate, who will convert it into a moving picture and vaudeville theater, which will be able to seat about 600 or more persons.

Dayton, Ohio.—Mr. George H. Heiser is completing arrangements for the erection of a new moving picture theater on East Third Street.

Trenton, N. J.—Mr. Hall has opened a new moving picture theater on Front Building on Water Street, which will be known as the Bee.

Waverlon, Iowa.—L. Doppenberger has purchased the Casual Moving Picture Theater here and took possession.

Darby, Pa.—Architect Charles B. Oelschlager, of Philadelphia, has completed the plans and specifications for the erection of a new theater for the Darby Amusement Co.

Findlay, Ohio.—Messrs. Ford & Chapman are making arrangements to open a new moving picture theater here.

Ord, Nebr.—Michael Lee has purchased the Ord moving picture theater and taken possession.

St. Louis, Mo.—C. W. Crawford is planning the erection of a new vaudeville and moving picture theater, to be located on Fifteenth Street.

Berkley, Ca.—Ehel B. Judd has decided to open a new moving picture theater at 2107 Chatuck Ave.

Helena, Mont.—W. J. Hartung is planning the erection of a new vaudeville and moving picture theater on Main Street, near Grand.

Camden, N. J.—The Camden Amusement Company is planning the erection of a new vaudeville and moving pictures theater at 260 Broadway.

Bowman, N. Dak.—The Jewanland Opera House, owned by Mr. Shaw, was completely destroyed by fire.

Topeka, Kan.—Jr. G. J. Mokvane is considering the advisability of establishing a new moving picture theater here.

Anaconda, Mont.—Paul Noble has leased the Imperial Opera House, formerly occupied by Jones, and taken possession.

Covington, Ind.—C. Payne of Indianapolis, has purchased the Family and Globe moving picture theaters here.

San Diego, Cal.—Sol Hartley is making arrangements to open a new theater at Grand Ave. and Lima Street.

Joliet, Ill.—The picture theater has been reopened by the Lake brothers, and is now enjoying its fifth week of prosperity under the management of Hubby Lake. The house is now being operated by the Nonpareil Amusement Co., of Joliet.

Lake Linden, Mich.—The Lake Linden Theater is having a very large business since the change in management has been made.

Albany, N. Y.—A new moving picture theater is being erected by Mr. Hart Lake, which will be the first ever established in this town. It will be under the management and proprietorship of Messrs. Edwards & Gilmore, of Gloversville.

Cortland, N. Y.—Cortland is to have a third moving picture theater. Mr. H. H. Howard has purchased John H. Rand's interest in the Star Theater and has secured the services of Wesley H. Crego to manage it. Mr. Howard has a store in Wells Block and Tompkins Avenue and will convert it into a moving picture theater, which will be ready to open about November 15th.

Columbus, Ohio.—Mr. W. L. Jamison was awarded the contract for the erection of a new theater building at 17 South High Street for the Pastime Theater Company.

Schoharie, N. Y.—The management of the moving picture theater in the Union Block is having their picture palace remodeled and enlarged. A beautiful new front is being put in.

Hazelton, Pa.—A new moving picture theater is being erected in Freeland, which will be under the management of Mr. John Mesaville.

New York City.—The Arnold Realty company will alter the two story brick estate at 1640 East 230 Street into a high-class picture palace.

Shenandoah, Pa.—The new picture theater under the management of Mr. Harry Heard is progressing here and are now doing a good business.

Ellsworth, Wis.—Manager Wolff, of the local moving picture theater, has purchased his show and is moving it to River Falls.

Waterford, N. Y.—Moving pictures and vaudeville theater which is under the proprietorship of Mr. Proctor, will soon close, according to the rumor.

Elgin, Ill.—Moving pictures are being shown here to entertain 500 patients in the large Sayre Hospital.

Point Pleasant, N. J.—The New Moving Picture Theater here was leased for season 1908-09.

Dayton, Ohio.—Mr. Sherry A. Limmer has opened a moving picture theater on Richard and Madison Streets.

Dover, N. J.—The management of the Ritz Theater here has decided to open exclusively for the use of moving pictures and will cater to moving pictures and illustrated songs.

Lewiston, Me.—The Empire Theater here has announced a moving pictures and vaudeville theater under the management of Mr. Sawyer.

Rutland, Mass.—A new hall was constructed in Rutland in which the Irving Forrey Company, on Union Street, opened on Oct. 6 and 7. H. H. Rice, Sawyer & Porter, of Boston, who will create an opera house grade moving picture and vaudeville theater.

Exhibitors Take Notice

Keep your machine in condition and cut down your repair expenses by using

Stay On Oil

25c. half pt. can. Cost Compound, 25c. 3 oz. can. 35c. per can postage prepaid

STAY ON OIL CO.

46 E. 14th St., New York City

Licensed Release Dates

BIOGRAPH.

Feb. 16—Fisher Folks (Dr.).....998
Feb. 20—The Diamond Star (Dr.).....998
Feb. 23—His Daughter (Dr.).....957
Feb. 27—The Lily of the Tenements (Dr.).....998
Mar. 2—The Heart of a Savage (Dr.).....951
Mar. 6—A Decree of Destiny (Dr.).....995
Mar. 9—Conscience (Dr.).....998
Mar. 13—Comrades (Com.).....998
Mar. 16—Was He a Coward? (Dr.).....994

EDISON.

Feb. 17—A Stage Romance (Dr.).....
Feb. 21—The Rival Sculptors (Dr.).....990
Feb. 22—Mr. Bumpitous, Inebriate (Com.).....980
Feb. 24—The Price of Victory (Dr.).....1000
Feb. 28—The Iron Master (Dr.).....1000
Mar. 1—The Rival Candidates (Com.).....
Mar. 3—The Writing on the Blotter (Dr.).....
Mar. 7—Love and The Stock Market (Dr.).....
Mar. 8—A Night of Terror (Com.).....
Mar. 8—The Old Family Bible (Dr.).....
Mar. 10—How Bella Was Won (Com.).....
Mar. 14—At Bar for the Life of a Lady (Dr.).....990
Mar. 15—The Department Store (Com.).....625
Mar. 15—Baby's Bell (Com.).....375
Mar. 17—The Wedding Bell (Dr.).....

ESSANAY.

Feb. 14—Getting Sister Married (Com.).....
Feb. 16—Gettleman's Daughter (Dr.).....
Feb. 21—Their Wedding Gifts (Com.).....580
Feb. 21—Just as the Clock Struck Nine (Com.) 412
Feb. 25—The Outlaw and the Child (W. Dr.).....960
Feb. 28—Taming A Tyrant (Com.).....1000
Mar. 4—On The Dessert's Edge (W. Dr.).....
Mar. 7—The Little Disciple (Dr.).....
Mar. 11—The Romance On "Bar O." (W. Dr.) 1000
Mar. 14—Oh You Teacher (Com.).....1000
Mar. 18—The Faithful Indian (W. Dr.).....1000
Mar. 21—Hans' Millions (Com.).....1000

GAUMONT.
G. Kleine.

Feb. 25—Pagaoul and the Countess Beatrice (Dr.).....998
Feb. 28—Matrimonial Epidemic (Com.).....813
Feb. 28—Lafont and Pelot Have a Fight (Sc.).....185
Mar. 4—The Tramp's Find (Dr.).....680
Mar. 4—Forbidden Cigarettes (Com.).....355
Mar. 7—The Barber's Daughter (Com.).....505
Mar. 7—The Ambitious Bootblack (Com.).....450
Mar. 11—His First Sweetheart (Com.).....650
Mar. 11—The Beautiful Gorges of Tarn (Sc.).....415
Mar. 14—The Sword and the Cross (Dr.).....840
Mar. 14—Breakers In the Mine (Com.).....
Mar. 18—The Privateer's Treasure (Com.).....860
Mar. 18—Rocky Caves of France (Scenic).....110

KALEM.

Feb. 10—The Broken Trail (Dr.).....1000
Feb. 15—Grandmother's War Story (Dr.).....975
Feb. 17—The Lost Ribbon (Dr.).....1000
Feb. 22—The Open Road (Dr.).....995
Feb. 24—Priscilla and the Pequot (Dr.).....925
Mar. 1—Sailor Jack's Reformation (Dr.).....1005
Mar. 4—Mexican Filibusters (Dr.).....1000
Mar. 8—The Irish Honeymoon (Com.).....950
Mar. 10—The Mission Carrier (Dr.).....
Mar. 15—The River (Scenic).....565
Mar. 15—The Hunter's Dream (Com.).....385
Mar. 17—A War Time Escape (Dr.).....980

LUBIN.

Feb. 13—The Show-Girl's Stratagem (Dr.)....1000
Feb. 16—Getting Even (Com.).....600
Feb. 16—Schultz Has the Smallpox (Com.)....400
Feb. 20—The Test (Dr.).....1000
Feb. 23—Dobbs the Dauber.....1000
Feb. 27—Man's Diplomacy.....1000
Mar. 2—Woman's Curiosity.....400
Mar. 2—Father's Birthday Ring.....600
Mar. 6—Vanity and His Cane (Dr.).....1000
Mar. 9—His Friend the Burglar (Com.).....1000
Mar. 13—The Actress and The Singer (Dr.)....1000
Mar. 16—Mandy's Social Whirl (Com.).....1000
Mar. 20—Her Artistic Temperament (Dr.)....1000

MELIES.

Feb. 2—Only a Slater (Dr.).....
Feb. 9—Tony the Greaser (Dr.).....980
Feb. 16—Billy and His Pal (Dr.).....1000
Feb. 23—My Parisle Flower (W. Com.).....980
Mar. 2—In the Hot Lands (W. Dr.).....990
Mar. 9—The Snake In the Grass (Dr.).....980
Mar. 16—The "Schoolmarm" of Coyote County (Dr.).....980

PATHE.

Feb. 27—Pots, Pans & Poetry (Com.).....531
Mar. 1—Oh! You Clubman! (Com.).....996
Mar. 3—Satan Defeated (Dr.).....750
Mar. 3—Around Constantina, Algeria (Sc.)...200
Mar. 6—Jealous Fatted (Dr.).....1000
Mar. 6—Max Embarrassed (Com.).....
Mar. 6—After the Boxing Bout (Com.).....375
Mar. 8—Real Deaf's Devotion (Dr.).....1000
Mar. 10—Undying Love (Dr.).....740
Mar. 10—Regatta on the Mekong River (Sc.)...220
Mar. 13—A Lonely Little Girl (Dr.).....1000
Mar. 13—Max's Feet Are Pinched (Com.).....480
Mar. 13—Whittles' Courtship (Com.).....500
Mar. 15—Oh, You Kids! (Com.).....620
Mar. 15—The Pasdi Brothers (Scenic).....295
Mar. 17—The Inventor's Flights (Dr.).....780
Mar. 17—Pepper Industry In the Malay Mountains (Ind.).....190
Mar. 18—The Sheriff's Daughter (Dr.).....1000

SELIG.

Feb. 23—The Seminole's Sacrifice (Dr.).....
Feb. 27—The Eye of Conscience (Dr.).....
Mar. 2—The Outbreak (Dr.).....1000
Mar. 6—The Tribe's Shepherdess (Dr.).....
Mar. 9—The Medallion (Dr.).....
Mar. 13—The Code of Honor (Dr.).....
Mar. 16—The Man From the Mast (Dr.).....
Mar. 20—Her Words Came True (Com.).....
Mar. 20—One Hundred Years After (Dr.).....

URBAN-ECLIPSE.
Richard Klein (Sec.).

Feb. 15—Catherine Howard (Dr.).....1005
Feb. 22—The Golden Sickle (Dr.).....882
Feb. 25—Spilling a Story (Sec.).....113
Mar. 1—Comrades (Dr.).....638
Mar. 1—Beauties of Sam Souci (Sc.).....362
Mar. 8—The Fury of a Woman Scorned (Dr.).1720
Mar. 8—Beautiful Wye Valley, England (Sc.)..300
Mar. 15—Redemption (Dr.).....508
Mar. 15—The Thames from Oxford to Richmond (Sc.).....472

VITAGRAPH.

Feb. 18—The New Stenographer (Com.).....
Feb. 21—A Tale of Two Cities. (Part 1.) (Dr.).....1014
Feb. 24—A Tale of Two Cities. (Part 2.) (Dr.).....1013
Feb. 25—A Tale of Two Cities. (Part 3.) (Dr.).....994
Feb. 28—Captain Barnacle's Courtship (Com.)..
Mar. 3—Bertha's Mission (Dr.).....
Mar. 4—Shamus's Ghost (Dr.).....
Mar. 7—The Wild Cat (Dr.).....
Mar. 10—Bridegroom's Dilemma (Com.).....
Mar. 11—Love Conquers (Dr.).....
Mar. 14—Betty Becomes a Maid (Com.).....
Mar. 17—An Aching Void (Dr.).....
Mar. 18—Daddy Long, or His Wife's Husband (Com.).....

THIS WEEK'S PROGRAMME OF LICENSED FILMS.

Monday, March 13.

Biograph—Comrades (Com.).....998
Lubin—The Actress and the Singer (Dr.).....1000
Pathe—Max's Feet Are Pinched (Com.).....489
Pathe—Whittles' Courtship (Com.).....500
Selig—The Code of Honor (Dr.).....

Tuesday, March 14.

Edison—All for the Love of a Lady (Dr.).....990
Essanay—On You Teacher! (Com.).....1000
Gaumont—The Sword and the Cross (Dr.)....840
Gaumont—Breakers In the Clouds (Scenic)....155
Vitagraph—Betty Becomes a Maid (Com.).....

Wednesday, March 15.

Edison—The Department Store (Com.).....625
Edison—Baby's Bell (Com.).....375
Kalem—The Diver (Scenic).....565
Kalem—The Hunter's Dream (Com.).....365
Pathe—Oh, You Kids! (Com.).....600
Pathe—The Pasdi Brothers (Scenic).....295
Urban—Redemption (Dr.).....508
Urban—The Thames from Oxford to Richmond (Scenic).....472

Thursday, March 16.

Biograph—Was He a Coward? (Dr.).....994
Lubin—Mandy's Social Whirl (Com.).....1000
Melies—The "Schoolmarm" of Coyote County (Dr.).....980
Selig—The Man From the East (Dr.).....

Friday, March 17.

Edison—The Wedding Bell (Dr.).....
Pathe—The Inventor's Flights (Dr.).....784
Pathe—Pepper Industry In the Malay Mountains (Ind.).....190
Kalem—A War Time Escape (Dr.).....980
Vitagraph—An Aching Void (Dr.).....

Saturday, March 18.

Essanay—The Faithful Indian (W. Dr.).....1000
Gaumont—The Privateer's Treasure (Com.)....860
Gaumont—Rocky Caves of France (Scenic)....110
Pathe—The Sheriff's Daughter (Dr.).....1000
Vitagraph—Davey Jones, or His Wife's Husband (Com.).....

A "W" before the words drama and comedy specifies that it is a Western drama or a comedy.

Classified Advertisements

[Classified advertisements, three cents per word, cash with order; 50 cents minimum; postage stamps accepted.]

HELP WANTED.

WANTED—An experienced scenic artist for moving picture studio. Address, M. D., care of Moving Picture World.

WANTED—First class, absolutely experienced motion picture photographer with very best motion picture machine tripod, and complete equipment to take motion pictures, to travel western America, May and June. None but of years of experience will be considered. Address, F. R. R., care of Moving Picture Brothers, Minneapolis, Minn.

WANTED—A No. 1 moving picture operator, with practical experience in electricity, understanding Standard and Powers No. 6 machines. No drinker or cigarette fiend need apply. Advise salary expected, experience, etc. Address, B. L. & Co., P. O. Box 267, Mankato, Minn.

WANTED—Strictly high class operator (no crankers, boozers, or chasers) for evening work in New York City, for coming Summer. Must be reliable and licensed. Also orchestra of piano, violin and drummer for sound effects. Prefer Union people of the very highest ability and experience in picture work. State salary and where working. Address, "QUALITY," care of Moving Picture World.

SITUATIONS WANTED.

AT LIBERTY—Experienced piano player. Would like position in first-class moving picture show. Address, MISS KATHRYN HUGE, Peru, Kansas.

AT LIBERTY—March 20. First class operator. Will go any place. New England or New York State. Address, P. O. Box 948, Providence, R. I.

THEATER FOR SALE.

FOR SALE—Moving Picture Theater, seating 200; paying business. Write for particulars. Other business requires owner's time and attention. Address, Box 852, Quincy, Ill.

FOR SALE—Moving Picture Theater seating 250. Fine business. Must sell account sickness. Town 12,000. Near Detroit. Address, M. L. FISHER, Wyandotte Theater, Wyandotte, Mich.

FOR SALE—Quick. Moving Picture Theater. Population 20,000. Average net profit daily, $15. Run seven days weekly. Owner desires to go on road. Quick, $6,000 cash takes it. Licensed service only. Address, E. J. MYRICK, P. O. Box 1076, Missoula, Mont.

FOR SALE—Prettiest moving picture theater in the State of Wisconsin in thriving city of 11,000; doing good business. Good reason for selling. Address, Western Film Exchange, 309 Enterprise Building, Milwaukee, Wis.

EQUIPMENT WANTED.

WANTED—Powers' Number Five machine, complete. 14 reels of film for sale, or trade (for machine). Acme Motion Picture Co., Calumet, Mich.

EQUIPMENT FOR SALE.

FOR SALE—Sixty cycle hundred and ten volt Ft. Wayne Compensarc, used three weeks. Johnson Amusement Co., Pigeon, Ohio.

WANTED—New Model Motograph lamp and house complete. Must be cheap for cash. Address, OPERATOR, Gem Theater, South Bend, Ind.

MISCELLANEOUS.

WANTED—Custer's last stand or fight, and slides of same. State condition, length and price. Address, B. W. M., care of Moving Picture World.

HAND COLORED SLIDES made from any clipping, photo negative. Finest work guaranteed, fifty cents, excellent for vaudeville artists, any lettering included. Photo Specialty Co., Keeseville, N. Y.

WANTED—To rent, by experienced moving picture man, Moving Picture Theater, Hall or Opera House. Address, H. A. E., care Moving Picture World.

Do You Need Money? THEN GET ON OUR LOCKED-REEL SERVICE That Gets It

No. 44 North Ninth St. PHILADELPHIA PROJECTION CO. Philadelphia, Pa.
and work in the corner WE BUY 30 REELS EACH WEEK

Trust Not Him That Hath Once Broken Faith-Shakespeare

We solicit a trial order on our unparalleled service. If we don't fulfill every promise we make, we won't expect your continued patronage. We have the films, system and everything else that goes with high grade service.

Write for prices and catalogue.

ACME FILM COMPANY, Inc.
12 EAST 15th STREET - - - - NEW YORK
Exclusive licencees of the National Program for New York City

FILMS FOR RENT 1000 Reels—No Rain. Every subject complete 12 Reels per week $12.
E. M. P. FILM SERVICE, Rooms 523-4-5-6, 225 Dearborn St., Chicago

NEW ENGLAND EXHIBITORS
Can furnish nine independent service of less than twenty-five days and commercial. Prompt personal attention.
THE PARK FILM COMPANY
1188 Main Street, :: Bridgeport, Conn.
W. M. Leighton, Prop.

FOR BLANK LEADER, ANY KIND
Write to
WASTE UTILIZATION CO.
227 E. 150th St., New York
TO EXCHANGES. Send for sample bottle Stikwik Cement

AT LIBERTY!

HENRY BELMAR
LATE DRAMATIC DIRECTOR
Powers Picture Plays
Reliable! Energetic! Resourceful!
PRODUCER, WRITER, REVISER, INVENTOR OF PHOTOPLAYS
Write, Wire or Phone
HENRY BELMAR,
2779 Webster Avenue,
Phone 3344 Tremont. NEW YORK CITY.

THEATRE SALES CO.
217 Dearborn Street, Bank Floor
CHICAGO, ILLINOIS
Long Distance Phone, Harrison 341
Dealers in Theatres anywhere in the United States and especially Chicago. Write or Call. Make Known Your Wants

"SILVERLIGHT"
Aluminum Motion Picture Curtain
Extraordinary Features Are: [illegible]
Non-crushing, tubes, corners, [illegible]
Ralph J. Golsen Supply Co. 84 Wabash Ave., Chicago

THE ENTERPRISE MODEL B
Portable Calcium Gas Outfit
is the only Substitute for Electricity for projecting Motion Picture or Stereopticon Views and is the Only Satisfactory Portable Outfit
because it operates by WATER PRESSURE, IS CONSTANT, REGULAR AND RELIABLE and has no complicated spring valves to corrode, choke up and otherwise get out of order. Is patented.
"OXONE" in SQUARE CAKES is most Satisfactory for the production of Oxygen Gas. Send for particulars
For Sale by Dealers.
Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co. MANUFACTURERS AND SALES AGENTS 564 and 572 W. Randolph Street, CHICAGO

Drummers This high grade Orchestra Drum direct from factory to you for $10.00

Shell-3x14-Solid Maple
Shell-3x15-Rosewood or Walnut
19 Rods, Kangaroo Heads Send U.S. Money or Express order. If you wish C.O.D. send sufficient to guarantee Express charges.
E. P. ZEIDLER DRUM CO. Dept. F CLEVELAND, OHIO.

Sound Effects
In Picture Machine Theaters it is very essential that the imitations and sound effects are of the kind that can be depended upon. We make only practical and serviceable imitations that will give the exact reproduction of the original. We also manufacture Chimes, Tympani, Bells, Xylophones, Drums and accessories.
LEEDY MANUFACTURING COMPANY
1055 E. Palmer St., INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

NEW FIELD BIG MONEY EASY WORK Why don't you think up plots for Motion Picture plays? It's easy, pays up to $50 a week for good work. Men and women. We teach you and help sell plots. Demand unlimited. Send for particulars.
ASS'D M. P. SCHOOLS
908 Chicago Opera House Bldg. CHICAGO

¶ Put in our Easels and Poster Frames and watch your attendance grow.

¶ We make [illegible] attractive. Electric signs or anything special in the theatrical line. ¶ Ideas developed—Low Prices—Fine Work—DON'T DELAY but write today.
THE NEWMAN MFG. CO.
717-719 Sycamore St., Cincinnati, O.

Independent Release Dates

AMERICAN.

Feb. 16—In the Land of Cactus (Dr.)....1000
Feb. 20—The College Spendthrift (Dr.)....900
Feb. 23—Strategy (Dr.)....980
Feb. 27—The Sheriff's Sweetheart (W. Dr.)....800
Feb. 27—The Shimoso System (Com.)....200
Mar. 2—College Chums (Dr.)....975
Mar. 6—Hypnotizing a Hypnotist (Com.)....615
Mar. 6—Memories (Dr.)....375
Mar. 9—The Rich and The Poor (Dr.)....1000
Mar. 13—The Fountain (Dr.)....
Mar. 16—The Jest and the Quest (Com.)....
Mar. 16—In The Room This Woman? (Com.)....

ATLAS.

Jan. 28—Irish Hearts (Dr.)....
Feb. 1—His Great Sacrifice (Dr.)....
Feb. 8—Kelly, U. S. A. (Dr.)....
Feb. 15—Coals of Fire....

CHAMPION.

Feb. 15—Her Three Proposals (Com.)....950
Feb. 22—The 9th Man (Dr.)....950
Mar. 1—A Western Girl's Choice (Dr.)....950
Mar. 8—The Vindication of John (Dr.)....950
Mar. 15—The Second Sin (Dr.)....950
Mar. 22—The Pay Roll (Dr.)....950

COLUMBIA.

Dec. 24—The Cattlemen's Feud (Dr.)....
Dec. 31—Trapped (Dr.)....
Jan. 7—Queen of the Prairies (Dr.)....

ECLAIR.

Feb. 27—"Punch" (Dr.)....595
Feb. 27—Romance of the Bomb (Com.)....370
Mar. 6—King Phillip, Jr. Pale and the Tempiara (Dr.)....975
Mar. 13—An Unforeseen Introduction (Com.)..470
Mar. 13—A Day of Storms (Com.)....450
Mar. 20—Cain (Dr.)....700
Mar. 20—The Book (Timbers (Scenic)....195

GREAT NORTHERN.

Feb. 18—The False Alarm....
Feb. 25—His Great Duty (Dr.)....
Mar. 4—The Rival Servants (Dr.)....
March 11—The Son of the Executioner (Dr.)....
Mar. 18—Between Love and Duty (Dr.)....
Mar. 18—Life and People South of the Equator (Scenic)....

IMP.

Feb. 20—Pictureland....1000
Feb. 23—Artful Kate (Dr.)....1000
Feb. 27—A Manly Man (Dr.)....1000
Mar. 2—Army Maneuvers in Cuba (Edc.)....1000
Mar. 2—The Dynamiters (Com.)....500
Mar. 6—Tracked (Dr.)....1000
Mar. 9—The Message in the Bottle (Dr.)....1000
March 13—The Secret of the Palm (Dr.)....1000
March 16—The Fisher Maid (Dr.)....1000
Mar. 20—In Old Madrid (Dr.)....1000
Mar. 23—The Penniless Prince (Dr.)....1000

LUX.

Feb. 17—Matilda Loresence (Com.)....272
Feb. 24—A Child's Prayer (Dr.)....534
Feb. 24—Mattlda Chased (Com.)....354
Mar. 3—Jack's Lucky Horseshoe (Dr.)....520
Mar. 3—On Their Honeymoon (Com.)....440
March 10—Bill in Love Again (Com.)....432
March 10—Jones's Remorse (Com.)....524
Mar. 17—Dogs Not Admitted (Com.)....534
Mar. 17—Bill Has Rheumatism (Com.)....380

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO.

(By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

Feb. 14—A Deputy's Honor....
Feb. 17—A Warrior's Squaw (Dr.)....
Feb. 21—The Way of a Red Man (Dr.)....
Feb. 24—Fate of Joe Dorr (Dr.)....
Feb. 28—A Warrior's Faith....
Mar. 3—Gwanee's Great Love....
March 2—Dick Farrell's Pride....
March 10—Her Prisoner (Dr.)....
Mar. 14—Starlight the Squaw (Dr.)....
Mar. 17—Sacrifice of Silver Cloud (Dr.)....

ITALA.

(By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

Feb. 16—Fatal Charm....
Feb. 18—Who Will Eat the Turkey?....
Feb. 23—Little Souls....770
Feb. 25—Foolshead Present....
Feb. 25—Havana Cigar....
Mar. 2—Nadi's Doll....
Mar. 4—Cato and the Flag....
Mar. 4—Foolshead More than Usual....
March 9—Nobility (Dr.)....
March 11—Foolshead Shooting (Com.)....
Mar. 16—A Dog and Two Mischeases....986
Mar. 18—Foolshead in Solree (Com.)....
Mar. 18—Toto on the State (Com.)....

AMBROSIO.

(By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

Feb. 1—The Return from Sea Side Bathing....500
Feb. 8—The Savoy Cavalry....500
Feb. 8—Tweedledum as a Detective....500
Feb. 15—The Demon....
Feb. 22—Redeeming Angel....
Mar. 1—Tweedledum Aviator....
March 1—War of the Cossacks....
March 8—Prisoner of Caucasus (Dr.)....
Mar. 15—A Coward (Dr.)....

NESTOR.

Feb. 15—The Light Beyond (Dr.)....1000
Feb. 22—His Father's House (Dr.)....998
Mar. 1—The Professor's Romance (Com-Dr.)..990
Mar. 8—In the Commissioned Ranks (Dr.)....
March 15—Was It Worth While? (Dr.)....
Mar. 22—Could You Blame Him? (Com.)....

POWERS.

Feb. 28—The Call of the Heart (Dr.)....950
Mar. 4—Lone Sweet Home (Dr.)....950
Mar. 7—When Masons Meet....
Mar. 7—The Bandit's Surprise....
Mar. 14—Gamble With Love....
Mar. 14—Come Back To Erin (Dr.)....
Mar. 14—His Wife's Tragedy (Dr.)....
Mar. 21—Four Kids (Com.)....
Mar. 21—A Tale About Christiana....
Mar. 28—Englishish (Dr.)....

RELIANCE.

Feb. 11—The Little Avenger....
Feb. 15—Three Men (Dr.)....
Feb. 18—Souls Courageous....
Feb. 22—A Plain Tale....
Mar. 1—The Trump Card....
Mar. 4—From the Valley of Shadow....
March 8—A Trick of Fortune....
March 11—Over the Hill....
Mar. 15—Come Unto Me (Dr.)....900
Mar. 18—At Swords' Points (Dr.)....
Mar. 22—When Rod Turned Gray (Dr.)....

REVIER.

Jan. 4—For Better Or Worse (Dr.)....
Jan. 11—The Gooseberry Claim (Dr.)....
Jan. 18—For the Child's Sake (Dr.)....500
Jan. 18—You Try It (Com.)....500

REX.

Feb. 28—The Story of a Prayer Rug (Dr.)....
Mar. 2—By the Light of the Moon....
March 9—The Fall of a Knight (Dr.)....958
Mar. 16—Where the Shamrock Grows (Dr.)..959

SOLAX COMPANY.

Mar. 8—Out of the Arctic (Dr.)....
March 10—Put Out....
March 15—Cecilian Hunting....
Mar. 15—A Midnight Visitor (Com.)....
Mar. 15—The Little Heiress (Dr.)....
Mar. 22—Cupid's Victory (Com.)....

THANHOUSER.

Feb. 21—For Washington (Dr.)....1000
Feb. 24—A Newsboy Hero (Dr.)....1000
Feb. 28—The Little Mother (Dr.)....
Mar. 3—Stage struck (Dr.)....
Mar. 7—The Mummy (Dr.)....1000
Mar. 10—The Spirit Hand (Dr.)....1000
Mar. 14—His Younger Brother (Dr.)....1000
Mar. 17—Robert Emmet (Dr.)....1000
Mar. 21—Divorce (Dr.)....
Mar. 21—Waiting at the Church (Com.)....
Mar. 24—The Tramp (Dr.)....

YANKEE.

Feb. 17—Her Birthday Surprise (Com.)....
Feb. 20—A Life-Time Penance (Dr.)....
Feb. 24—The Woman Who Dared (Dr.)....
Feb. 27—All for Gold (Dr.)....
Mar. 3—The Abduction of Parson Jones (Com.)
Mar. 6—Angel of the Bowery (Dr.)....
Mar. 10—The Serpent's Sacrifice (Dr.)....
March 13—The Test of Love (Dr.)....
March 17—His Double Treasure (Dr.)....
Mar. 20—The Gate (Dr.)....
Mar. 24—Love's Ebb and Flood (Dr.)....

READY FOR DELIVERY
MOVING PICTURE WORLD
Bound Volume No. 7
JULY TO DECEMBER, 1910
TWO DOLLARS, Each, $2.00 Express charges collect

THIS WEEK'S PROGRAMME OF INDEPENDENT FILMS.

Monday, March 13.

American—The Penalty (Dr.)....
Eclair—An Unforeseen Introduction (Com.)....470
Eclair—A Day of Storms (Com.)....450
Imp—The Secret of the Palm (Dr.)....1000
Yankee—The Test of Love (Dr.)....

Tuesday, March 14.

Bison—Starlight the Squaw (Dr.)....
Powers—Come Back To Erin (Dr.)....
Thanhouser—His Younger Brother (Dr.)....1000

Wednesday, March 15.

Ambrosio—A Coward (Dr.)....
Champion—The Girl and the Oath (Dr.)....950
Nestor—Was It Worth While? (Dr.)....
Reliance—Come Unto Me (Dr.)....900
Solax—A Midnight Visitor (Com.)....

Thursday, March 16.

American—The Job and the Girl (Com.)....
American—Do You Know This Woman? (Com.)....
Imp—The Fisher Maid (Dr.)....1000
Itala—A Dog and Two Mischeases....986
Rex—Where the Shamrock Grows (Dr.)....959

Friday, March 17.

Bison—Sacrifice of Silver Cloud (Dr.)....
Lux—Dogs Not Admitted (Com.)....534
Lux—Bill Has Rheumatism (Com.)....380
Solax—The Hindu Prince (Dr.)....
Thanhouser—Robert Emmet (Dr.)....1000
Yankee—His Double Treasure (Dr.)....

Saturday, March 18.

Great Northern—Between Love and Duty (Dr.)
Great Northern—Life and People South of the Equator (Scenic)....
Itala—Foolshead in Solree (Com.)....
Itala—Toto on the State (Com.)....
Powers—His Mind's Tragedy (Dr.)....
Reliance—At Sword's Points (Dr.)....

A "W" before the words drama and comedy specifies that it is a Western drama or a comedy.

To Exchanges

Have your films redeveloped and renovated by the Hockstetter Process. Endorsed and recommended by leading Exchanges.

Also soften non-inflammable film and prolong the life of the reel. We are now prepared to install plants in your premises. Write for prices.

Work done at our plant at 6oc per reel.

ORTHO FILM CO.
2726 W. Division St. Chicago, Ill.

To the Trade

We are now prepared to manufacture films for educational and advertising purposes. We go anywhere on request. Printing and developing our specialty.

Write for particulars
Demonstrations free of charge

Educational Mov. Picture Mfg. and Adv. Co.

F. W. Hochstetter S. Robinson, Prop.
2726 W. Division St. 408 Smithfield St.
CHICAGO, ILL. PITTSBURGH, PA.

EAGLE FILM EXCHANGE

WE BUY the entire output of the Independent manufacturers. Ask about our Three-locked reel system.

Posters free. Prompt service. Day and night service Write, wire or phone

143 NORTH EIGHTH STREET, PHILADELPHIA, PA

G. W. Bradenburgh

Cinematograph Films

233 NORTH EIGHTH STREET
PHILADELPHIA, PA.
Phone Market 334.

Cables: Bradfilms Philia.
Codes: A. B. C. 5th Edition.

Bargain List A1 Condition

Lest We Forget Behind. Than. $25.
Mysterious Island. Selianc. $25.
Mysterious Mormon. Than. $25.
A Tiff at the Piano. Bosun. $25.
Mary's Doll. Yankee. $35.
Love and Law. Thane $25.
Sherlock and the Detective. Champion. $25.
The Poacher. G. N. $35.
Christmas Letter. G. N. $25.
Thin Dark Line. Reliance. $35.
Upper Sandhurst. Americus. $35.
Lucky Teddy Bear. Imp. $35.
Her Home Mistake. Americus. $35.
Looking Forward. Than. $35.
Miss Bunny's Daughter. Bison. $35.
Inspector Remedy. Nestor. $35.
Little Ned's Tobacco. Imp. $35.
Why the Upper Girl. American. $35.
Jane Johnson in Training. Special make. $35.

The following Reels at the Rate of $30 per Reel:

A Child's Judgment. Imp.
The Woman Hater. Powers
Sin Rums the Way. Reliance.
Wild Flower and the Rose. Than.
The Revolving Doors. Imp.
The Poor Student. Imp.
A Fight for Millions. Yankee.
John Halifax. Than.
Regeneration. American.
Value Beyond Price. Than Western Justice.
A Brave Western Girl. Bison.
A Plucky Western Kid.

The following Reels at the Rate of $20 per Reel:

The Carmelite. Eclair.
Son of the Wilderness. Ambrosio.
Boy's Half Holiday. Pathé.
Man in the Iron Mask. Cines.
After the Fall of the Ragie—Theatre of Pheumerous
Bobby's Baby Boy—Butcher's Bill Hepworth.
The Last of the Stuarts. Cines.
Fighting Parson. Nestor.
A Daughter's Devotion.
Good for Evil. Italia.
The Farmer's Son. Italia.
The White Lie. Italia.
Loyalty Dead.
Adhemar, Duchess of Guesa. Italia.
The Latter Hope of Holland. Than.
A Game for Two. Imp.
A Royal Romeo. Imp.
The Black Hand. Pathe.
The Time Lock Safe. Imp

FILM HIRING DEPARTMENT

5000 ft. of best films at lowest trade rates with extra subjects, releases A 1 condition, $25 per week. 12 reels $9.00 per week with posters.

Three Shipments Weekly.

We have films in our hiring department no other exchange is able to buy.

Titles made at the rate of nine cents per foot. Any films not listed please make inquiries for in the above as I have a small part of most films. All films supplied by us include an agreement not to exhibit in areas not allotted. All films sent C. O. D. with privilege of examination on receipt of express charges. Agents wanted for England, Italy, Germany, India and Japan.

Used Extensively

BY THE

UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT

THE ROYAL

Standard Typewriter

The Simplest, Strongest and Most Practical Typewriter made

$65.00

ROYAL TYPEWRITER CO.

Royal Typewriter Bldg. NEW YORK

21 Monroe St., Chicago, Ill.

THE J. C. COGHLAN CO.

Broadway and 17th Street
New York City.

SECOND-HAND FILM NEW FILM

CAMERAPHONE FILM WITH NEW RECORDS

The Largest Dealers in New and Second Hand Film in the United States

Association and Independent

One Vote ...	$25.00
Tobacco Boss Fights Anti-Cigarette Law ...	25.00
Jane Johnson in Training ...	25.00
The Confederate Cave Reel, 1 ...	25.00
The Confederate Cave Reel, 2 ...	25.00
Saved from the Tide, 1,000 ft. ...	15.00
The Suicide Club, 1,000 ft. ...	10.00
Caught on Labor Day ...	10.00
Why Mary Went Home ...	10.00
The Hand of Time, 1,000 ft. ...	10.00
The Livingston Case, 1,000 ft. ...	10.00
In the Navajo's Power, 1,000 ft. ...	10.00
Great Train Robbery, 1,000 ft. ...	10.00
The Call, Biograph, 1,000 ft. ...	10.00
Indian's Adopted Daughter, 1,000 ft. ...	10.00
A Hundred Dollar Bill, 1,000 ft. ...	10.00
Mystery of a Diamond Necklace, 1,000 ft. ...	10.00
Running After a Helmit—Juggins Motor Scatter ...	10.00
Miraculous Fluid—The Prodigal Son..	10.00
Championship of England Won by a Fault, 1,000 ft. ...	10.00
Romance of Old Madrid, 1,000 ft. ...	15.00
Artful Art—The Miser, 1,000 ft. ...	10.00
Love of a Gypsey, 1,000 ft. ...	10.00
The Girl and the Outlaw ...	10.00
Quick Change Mesmerists, Magic Table ...	10.00
The Orphan, 1,000 ft. ...	10.00
Bridal Couple Dodging the Camera, 1,000 ft. ...	10.00
Dog Circus, 1,000 ft. ...	10.00
The Parcel Post Bandit—Burning of Stagecoach ...	10.00
The Burglar Cow's Heart ...	10.00
How to Pan Reels ...	5.00
The Wrong Bag, Barney Reese's Trouble ...	5.00
The Terrible Kids, 1,000 ft. ...	5.00
A Run Out the Mowers, 1,000 ft. ...	5.00
Orgies of Herodias, 1,000 ft. ...	5.00
The Dark Mystery, Can Crime a Scientist ...	5.00
Daddy Has Grown Quarrelsome, 1,000 ft. ...	5.00
Curtains Deceptions, A Woman's Plan ...	5.00
No Answer and Divorce—Love and War ...	5.00
Misadventures of a Bear—Funny Scenes ...	5.00
The Diamond Thieves—Chasing to New Mexico ...	5.00
Hooligan Incited Against His Will, ...	5.00

SPECIAL

Pathe's Hand Colored Passion Play, A. 124 Scenes ...

TRAVELLING SHOWMAN'S OUTFIT

Electric Transforming Motor Mechanism Complete ...

Harmonium Organ and Music Ready for Use ...

Show Proclaiming ... Sent of Film Exchange

Conditions and Solicitors Wanted

ALL GOODS SHIPPED SUBJECT TO EXAMINATION ON RECEIPT OF EXPRESS CHARGES

COMPLETE LISTS SENT FREE UPON REQUEST

The Chautauqua Film Exchange

Get Ready to Use the BEST Service.
Releases Begin Soon

Write to-day for our list and terms

356 Dearborn Street - CHICAGO, ILL.

TAYLOR'S THEATRICAL AGENCY

THEATRICAL TALENT IN ALL LINES FURNISHED ON SHORT NOTICE

SINGERS, PIANO PLAYERS DRUMMERS, LECTURERS, CASHIERS, DOORMEN, MANAGERS AND OPERATORS

FREDERICK C. TAYLOR, PROPRIETOR

49 West 28th St., New York City.

TELEPHONE 1405 MADISON SQUARE

SPECIAL ROLL TICKETS

The Big Ticket. Any Printing Any Colors

5,000 . . . . $1.25 20,000 . . . . $4.60 50,000 . . . . $7.50
10,000 . . . . $2.50 25,000 . . . . $5.50 100,000 . . . . $10.00

Get the Samples Stock Tickets, 6 Cents

NATIONAL TICKET COMPANY - - - Shamokin, Pa.

THE HOME OF IDEAS — B B — TRADE MARK

BANNERS BRING BUSINESS AND WE CAN PROVE IT

CUT OUT THIS AD AND MAIL IT WITH A DOLLAR ANY TIME BEFORE APRIL 1st, AND WE'LL SEND, POSTPAID, ONE OF OUR 3 x 12 FT. BANNERS FOR ANY SUBJECT, LICENSED OR INDEPENDENT. GIVE MAKER'S NAME, RELEASE DATE, TIME YOU WANT IT—WE'LL DO THE REST.

This offer good till April 1st only.

¶ Remember that our banners are not cheap printed affairs but durable, attractive, hand-made signs, with air-brush (raised effect) work such as you would pay $2.00 to $3.00 for elsewhere. Can be mailed or packed with the film and have eyelets in the corners to facilitate hanging.

SINGLE BANNERS, $1.15, POSTPAID (IN U. S.), formerly $1.35
ON STANDING ORDER OF 6 PER WEEK $5.75 PREPAID EAST OF MISS. RIVER $6.50 WEST OF MISS. RIV.
(Formerly $6.00 plus charges)

90c. extra for each banner in excess of 6. Terms: Cash with orde

B. B. SIGN CO., Cleveland, Ohio

WURLITZER

57TH YEAR 55TH YEAR

Wurlitzer Piano Orchestra built in the front of the Gaither Theater, Cincinnati

The Leading Picture Theaters are Installing

Wurlitzer Automatic Musical Instruments

They furnish better music than musicians and cut out that great expense. 50 different styles. Call at nearest branch or write for big 84-page catalog

THE RUDOLPH WURLITZER COMPANY

CINCINNATI 117 to 121 E. 4th — CHICAGO 266 & 268 Wabash — NEW YORK 25 & 27 W. 32nd — PHILADELPHIA 1835 Chestnut
ST. LOUIS 912 Pine — CLEVELAND 206 Prospect — BUFFALO 701 Main — COLUMBUS, O. 57 E. Main

THE ONE BEST SOUVENIR

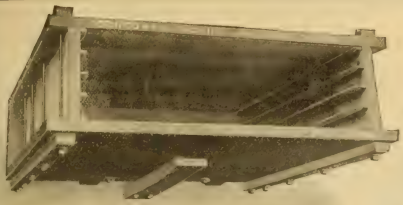
S. R. O. EVERY NIGHT

5c. EACH

$5.00 Per Hundred

This beautiful Souvenir Spoon is guaranteed Solid Silver Plated French Gray Finish and the latest design. Write today for sample and 3 plans that will fill your house to capacity.

UNITED STATES FACTORIES CO. MANUFACTURERS 40 Dearborn Street, Chicago



Corcoran Moving Picture Tanks

Develop your films to perfection. Save Time and Reduce Your Expenses by using a "Corcoran Film Development Tank." All up-to-date houses are now installing the "Corcoran System."

SEND FOR PRICE LIST No. 4.

A. J. CORCORAN, Inc.
No. 15 John Street - - - N. Y. City

Atlas Disinfectant

IS MADE IN TWO FORMS Odorless or Perfumed

1 gallon cans $1.50 per gallon
5 " " 1.40 " "
10 " " 1.30 " "

F.O.B. PHILA., PA.

Superior in quality to any disinfectant on the market

Ask your exchange for a circular or write us direct.

ATLAS SUPPLY CO.
Manayunk. Philadelphia, Pa.

WHY SEND TO EUROPE FOR

FILM PERFORATING DIES

When we can make them for you?
High-class repairing and alterations on Foreign Machines.

THE A. DEWES COMPANY
249 Centre Street, NEW YORK
'Phone, 2351 Spring

Write for Catalogues and Prices

OPERA CHAIRS
MACHINES CURTAINS SUPPLIES
UNIFORMS DECORATIONS

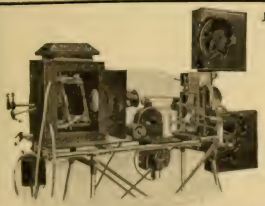
For Motion Picture Theatres

ILLINOIS M. P. SUPPLY CO. CHICAGO, ILL.
162 Washington Street, Suite 309-310



THE "STANDARD"

The Machine That Gives Results

FULLY GUARANTEED

When you put a "Standard" in your booth you do away with trouble, at least as far as your machine is concerned. Never lose the loop, and the picture it projects cannot be equalled.

AMERICAN MOVING PICTURE MACHINE COMPANY
101 BEEKMAN STREET - - - - NEW YORK CITY

"ELECTRA"
PINK LABEL
CARBONS

KNOWN AROUND

THE WORLD

Sole Importers

HUGO REISINGER
11 Broadway New York City

W. E. GREENE FILM EXCHANGE, Inc.

The Oldest and Largest Independent Film Exchange in New England

The House of Quality and Satisfaction

MR. EXHIBITOR :

If you are desirous of finding out how to improve your present service and increase your daily attendance call and have a confidential chat with us. If you are unable to call, drop us a line.

W. E. Greene Film Exchange
INCORPORATED
228 Tremont Street, Boston, Mass.
Telephone 3790 Oxford

National Exclusive Program

WEEK OF MARCH 13th

MONDAY
REVIER
Madame Cherry
ROYAL
Missing Heiress

TUESDAY
COLUMBIA
A Terror of the Plains
CINES
Tears

WEDNESDAY
UNITED Faded Violets
FILM D' ART
Death of Barbarossa

THURSDAY
COLONIAL
The Federalist
REVIER
The Breach

FRIDAY
ARROWHEAD
With the Aztecs
COLUMBIA
The White Mustang

SATURDAY
CAPITAL
On the Potomac
COMERIO
Peter the Hermit

Distributed by A. G. WHYTE
36 East 23d Street New York City

NATIONAL FILM MFG.
AND LEASING
CO.

Dreams and Realization

We Have Crossed the Bridge

Exclusive Service an Accomplised Fact.

The details of organization have been accomplished and we are prepared to begin releasing March 13th.

The work of launching a new program is a big task; the flood of correspondence calling for information has been, and is being answered just as rapidly as possible.

We are mindful of your right to know the whole story, and are appreciative of your request for it. To those entitled to know (the exchanges and exhibitors) the answer is being given. Our pictures will best answer your questions, however, and we feel that the passage of each week will more firmly mark the strength and purpose of the movement.

The exclusive program as shown by our correspondence is endorsed as the logical solution to your troubles.

Exhibitors, send in your name for our mailing list. Address Dept. B.

National Film Mfg. & Leasing Co.

INCORPORATED

12 East 15th Street New York City, U. S. A.

FOLDING CHAIRS

For Moving Picture Shows, Grand Stands, Assembly Halls, etc. In sections if wanted.

Write for Catalog No. 2

The Kauffman Manufacturing Co.
ASHLAND, OHIO

OPERA CHAIRS

FOR EVERY PURPOSE
1,000 STYLES

ESTABLISHED 1865
WRITE FOR CAT. No. 31

The A. H. Andrews Co.
174-176 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.
Branches in all leading cities

CHEAP
STEEL FRAME
THEATRE CHAIRS
ABSOLUTELY
NON-BREAKABLE

Suitable for small Theatres and Moving Picture Shows. We carry these chairs in stock and can ship immediately.

Second Hand Chairs
Also seating for Out-of-door use.
Address
Dept. W.

STEEL FURNITURE CO., GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.
New York Office: 150 Fifth Avenue

The Automatic Theatre Chair

It is a friend to the public.
It advertises your theatre and makes your business grow.
It folds automatically and can be revolving, stationary or self righting.
It is the only sanitary chair.
It is a space-saver, life-saver and money-saver.
It is the world's greatest theatre Chair.
If you have not seen our latest models, investigate.
Write today for circular A.

THE HARDESTY MFG. CO
Canal Dover, Ohio, U. S. A.

FILMS FOR SALE. 50 Reels of Films
$8 to $16 per Reel
Second-hand one pin Edison machine, $100.00
Mayer Silverman, 105 4th Ave., Pittsburg, Pa.

Opera and Assembly Chairs

Most popular priced chairs on the market for picture show use.
Prompt Shipments. Write for Catalogue
PEABODY SCHOOL FURNITURE CO.
North Manchester - - Indiana
New York Agents: ROBERT J. EHLERS CO.
Lexington Ave. and 43d St. - New York, N. Y.

The Independent Film Exchange
of Pittsburg, Pa.

The Pioneer Independent Exchange of Western Pennsylvania buying the output of the Sales Company.

We have a few choice runs that we can let out at reasonable prices. Write us.

INDEPENDENT FILM EXCHANGE, Inc.
A. S. DAVIS, Manager
415 Ferry Street, PITTSBURG, PA.

WE WANT

ONE THOUSAND
Moving Picture Men

to operate PREMIUM pin machines and get rich, or if already so, to get more wealth. Why not you? PREMIUM pin machines have become an institution in every candy store. By placing a machine in your retailer's store you will monopolize his trade and squeeze out competition.

Mr. Flint of Mo. writes: "Kindly accept thanks for introducing me to a gold mine."

Ten machines will support you. Fifty machines operated will prove a mortgage lifter to you.

We make them out of Oak or Metal.

Percentage of winners arranged so that from every twenty dollars deposited in the machine twelve dollars will be your profit. If so advised will make it still more.

Write to-day for exclusive territory to

PREMIUM VENDING COMPANY
56-58 WALNUT ST. PITTSBURG, PA.

Uniforms Stylish Nobby Cheap

Coat and Pants like cut $ 11½ as low as $7.50.
Caps, $1.00.

Send for our catalogue of Uniforms and cap, samples of cloth and prices before ordering elsewhere.

R. W. STOCKLEY & CO.
810 West Walnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.
Mfrs. of Uniforms and Equipments

The Best Uniforms

For the money

Natty Up-to-Date Styles

For Employees of Moving Picture Theatres

Write for illustrated catalog and samples of cloth.
Free on application.

D.KLEIN&BRO.
927 Market Street
PHILADELPHIA, PA.

NEW SLIDES

For the following Songs —JUST OUT

I'd Love to be Loved by a Girl Like You Yearning
Take Me Back to Baby-land.
Going Back to My Old Girl.
My! What a Funny Little World This Is!
In Winter.
When the trees are dressed in crimson and in gold.
King Chanticleer.
Killarney, my Home o'er the Sea.
Dancing Starlight.
Broncho Nell.
For Killarney and You.
My Country Has First Call.
Mandy Lou.
Dolores.
The Best Place of All.
The Moon Swings Low
Springtime Brings Roses and You.
You're the Sweetest Girl in All This World To Me.

De WITT C. WHEELER
120 W. 31st St. New York City

OPERA CHAIRS

GEO. W. BENNETT
744 W. 5th Street
CINCINNATI OHIO

Xylophones, Orchestra Bells, Chimes, Forks, etc. Send for free illustrated catalogue.

J. C. DEAGAN
3800-3810 N. Clark St., Chicago, Ill.

If you are in the Market for

SECOND HAND FILMS

Write to the largest and most reliable Dealers and Importers of these goods in the U. S.

International Film Traders
German Savings Bank Building
147 Fourth Avenue, NEW YORK CITY

HAVE GOOD MUSIC

Singers, Pianists, Trap Drummers and Orchestras. Guaranteed Artists Always on the Wire.

AMERICAN THEATRIC L SINGERS AGCY.
59 Dearborn St., CHICAGO, ILL.
Hilliard Campbell, Mgr.

Three treatments guaranteed for. We make the same offer to you. Why hesitate to call on longer loathing

THE MORTIMER FILM CLEANER

Grab it quick. First come first served. Plenty of advertising matter. Send the coupon.

FIDELITY BUILDING
Portland, Maine

Moving Picture Pianists

Are you "working up" your pictures? If not, why not? If so, you want some good melodramatic music. Send for free sample page of "Orpheum Collection of Moving Picture Music." Now being used and praised by many of the best houses in the country.

PRICE 75 CENTS

Also latest cue music series 1910 for 10 parts and piano, $1.00.

1-4 discount on both numbers.

CLARENCE E. SINN
1501 Sedgwick St CHICAGO, ILL.

Film Announcement Titles

Any of the following Announcements sent by mail upon receipt of price:

That's All, Good-Night—15 ft.
Hand Colored Trick Film..... $2.00
(Same Black and White) 1.50
Entire Change of Program To-morrow—10 ft.
Hand Colored 1.00
(Same Black and White) 1.00
We thank you for your patronage and ask you to call again—30 ft.
Hand Colored 3.00
(Same Black and White) 2.00
Next Show in Five Minutes—10 ft.
Hand Colored 1.50
(Same Black and White) 1.00

Will the Ladies Please Remove Their Hats so Others Can See? 20 ft.
Hand Colored, Trick Film - $3.00
(Same Black and White) - 2.00

Send for price on our F. A. Film service

French American Producing and Manufacturing Co.
918 Madison St., CHICAGO, ILL.

OUR PATENT ELECTRIC BELLS create great enthusiasm in Moving Picture Houses, play from a keyboard as a solo instrument, or as an accompaniment to songs. Twenty-five Bells, two octaves chromatic, including resonators, nameplate and keyboards, $75.00.

J. C. DEAGAN
3800 3810 N. Clark St. CHICAGO, ILL.

FILMS FOR RENT

New Films High Class Service

The Pioneer House, With 8 Years' Experience and $250,000.00 Back Of It

Write Today for Terms

EUGENE CLINE
57 and 59 Dearborn St., Chicago

Time is Money

There is no way you can employ your time to better advantage than in finding out how to get more for your money.

A few moments spent in testing Bio Carbons will go a long way toward improving your present results without spending more money—in fact, you can save money at the same time, because Bio Carbons last from 25% to 40% longer than the ordinary sort.

Buying Carbons without insisting on the Bio is just like selling gold dollars for seventy-five cents—just 25% thrown away.

Bio Carbons are sold, not for the highest price we think the customer will stand for, but for the lowest price consistent with quality.

We wish especially to call attention to the fact that, on account of the wholesale nature of our business, we are unable to handle retail business as economically and satisfactorily as local dealers, and users of Bio Carbons will be able to buy to better advantage from their film exchanges than direct from us. We will, however, sell direct to all customers who cannot obtain Bio Carbons otherwise.

CHARLES L. KIEWERT COMPANY,

LARGEST IMPORTERS OF FLAME ARC LAMPS AND CARBONS IN AMERICA.

39 Cortlandt Street, New York
114 Huron Street, Milwaukee, Wis.
309 Carson St., Pittsburg, Pa.
58 Plymouth Court, Chicago, Ill.
195 Fremont Street, San Francisco, Cal.
15th and Pine Streets, St. Louis, Mo.

ATTENTION! EXHIBITORS

Stop--Look--Listen

WE ARE BUYING EIGHTEEN REELS PER WEEK FROM THE START

The cream of the Independent output as handled by The Motion Picture Distributing & Sales Company.

Mr. Exhibitor We want your business. We need your help. You need ours. We are in a position to furnish you any service you may desire. Look at the following service from which you can select:

3 reels first day from release	3 reels sixth day from release
3 reels second day from release	3 reels seventh day from release
3 reels third day from release	3 reels eighth day from release
3 reels fourth day from release	3 reels ninth day from release
3 reels fifth day from release	3 reels tenth day from release

And so on to thirty days and thereafter.

Don't hesitate, but write, wire, 'phone or call immediately, as these bookings are rapidly being taken up by the wide-awake exhibitor, who can readily see what the future has in store for him. Beware of any monopoly which may cause your ruin. Be independent and be your own boss. Book the service needed by you. Remember the dollar is your best friend, and it is up to you to see that you get what your dollar pays for.

A Word to the Wise is Sufficient.

Open for Business March 6th, 1911

MR. J. C. MAYER, Mgr., Formerly with Lubin Film Service Co.

THE EXHIBITORS FILM SERVICE CO.

23 NORTH 9th ST., PHILADELPHIA

Save Tickets

AND

Eliminate Choppers

at the entrance to every Theatre and Amusement Place

GET THE COUNT WITH

JONES DUPLEX CHECK GATE

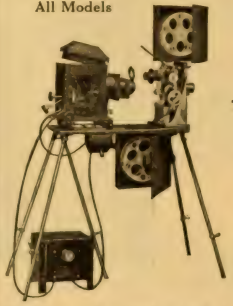
and you GET all the money

Ask us to send you further details

JONES CHANGE REGISTER CO.
INCORPORATED
18 BROADWAY NEW YORK CITY

EDISON KINETOSCOPES

All Models



NONE GENUINE WITHOUT THE TRADEMARK

Holds the Record for Durability

Beware of Imitations

Supplies and parts in stock for Edison and all other machines

Get my prices before purchasing elsewhere

Expert Repair Department

under the management of Otto Brautigam
ALL REPAIRS GUARANTEED

Opaque Projectors For Home and Professional Use

Asbestos Booths Approved by National Board of Fire Underwriters

Automatic Projectors For Advertising Window Display

Mirror Screen Superior Brilliancy of Picture Demonstrated

YOU ARE INVITED

to visit my demonstrating room and inspect all home and professional apparatus in actual use.

Harry A. Mackie

853 Broadway New York
PHONE 2478 STUYVESANT

"Mirror Screens" Glass Curtains "Transparent Screens"

Daylight Pictures

Perspective and Clearness.

Rests the Eyes

New Process of Manufacturing makes them more perfect and more wonderful than ever.

We can tell you how to pay for one in two weeks by increased receipts.

CURTAIN OR WHITE WALL GLASS CURTAIN

Are you required to throw your picture from the rear?

Our new TRANSPARENT SCREEN has the world beat.

Nothing like it on the market.

Be the first in your city.

Like the "Mirror Screen" it is a Joy and Money Getter

Address all communications to

MOTION PICTURE SCREEN CO.

SHELBYVILLE, INDIANA

"ARCO-B"
BIOGRAPH CARBONS

ARE made expressly for Motion Picture Work. Are of the Highest Grade. Are Sold at right prices, commensurate with High Quality. Are Carried in stock by the leading Film Exchanges of the Country, and are Imported Exclusively by us.

¶ "Just as good as Arco-B" is the statement frequently made. A complimentary acknowledgment of the High merit of

ARCO BIOGRAPH CARBONS

¶ Insist upon getting the genuine article. Each individual Carbon bears our trade mark. - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - -

L. E. FRORUP & COMPANY, Importers

232-234 GREENWICH STREET NEW YORK

CAREY PRESS, N. Y.

Vol. 8, No. 12 March 25, 1911 Price, 10 Cents

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD

THE ORGAN OF THE PHOTOPLAY AND ALLIED INTERESTS

NEW YORK

REMEMBER

Send for Catalogue G When You Want to Buy

"Power's" Means Perfect in Moving Pictures

A MOVING PICTURE MACHINE
A DISSOLVER
A CURRENT SAVER
A RHEOSTAT
AN ARC LAMP

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY,
115 NASSAU STREET NEW YORK

"For thirteen years the leading makers of Moving Picture Machines."

THE THANHOUSER LOBBY-DECORATOR

with two new decorations for your lobby every week, is now a regular feature of

The Thanhouser News the "Exhibitors' Guide" sent FREE OF CHARGE to all who can show connection with the Moving Picture business. Drop a card to Publisher, Thanhouser News, New Rochelle, N. Y.

THE THANHOUSER

WO-A-WEEK "2-4-U and GOOD ONES, TOO!"

Released Tuesday, March 28.

Another Thanhouser War Story The Impostor is just such a Civil War subject as you'd expect the producers of "For Her Sake" to turn out. It presents so faithful and lifelike a portrait of the days it deals with, that you'll think the great Brady took a moving picture camera South with him and we discovered his long-lost reel. Certainly, all the re-discovered Brady Collection of war photos will not surpass this motion film as an accurate picture of Rebellion time. Only the knowledge that moving pictures are a late invention will convince you that the reel wasn't done in the actual battle days of '61. The story it tells is a very gem of ingenuity, with a perfect "Thanhouser twist."

No. 197. Code Word, Postor.

THE THANHOUSER LOBBY-DECORATOR

with two new decorations for your lobby every week, is now a regular feature of

The Thanhouser News the "Exhibitor's Guide," sent FREE OF CHARGE to all who can show connection with the Moving Picture business. Drop a card to Publisher, Thanhouser News, New Rochelle, N. Y.

Released Friday, March 31.

The Thanhouser Classic Silas Marner

is a reel for which you must "Say Thanhouser to the Exchange Man" QUICK. There is no hamlet so small but that the wonderful tale of Silas Marner is read and revered there, and all exhibitors who have shown "Thanhouser Classics" to big business, are taking extra pains to grab this one. So fire your order at your exchange man before he gets everybody else's. Get up near the head of the line! Apropos the story the picture tells, let us tell you that it has enough heart interest to supply any THREE ordinary-subjects.

No. 198. Code Word, Marner.

THANHOUSER COMPANY

NEW ROCHELLE NEW YORK

THE THANHOUSER LOBBY-DECORATOR

with two new decorations for your lobby every week, is now a regular feature of

The Thanhouser News the "Exhibitors' Guide," sent FREE OF CHARGE to all who can show connection with the Moving Picture business. Drop a card to Publisher, Thanhouser News, New Rochelle, N. Y.

CHICANERY

THAT'S what the exhibitor must avoid. Sophistry and artifice are the "stock in trade" of those whose object in business is to entirely eliminate competition.

COMPETITION is STIMULUS. We value it because it has spurred us on in effort—better quality.

To prove it, review our productions for the past year, Messrs. Exhibitors, then ask yourselves whether it is not necessary for the preservation of your business that you go INDEPENDENT—clean, straight, open business methods and this

Unexcelled Program

EVERY MONDAY

AMERICAN—American Film Manufacturing Company
ECLAIR—Eclair Film Company
IMP—Independent Moving Pictures Company
YANKEE—Yankee Film Company

EVERY TUESDAY

BISON—New York Motion Picture Company
POWERS—The Powers Company
THANHOUSER—Thanhouser Company

EVERY WEDNESDAY

AMBROSIO—New York Motion Picture Co.
ATLAS—Atlas Film Company
CHAMPION—The Champion Film Company
NESTOR—David Horsley
RELIANCE—Carlton Laboratories
SOLAX—Solax Company.

EVERY THURSDAY

AMERICAN—American Film Manufacturing Company
IMP—Independent Moving Pictures Co.
ITALA—New York Motion Picture Company
REX—Rex Moving Picture Mfg. Company

EVERY FRIDAY

BISON—New York Motion Picture Company
LUX—R. Prieur
SOLAX—Solax Company
THANHOUSER—Thanhouser Company
YANKEE—Yankee Film Co.

EVERY SATURDAY

GREATNORTHERN—Great Northern Film Co.
ITALA—New York Motion Picture Company
POWERS—The Powers Company
RELIANCE—Carlton Laboratories

List of BUYING EXCHANGES, February 25th, 1911

All others offering these brands for rent can supply only dupes or worn-out subjects

ALABAMA.

Dixie Film Co., 508 Chamber of Commerce Bldg., Birmingham.

CALIFORNIA.

California Film Exchange, 1065 Mission St., San Francisco.
Miles Brothers, 780 Turk St., San Francisco.
Miles Brothers, 411 West 8th St., Los Angeles.

CANADA.

Applegath, L. J. & Sons, 145 Yonge St., Toronto, Ont.
Canadian Film Exchange, Calgary, Alberta.
Gaumont Company, 154 St. Catherine St., Montreal, Que.
Great Western Film Co., 613 Ashdown Block, Winnipeg, Man.

COLORADO.

W. H. Swanson Film Exchange, 301 Railroad Bldg., Denver.
Co-operative Ind. Film Co., Barclay Block, Denver.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Paramount Film Exchange, 428 Ninth St., N. W., Washington.
B. & W. Film Exchange, 22 Le Droit Building, Washington.

GEORGIA.

Consolidated Film Exchange, Rhodes Bldg., Atlanta.

ILLINOIS.

Anti-Trust Film Co., 79 South Clark St., Chicago.
Globe Film Service, 107 East Madison St., Chicago.
H. & H. Film Service Co., 98 Jackson Blvd., Chicago.
Laemmle Film Service, 196 Lake St., Chicago.
Standard Film Exchange, 155 East Washington St., Chicago.

INDIANA.

Central Film Service Co., 119 North Illinois St., Indianapolis.

KANSAS.

Wichita Film and Supply Co., 122 North Market St., Wichita.

LOUISIANA.

Dixie Film Co., 720 Maison Blanche Bldg., New Orleans.

MARYLAND.

B. & W. Film Exchange, 412 East Baltimore St., Baltimore.
Consolidated Amusement Co., 28 West Lexington St., Baltimore.

MASSACHUSETTS.

Boston Film Rental Co., 565 Washington St., Boston.
W. E. Greene Film Exchange, 228 Tremont St., Boston.

MICHIGAN.

Michigan Film and Supply Co., 1106 Union Trust Bldg., Detroit.

MINNESOTA.

Laemmle Film Service, 400 Sykes St., Minneapolis.

MISSOURI.

J. W. Morgan, 1310 Walnut St., Kansas City.
Swanson-Crawford Film Co., Century Bldg., St. Louis.
Western Film Exchange, 217 Missouri Bank Bldg., Joplin.

NEBRASKA.

Laemmle Film Service, 1517 Farnam St., Omaha.

NEW YORK STATE.

Albany Film Exchange, 418 Broadway, Albany.
Victor Film Service, 39 Church St., Buffalo.

NEW YORK CITY.

Empire Film Exchange, 150 East 14th St., City.
Great Eastern Film Exchange, 21 East 14th St., City.
Hudson Film Exchange, 138 East 14th St., City.
Peerless Film Exchange, 5 East 14th St., City.
Wm. Steiner Film Exchange, 110 Fourth Ave., City.

OHIO.

Cincinnati Buckeye Film Co., 309 Arcade Bldg., Dayton.
Cincinnati-Buckeye Film Co., 215 West 4th St., Cincinnati.
Lake Shore Film & Supply Co., 103 Prospect Ave., S. E., Cleveland.
Toledo Film Exchange, 310 Superior St., Toledo.
Victor Film Service, Prospect and Huron Sts., Cleveland.

OKLAHOMA.

United Motion Picture Co., 112 Main St., Oklahoma City.

OREGON.

Ind. Western Film Exchange, Swetland Bldg., Portland.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Eagle Film Exchange, 140 North 8th St., Philadelphia.
Exhibitions Film Service Co., 23 N. 8th St., Philadelphia.
Ind. Film Exchange, 415 Penny St., Pittsburg.
Phila. Film Exchange, 804 Arch St., Philadelphia.
Philadelphia Projection Co., 44 North 9th St., Philadelphia.
Pittsburg Photo Film Co., 412 Penn St., Pittsburg.
Sweade Film Exchange Co., 208 Spruce St., Philadelphia.

TEXAS.

Texas Film Exchange, 311 Elm St., Dallas

UTAH.

Co-operative Ind. Film Co., 520 Atlas Block, Salt Lake City.

WASHINGTON

Pacific Film Exchange, Globe Bldg., Seattle.

WISCONSIN.

Western Film Exchange, 507 Enterprise Bldg., Milwaukee.

Motion Picture Distributing & Sales Co., 111 E. 14th St., N. Y. City

For the "Steenth" Time
We Say

You Can't Go Wrong

By demanding as regularly as clock work TWO IMPS EACH WEEK. Don't let your exchange feed you any longer with promises—make it either "put up" or "shut up." And if you succeed in getting what you're paying for—then work your "Imp Day" for all it is worth.

Release of Monday, March 27

"SWEET MEMORIES"

One of the most fascinating pictures you have yet seen. An announcement of plighted troth recalls life story of mother, who lapses into a reverie, and her past is vividly portrayed from the cradle to old age. A pretty romance is enacted with all its attendant features. The painting of the portrait—the betrothal—the dancing of the minuet—the duel—the marriage—happy motherhood—illness and death, and love and devotion of dutiful son—all combine to tell a story replete with pathos and incidents. It is a romance that appeals and your patrons will like it.

Release of Thursday, March 30

"SO SHALL YE REAP"

Unnatural mother abandons her child in its infancy. It is cared for by a kind priest, its identity being unknown. Later, the foundling develops into beautiful womanhood. She is loved by a worthy young man who takes her photograph. The mother is dissipating with gay companions and discovers the picture. She finds the child. The just priest insists that the mother's identity be kept secret from the daughter. The mother is commanded to seek solace in solitude and is led away by nuns to the seclusion of the convent to pay the penalty of her sins. A strong story, with the daughter happily mated to the man of her choice, ignorant of her parentage.

Independent Moving Pictures Co. of America
102 W. 101st St. New York
Carl Laemmle, Pres.
All "Imp" Films Sold Through the Sales Co.

Wake Up,
Mr. Licensed Exhibitor

Don't play Rip Van Winkle any longer. See what's doing on the Independent side of the fence. Quit feeding Gen. Flimco at $2 per. Look around you. Open your eyes. Wake up, wake up! I hope you are not like the fellow who once said, "I can be convinced all right, but you bring me the man who can do it." I, Carl Laemmle, want to convince you that I can give you better films for the same money than you ever had in your life. I MEAN IT. And I'm dead anxious to "show you." I have the most perfect looking system in America to-day. And the most perfect shipping system. The best repair department. And the only cleaning department. All this is the result of five years' experience — hard work—constant study how to improve. And with all these advantages to begin with, I am acknowledged the heaviest buyer in the market to-day. After all this, doesn't it stand to reason that I am your man?

Yours for business,

Carl Laemmle,

The biggest and best film renter in the world

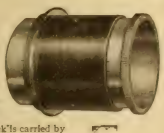
PRESIDENT

The Laemmle Film Service

HEADQUARTERS:
196-198 Lake Street, Chicago, Ill.
Fourth Floor, Sykes Block, Minneapolis, Minn.
1517 Farnam Street, Omaha, Nebraska

GUNDLACH

Projection Lenses



Will Improve Your Picture

make it sharper and increase the illumination

TO ORDER, give the height and width of the screen, width of picture wanted and distance from lens to center of screen. State make of machine.

A complete stock is carried by

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY, New York
ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MFG. CO., Chicago

Every lens is sold subject to approval

Gundlach-Manhattan Optical Company
808 Clinton Ave., So. Rochester, N. Y.

SONG SLIDES

LIDE Non-Breakable—Non-Inflammable LIDE

Colored Song and Announcement Slides
Patent Applied For

Just the kind of a slide you have all been waiting for. Guaranteed against breaking from heat or the careless operator. Send for list. Made and sold only by the original inventors. None others genuine.

NORTH AMERICAN SLIDE CO., 143 North 8th Street PHILADELPHIA, PA.

SONG SLIDES

Solax Solax Solax Solax Solax Solax Solax Solax Solax Solax Solax

TWO Solax TWO

EVERY WEEK EVERY WEEK

IT always takes a certain length of time before a winner in any line receives its due recognition, but once its superiority is recognized

NOTHING CAN KEEP IT DOWN

For four months SOLAX has been waiting quietly, confident in its strength, for the

AWAKENING THAT WAS BOUND TO COME

SOLAX HAS MADE GOOD
IT IS NOW BOOMING

NOW FOR A LONG STRING OF BEAUTIFUL PICTURES

for our releases of

WEDNESDAY FRIDAY
THE FUNNY DAY THE FEATURE DAY

REMEMBER! All our Films are Tinted and Toned throughout

RELEASES

Wednesday, March 22d	Friday, March 24th	Wednesday, March 29th	Friday, March 31st
"Cupid's Victory" (COMEDY)	"Out of the Depth" (DRAMA)	"A Package of Trouble" "She Was Not Afraid" (COMEDY)	"The Mill of the Gods" (DRAMA)

Solax Company

147 Fourth Avenue - - - - NEW YORK

Solax Solax Solax Solax Solax Solax Solax Solax Solax Solax Solax

ECLAIR FILMS

THE FILMS OF PICTORIAL QUALITY

Combining Perfect Photography with Popular Plays

RELEASE OF MARCH 27th

"Hurrah! Let Us Marry"

The Comedy of the Year—every inch charged with humor such as is to be enjoyed at intervals few and far between!! A Masterpiece as to tacing!!!

ECLAIR FILM COMPANY

NEW YORK: 31 East 27th St. CHICAGO: 35 East Randolph St.

Comical Western Champ

"The Bachelor's Old Maid"

Released Wednesday March 29th, 1911

It's as vigorous as the March Wind.
So hilariously boisterous as to fatten the lean.

TWO CHAMPS EVERY 7 DAYS

Our initial Monday release

"With 'Stonewall' Jackson"

Released Monday April 17th, 1911

A tale of historic Virginian valor.
This is a subject you can and should feature. Special Advertising matter will be forwarded freely.

Champion Film Co.

MARK M. DINTENFASS, Gen'l Mgr. :: 12 East 15th St., New York City

IT WON'T TAKE YOU

Five Hours

Or Five Minutes To Realize What A Good Picture

"FIVE HOURS"

is. The time is less than a fourth of a day, but it affords ample time for Jack Hazard to make a wager and win it with the co-operation of the "Sinned Against."

No matter how long it takes you to make up your program, be sure and take "Five Hours", and make it a good one.

It's a Comedy-Drama It's a REX

REX

REX MOTION PICTURE MANUFACTURING CO.

573-579 Eleventh Avenue, New York City

Sales Co. will sell them all in "FIVE HOURS"

Every Independent Exchange is buying REX except "5"

EVERY FRIDAY THE WORLD'S BEST—BAR NONE EVERY FRIDAY

INDEPENDENT EXHIBITORS: Are you in the same boat?

A Minnesota Exhibitor writes: "Can you tell me where I can secure Lux Films? I have written to my Exchange for them but fail to get them. I have never run but a few and they were fine."

If you are having the same trouble, drop a line to our New York City address direct.

We want you to get the World's best every week.

LUX FILMS

Released, March 24th, 1911

COWBOY FRIENDSHIP DRAMA—636 Feet

EDITH HAS SOME SPORT COMEDY—322 Feet

A two-subject reel of the kind we like to give you. A thrilling dramatic that will satisfy and a comedy that is really funny.

A Split Reel that will add Quality and Variety to the Best Programs

SEE OTHER PAGES FOR SYNOPSES AND PAST RELEASES

GET LUX The World's Best—Bar None GET LUX

R. PRIEUR

10 East 15th Street Phone, 3427 Stuyvesant New York City

Sold only through the Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company

"SUPREME IN ITS FIELD"

GREAT NORTHERN FILMS

THE FILM CONNOISSEUR'S FAVORITE BRAND

Release for Saturday, March 18th

BETWEEN LOVE AND DUTY
A meritorious dramatic production of absorbing interest

Life and People Below the Equator
A charming travel picture of nomadic tribes in the torrid zone

Release for Saturday, March 25th

THE FAKIR'S NEW SERVANT
A trick film of novel and amusing character

Troubles of a Trip
A very laughable comedy film

EXHIBITORS: Watch for our next great detective picture. It will eclipse everything to date. That's going some!

ALL FIRST-CLASS INDEPENDENT EXCHANGES HANDLE OUR PRODUCT

GREAT NORTHERN FILM CO., 7 EAST 14th STREET, NEW YORK
All Films Sold Through Sales Co.

ATTENTION! EXHIBITORS

Stop--Look--Listen

WE ARE BUYING EIGHTEEN REELS PER WEEK FROM THE START

The cream of the Independent output as handled by The Motion Picture Distributing & Sales Company.

Mr. Exhibitor. We want your business. We need your help. You need ours. We are in a position to furnish you any service you may desire. Look at the following service from which you can select:

3 reels first day from release
3 reels second day from release
3 reels third day from release
3 reels fourth day from release
3 reels fifth day from release
3 reels sixth day from release
3 reels seventh day from release
3 reels eighth day from release
3 reels ninth day from release
3 reels tenth day from release

And so on to thirty days and thereafter.

Don't hesitate, but write, wire, phone or call immediately, as these bookings are rapidly being taken up by the wide-awake exhibitor, who can readily see what the future has in store for him. Beware of any monopoly which may cause your ruin. Be independent and be your own boss. Book the service needed by you. Remember the dollar is your best friend, and it is up to you to see that you get what your dollar pays for.

A Word to the Wise is Sufficient.

Open for Business March 6th, 1911

MR. J. E. MOYER, Mgr., Formerly with Lubin Film Service Co.

THE EXHIBITORS FILM SERVICE CO.

23 NORTH 9th ST., PHILADELPHIA

Moving Picture World

THE WORLD PHOTOGRAPHIC PUBLISHING COMPANY • 125 E. 23d Street, NEW YORK
(Beach Building) Telephone call, 1344 Gramercy

SUBSCRIPTION: $2.00 per year. Post free in the United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands. Canada $2.50. Foreign Countries, $3.00. Post Paid

ADVERTISING RATES: Whole page, $60.00; half page, $30.00; quarter page, $15.00; eighth page, $7.50; one inch (3⅛ in. wide), $3.00; one inch (2¼ in. wide), $2.00; classified (no display), 3 cents per word.
TIME DISCOUNTS: 10% one months order, 15% six months, 20% twelve months.

WESTERN OFFICE: 1 Washington Street, (Post Building, Chicago). Telephone, Main 3145.

Entered at the General Post Office in New York City as Second-Class Matter.

Vol. 8 MARCH 25, 1911 No. 12

Masking the Picture.

In recent times the film manufacturers have shown great taste and most progressive artistry, if we may use the phrase to convey our meaning, in titling and subtitling their pictures. With few exceptions, nowadays the characteristic trade-mark of the picture-maker appears in the design of the title piece, the latter being of a specially executed and distinctive character. We have only to mention the Vitagraph, Pathe, the Biograph, the Kex and other title pieces to convey our meaning.

But makers show a singular reluctance to depart from the usual rectangular shape of the picture. Yet what pleasing variety of effect can be imparted to the picture by suitable masking! What we mean is this. A little while ago we were looking at a full reel subject, part of which appeared in circular form; that is to say, in the printing of one of the pieces of the film, or rather one of the sections, a circular mask had been used in the printing; consequently the picture on the screen was circular in shape, and we are bound to say that the effect was pleasing as well as popular.

This effect suggested to us that one day we would draw the attention of the film-makers, particularly those who have only been in the business recently, to the variety of pleasing effects which may be obtained by the use of suitable masks in parts of the picture. Thus, besides the circle, you have the dome, the oval; you have the upright rectangle; you have the absolutely square; you have the narrow rectangle, etc.; in fact, you can treat the moving picture just in the same manner as the lantern slide is treated. High-class lantern slide makers take advantage of the use of masks for getting greater variety of effect in the picture thrown on the screen.

The little things count in moving picture making; pleasing designs of title piece, pleasing designs of subtitle, pleasing shape to the picture. Of course this would thrown some little extra labor on the subject of printing, but we think it would pay. Exchange people are disposed to be getting more critical than ever. They are hard to persuade to buy; they will not buy pictures which are inferior in merit. Any ingenious film-maker, who today takes advantage of his opportunities for embellishing his picture as much as possible, imparts extra value to them. We commend our ideas about masking the picture to the progressive film-makers.

Too Near the Camera:

We spend a very considerable time each week in reading the criticisms of the pictures that are printed in our lay or non-technical contemporaries. We need not name these; they are tolerably well-known to our readers.

Frankly, we never fail to be edified, and we are bound to say interested and instructed, by what we read. The criticisms printed in those publications are eminently theatrical: that is to say, if we went into the geneses of the writers, we should find that they have learned their business of criticising moving pictures in the theatre. In other words, that up to within a period of two or three years back, when these publications began to deal with the moving pictures, these self-appointed authorities used to write about plays, vaudeville sketches and the like. We do not underestimate the value of this kind of criticism; our chief regret is that it does not go far enough. For example: In one of these criticisms this week, we read this phrase, apropos of a Bison photograph, "The figures were too near the camera." Now, anybody who assumes the role of a critic should, when pointing out a defect, especially a technical defect, be in a position to supply a remedy for that defect. This the writer in question is manifestly unable to do; he knows nothing about the photography of the subject.

There are very many moving pictures made nowadays, even by reputable makers, in which the figures are too near the camera: that is to say, they assume unnecessarily large and, therefore, grotesque proportions. The reason for this is manifold. Film-makers have the idea that the public want to see the faces of the figures large; consequently, the camera is placed too near the figures; or perhaps, it is an optical defect, the focus of the lens is too short.

Experienced photographers know that to get naturalness of effect in a picture a short focus lens should be avoided, otherwise you get distortion, that is unnecessary enlargement in parts of the picture. A great many of the moving pictures that are made, especially those produced in a studio, would be all the better if longer focus lenses were employed, or what amounts to the same sort of thing, if the figures were placed farther away from the camera. The Kex releases are examples, to our mind, of the proper thing to do. Here Mr. Porter works on a large stage, and places his camera at a considerable distance from his actors. The result is that he avoids abnormality of size, and when you see the pictures on the screen, they express the proper sensuous impression of size.

In the MOVING PICTURE WORLD of January 14th we printed an article on "The Multi-Focal Camera." This is a camera which, by means of a revolving lens board, enables a series of lenses of varying foci to be used. In other words, the lens is adjusted for both near and distant objects. Such a camera as this should be invaluable in the hands of moving picture makers. Of course the fundamental rule to be observed in this matter is that no figure should appear larger than life-size to the eye.

The Picture as an Aid to Industry.

The Bureau of National Industries, whose offices are at No. 11 Broadway, New York City, is one of several associations having for its object the extension of American trade both at home and abroad. The Bureau, it appears, has many representative men on its Advisory Committee, Board of Publication and Press Committee. It disseminates useful literature on the subject. We have some of this literature before us. The promotion of an

John D. Gluck.

American National Marine, An International Tribunal for World Peace, The Employers' Liability Act, The Extension of American Trade Abroad; these are some of the subjects dealt with by the Bureau's corps of speakers. So it will be seen that the Bureau is a live organization with a wide field of activity to cover. If it is instrumental in removing the reproach that the United States is practically without a merchant marine, it will do a lot of good to this country. Some people think that the money spent on the cutting of the Isthmus of Panama might very well have been spent on filling the slips between Twenty-third Street and Battery Place with American-made ocean-going steamers, instead of allowing these slips to be filled with British, French, Italian and other ships of foreign origins.

But this subject hardly lies within our province. What we are interested in, and deeply interested in, is that fact that the Bureau in this country has cast a favorable eye on the moving picture. In other words, we learn that the director, Mr. J. D. Gluck, has completed arrangements for covering an exhaustive campaign of goods of American manufacture at home and in foreign countries. In this campaign they will show moving pictures illustrating the various stages of manufacture from raw stock to finished product of each trade in turn.

Mr. Gluck proposes, we learn, to have films made illustrating the steel, woolen, thread, shipping and machinery industries, besides other pictures. These pictures will be demonstrated throughout the United States and South America before Boards of Trade, Chambers of Commerce, Business Men's Associations, Manufacturers' Associations and at the Bureau of National Industries' machinery show at the Bush terminal from September first to December first of this year.

The pictures are to be used in conjunction with special lectures to demonstrate the heavy traffic congestion in New York with a view to starting a campaign to draw away from Manhattan much of this congested traffic. To this end the lectures will be given in Brooklyn, New York City, Jersey City and Hoboken.

It will be seen, therefore, that the scheme of the Bureau of National Industries is of a twofold nature: national and local. There is no doubt that if handled in a business-like way, the films of American industries will largely promote the Bureau's objects. Especially in South America, we are convinced, this plan will work well. As regards the decentralization of New York's congested traffic, much useful work can also be done by the use of illustrative films. To make a personal reference: If the Bureau, by the aid of moving pictures, would illustrate the horrors and iniquities of the New York Subway and can be instrumental in relieving the really horrible congestion of this line, we, in particular, would bless the Bureau.

In commending the Bureau's work and its resolution to further that work by the aid of moving pictures, we conclude by stating that the Bureau invites correspondence from film-makers on this subject. It is prepared to place orders for 150,000 feet of film.

Radiographic Moving Pictures.

Radiography, or X-ray work as it is popularly known, has been before the world now for about fifteen years. Roughly speaking, it is, in a sense, just about as old as the moving picture. It was in the year 1896 that, as has been frequently pointed out in these pages, the Lumieres of Paris startled the world with their very fine moving pictures. Similarly it was at or about the year 1896 that Prof. William Carl Roentgen announced to the world that the rays from an excited vacuum tube had the power of penetrating solid bodies. Very quickly thereafter, photographic advantage was taken of this discovery.

Early in 1896, the writer of this article had his hand radiographed. That is to say, his hand having been placed upon a sensitive plate encased in an opaque envelope exposure was made to the excited tube, and when the plate was developed, the familiar spectacle of a view of the bones of the hand was obtained. Of course, this sort of thing is very common today. You can take a radiographic negative of a charming lady dressed in the height of fashion, and the chiefest things that will show in the print from the plate are the steels of her corset. The fundamental fact of radiography is that the light travels through the most opaque bodies. The consequence is you get a negative which records the opaque things hat you wear, such as the nails in your boots, the buttons on your clothes, the money in your pockets, the pin in your tie, our bones, etc., etc. Radiography ignores such comparatively transparent subjects as flesh, linen and whatever other fabrics you wear.

If we were to glance at the entire field of X-ray work in the course of this article, we should take up more space than the subject allows. Our immediate concern, of course, is to briefly consider how far the moving picture can be used in X-ray work. A moment's reflection will tell the reader that the limits of the camera's usefulness in this respect are narrow; so narrow, indeed, that we may say offhand that moving picture radiography can only manifest itself in respect of the treatment and healing of the human body. It is in the latter respect that radiography has been of chiefest use. Radiography enables shadow pictures of the diseased body or part of a body to be taken and thus it is of value to the physician or surgeon in respect of diagnosis or treatment. Before X-ray work became practicable diagnosis was very largely a matter of guesswork, but now in most cases it can be reduced to a matter of certainty.

In the course of a recent interview we had with Dr. E. H. Caldwell, of New York City, that gentleman discussed with us the possibilities of utilizing the moving picture camera, or rather its principle, for showing what we would call radiographic movement. Before explaining what is precisely meant by this, let us introduce Dr. Caldwell to the reader by saying that he enjoys a world-wide reputation in a somewhat unique position. Originally, an engineer, Dr. Caldwell some years ago qualified in medicine, although at the present he does not practise. Subsequently he turned his attention to the diagnostic value of the X-ray. The result is that today he occupies a unique position as consulting surgeon-radiographer in New York City, if not the world. He has invented his own apparatus used in radiographing the body and, generally speaking, has specialized in this difficult branch of work in a thoroughly scientific manner. Supposing you consult your doctor on some bodily trouble, the cause of which may be obscure, he will send you to Dr. Caldwell, who will radiograph you and thus get a shadow photograph of the trouble, in organs or the limb, or whatever it is that demands treatment. This picture is then handed to your doctor, who will know how to act in the matter.

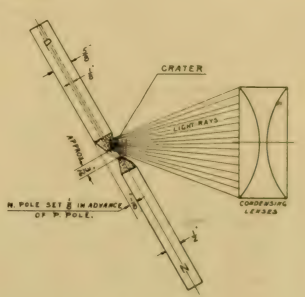
In making these radiographs, of course, no lens or camera is employed. The light penetrates through the body to the protected plate and impresses a shadow picture of the opaque parts of the body. In the print, therefore, you simply get a not particularly well defined shadowgraph, so to speak, of the part of the body radiographed.

Now comes the question with which we are vitally concerned: Is it possible to exhibit radiographs in motion? Is it possible to take them? Dr. Caldwell has been considering this matter recently and is working out a lenticular system whereby the use of large plates will be obviated. A very small plate with a high speed lens will allow of a sufficiently rapid exposure to be made. This will diminish the size of the plate necessary and consequently the cost. But now as to the question of movement. Will it be possible to get a shadowgraph on a film so that the moving parts of the body may be seen in motion on a screen. We think so. Dr. Caldwell is working to that end. It would be premature to say how in detail, but we expect at an early date to apprise our readers of the results of the doctor's experiments.

Dr. Caldwell has that type of mind which we desire to interest in the scientific side of moving picture making. It is a common reproach against the moving picture industry in the United States that comparatively little attention is paid to the making of pictures for scientific and educational purposes. In France, Germany and England, as the reader is aware, the moving picture camera is largely used for recording the results of scientific observation. Dr. Caldwell's position and attainments are such that if, as we believe will be the case, we have succeeded in enlisting the interest of a man of his eminence in scientific moving picture making, a very valuable addition to the ranks of investigators who use the moving picture camera in their work will have been made.

Carbon Setting for Projection Purposes.

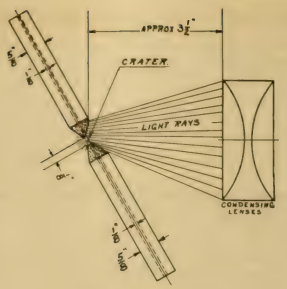
Supplementing the article under this heading in our last issue by Mr. Henry Phelps Gage, Cornell University, we quote the following from the "Kinetogram," by permission. It will be noted that the electrical expert of the Edison Manufacturing Company and also Mr. Gage both confirm the views of our Mr. F. H. Richardson on this subject:



For Direct Current.

When using Direct Current, the Upper Carbon should always be the positive pole, while the lower should be the negative pole, and the latter set 1/8" in advance of the upper, so that a crater will form in a position towards the Condensers as shown in sketch. With Carbons of the same diameter, the positive burns twice as rapidly as the negative, thereby requiring more or less adjusting downwards to keep the crater in the optical axis. For this reason some operators prefer a 5/8" soft cored upper or positive Carbon with 1/8" core, and a 1/2" hard Carbon in the lower or negative Carbon Holder. This difference in cross section compensates in the matter of linear consumption, and the crater is kept in its proper place with less difficulty. The Carbons should burn at all times as near to 3/16" apart as can be kept. Most satisfactory results are obtained from Direct Current when using from 20 to 25 amperes.

Where Alternating Current is used, the Carbons should be set in alignment, as shown in sketch, although some operators claim to get better results by placing the Lower Carbon slightly in advance of the upper. This, however, is a matter of choice, and the careful operator will usually experiment in the adjustment of the Lower Carbon until he gets it in a position most satisfactory to himself. Both Carbons should be soft cored, and kept as nearly as possible 1/4" apart. They are consumed at about the same rate.



For Alternating Current.

the Upper Carbon about 8% more rapidly than the lower, owing to the upper tendency of the flame. The most satisfactory results are obtained on Alternating Current, using from 35 to 50 amperes.

Pastime Theater, Boston.

Written Expressly for the World by Henry.

The World's New England representative is fortunate to be able to present readers of the World with a photograph and detailed story of the Pastime Theater, corner Washington and Avery Streets, Boston, as the house is one of the most elegant and up-to-date in the Hub. The Pastime was first opened to the public on Saturday, February 1, '08, and has shown itself to be a huge success ever since its inception.

The house has a width of twenty-six feet, with a depth of one hunderd and thirty feet, and a height of 28 feet.

Both inside and out, it can justly be called one of the most artistic and beautiful theaters of its kind in the New England States. In design and construction it follows the German style, which was adopted by its architects, Clarence H. Blackall and Frank Chouteau Brown, the two foremost theatrical designers of Boston. The house is the result of a special study of theater construction and decoration made just prior to the erection of the Pastime, by Mr. Blackall. The construction of the theater is of steel and concrete. The exterior decorations are of the same character as that found on many modern German playhouses. There is a large representative painting depicting music, a second one representing mirth, and still a third showing conventional scenes. Thousands of lights form various designs on the front and Avery St. side of the house. A striking feature is the name "Pastime" in mammoth letters on the entire front of the building. The entrance is worthy of attention. The walls in the vestibule are decorated with marble pilasters and brackets, and, directly over the marble ticket office, and the projecting stained glass balcony, are some concrete brackets of unique and original design. The exterior is new and modern, with an eye more toward artistic results than toward gilt and a flashy appearance.

The Pastime, which stands at the corner of Washington and Avery Sts., has electric lights on both sides. The total number of lights burning every evening on the front of the house amounts to 2,800 bulbs.

The Pastime theater has a seating capacity of approximately 375, including 25 box seats. Owing to its long and narrow shape the house has a single center aisle. The operating room is 10 x 12, and is strictly fire-proof in every way. The throw from booth to screen is 85 feet, with the Powers Cameragraph machines doing the projecting. Exhaust fans and motors keep the house well ventilated at all times.

The shows at the Pastime usually consist of 4 reels of Licensed film, and vaudeville, with illustrated songs also used. The length of a performance is usually about 2 hours, although the duration is sometimes varied to meet requirements. The house uses a pianist and trap drummer to play the pictures.

The Pastime was erected by the American Automatic Amusement Co., of which Mr. Felix Alland is both president and sole general manager.

Perhaps better than the very great majority of moving picture theaters the Pastime at this time shows the results of careful painstaking supervision. Mr. Alland for the first 2 years placed the house in charge of managers, although even then, he himself was often at the house. At the end of that time, Mr. Alland found that no one could have the best interests of his house so much to heart as himself, and decided to personally direct the theater. This personal attention is easily noticable in the house. The Pastime is always in tip-top shape, with everything and everybody working smoothly with the one idea of "Pastime theater" always with them. Mr. Alland personally picks his film program every Tuesday and Friday at the General Film Co., and stated to the World's New England representative that he had made a special study of his particular audiences as regards their preferences of pictures. Mr. Alland is one of the few men who find much display lobby advertising needless. The house is in the heart of the shopping district, and has a very large number of women among the audience. Ample exits are a feature of the house, as six means of exit were provided for. The Pastime runs from 9.30 A. M. to 11 P. M., using 2 complete shifts of employees.

Pastime Theater, Boston, Mass.

The Pastime theater is a model in every way, and a credit to both Mr. Alland and to the moving picture industry. The house is clean, refined and orderly, with nothing objectionable ever allowed. Good management, good films well porjected, and good vaudeville have all contributed to make the Pastime a successful moving picture theater.

Star Fiction Writers in the Field of the Photoplay.

Why the Magazine Favorites Have Produced Only Mediocre Work in the Writing of Scenarios, and Something About the Advantage of Being an "Unknown."

By George Rockhill Craw.

A number of American star novelists and short-story writers have written the scenarios for photoplays. The result has been little, if any, better than that of the efforts of the "unknowns" whose work has been produced upon the screen. Surely such a state of affairs must be very discouraging, you will perhaps say. If the star fiction writers fail to tell their screen stories effectively, what can be expected of the other scenario men?

"Unknowns" to the Front.

But there is no occasion for pessimism. The "unknowns," not having to combat a training of years that is wholly unfit for scenario writing, will, if they persevere, leave the fiction stars far behind. "The reason, no doubt, why so many distinguished poets and novelists—like Tennyson and Dickens—fail in the drama," says W. T. Price, the well-known critic and writer on dramatic subjects, "is because their habits of thought and methods of expression become fixed, and their genius cannot bring itself to yield to the unyielding domination of dramatic rule."

The Writhing Dramatists.

There you have it. The tyranny of dramatic rule! And in the photoplay the elimination of speech draws the chains still tighter about the writhing dramatist, resulting in elementary, primitive drama, or, if the playwright tries to soar above this, something that in most cases is very bad indeed. But why have the short-story writers failed to score as scenario writers, you may ask? Surely, you say, Brander Matthews in his work on the short story has made it plain that the best short stories are structurally good from a dramatic standpoint. My answer is that few of our short stories of today are good, and that that famous "bromidiom" of popular conversation, "Why aren't there any good stories in the magazines nowadays?" is as pat today as when Gelett Burgess listed it in his clever work on the "Sulphitic Theory," a clever research into the psychology of boredom, published in 1906. Perhaps the query might be answered by a question put by Bert Leston Taylor in the Chicago Tribune, under his waggish column, "A Line o' Type or Two," in which he asks, "Why is a magazine editor?"

Magazine Editors Inconsistent.

I know of magazines that impress religiously upon their contributors that what is wanted in short stories is strength of plot, logic of construction and situation, clearness of style, and quickness of action, but who continuously publish stories lacking in these particulars, which are written by men of reputation. Here, policy and principle are sacrificed for a name with a reputation, that the magazine may be able to say in its advertisements, "A Strong New Story by that Star Fiction Writer, ——————," the strongest thing about which may be a burglar telling a magnate's fragile wife that she hasn't "got the guts" to shoot him.

A "Swipe" from Pinero.

I have seen a magazine publish a story in which the clever thought was advanced that a life story learned piecemeal, part here, and part there, was like a puzzle. Two or three small pieces in the biography might be missing which when found would make complete the solution as to whom the life belonged. This idea was undoubtedly "lifted" bodily from Mr. Pinero's very readable play, "Sweet Lavender," the situation and dialogue in the last act expressing the same idea almost to a tee.

I have seen the same magazine, referred to above, refuse the short stories of an author who was a close student of Pinero's best constructed dramas, and who had evolved a clever short story method from him and other masters, for the expression of his own original plots, ideas and action.

"She Shivered Away from Him."

A few weeks ago a well-known writer, whose work is much sought after by the magazines, wrote about "the methods employed to create it. The principal method seemed to be the collection of tours de phrase, picked up or originated here and there, and filed for use in future stories. One of these phrases was ,"She shivered away from him," which not only creates a new predicative thrill, but suggests a unique and more or less fascinating means of locomotion. It should bring a loud "Eureka!" from the first magazine editor who eyeballs it. Little was said about the author's methods of forming the structure of a story, but these significant words appeared: "Over each sentence I labor as hard as I did in my first story. It is just as hard for me to move the story on—to get from one point to another—as it was in the beginning."

Why Star Writers Fail.

It seems that the above statement by the author referred to, shows the lack of a technical knowledge of structural progress—of the building of a logical framework, which it seems to me should always be reared before the ornaments, the tours de phrase, are carved on the pillars and entablature of a tale. It ought not to be hard to "move" a story if the rough framework of its structure has been properly reared.

It seems that more importance is given to clever tricks of phrase, by editors and authors, than to construction and logical situations, and that for that reason the question, "Why aren't there any good stories in the magazines nowadays?" has become a "bromidiom," and that it explains why our popular authors fail as dramatists, and are mediocre in the field of the picture play.

I think we must grant that much of the fame of our star writers lies in the newspaper publicity, both in the advertising and reading columns, that enterprising and merit-exaggerating publishers of their work have given them, and in the ability of these writers to make unique and unusual combinations of words that is, in the ornamentation rather than in the form of their creations or in the logic of their situations, the discrepancies of form and logic being hidden in the reader's wonder and admiration for the writer's filigree.

It is easy to see that this ornamentation is unfitted for use in the photoplay, which traffics not in words but in form and logic, and that therefore most of our fiction writers, being novices trained in such matters, produce nothing exceptional in their scenarios for photoplay production.

Most of Them Impressionists.

It would seem that most of them are impressionists, playing from one phrase to another, with ornamental fingering and non-structural counterpoint, producing little of form and knowing no symmetry nor the dramatic structural stress that is the result of logical development, such for instance as we find in a stirring passage of a Beethoven symphony. There we find the master of form and structurally logical ornamentation, just as we find such masters in the few good short stories which stand out like diamonds uncovered in a basket of waste paper. To be sure, our fiction writers work up to climaxes, but the stories usually are not convincing, through lack of proper structural development leading to the climax, which lack is made up for by scintillations of diction. Such writers cloud the issue, as is said of lawyers whose floral verbiage really has "nothing to do with the case."

The limitations of the picture rob the fiction writer of his word-play, and the result is a lack of brilliancy and a distressful showing up of his ability, both as a literary and dramatic constructionist. For his tours de phrase the star story writer is forgiven his illogical situations, but when these come to light in his photoplay, they are stripped clean and there is no reason for forgiveness. The handwriting is on the screen. It is then that he is "weighed in the balance and found wanting."

False Scents and Blind Alleys.

In the detective and mystery stories we find false scents, non-structural tricks, and blind technical alleys that serve their purpose of befuddling the reader of the printed page, but which would never do on the stage or screen, and thus the writers of such stories are deprived of their best weapons when it comes to the combat of the photoplay scenario.

After all, art is only common sense, but it is amazing how some writers can cover the lack of it by the literary tricks of syllabic charlatans. Thus, if the photoplay shall develop in our literary artists, both well known and obscure, an improved sense of form and logic, which I believe it will, the magazines and the "six best sellers" will owe it a lasting debt.

London Letter.

I was privileged to have a private view this week of an invention of which, whatever others may say about it, the inventor holds a very high opinion. It is nothing more nor less than the projection of pictures in their natural colors, as well as in black and white without the use of celluloid films. The patentee is Captain Otto Fulton, who has crowded into thirty-five years of life as many stirring incidents as fall to the lot of the average man. A Fellow of the Royal Photographic Society, he has served on the Bechuana Police Force and the Diamond Field Horse at Kimberley. He is the inventor of the Otto Fulton process, which, with stereoscopic effects, depicts colored advertisements in the front of theaters. He was awarded a gold medal at St. Louis Exhibition.

He calls his new system "film cinematography," because he uses no film in the generally understood meaning of the world "film," which in this country denotes a preparation of celluloid through which light is transmitted, showing a picture. The method of projection is that the pictures are shown by the action of reflected light. The picture to be shown is first thrown on to a mirror which, in turn, reflects it back through the lens on to the screen in the same way as by transmitted light. It will thus be seen that the whole process of animated photography is reversed. Captain Fulton holds that in studying the natural law of light and darkness, light should be extracted from darkness, and he can extract from a dark screen—through the medium of photography—natural colors as seen by the naked eye.

How is it done? Metallic shades, such as gold and silver, have been hitherto impossible to produce. That test was placed before me at the demonstration. Ordinary colored picture postcards were submitted and were reproduced on the screen in the actual colors of the postcard. It was shown that stereoscopic effects could be reproduced on the Bioscope screen, thus bringing out the realism of the subject photographed.

The material used for the pictures is composed of a specially treated opaque paper. It is non-inflammable, and it is certainly everlasting. This latter point brings out the fact that the desire of Central authorities to preserve records of historical events can, at last, be attained. It has also been found possible to secure a sharper picture with greater illuminosity than at present obtains. In Captain Fulton's invention, a step forward in the art of cinematography has been taken, and one which may revolutionize the industry, though as yet the finished article is not before us. A short period must necessarily elapse before the pictures can be submitted for public criticism.

The new idea certainly means an advance over the lantern slides. Any article can be immediately thrown on the screen by reflection, and thus no preparation is needed. The merits of the invention, particularly for medical work and demonstration of the medical science, cannot be over-estimated, and it has the greatest possibilities before it, especially in the direct, enlarged and instantaneous portrayal of normal and pathological material. Even crude sections cut by hand with the knife, were immediately delineated on the screen, giving images enlarged at will, and in their natural colors without any previous preparation. Stained, injected or prepared specimens gave the same magnified sharply defined pictures, with all the wealth of minute detail and in the colors employed.

One small section used in a more simple manner than even an ordinary lentern slide gave a picture the detail of which could be seen in the largest hall or class-room, and bearing in mind that the quickly-cut section was itself immediately used to give the picture, the saving of time and preparation will be at once manifest to medical men.

In teaching, its highest utility will be at onee recognized, inasmuch as normal and morbid sections were thrown on the screen at the same time. This graphic and vivid method of putting into parallel columns for comparison and noting the difference, together with the rapidity with which it is accomplished, would enable both lecturer and student to get through much more work, make the description much more easily understood, and be infinitely more interesting than a lantetrn slide, and it would replace micro-photographic work and micro-slides in a vast number of cases. The points to which I draw attention in this respect and reiterate are that such sections may be fresh or prepared, can be cut and immediately depicted, and they give a perfect picture in their exact colors, whether natural or artificial. This alone will be a boon to teacher and student alike.

In reference to the introductory general and medical sciences, the application of the apparatus is original and new, both in direct results and in economy of time, inasmuch as any object in the mineral, animal and vegetable kingdoms can be made to give an enlarged image in natural colors without any preparation of any kind.

Of the popular aspect of the invention there is no need to dwell upon. So far as colored animated pictures are concerned, the only drawback that appears to me is that delay would necessarily occur in the presentation of topical subjects, which the public like to have hot. There is, of course, the great immunity from fire danger. There is no celluloid employed, and what inflammable material is used is so far removed from the heat rays of the arc that fire is an impossibility. I await further developments, of which I shall keep your readers informed as soon as possible.

A. E. TAYLOR.

The Moving Picture Convention.

With the turn of the year, we beg to inform the reader that the subject of the approaching moving picture convention is engaging our attention. It will be remembered that last fall we wrote several articles on the subject, which were appreciated by our readers. The vital necessity of holding a moving picture convention has not diminished since we addressed ourselves to the task of dealing with the subject. On the contrary, the condition of the industry, as a whole, the unsatisfactory position of the exchanges, and the exhibitors, patent litigation imminent and to be apprehended—all these things point to the urgency of moving picture men getting together in a representative gathering for the purpose of arriving at a common basis of action.

We desire in this article specially to apprise the exhibitor of our intention to take the preliminary steps in bringing about the first meeting of the moving picture convention next July. This meeting will probably take place at Chicago, Ill. We want to see a large gathering of exhibitors from all parts of the United States present at that convention. Incidentally, though this is of secondary importance, we desire to see all manufacturers of films and apparatus represented at that convention, which should be of mutual interest. The exhibitor, not the exchange, not the manufacturer, is the pivot of the moving picture business, not only in this country but in other countries of the world. He it is whose voice is or should be the most effective. Let him make his voice heard in the first convention which will be held in his behalf.

Beginners "Uplifting" the Business.

F. H. Richardson.

The writer was considerably amused, recently, to hear an embryo exhibitor assert that he was entering the business with a view to "uplift it."

This man was if sober earnest. He even went the length of asserting that he didn't care whether he made money out of the venture or not. He cited the fact that there was room for vast improvement all along the line, which no one with sense and the slightest knowledge of animated pictures as projected today will deny, both as regards the projection and the whole mass of detail work preceding and connected therewith.

Beyond question the whole business might well be raised to a distinctly and decidedly higher level; also beyond question it will be, in the not distant future. These things are merely analogous to the fact that one and one make two. They are conceded by all picturedom and are prayed for by a very large portion of those connected with the shadow world.

But for the beginner—the novice—to conclude the "uplift" of the photoplay and its theater is to in any measure be accomplished by him is very nearly the acme of egotism. Fools rush in where angels fear to tread. Hundreds upon hundreds of embryo exhibitors have entered the business with a firm determination to improve upon all that has been done before, only to find their entire energies absorbed in the task of keeping their heads above the flood waters of keen competition by experienced showmen who know every crook and turn of the game, as against their complete lack of knowledge. The show business looks "easy." Its appearance of "picking dollars off bushes" has fooled many an eager novice and will fool many more. As a matter-of-fact grubbing money from the amusement business is a near relation to squeezing blood from a turnip. Every dollar the showman gets he EARNS, and earns it good and plenty, too. Of course in the early days of the picture game there really was a lot of "velvet." But those days have forever departed. The man who enters the game now may make up his mind to earn what he makes by the sweat of his brow, else he will not get it at all. True, if rightly managed the returns are ample, but no more so than in other lines of business involving similar outlay, similar risks and calling for equally shrewd, close management. "But," say you, "what has all this to do with the 'uplift?'" Just this: However excellent the intention of the novice may be he will accomplish little or nothing in the way of uplift. It is not the nature of things that a man, of no or little experience, who have had the welfare of the business at heart for years, cannot accomplish its elevation to a higher plain, what earthly show has the novice?

No. The tyro will not accomplish his aim in any appreciable degree, but he may, like thousands of equally ambitious novices who have gone before, acquire valuable, albeit somewhat costly experience. He may steer past the shoals of financial ruin which threaten every beginner, and into the safe seas of knowledge; but he will learn one thing, viz: the uplift so sadly needed will only come by slow, gradual process, in which the survival of the fittest will be a most decided factor.

Three Reel Pictures a Success.

It is very gratifying to hear from all over the country the enthusiastic reports of the success of the Vitagraph film, "A Tale of Two Cities," where the three reels have been shown together. In Brooklyn, last week, a manager secured the three reels and billed them accordingly and had to turn the crowds away. We showed a picture of the Star Theater, of Portland, Oregon, taken at night, which shows how they featured the film. Mr. Melvin G. Winstock, the manager of the Star, writes us that it was an overwhelming success. This is very essential from the box office viewpoint, but Mr. Winstock says that besides the financial benefit, the exhibition of a picture of this class has a far greater benefit to the business in that it creates an impression upon the intelligent people of the community and gains new patrons to the photoplay. The absurd system of releases which prevented this picture being shown in its entirety in the first run theaters no doubt delayed the glory which belonged to the Vitagraph Company for their noble effort, but the picture will continue to be a feature program for months to come.

Another three reel picture that is filling the shows is the Buffalo Bill series. We have before us a letter from a Pennsylvania exhibitor who ran this series with such success for a week that he re-engaged it for another week with equal success. This should be read by the daily change maniac who thinks that a picture fails to draw after the first day.

Important to Ohio Exhibitors.

I wish to advise the exhibitors that Mr. C. M. Westcy is traveling in the interest of the Exhibitors' League and all exhibitors are perfectly safe in paying the amount of their membership to him, and we would ask all of our members to extend to him all of the assistance possible in securing new members, and building up the organization.

Enclosed please find copy of a new bill, which certain influences in Columbus are trying to have introduced in the House of Representatives. This bill is obnoxious and dishonest. It is not intended to protect the public, or to bring about a better condition to safeguard anyone, or anything. In my opinion the bill is for the sole purpose of frightening the manufacturers and others. We all know what films are made of, hence the desire on the part of somebody in Columbus to frighten the manufacturers. If this bill is introduced and the one introducing it can show ten letters from responsible people who have asked for this bill, we will be very much mistaken in our opinion. No one wants this bill, it means nothing, it helps no one, it protects no one, and for what purpose it is offered, only those back of it know. It is this kind of bill that disgusts the public, and brings discredit upon honest legislators. Everyone knows that the picture shows of Ohio are thoroughly protected from fire, and that the inspections of picture shows are made by competent, painstaking officials, and every exhibition man is complying with the law, and why such a bill should be presented in any legislative body is beyond the comprehension of any man familiar with the amusement business in the State of Ohio. This bill looks bad to a man who understands anything about the picture business or legislation. I hope those interested in the passing of a bill like this will not succeed in deluding any representative into offering it before the Legislature.

Yours truly,

M. A. NEFF.

A BILL.

Prohibiting the use of motion or moving picture films or slides containing gun cotton or any highly inflammable or explosive material.

BE IT ENACTED BY THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY OF THE STATE OF OHIO:

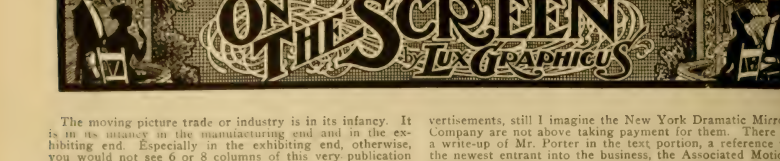
SECTION 1. Whoever being the owner, lessee, manager or in control of any opera house, theater, moving picture machine, arcade, tent, hall, store room or other building or structure, wherein any performance, show, concert, lecture or exhibition is given, and where the general public are admitted, permits, suffers or allows any motion or moving picture, film or slide containing gun cotton or any explosive or highly inflammable material to be shown or exhibited or transposed by being thrown upon a screen, curtain, wall or other structure shall, upon conviction thereof, be fined not less than fifty dollars nor more than one hundred dollars, and for a second and subsequent offense shall be fined not less than two hundred dollars nor more than five hundred dollars.

Manager Bertini's Experiment.

At the Castle Theater, 152 Bleecker Street, New York City, recently, Manager Bertini added one more victory to his long list of deserving triumphs, and showed that the moving picture business is still in its infancy as to its future power and influence upon the public mind.

The occasion was that of introducing the "Ineffable Suffragette" to his stage. She had fortified the operator with a winning smile, sixteen slides for the screen and—a tip. What she did to the audience was a caution. They were won from first to last by a personality as clever as it was sweet. "Votes for Women" are perfectly "at home" henceforth in the famous Third Assembly district beyond the shadow of a doubt.

The amiable young advocate "tossed up" that she had entered in fear and trembling—like a soldier under his "first baptism of fire," and who, while his knees were shaking, said: "Shake and shake and shake, O knees, but you must go forward into that battle!" She emerged in joyful wonder and the triumph of her mien. Manager Bertini has maintained that the moving picture business is a rival of the press. The cause of "Votes for Women" through moving pictures has found a new and useful avenue for its energies far better and more effective than any other, not even excepting the Albany Legislature, for the reason that in the last analysis the power of the people is paramount. And through managers like Bertini the moving picture is always the working field of popular power.



The moving picture trade or industry is in its infancy. It is in its infancy in the manufacturing end and in the exhibiting end. Especially in the exhibiting end, otherwise, you would not see 6 or 8 columns of this very publication every week devoted to telling the moving picture operator how to go about his work. The law of supply and demand comes in here. Trade papers are imperatively necessary in the moving picture trade. How many I am not going to discuss. Competition must settle this point. But the trade in its unwisdom did not want the Nickelodeon, so the Nickelodeon has gone.

* * *

A well known man in the moving picture field was talking to me the other day and expressing his satisfaction that the Moving Picture World made it its business to help both licensed and Independent manufacturers produce pictures by supplying technical information and criticising their technique, which resulted in distinct advantage to the business as a whole. The functions of a trade paper are many and varied. During my short career I have been connected with many publications and have found that what one writes in the papers is often the lesser part of one's duties. You can take it from me that a large advertiser in a trade publication gets his money's worth in more ways than one. For, besides the circulation of his advertisements, and his write-ups, he generally gets a lots of other information of a personal kind which puts money into his pockets and which he can only find in the offices of a trade paper.

* * *

Trade papers, I may tell "Spectator" of the Dramatic Mirror, are mostly conducted by people who have some practical knowledge of the trade, and who, having that practical knowledge, set up in business to sell it at so much a copy. For example: I who write this began my association with the moving picture trade as far back as the year 1896. That association has continued more or less unbroken ever since. It would surprise the "Spectator" and the readers of this page how much in the strictly personal sense, I am of use to members of the moving picture trade all over the world. So it is with all trade papers. The publications, and those who conduct them, supply information not otherwise obtainable. There are no such sources in the offices of mere amusement journals. These people seldom have anything but a superficial knowledge of their subject.

* * *

Still they have their uses by writing in a light, airy and agreeable fashion about moving pictures which possibly interest actors, actresses and some exhibitors. Yet, wonderful to relate, while disdaining the title of trade paper, they themselves are not too proud to make money out of the trade and give some trade information. Here, for example, is The Spectator, who, having told the Nickelodeon that it was not wanted, proceeds to demonstrate by its own writings that, to be consistent, that excellent publication, the New York Dramatic Mirror, should forthwith cease publication.

* * *

The Spectator asks the question: "Why the trade paper anyhow?" Then it goes on to say in effect that a trade paper is absolutely not wanted in the moving picture field, simply because—well, because (though the Spectator does not say so, it is what he means) because the Spectator knows it all!!! There is no other construction to be placed upon the unfortunate article in the March 15th issue of the Dramatic Mirror. I call this article unfortunate, because therein the Spectator proceeds to stutify himself. Premising that all that need be printed about the moving picture business simply concerns the acting and exhibiting branches, The Spectator, immediately under this uncalled for diatribe, prints a very large advertisement of the Edison Projecting Kinetoscope, a distinctly trady article in all conscience. On the next page you have large ads from Vitagraph and Pathe. Over leaf are Biograph, Selig and Lubin. Following them come utterances from Melies and Kalem, whilst on the back page the gentle Essanay figures.

* * *

There is nothing about acting or exhibiting in these advertisements, still I imagine the New York Dramatic Mirror Company are not above taking payment for them. There is a write-up of Mr. Porter in the text portion, a reference to the newest entrant into the business, the Associated Motion Picture Patents Company and other trade items. In fact, not to cut any more words to waste, the New York Dramatic Mirror in its moving picture section is just about as trady as a trade paper can be.

* * *

Yet with all this Spectator asks what eartly excuse has this limited field for even one trade paper? Apparently the only excuse which Spectator and the New York Dramatic Mirror have are the advertisements of a group of manufacturers. Let those be taken away, and Mr. Spectator would have no excuse at all for butting into the moving picture field.

* * *

The worst of it all is that the New York Dramatic Mirror is only half a trade paper. It writes pleasantly, agreeably, but not informatively about the moving picture. Its criticisms from the theatrical point of view are good, though they are no better than those which appear in the Moving Picture World. It prints a lot of effervescent stuff about the identities of those players, but we have watched in vain for two or three years for any trace in The Spectators' writings for any real fundamental knowledge about the moving picture as a technical, scientific product, aside from the mere writing about acting ability.

* * *

The Spectator clearly knows nothing about the scientific or the educational side of the moving picture. He does not concern himself with either the optics or the chemistry of the subject and in fact, he just glides over it as though the subject were very thin ice. This is all well and good. No doubt the readers of the Dramatic Mirror do not want serious writing. The readers of the Dramatic Mirror are chiefly members of the acting profession. Possibly an occasional exhibitor may read the paper. I very much doubt it. The licensed manufacturers do not allow Independent advertising to appear in the Mirror which places the Mirror in its proper place amongst trade papers.

* * *

It would have been better for its reputation, I think, if the Mirror had been silent on the subject of trade papers. Round here in New York City people are saying that it is merely the mouthpiece of a trust. When I look at its reviews of pictures, its bias is painfully in evidence. It says nice things about trust pictures and very unpleasant things, indeed, about the Independent pictures. It clearly derives its inspiration from trust sources. It leans distinctly in one direction.

* * *

I do not blame the Mirror or any other trade paper for running these advertisements, but I do blame it for its somewhat Pecksniffian attitude. It assumes in its stupidity to look down upon the other trade papers, while it demonstrates that it is itself nothing but a trade paper and a very indifferent one at that, depending upon trade advertisment for its support. Let us clear our minds of cant in this connection. We are all trade paper directors, out for the money, presumably, in a legitimate, straightforward way and our success should be the measure of our consideration one for another. The Spectator thinks there is no room for a moving picture trade paper. Very well, then, let the New York Dramatic Mirror go out of business. If, however, it does not choose this path, let Mr. Spectator be more consistent and self-restrained and not in deriding its fellow newspaper men absolutely demonstrate its own unfitness to further consideration. Now, Mr. Spectator, you are in a cleft stick. As a well-wisher and appreciator of you I should advise you to make your escape from the predicament as quickly as possible, otherwise some of us connected with the real trade papers won't let you off so easily the next time you disparage the knowledge and claims of others who have forgotten more about the moving picture than you in all probability will learn in this life.

IN THE EDUCATIONAL FIELD

SOME REVIEWS.

It is interesting to note the influence of the Moving Picture World's efforts to raise the moral and educational value of moving pictures. There is no doubt that both manufacturers and exhibitors are becoming more and more imbued with the spirit of these columns, as manifested in the newer films and in the nature and conduct of the exhibitions.

In a recent article the New York Tribune (a safe and sane paper) in commenting upon the present status of the moving picture, warmly commends its usefulness and wisely observes that its weak spots are—as we ourselves so often pointed out—due to abuse and misuse, rather than any inherent fault.

In advocating fireproof operating booths and safe or non-combustible films, the "Tribune" is a little late, as these safeguards are common to all qualified picture places.

* * * *

An interesting feature growing in many places is the demand for a repetition of many of the more satisfactory subjects; this appreciation by the public is a good guide as to the class and standard of public requirements, it is also of great interest to note that when special attention is thus centered upon any picture its value lies in some value additional to the one which ordinarily only amuses.

* * *

A short series of experimental "Cinematograph Educational Matinees" are being given in London during the month of March, the first reports of these is of an exceedingly gratifying nature; when the final report of this innovation reaches us it will without doubt be read with interest

* * *

In the large hall of Cooper Union, New York, that great centre of popular education; a meeting was recently held in which the moving picture was the topic under consideration. The Rev. Herbert A. Jump compared the motion picture to the printing press, also that on account of the small charge for admission it had made dramatic art popular; adding that under the present rigid censorship it was by far the cleanest form of individual amusement available to the American people to-day. Dr. Knox also spoke, calling attention to the educational surroundings of the picture, and of the picture places. He made a plea for sanitary buildings and proper locations, so that children could enjoy the privileges of the pictures free from contamination. As a result of some discussion it was declared that the educational advantage of the pictures were such that special provision should be made for motion picture places for boys and girls.

* * *

Speaking in Denver, Prof. Libby of the chair of philosophy at the State University, said that the moving picture had provided an "amusement food" for the multitude. "It is not a bad sign," said Prof. Libby, "when people spend so much money for amusement. Man requires something more than food, and the spending of money on artistic impulses only shows that art is the play of the grown-ups."

* * *

There is an old saying to the effect that, anything you do not like need not be destroyed; but rather that you should use it, and use it, until you have converted it into that which you like, and which you wish it to be. Of the two classes of people, those who destroy and those who use; the latter are preferable. The destroyer with his iconoclastic views ruthlessly bends his energies to the hurt of the good with the evil; the teacher, economist, or benefactor uses only the evil to eradicate it, and enlarges and establishes the good. With all classes of representative American institutions flocking to the aid of the good and valuable side of the moving picture, the early foretold destruction, as a thing of the past, and its would be destroyers, or even detractors are no longer given a "voice in court." The cinematograph is being used and used, and used; and the more it is used the stronger and nobler it becomes.

Its early detractors are becoming its warm supporters, and its early champions are rejoicing in the fulfilment of undreamed of expectations.

It is now no longer necessary to exhibit the favorable comments of this minister, or that professor, as all alike everywhere are now in common cause, and the critic is now the exception rather than the rule. It seems almost as if the cinematograph has educated the educators.

* * *

CULTURE

The Standard dictionary says: Culture means "to educate or refine, to cultivate." It seems well to begin with an authority when attempting to write upon a great theme. In these days of prosperity deterioration is easy, advance is hard; it is easier to roll down hill than to climb up hill; it is easier to remain ignorant than to labor to become educated; it is also easier to remain vulgar than to become refined.

* * *

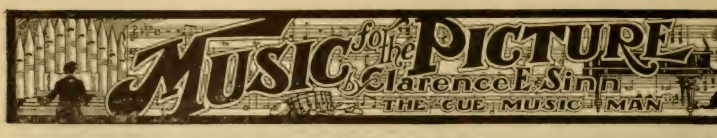
There is also a distinction between education and culture; the one deals with knowledge the other with morals. It is especially of that education in morals which comes under the head of culture that these words are penned. While these columns have frequently called attention to the fact that the moving picture conveys to the beholders a moral standard which will find its echo in their own lives; it has sometimes been necessary to note very plainly those defects which under the guise of portraying life have detracted from the cultural value of the occasion. In the other direction a life portrayal, which, while holding the mirror to nature, seizes upon the occasion to deliver any strong moral purpose, certainly fulfils its mission in an aid to that increase of culture so much needed and valued in these days.

* * * * * *

A recent Biograph release provides a good illustration of this principle. In "A Wreath of Orange Blossoms" a young bride after the marriage ceremony stores away in a trunk for safe keeping the "wreath" which was of so much actual, as well as sentimental value. In due course financial reverses overtake the young husband, who, not being able to give his attractive young bride sufficient attention as she "goes the social round," subjects her to the attentions of the everywhere present tempter. Financial ruin despoiling their beautiful home, the young wife is persuaded by the richer tempter to leave her husband and elope with him. One trembles at the reluctant though positive consent, when she begins to pack her valise for the departure, desertion and sin; a feeling of depression makes one wish that such scenes were impossible in life. Happily there is a bright scene coming, while looking in the old trunk for more clothes, the young wife finds the bridal wreath; placing it upon her head there rushes to her memory all its hallowed associations, with their attendant virtues. The horror of the situation is brought upon her, she stops her preparations for departure, goes into the other room, and scornfully orders the tempter from her presence. The audience breathes a sigh of relief, the victory makes everyone feel not only satisfied but stronger; and older people feel that the younger ones have been taught a strong lesson. How much better is this victory of active than if the opponent had been completed, and sin, misery and death portrayed as a negative warning. Better the strength of the victory of virtue in such a positive lesson than the negative suggestion only found in a moral warning. The joy of the young wife when she finds herself making her humble home a place of affection as exemplary cannot again to them be a beautiful lesson. The impression created is a helpful and cheering one, giving an increased confidence in, and admiration for the triumph of virtue, causing victory to inspire thousands, where warning will not drive one. This is culture, thus is refining, thus is educational.

* * *

The Eclair Bulletin, which is issued to exhibitors and exchanges, has reached us. This publication illustrates and describes the well-known Eclair releases. No. 1 contains an appreciation of the Eclair picture which does not the merest justice to the beautiful products of the Eclair Company. We advise all our readers to get a copy of the Eclair Bulletin. We advise them also, whenever they have the opportunity, to put the Eclair pictures on their screens.



Virginia writes: "I have been following your page in the Moving Picture World with much interest. * * * * I notice you give titles of the same pieces a number of times. I have often thought it would be better if you gave us a greater variety, but it happened to come in handy in my case. I ordered some of the pieces through our local dealer, but he was so slow that before the music arrived the picture had come and gone. However, the music was useful in another picture. (The numbers mentioned in this page are all standard and good to keep in stock as they are useful at all times. C.E.S.) I have been playing the pictures for a little over a year, with no previous theatrical experience, and I want to ask for a point of information. The leader in one of our theaters tells me I play my hurries too slow. Can you give me any idea as to how fast a hurry should be played? And what is the difference between a hurry and Allegro Agitato?"

The term "hurry" is a slang phrase or colloquialism applied by musicians to the Allegro Agitato. Some make a distinction by using the name "hurry" for the rougher and heavier forms, and "agitato" for the lighter class. Of all melo-dramatic music this is probably the most important, as its descriptive scope is the widest. Agitation can be mental as well as physical—tense as well as violent, and as depicted upon the stage (and in pictures) will run the emotional gamut from intense quiet to intense action. In accompanying these scenes your music will run all the way from pianissimo to fortissimo, according as the action is quiet or otherwise. (In theatrical music these numbers are usually marked "p and f," according to action.) As the term "hurry" would indicate, they must be played fast. I once heard the name "excited music" jokingly applied to numbers of this class, and the term describes them very well. They are used to indicate scenes of "excitement," and must be played fast to convey that idea. Such scenes usually begin quietly and work up to a climax and the music in these cases will begin softly and gradually work up crescendo to fortissimo. There are scenes, of course, which are full of violent action from start to finish, and the music is loud all the way through; others may be soft and subdued all through and the music likewise (drums very soft). When the scene is agitated with little or no action the drums of course will remain silent until the scene works up sufficiently for them to begin the crescendo which is started with a roll on the small drum pianissimo and swelling to forte, when both drums come in. As an illustration let us suppose a picture has shown a number of incidents which we can see will lead to serious consequences when they become known to a certain one of the characters. He enters the scene and some one calls him and begins telling him a story which the audience knows relates to the incidents that have passed. The listener turns to the speaker and as the story progresses shows, first indifference, then interest, astonishment, indignation and anger. He rushes out, finds his opponent, words are exchanged, then blows and a terrific fight ensues. Here we have an episode which runs an emotional scale from subdued and tense excitement (without action) to a high pitch with violent action. Your music (Agitato) will begin with the story, very softly at first as there is no action; one of the characters is merely telling the other one a story. As it progresses your music increases a little in volume. When he starts out is the place where the action really begins, and here is where the drummer starts a roll pianissimo on the small drum, beginning his crescendo when the men meet, then coming in forte with both drums all through the fight. He thus saves his big climactic effect until the time when he needs it most. Had he played all through these scenes his climax would have been lost through anticipation. I am led to this rather lengthy argument through the inquiries of several drummers who have written me concerning points of this nature. The drums are primarily instruments of effect, and effect is largely a matter of contrast. It is up to the drummer to make these contrasts (viz: piano, forte, or silent as the scene requires). Indeed it is not too much to say that the proper working up of a hurry depends almost entirely upon the drummer, especially in the small orchestras of the picture theater. But if he is over-generous in the employment of his instruments, he is apt to find that when he wants a really big climax he hasn't got it, for the reason that he has been giving all, or nearly all the volume of sound at his command at a time when the scene did not require it. You can't eat your cake and save it too.

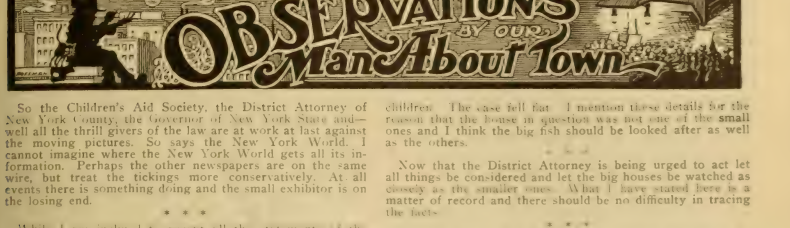
I presume some will demur to this on the ground that their manager insists on having the music going all the time. Some managers undoubtedly do, but judging from the numerous letters received I am led to believe that a large number of them are anxious to have their pictures properly worked up. It is told of an eccentric manager years ago, that he walked down the aisle one morning and topped the rehear al. "Why isn't that drummer playing?" he demanded of the leader. "I have twenty bars rest," explained the drummer. "Well I don't pay you for resting; I pay you for playing," was the angry retort. Occasionally we may find one of the same mind today, but I believe they are in the minority. Drummers who have had the advantage of a theatrical experience know that the working up of a hurry depends not so much on watching the notes as it does upon watching the action. It is all a matter of judgment and it requires as much discernment to stay out at the right place as it does to play. The old rule of "piano and forte according to action" holds good in the picture drama as well as that of the stage. So much for the "working up" of these numbers. As to the tempo, the novice used to be told, "play it as fast as you can play it distinctly." You could hardly call yourself a novice, but this may give you an idea. Why don't you get the leader you speak of to give you a few pointers? Being right there on the ground he could advise you properly.

A. & W., managers, write for a list of effects that a trap-drummer should have in a motion picture theater. A list of drummers' traps will be sent by mail as it is too long to include here. Any catalogue of drummers' supplies will contain a complete list of "traps" to be had at music dealers. They include all the effects and imitations ordinarily used. Many drummers make a part of their own sound effects for the reason that the manufactured articles do not include every noise made by art or nature, while the moving picture is apt to call for anything or everything.

M. (name and state withheld) says: "I am a subscriber to the Moving Picture World commencing with your department Dec. 3. Let me tell you that you have been a great help to me not only in suggesting, but I have been able to see some of my own faults. I was glad to see that I had been doing some of the things that you suggested, particularly in regard to style for certain pictures. One of my faults was "playing to costumes." I noticed that as soon as I saw your article. I agree with you about popular songs being played only when they are well known to the audience. The principal function of moving picture music lies in its suggestiveness. A popular song is used generally because the title or refrain is applicable to the scene. If unknown to the majority of the audience, your suggestion is lost to that degree. The operator at our house telephones me every morning what our show will be for the day; then I read the "Stories of the Films" column in the "World" and make a rough sketch of the music I think appropriate, but it generally works out all right. I've been enjoying all the "slams" the moving picture musicians (?) have been getting, and sometimes thought they were a little too severe. I couldn't understand how anybody could play "Kelly" in a death scene, but I believe it all now. I went into a house recently when the Biograph "Fate's Turning" was on and the piano player rattled off a lively waltz through the whole beautiful picture. When the "Dixie Mother" was shown she played a march in jig time from beginning to end. I wished the manager would follow your suggestion of "ear muffs with every ticket." (The credit of that suggestion is due to Mr. H. F. Hoffman, the clever cartoonist of the Moving Picture World.)

AT LAST THE WORLD ADMITS IT.

The problem of making the moving picture shows safe both as respects morals and fire risks is a complicated one. But they have become a modern amusement necessity and must be dealt with as such.—N. Y. World.



So the Children's Aid Society, the District Attorney of New York County, the Governor of New York State and—well all the thrill givers of the law are at work at last against the moving pictures. So says the New York World. I cannot imagine where the New York World gets all its information. Perhaps the other newspapers are on the same wire, but treat the tickings more conservatively. At all events there is something doing and the small exhibitor is on the losing end.

* * *

While I am inclined to accept all the statements of the New York World complacently and taste its fruits only with a grain of salt, I must admit that some of its reports are not without good foundation. The public press, of which the New York World is an important factor, is supposed to be for and of the people. But since the advent of the popularity of moving pictures the public press has lost some money and as a result of this it has not been in warm sympathy with the pictures. As a matter of fact, the newspapers' revenue from theatrical advertisements has been cut down by combinations, but the responsibility for this has been placed upon the shoulders of the pictures. There was a time when the vaudeville people were charged, quite properly, with unreasonably using their hammers on the pictures. Results have shown that these people, from a personal standpoint were justified in making their attacks. At that time the newspapers were satisfied to insidiously slap at the pictures. Since then legitimate houses that paid fat sums each week to the newspapers for advertising space have fallen into the picture line and advertising expenses have been correspondingly decreased. The comments of the current daily press show very clearly the incentive, but they cannot beat down the popular choice of amusement.

* * *

But, with all this, many of the current criticisms cannot be treated lightly. There is cause for complaint and the causes should be wiped out. There is a law against admitting children under sixteen years of age to shows unless they are accompanied by guardians. I have personal declarations of exhibitors to the effect that they cannot make their places pay and observe the law I have referred to. The law must be respected and those who cannot respect it have but one alternative, and that is to put their capital into some other business. Personally, I do not think the answer to the law is a good one.

* * *

I can recall several places in the upper part of the Borough of Manhattan, pretty near touching the Borough of Bronx. In this connection I may refer to a part of the charges made by the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, namely, that while the money is taken at the box office from children under the prescribed age, they are not given tickets, but they get past the ticket taker. Such cases are evasions of the law and a detriment to the moving picture business as a whole.

* * *

But what becomes of these children? The New York World says that about one hundred children have been missed from their homes since the beginning of the present year, about forty per cent. of them having been recovered, and the rest are supposed to be the flotsam of the sea of wickedness. It is claimed that in the majority of these cases the disappearances have been traced to the moving picture shows—the small ones.

* * *

Now let us be honest. Let us refer to the records of the Gerry Society and let it be known that in one big picture house alone from twelve to fifteen cases of seduction occurred. Let it be known that two officers were detached to this case and as a result at least one of the culprits is serving a sentence in Sing Sing. It is also known that in a fourteenth one of the big ones—backed by the same political influence two officers of the Children's Society waited one night and took into custody two lads in company with a girl of apparently thirteen or fourteen years of age. When the case came up the next day the girl who had accompanied the little tots to the show appeared and testified that she was seventeen or more years of age and that she was the owner of the children. The case fell flat. I mention these details for the reason that the house in question was not one of the small ones and I think the big fish should be looked after as well as the others.

* * *

Now that the District Attorney is being urged to act let all things be considered and let the big houses be watched as closely as the smaller ones. What I have stated here is a matter of record and there should be no difficulty in tracing the facts.

* * *

I would suggest that, if a serious movement is to be made, the Board of Aldermen, or some higher authority make a provision placing upon the proprietor, or proprietors, of each moving picture house responsibility for the conduct and acts of his or their employees in so far as such acts are connected with the house. By this I mean that every proprietor of every moving picture house should be held accountable for the acts of any ticket taker, usher, piano player or singer in relation to their conduct towards the patrons of that house. Too many of them are too careless in employing people. Cheapness figures equally with neglect in this respect. Too often rowdies are clothed in uniforms. Picture houses, like other places of amusement, are sought as sources of employment by many of the worst characters at liberty, and if the greater percentage of them are not crooks or rowdies, they are libertines.

* * *

For months and months the respectable people have fought the criticisms of a biased press. They have appealed for reason and justice. The developments of the past few months have shown, nevertheless, that the dirty element has taken advantage of these appeals and gradually strengthened the arguments of those who, in the initiative, were biased and fought the picture from an ulterior standpoint.

* * *

It is with the greatest pleasure I note that two damnable vagabonds are to be placed on trial for doing what is now publicly charged. I sincerely trust they will get the full penalty for their crime. At the same time I do not think the proprietor of the place in which they were employed should be exempted. I feel that where such discoveries are made a place becomes a disorderly house and all licenses attached to it should be cancelled. That is, to my mind, the only way in which the desired results can be reached. There are too many people in the business who think more of the box office receipts than they do of the character of their employees or the treatment and protection of their patrons.

* * *

The newspaper I refer to intimates that the larger picture houses, the men with large capital, have a plan by which they propose to squeeze the smaller exhibitors out of business. Remarks have been made within the past few days that the current morality crusade against small exhibitors is a part of that programme. I have no direct information as to this, but should it prove to be true I would not be surprised. Immense capital is being thrown into the picture business. Should I mention the names of some men interested in the movement some of the readers of my letter might suspect me of exaggeration. It is a fact, nevertheless, that in New York alone there are among the backers and promoters some of the most prominent men in the theatrical field of the country. Turn and twist the subject as you may, the fact remains that influential people with plenty of capital having no other outlet are putting their energies and money in the moving picture field. The result must be apparent to all. Wherever the strike has been made not the small exhibitor as to the effect.

* * *

I may be characterized as a dreamer when I say some big men are on the same old mission we spoke. Would the reader be surprised should I say that the Shubert Brothers are investing? Dave Warfield, who made his fame as "The Music Master" has considerable money in the field. The public press is devoting considerable space to Marcus Loew, the so called king of the motion picture business, but it is not all Loew's money. From what I hear, Warfield and the Shuberts are very much interested in what Mr. Loew does.

Take another branch of the business. There is the William Fox Amusement Company. Go a little deeper and see how closely "Big Tim" Sullivan and "Dave" Krouse are allied with Fox, and I have reason to believe that Sullivan's interest in the moving picture field is not confined to Manhattan, nor to Greater New York.

* * *

What is the answer? It is simply this: The man with hundreds must give way to the man with thousands, and it is quite natural to expect that the small exhibitors must eventually make his final bow to the public as an amusement promulgator. To many this will be a result devoutly sought. The man who abandoned his peanut and frankfurter stand to essay the role of a theatrical manager must eventually give way to him who better understands the desires of the amusement public and has a keener sense as to the catering and protection it expects and deserves.

* * *

There are many deserving small exhibitors in the business and I hope that neither capital nor influence will be allowed to work an injustice upon them. At the same time there are a number of small exhibitors in the field who should never have been tolerated. They went into it for the Almighty Dollar and they are responsible for the stain that has been brought upon the business. The sooner capital and influence wipes out this class so much sooner will the exhibitor, large or small, reap what he should receive, and the business as a whole will improve and command the respect which the business in a legitimate sphere deserves.

* * *

A friend suggested (he is a licensed exhibitor, by the way) that the Motion Picture Patents Company has an excellent opportunity. He says that if that company would give more attention to investigation of the character and general reputation of applicants for licenses some good results would be attained. I cannot withhold my endorsement of the suggestion.

Los Angeles Notes.

By Richard V. Spencer.

Pathe.—James Young Deer, the Pathe West Coast Producer, and some twenty members of the company have gone to Santa Monica Canyon to take several Indian pictures. The party expect to be gone about a week.

Selig.—The Selig Company have purchased an old Concord stage coach of the type made famous by the West of fifty years ago. Part of the body has been rebuilt and the interior redecorated and repaired. The exterior has been repainted and now bears the Selig monogram. The coach will be used in the production of Western and Indian pictures.

Bison's New Studio.—On April 1 the Bison Company plan to break ground for their new studio. A block of ground has been secured between Effie and Aaron streets, fronting on Allesandro Street. The company intend to spend about $30,000 on new studio buildings. A glass studio will be erected and when completed will be fitted with Cooper-Hewitt light batteries and equipped for night work in interiors.

Snow Pictures Within Sight of Roses.—Mr. Boggs, director; Mr. McGee, business manager, and Miss Hart, Mr. Hernandez, Mr. Rawlinson, members of the Selig Company, recently took a trolley ride up Mount Lowe and on to Mount Wilson, where they took a series of Arctic pictures. The recent heavy valley rains had clothed the upper part of the mountains with a two-foot mantle of snow, among which the actors worked in taking the pictures. Although the mountains were white with snow, five miles away the winter roses of Pasadena were blooming among green lawnes.

Stormbound.—Mr. Hobart Bosworth and several other members of the Selig Company are at this writing stormbound in Yosemite Valley, where they had gone to take several pictures. The recent heavy up-state rains have washed out the Southern Pacific tracks, delaying traffic.

Essanay.—Twenty cowboys employed by the Essanay Company, and brought from Los Angeles to their Redlands studio to act in Western pictures, have gone on strike for higher pay. The cowboys allege that in riding for the company they are endangering their lives, and that the pay is not sufficient where so much risk is involved. The Essanay Company officials have denied the increase in pay and are trying to employ new men to take their places. The strike developed the fact that last week, while working on a cowboy picture, one of the cowboys was bucked from his horse, the animal trampling him and injuring one arm and a leg. The accident happened during the taking of a scene and the camera recorded the accident.

Among Los Angeles Exhibitors.

Clune Fined.—W. H. Clune, proprietor of Clune's Broadway, and a chain of local moving picture theaters, who has been having trouble over the height of the flasher electric sign over his Broadway property, was recently fined $5 in Judge Chamber's police court. The fine was the result of having violated the city sign ordinance, whose provisions state that no sign exceeding twenty feet in height may be erected in the business district. As soon as the court imposed the fine, Clune's attorneys gave notice that an appeal will be filed to a higher court. It is probable that the validity of the ordinance will be tested before the State Supreme Court immediately, as the attorneys for Clune intimated that the appeal might be filed with that tribunal instead of the local Superior Courts.

New Theater.—The theater soon to be erected at 314 East Fifth Street will be run as a vaudeville and moving picture house, and will have a seating capacity of 500. It will be called the "Bell Theater," and an electrical representation of a bell will adorn the front, and there will be a set of chimes installed in the foyer. Ground has been broken and the building is well under way.

Incorporation.—Under the name of The New York Theatrical Company, articles of incorporation have been filed for a theatrical concern, the principal place of business of which is to be Los Angeles. The incorporation papers read that the company may acquire, operate, lease, sell, mortgage moving picture theaters and theatrical products. The new corporation has a capital stock of $50,000. The directors are: Wm. S. Rolfes, M. Spazier and F. Ham.

Los Angeles Censorship.—An advisory committee to inspect and consor all moving picture films before they are exhibited in Los Angeles, is the draft of a proposed ordinance which the Los Angeles Civic Association asks the city council to pass in a communication filed recently with the city clerk. The proposed ordinance is designed to cover all nickelodeons, penny arcades, and all places where moving pictures are exhibited. The petition is signed by Mrs. Oliver C. Bryant, president of the Civic Association; Mrs. C. S. Ward, secretary; members of a committee appointed to investigate the subject of moving picture theaters; Ernest J. Lickley, president of the Juvenile Improvement Association, and others. The draft of the proposed ordinance contains the provision that permits to conduct such exhibitions are to be given by the police commission. These permits are made revocable for violation of the terms of the ordinance by the police commission, provided five days notice is given the holder of the permit, who will be accorded a hearing if he desires. At present moving picture theater permits are issued by the board of public works, and are designed to protect the public from poor exits, etc. Films containing reproductions of murders, suicides, robberies, holdups, stabbings, or other objectionable scenes will be prohibited the same as in the present ordinance. According to the proposed ordinance the duties of the advisory committee shall be to inspect all motion picture shows before their releases are shown on the screen, and to prosecute all violations of the ordinance. It is also provided that the members of the committees shall have, upon demand, right of free access to any place or room or building where any moving picture exhibition is held, and the holder of the permit must exhibit any set of films, which he proposes to exhibit, for the purpos of censorship. If the ordinance is passed by the council, it will contain a provision appointing a board of censorship composed of five members, one each to be appointed by the mayor, the city board of education, the police commission, the Moving Picture Exhibitors' Association, and the Los Angeles Civic Association. The ordinance also provides that enough lights must be maintained in the theaters so that the features of every patron can be distinguished from a distance of ten feet. Los Angeles exhibitors will, in all probability, fight the ordinance when it comes before the council for argument.

Clune's Pasadena Theater Opens.—Clune's Pasadena Theater was formally opened last week with an interesting bill of Licensed pictures to a crowded house. The new theater is located on Colorado and Delacey Streets, Pasadena. The new theater is centrally located on Pasadena's main business thoroughfare. In addition to the theater the building contains a number of store rooms, the Pasadena Athletic Club, and other rooms. The theater itself is one of the finest on the coast. The theater has a seating capacity of 1,400, and every seat was taken on the opening performance. It is the intention of the management to give first-class theatrical attractions as often as possible and to fill in the space with the best of moving picture attractions. The moving pictures will be the best Licensed films obtainable. The theatrical attractions will be the road shows of John Cort and Klaw & Erlanger, similar to the shows given at the Mason and Majestic in Los Angeles. The scale of admission charged will be the same as the Los Angeles moving picture and dramatic theaters. The theater building was built by Pasadenoa capitalists and has been leased to Mr. Clune for a term of years.

El Centro Bars Fight Pictures.—El Centro, an Imperial Valley town, has barred the exhibition of fight pictures. This action was taken at a recent meeting of the town trustees. The board adopted an ordinance prohibiting boxing contests and prize fights, and also prohibiting their exhibition on moving picture films. The ordinance goes into force at once.

Long Beach Censorship.—It is rumored that the Long Beach city council is framing a set of Blue Laws for the regulation of its picture theaters and musical comedy houses. It was first believed that Police Chief Moyer was acting on his own initiative, but the facts have come to light that his action is the result of orders of Mayor Windham, and the Long Beach police commission. The chorus girls performing in the beach city will, hereafter, be forced to wear ankle length dresses, and off-color musical comedy lines will be cut out of the scripts. The matter of picture regulations will not be known until a later date.

Daylight Pictures.—Beginning the week of March 6th, the Orpheum will show a moving picture novelty that will prove to be of great interest to local picture shows patrons and exhibitors. It is what the management calls the "daylight" picture. The picture received a tryout before a number of newspaper men and was voted an entire success. The picture is run with all the house lights on, and you see it just as completely as though the auditorium were perfectly dark. At the special matinee, in order to make the test more demonstrative, the footlights were turned up, too. This, of course, will not be done at the usual performances. The process of daylight pictures is a secret one, and is the invention of Mr. S. L. Rothapfel. The Orpheum Circuit, controlling the largest chain of vaudeville houses in the country, is said to have purchased the exclusive American rights to the invention. Rothapfel will not trust anybody but himself to install the necessary apparatus. The secret of the clearness of the pictures lies in the coat applied to the screen, and the construction of a special lens fitted in the projecting scope. The screen the inventor prepares himself secretly. The lens is taken off and kept in the house safe between performances, and is intrusted to the care of a responsible employee of the management. Little is known of the curtain preparation. The principal ingredient is said to be a chemical substance found in the Dry Tortugas, and is of a phosphorescent nature.

Fire Protection Device.—T. C. Jensen, of the firm of Hogan & Jensen, proprietors of the Isis Theater, is the inventor of a fire protection device that should be of interest to exhibitors, who lack protection in their operating rooms. The process, as far as can discover, is a new and praiseworthy idea. In the operating room of the Isis are several apertures for sight and ventilation. Over each are fire doors of tin running in the usual grooves. Attached to the top of each fire door is a common cotton string, the seven lines of string coming to a focus at a point directly over the projection machine. By an ingenius arrangement of the strings, the severing of any one causes it to release the seven fire doors, which close promptly confining the fire to the operating room with no chance to escape into the auditorium and create a panic. The strings verge at a point about eighteen inches above the projecting scope, and in order to make the protection more effective, a small strip of film has been tied at the point where the strings meet, and where the fire from a blazing film would first strike. If all exhibitors paid as much attention to their operating rooms as they do to their box offices, fires in moving picture theaters would be a rare occurrence.

New England Notes.

The Goldstein Brothers Amusement Company will close their Bijou Dream, a motion picture theater in Westfield, Mass., on March 31st, as the building has been sold. The Bijou Dream was one of the smallest houses operated by this company, as it has a seating capacity of barely 300.

Mr. Jack Dolan, of the Lyric Theater, Dover, paid a recent visit to Boston, looking over conditions, and reports that his house is doing an unusually excellent business with independent pictures and vaudeville.

Messrs. Cooney & Wellington, who operate the World as Motion Theater, Pittsfield, Mass., will shortly dissolve their partnership. Mr. J. F. Cooney will run the house alone as Mr. Wellington has decided to enter other fields of business. This little house has always given good shows and is successful.

Mr. H. C. Young, proprietor and manager of the Scenic Theater, Hartford, Conn., has innovated amateur night on Fridays, and reports that the idea is being very well taken up by his patrons.

Mr. George X. Conture, of the King Edward Theater, Halifax, N. S., has sent Mr. Theodore Gainer as his representative, to look over the New England field. It is rumored that Mr. Conture is willing to open a large moving picture theater in New England, should a location suitable to his wants be found.

Mr. M. M. Leighton, the proprietor of the Park Film Company, Bridgeport, Conn., has taken over the bookings of several moving picture theaters lately, to whom he is furnishing independent film service of good quality.

It has become a general habit lately for moving picture theaters to set aside one night each week for amateurs. The number of New England houses taking this idea up has been steadily increasing, and the managers concerned evidently find it worth while, as it becomes a regular fixture in these houses.

Mr. Frank L. Browne, who will be general manager of the Blue Hill Theater, Roxbury, Mass., upon its completion, is at present located at the Carney Building, Boston, where he is completing the plans for the theater which is nearly ready for its opening.

HENRY.

Boston.

Mr. Joseph Mack, resident manager of the Hub Theater, devoted to moving pictures and vaudeville, was presented with a diamond studded watch charm by his friends as a part of the celebration of the Hub's fourth anniversary. Mr. Mack himself had planned an extra big bill of pictures and vaudeville for the event, but was most surprised himself when the watch charm was handed to him by Mr. J. J. Garfland. The audience in the theater at that time showed their appreciation of the good bills always presented in the Hub by Manager Mack, by cheering him as he received the gift. Mr. Mack adequately thanked Mr. Garfland and the audiences for their expression of good will, and stated that it would continue to be his policy to always give his patrons the best in the market. Bouquets and other minor gifts were presented also. Mr. Mack is very popular with the local trade, and has built up a very pleasing business in the Hub, which prior to his coming there, had never been able to produce much profit.

It has been noticed that the licenses issued to theaters using the product of the Patents Company are not renewed when they expire. Several Boston houses using trust pictures have licenses from the Patents Company which are a year or so old.

Assistant Secretary Moore returned from New York City, where he had gone to attend a moving picture convention, but License Clerk Casey remained there a few days longer. It is said that the men received valuable information regarding the supervision and censorship of moving picture theaters while at the convention. Mr. Casey, who has considerable to do with the licenses of theaters, is very well liked by local moving picture managers. No house can run in such an orderly manner has anything to fear from Mr. Casey as he has always been found to be absolutely fair and impartial in his actions.

The craze for light house pictures has struck Boston with a vengeance. The great majority of moving picture theaters have had their screens painted with an aluminum preparation. Employees of some of the houses have been pressed into service as painters, while others have hired regular painters. Unless very well done, the screen becomes streaked and blotchy in appearance. The Star Theater, Tremont Row, had a very unfortunate experience in painting their screen, and until it had been repainted, looked very poor. Manager Joe Kirby, of the Olympia and Jacquette Theaters, had much better luck with his two screens and probably has the best aluminum screens in his town.

Mr. George E. Brooks, on the Public School Committee, has made a plea to exclude moving pictures from Boston public schools. As far as can be ascertained, the reasons advanced by this educator (who states he has made a careful study of the matter), is as follows: Firstly, the exhibition of moving pictures for educational purposes in schools give children their first lesson, and is an incentive for attaining the habit of attending moving picture shows. Secondly, because of the possible danger of fire. Mr. Brooks remarked that he fully realized the educational value of moving pictures, such as have been shown in schools, relative to geographical and industrial conditions; but he set forth as his argument that the two dangers just mentioned above was more deadly than the benefits which would accrue to children by the use of the cinematograph. It is to be deplored that this recommendation has passed the school committee, and that, for the present at least, all moving picture exhibitions are to be barred from Boston public schools. It seems strange that Mr. Brock who himself states that the moving pictures has so many good educational qualities, can bring himself to advocate the exclusion of the pictures in the public schools of Boston for such plainly absurd reasons as he has advanced. No doubt Mr. Brock would change his attitude towards the moving picture theaters, with their effect on children if he would but make a couple of trips to almost any of our local houses. As to the dangers of fire—why, it might also be argued to exclude furnaces and boilers from our schools, because of the remote chance of explosion or fire.

HENRY.

Chicago Notes.

A Novelty at the Orpheum.

The Orpheum Theater is experimenting with a novelty and we hope that the good musical taste of the managers will show them that all novelties are not judicious, when some one has to hold his reputation.

We have novelties and novelties, some are good, some are bad.

The Deagan bells are a novelty, but as they are tuned like the piano and are so constructed to give long and short stops, they do not impair the value of a good orchestra, but on the contrary, they enable the drummer to add some charming effects. The Deagan bells do not kill good music, but add to the harmony.

The novelty now tried at the Orpheum consists in a number of phonograph horns distributed in the house and connected with a sort of telephone, placed on the stage behind the curtain.

A singer comes to the front of the stage, sings his song and chorus and, if his effects have been such as to call for some applause he does not gratify the audience with his presence, but from behind the curtain, he repeats his chorus through the special telephone and horns.

What is the effect? Something like after hearing a good pianist execute the overture of William Tell, you hear the same overture butchered by a dissonant, wheezy phonograph. Something like the old cameraphone talking pictures. You remember them and you know how quickly they tired the public.

The other day Miss M. Quinn was charming in her song, "Dreams, Just Dreams," but when she repeated the chorus in this new attachment, it was no more her sweet melodious voice.

Such a novelty would be a good attraction for a cheap theater with a $3 or $4 singer, as the telephone and horns would perhaps silence some of the quack notes; on the other hand, it seems a shame to spoil the melodious voice of a good singer for the mere sake of a novelty.

The Orpheum has not the best projection; far from it, and even with their experiments of new metallic curtains, they seem unable to solve the question of good lighted pictures. The new curtain was so bright as to injure the eye, but in a couple of weeks it became so dull that the picture is far from what it should be. Some claim that it is the fault of the curtain, others say it is the fault of the lens, etc. Let it be one or the other, we know that the Orpheum is showing to packed houses, because the lovers of motion pictures prefer to pay the 10-cent admission where they get good music, than the 5 cents of other theaters with bad music. The Orpheum has made a name for good music and has been the leader, but if the managers of the Orpheum indulge in effect-destroying novelties they will soon lose their musical reputation.

As so many theaters are adopting the idea of good music and are placing orchestras of several pieces, the Orpheum should try to maintain the lead by adding a few pieces to its own orchestra. Good music has made the reputation of the Orpheum and the reputation is well deserved, as the orchestra of the Orpheum is doing everything to give the best interpretation to the pictures. J. M. B.

Mr. Joseph Hopp is a proud man, as the sole owner of the "Standard Film Exchange" of Chicago. This little item means a good deal, as when the "Standard" went independent, many sore heads predicted that the business would go down and that Mr. Hopp would have to do some very hard work to keep afloat. On the contrary, Mr. Hopp had better times with the independent pictures and has placed his exchange on such a solid foundation that he has been able to buy the interests of his partners, and since March 1st Mr. Hopp is the sole owner of the Standard Film Exchange.

Good news for the licensed exhibitors: The General Film Co. is moving to their new quarters on Wabash Avenue, and there, with the increased facilities and the most complete inspecting tables, there will be no more reasons to complain of films sent out without being inspected or of titles missing. The service of the past has been the worst for many months, and we congratulate Mr. Aiken for having spared no expense to fit the most complete inspecting room with special commodious tables, plenty of light, the best rewinders, rewinding motors, etc. The employees will have no excuse to let films go out with bad sprocket holes, defective patches, titles missing, etc.

The new quarters of the General Film Co. are fitted in the most elaborate manner and will be considered the most luxurious film exchange in the West, not to say the most complete and up-to-date exchange.

Washington, D. C.

Manager Tom Moore of the General Film Exchange and his "little wife" have gone on a trip to the South and will be in the land of palms for some time. They will visit Cuba and nearby islands and southern Florida and if not called back to the office, Mr. Moore anticipates remaining away for several weeks. This, he states, will be his first real holiday in five years. The recent consolidation of forces of the Moore Film Exchange with the Association exchanges in this vicinity has so systematized matters that it is possible for Manager Moore to take this pleasure trip. Since both Mr. and Mrs. Moore have been ill with the grippe, their proposed sojourn in the South will be very beneficial to them.

The recent union of the "B. & W." film service and the Paramount Film Exchange has given rise to the "Washington Film Exchange, which combines all Independent forces. The offices of the Paramount on Ninth Street have become the home of the new concern and business has run along without a hitch or a break. Mr. Walker, the former manager, and J. Boyd Dexter have remained with the Washington Film Exchange, with Arthur Lucas at the head. They are all very busy indeed, and soon we hope to see the letterings on the windows changed to a name more appropriate to the locality.

Orders are already being filed for that elaborate, historical photoplay, "The Fall of Troy"—soon to be released by the Itala.

The Savoy is a recent recruit of the Independent ranks, with Manager Cutts at the head.

The Virginian is coming to the fore in many ways. Under the management of Harry A. Chick, himself a discriminating musician, there has been engaged some of our finest musical talent for this house. The pictures are accompanied with duets by Geo. W. Vail, pianist, and Claude V. Burrows, violinist, during certain portions of the day's run and by another combination consisting of Miss Striner, pianist, and Master George Moskey, violinist, for the remainder of the performance. Young Moskey will be remembered as the little chap taken away from his home in Germany to study music and was found by the New York police on board one of the big liners ready to sail. He is expected to have this wish to continue his studies on the violin in Europe gratified next fall. Both Mr. Burrows and Mr. Vail have been identified in the most classical musical circles in the National Capitol. Mr. Chick, who possesses a sympathetic voice and is a good interpreter of ballads, is heard in songs during six hours of the day's performances. So as manager and artist this young man has his hands full, but he is always on the spot and always pleasant. Mr. Chick holds the reputation of being the youngest general manager in our local moving picture business. The Virginian runs Independent films and has completed arrangements to run two new reels a day ad always using one educational picture. What more can a public expect for five cents?

The Niagara, with Manager Joy at the head, is an excellently appointed theater, which gives piano music during the day and piano and violin in the evenings. "We must give the public good music," said Mr. Joy. "It has reached the point when it demands it and will patronize the house where good music is found." Mr. Joy himself was quite a singer here in his younger days, so he can discriminate on this point. I was looking at a film in the Niagara which was over a year old and noted how absolutely clear and steady it was. There is no doubt much of the poor display of pictures is due more to the operator and the machine than to the reel itself.

Under the new management of Mr. and Mrs. Sydney Jacobson the Crystal is gaining an audience during the "dinner hours," which were heretofore almost devoid of patrons. A singer will be the next step in the progress of this house and a little later some improvements will be made for the better accommodations of its patrons.

The Alhambra continues to cater to the school element of the city, using at least one educational film during its day's run. Saturday is quite a matinee day at the Alhambra for students.

The recent run of Dickens' "Tale of Two Cities" at the Pickwick (a name made famous by that same Dickens) created quite a stampede before this house. For four days this film was eagerly sought by the public, who viewed the dramatization of the great novel with educational and entertaining interest. It is always Manager Brylawski's intention to uplift the masses, so the usual price of five cents was maintained during the display of this costly film.

Now that the minds of the public are turned towards Mexico, the moving picture managers are giving their patrons glimpses into that country and its people. Plays and scenic films are being put upon the screens with the result of interesting the patrons. The Maryland has been running a series of pictures of Mexico which were truly educational.

THE CINES FILMS.

A recent arrival in New York is Mr. E. Barry of 18 Charing Cross Road, London, E. C., who in that city directs the agency of the Cines films, which are well known in the American moving picture field. Mr. Barry has come to New York for the purpose of marketing the Cines films. He is thoroughly aware of the condition here, and is confident of being able to get his films a showing in the American moving picture theaters.

THE PRESS AND THE PICTURE.

From now on the opposition to moving pictures will have to be specific and not indiscriminately condemnatory. The pictures have come to stay. Make the best of them.—Argus Leader, Sioux Falls, N. D.

CHAMPION EDUCATIONAL FILM

We have just seen several of the letters from exhibitors all over the country that the Champion Film Company have been receiving since their recent patriotic release "The Old Man and Jim." They are highly gratified, and justly so, at the reception this feature reel has been acorded. Every one of the letters refers to the increased business done when this picture was shown, the inteligent appreciation of the audiences of this class of subjects and the exhibitors, without exception, express a desire for more such portrayals.

Mr. Dintenfass, general manager of the Champion Film Co., has been noting for some time the growing interest in educational and historical films and the fact that so many of the foremost educators are calling attention to the possibilities of the moving picture as an educational factor in the immediate future. He believes this demand for films of educational [illegible] should be met as rapidly as possible and has decided that the Champion Film Co. will issue a second weekly release on Mondays, commencing April 17th.

Their Monday release is to be an educational film dealing with some event in American history, such as "Famous Battles," "Great Men," "National Events and Celebrations." Some of the subjects already in mind are "Famous Naval Engagements," "Decisive Military Battles," "Historical Celebrations," "Incidents in the Lives of Famous American Men and Women."

That this departure of the Champion Company will meet with the hearty approval and co-operation of the exhibitor is evident from the letters referred to above. To insure success in this line it will be necessary to have the pictures as historically correct as possible, so that the impressions received from the films will be such as to add to one's accurate knowledge of the event portrayed. We understand that no expense nor trouble will be spared to obtain a truthful representation in every detail.

The Wednesday release of this company will continue to feature Western subjects, which appeal so clearly to the majority of all American audiences, and which they have been so sucessful in producing.

Scene from "With 'Stonewall' Jackson," first of the Champion Monday releases.

Reel Jerk.—Mr. John R. Cobin, Minneapolis, Minn., writes: "I noticed in a recent issue where a correspondent speaks of the jerk of the reel marring the film when the machine is started quickly. I note also where you say this is not the case, that is to say, that no injury is done in this manner, but that the injury to performers is due to the fact that the film starts and stops approximately 16 times per second, which causes excessive wear, especially when the tension is tight. I think you are correct, so far as concerns the reel when it is full, but when the top reel is almost emptied it frequently occurs that the jerk from sudden starting will be very heavy, due to the fact that when the machine is stopped if the upper reel tension is not set right the reel will continue to run until considerable film is unwound in the magazine. Now, when the machine starts, the reel, of course, stands still until this slack film is all taken up. Then, the reel is started with a jerk, and inasmuch as it must start instantly at comparatively high speed, the jerk is very heavy and there is liability of injury to the sprocket holes. I do not wish to be understood as criticising you in this, but I believe my statement is correct."

I accept your correction, Neighbor Cobin, and am willing to admit that what you say is true. When the upper reel is almost empty it must, as you say, start instanly at high speed, thus making a very heavy jerk. The pull on the film when the reel is full amounts to practically nothing, unless the upper reel tension is set very tight, and even then it would not amount to much, since the leverage is all in favor of the sprocket.

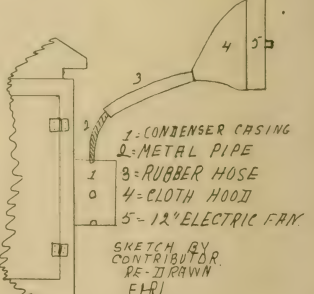
Condensers.—Denver, Colo., writes as follows: "Does it make any difference whether the two condenser lenses are close together or considerable distance apart.. I notice that when I use 6½ lenses in my lamp house the convex surfaces very nearly touch each other, but when 7½ lenses are used they are quite a little distance apart."

Yes, Denver, it is a difference and it frequently manifests itself in the form of a dark blue ghost on the screen. Condenser lenses should be set with their surfaces almost in contact and, as a matter of fact, the holder should be collapsible; that is to say, the holder should be made so that the two lenses could be brought almost into contact, regardless of their thickness. And right here, I may say that where operators are using thin lenses and have trouble with ghost, they may be able to remedy the trouble by changing the lens holder so that the two lenses will be within, say, 1/16 of an inch of each other at the thickest part of the convex.

A Bunch of Questions.—New York City writes as follows: "Will you kindly answer the following questions through the department? (1) I know of a first-class union operator who could be engaged for night work only in New York City during the coming summer season? (2) What is the best screen for open air show, metal or cloth? If metal, how painted? (3) Do you consider the.....machine good for airdome work? (4) Can I get independent film service that is as good as licensed and which will be acceptable to New York audiences? (5) What size pictures can I get with a 60 or 70 foot throw? (6) What size screen would you suggest? (7) What size picture would you suggest? Your replies will be greatly appreciated and will be carried out to the letter."

(1) I know of a first-class man who, I believe, you can secure, although I believe he is not at this time a member of the union. If you will send me your street address I will place you in touch with him. He is a man who would have my highest recommendation. (2) For open air work I think I would use a metal screen, put up with very smooth joints and painted with white lead, mixed with one-third oil and two-thirds turpentine, to which should be added a little ultramarine blue, just enough to whiten it thoroughly. In giving this advice, I am assuming that the screen will be liable to get wet every shower of rain there may be, which, of course, would make the use of a cloth curtain hardly practicable. The metal can be given a light coat of paint every two or three weeks, if necessary, to keep it perfectly white. If you use nothing but moving pictures, then I would outline the picture with dry black paint; that is to say, lampblack mixed with half-boiled linseed oil and half turpentine. If, however, you propose running illustrated songs, then you cannot do this, since the slide projection will be larger than the moving picture. Your screen should have a hood of black cloth to ward off the moonlight. (3) Yes, I consider the machine named as most excellent for that or any other kind of work. (4) I do not see how I can answer your question, New York, without getting hung, drawn, quartered and shot to death and possibly being killed besides. The service question is one that you must decide for yourself. There are a goodly number of independent houses in New York City, many of them doing a good business. I would advise you to look the two classes of service over carefully before deciding, and use your own judgment. You may do this by visiting several independent theaters where different classes of independent service are run and then visit several houses running licensed. (5) Any size, within reason, you may wish. (6) Depends Altogether on the size of the auditorium. (7) Same answer as 6. I might say, however, that unless you have a very large place I would not favor running too excessive size. Other things being equal, the smaller picture is the better. You get a better illumination from a given amperage with a small picture than you do with a larger one. Faults of photography in a small picture are not so hugely magnified, and even the jumping of the film is not magnified so much. Except in a very large airdome I would hesitate, particularly on moonlight nights, about projecting a picture more than 14 or, at the outside, 16 feet wide. You understand, of course, that the size of the picture is governed by the lens you use, and you can get a lens to project any size picture at any given distance, except where your throw is a very short one, in the latter case the size would be limited to some extent, provided you wanted a good picture.

Unique Idea.—Pittsburg, Kas., writes ordering a Handbook and sending a cut of his scheme for stopping condenser breakage.



Pittsburg's scheme is to place a cloth, or oilcloth, hood over a 12-inch fan as shown. The hood is connected to the condenser casing by means of a rubber tube and metal pipe. The fan is started before the arc is lighted and kept going until the close of the day. I certainly would like to see it tried out once and hear the reports. If it works it will be a surprise to the editor of this Department.

Important Question.—Toronto, Can., writes: I am at present using 110-volt, 60-cycle A. C. Government power has now arrived in Toronto and will probably be ready for distribution in about one month. Except in the immediate downtown district the power will all be 25 cycle A. C. I should like to get D. C., if possible, at the same time keeping my present supply as an auxiliary. Will you give me the benefit of your experience as regards the various devices on the market for changing A. C. to D. C? In other words, would you advise me to invest in a motor generator set or not? Do you think an arc rectifier such as the General Electric people put out would be more satisfactory, or would some other machine with which you are acquainted be best? All I need is sufficient current to run one projection lamp. The cost of installation is a secondary consideration, as we have a long throw with a big picture and must have a good strong light; besides, power is going to be very cheap here. We use 100 K. W. per week at 8 cents, which price will undoubtedly be cut in half and probably even more than that, so that the cost of power can be eliminated from our calculations and the money so saved be invested in some suitable appliance that will insure us a clear, white, steady light at all times. What would you recommend us to purchase?

Unfortunately you did not say, Toronto, what the size of your picture will be and I, therefore, cannot judge as to the necessary amperage. Some operators claim to get good light on a large picture with as little as 25 amperes, but I have never seen a 25 ampere light which I considered good when spread around over a picture 18 feet wide, or even 16 feet, or even 12 feet. You see there may be a wide difference of opinion as to what constitutes a "good light." I think, on the whole, however, that the General Electric people can supply you with a mercury arc rectifier which will give you heavy enough amperage, and so I think I should recommend its purchase instead of a motor generator set. The motor generator set is, of course, ideal, but very costly. I have talked with a great many mercury arc rectifier users and they have universally expressed satisfaction with the machine. I have also observed them in operation and the light produced is excellent. Taking all things into consideration, I would recommend you to buy one of these machines rather than a motor generator, provided, as I said before, they can supply you with one capable of sufficient amperage for your needs.

A Queer Question.—Ware, Mass., writes: "Supposing the mains of a 3-wire system enter a three-story building through the basement where they are fused at 80 amperes, the voltage being 110-220. On the first floor the neutral and right-hand wire supplies 15 amperes and on the third floor the same two wires supply 60 amperes. In the second floor the neutral and left-hand wire supply 35 amperes. The question is how to hitch up a 40 ampere moving picture machine on the second floor. The Massachusetts inspectors claim that to hitch up directly on the two left-hand wires is wrong, or incorrect I think, however, it balances the circuit perfectly, as we are then using 75 amperes of current on either side."

I could not see any room for argument on that particular proposition, Ware, and viewed it exactly as did you, that the arc would properly be hitched to the neutral and left-hand wire. Still, inasmuch as the inspectors had decided otherwise, I consulted one of the best electrical engineers in New York City. He looked it over and merely replied that the Massachusetts inspectors must be crazy, which of course was answer in plenty, and to spare.

The connection is not incorrect. It is, however, objectionable from the power company's point of view. The projection arc lamp forms a variable load since, when burning, the amperage fluctuates with each change of arc-length and jumps from nothing at all to full load instantly when the arc is struck, and vice versa. For these reasons when one is using a transformer it is better to get one wound for 220 volts and connect to the two outer wires of the circuit, and then balance the incandescent load of the house and there will be no ill effects felt from the arc lamp, or lamps, at the powerhouse. When using rheostative resistance on neutral service, however, this would be altogether too expensive.

A Few Puzzles.—New York City expends one whole postal card on the following: "Please solve for me the following puzzles: (1) I am using a Powers No. 5 and the first 18 or 20 feet of film always run off the take-up sprocket. The tension on the take-up is all right. (2) Is it allowed to run a Standard machine by motor in New York City? (3) Is there any motion picture lamp hooked up on 220 volts A. C. in the Bronx? (4) I was told that the Edison Company will not allow one to hook up a moving picture lamp except on the two outside wires, or on 220 volts. Is that right?"

(1) From what you say, I assume that after the first 15 or 20 feet of film have been run there is no further trouble. This would seem to indicate that your take-up tension is too tight. The take-up tension should be barely tight enough to keep the reel revolving until all the film has been rewound. Anything more than this is excessive and very harmful to the film. See to it that your lower loop sets square; that is, see that the film goes down around the lower loop and square up on the take-up sprocket. Be sure that your take-up sprocket idler sets away from the sprocket by about twice the thickness of the film. Be sure that your lower magazine sets in such position that the film enters it without touching either side of the fire trap and see to it that the magazine sets square with the table board lengthwise. Also see to it that the lower magazine sets straight up and down and doesn't lean over to one side. Attend carefully to all of these things and if there is any further trouble it must certainly be found in the film and not in the machine, though I might add that you should not use a take-up sprocket until the teeth are practically all worn off. I do not know that you are guilty of this, but a surprising number of exhibitors are. (2) Yes. (3) I do not know. (4) The Edison Company has made a ruling that moving picture machines must be connected across the two outside wires on all their A. C. lines in Greater New York. I would suggest you call up the Edison Company and secure full information concerning this matter. I am not certain as to their Manhattan D. C. lines. The A. C. in Manhattan is not furnished by the Edison folks.

Operating Booths.—Connecticut (name of town suppressed by request) writes: "Kindly answer the following questions through the Trouble Department, suppressing my name and that of the town. (1) Is it necessary to have an operating booth in the State of New York when playing only one night in a place? (2) What kind of a booth is required for permanent shows by the authorities in New York State? Is a booth made of iron or steel allowed? (3) Is the American Projectograph made at the present time? If so, who is its manufacturer?"

(1) This is governed entirely by local ordinance and laws. (2) Governed entirely by local ordinance, though the National Board of Fire Underwriters have rules governing this matter. These rules, however, are in a somewhat chaotic condition at the time. (3) It is. Mr. F. J. Talmage, Editor Moving Picture World, has one (second-hand, good condition) he wishes to dispose of.

Carbon Setting—Boston, Mass., writes: "I was looking over a paper in the film exchange the other day and noticed where instructions were given for setting carbons for D. C. The instructions were to set the lower carbon straight up and the upper at the top one angled out to meet it. I tried that out that evening and got a rotting good calling down from my manager because the light was on the bum. I couldn't get good light that way and would like to know what you think about that kind of a set for D. C."

I think that others who follow that kind of instruction will land in trouble. There you did those things sound all right in theory, but any practical operator will tell you that they won't and don't work out in practice. So what's the use in arguing such matters. You tried it and got your feet in it. That ought to be enough to satisfy you without asking me questions about it. I have repeatedly given instructions as to what I consider the proper method of setting carbons, based not upon theory but upon practical experience and nothing has occurred to change my views in these matters. I do not care to and do not propose to be drawn into arguments along these lines, because arguments of that kind merely tend to confuse those who are trying to learn and spread those remarks for the reasons that I propose a reply such as I have made will be immediately followed by a lot of hot air and heat from certain quarters.

Horse Power of Motors.—Indiana, Ill., writes asking the current consumption of small motors. According to authorities the current consumption of small motors is as follows: 1 and 1½ h. p. consume the current of motors of 100, 115, 220 and 230 volts respectively 9, 8, 4½ and 4 amperes, while the 2 h. p. consumption respectively is 17, 15, 8 and 7½ amperes of current. The same power 3 and 4 volt motors use respectively 25, 23, 12½ and 11½ amperes, while the same power 500 volt motor uses 3 and 5½ amperes. You must understand, however, that these figures will vary somewhat with different motors, motors according as some are more economical than others.

Do Not Understand.—Wheeling, Pa., writes, sending sketch of a switch designed for the purpose of throwing on the house and booth lights when an arc switch is pulled. I am sorry to say, Wheeling, I cannot grasp the idea from your sketch. I will, however, have to ask you to make it a little plainer if you will.

Lens Substitute.—Biloxi, Miss., writes as follows: "Can you inform me through the Trouble Department as to whether there is any practical way of projecting a stereo picture without an objective lens? A short time ago friend of mine who was out traveling with a show got his stereoptican lens broken in shipment. I told him he could have projected a good picture without the stereoptican lens, and we have a little bet up as to whether I am right or wrong. Will you kindly decide the matter?"

You are right, Biloxi. It is quite possible to project a fairly good stereoptican picture by using a single plano convex lens in place of the objective held in position, in some temporary mount, the proper distance from the condenser. You can also project a motion picture by using a plano-convex lens instead of an objective, but the picture will be very small; in fact, altogether too small to be practical, unless the throw is a very long one.

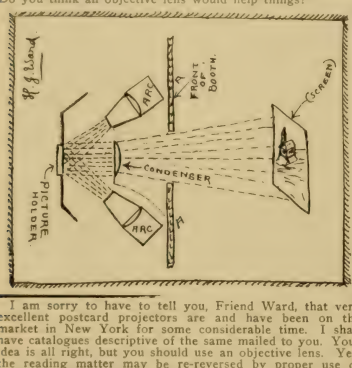
Union Wanted.—Washington, D. C., writes: "Kindly let me know the name and address of the nearest Union to Washington. I have a 'Moving Picture World,' Vol. IV, No. 14, April 3, 1909, which I will trade for any two numbers of Vol. V."

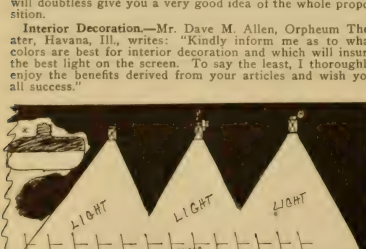
The nearest Union to you is Washington, D. C., and you will find the President of the Union at the Circle Amusement Theater, 2103 Pennsylvania Avenue, N. W. Washington's address will be furnished anyone wishing to trade papers as above.

Postcard Projector.—Mr. H. J. Ward, Halifax, N. S., writes: "Though I believe this is the first time you have heard from this part of the world, nevertheless your good work is appreciated in Nova Scotia. I should like your aid as regards a device which I shall briefly explain. After considerable experimenting, I found I could project any ordinary photograph, postcard, etc., in the natural colors, as per sketch. The trouble is, however, that although the placing of the card wrong side up makes it right side up on the screen, still the reading matter reads backwards, just the same as an impression on a blotter. I am unable to get a good clear image on the screen at even 7 ft. from the condenser. Would it be possible to get the reading matter so it would be read right? Also how could I increase the light on the screen? Do you think an objective lens would help things?"



I am sorry to have to tell you, Friend Ward, that very excellent postcard projectors are and have been on the market in New York for some considerable time. I shall have catalogues descriptive of the same mailed to you. Your idea is all right, but you should use an objective lens. Yes, the reading matter may be re-reversed by proper use of mirrors. The catalogues and descriptive matter sent you will doubtless give you a very good idea of the whole proposition.

Interior Decoration.—Mr. Dave M. Allen, Orpheum Theater, Havana, Ill., writes: "Kindly inform me as to what colors are best for interior decoration and which will insure the best light on the screen. To say the least, I thoroughly enjoy the benefits derived from your articles and wish you all success."



To go fully into the matter of decorations would consume a good deal of space. Suffice to say, however, in reply to your inquiry, that if you are going to run nothing but moving pictures and stereopticon slides—that is to say, no vaudeville—it would be better to have your walls not too light a shade. That is to say, not dark enough to be oppressive or gloomy, neither light enough so that the light will reflect too much, thus striking the screen and injuring the brilliancy of the picture. With walls decorated along the lines suggested you may keep your ceiling lights burning all the time by using a metalic screen shade similar to those shown in cut. The editor of this Department is positive that he can, and in fact he has, lighted a moving picture theater so that one could read ordinary newspaper print, with perfect comfort, within ten or fifteen feet of the curtain, and that without injuring the brilliancy of the picture practically at all, merely by the use of medium, dark, non-reflecting walls and light shades similar to those shown. These shades may be of metal, or they may be of semi-opaque cathedral glass; but they should be so designed and so distributed that the light rays from one lamp will meet the light rays from the next lamp within anywhere from 2 to 4 feet of the floor, and the construction of the wall should be so made that the light will not strike the wall itself. I think without further explanation you will readily grasp the idea. On page 989, Oct. 29, 1910, issue you will find an article dealing with the lighting problem as above set forth.

The Handbook.—Indianapolis, Ind., writes: "Will you please send me description and price of your Handbook for operators and managers?"

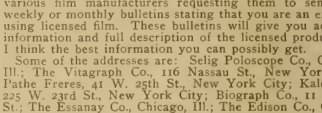
The Handbook of the Handbook, Indianapolis, is $1.50, postage paid. As to description, it is designed as an instruction book for operators, and moving picture theater managers. As to what others think of it, I would refer you to letter titled "Circuit-Breaker" in this week's department. I have hundreds of other letters commending the book in equally strong terms.

Licensed Film Description.—Mr. Wm. A. Cochrane, Nova Scotia, writes as follows: "I have been taking the 'Moving Picture World' for some time and have received many helpful hints. I am perfectly satisfied with it, but would like to know where I can receive more detail descriptive matter as to the projection of licensed films. If you can give me any advice as to the above, I should be very grateful."

I would suggest, Neighbor Cochrane, that you write the various film manufacturers requesting them to send their weekly or monthly bulletins stating that you are an exhibitor using licensed film. These bulletins will give you advanced information and full description of the licensed product, and I think the best information you can possibly get.

Some of the addresses are: Selig Poloscope Co., Chicago, Ill.; The Vitagraph Co., 116 Nassau St., New York City; Pathe Freres, 41 W. 25th St., New York City; Kalem Co., 225 W. 23rd St., New York City; Biograph Co., 11 E. 14th St.; The Essanay Co., Chicago, Ill.; The Edison Co., Orange, N. J.; The Lubin Co., Philadelphia, Pa.

Wire Trouble.—Arlington, N. J., writes: "The following is a sketch showing how the wires run from the street to my moving picture machine. Please tell me why fuse No. 4,



TO CITY MAINS
MAY WIRE
MAY WIRE
#1 SWITCH #2 METER 100 INCH LIGHTS
#3 METER (THIS BLOCK 30 ENNREE FUSE) NOT SHOWN.
#5 FUSE BLOCK #6 & #10 ENCLOSED FUSES
#7 50 AMP. DOUBLE SWITCH.
#8 MF SWITCH #9 CURRENT SAVER.
SKETCH BY SUPERVISOR OF BUILDING

Switch No. 5 and wire from Switch No. 4 to Switch No. 5 get so hot that I am unable to touch them. The fuses at No. 4 blow out after being in about a week. Does the difference in the size of wires have this effect? I am unable to state what number of amperes I use at the arc, as I have no ammeter. I wish to thank you for the information I have received from time to time through the Department."

Your diagram shows No. 4 wire as far as fuse-block No. 4, with No. 6 stranded beyond that. How do you know it is really No. 6? Measure one of the strands with micrometer calliper, in thousandths of an inch. Square the diameter in thousandths of an inch (multiply it by itself) which gives you the area of that strand, in circular mills. On page 19 of the handbook you will find table of areas of different wires in circular mills. If the square of the diameter of the one strand, multiplied by the number of strands the wire contains, does not equal the area of a No. 6 wire in c m, then it is less than a No. 6. On page 15 of the Handbook will be found table of carrying capacities, in amperes, of various size wires; information you should by all means have. I note you use a "current saver," though the make does not appear. From the fact that your 50 ampere switch heats it seems evident this device is delivering very large amperage. I would suggest that you either cut down the amperage or else install No. 5 wire (capacity 54 amperes, rubbed covered, 77 weatherproof) and a larger switch.

Independent Light Plant.—Mr. B. Marx, Empire Theater, Rockaway Beach, N. Y., writes as follows: "Will you kindly inform me through your most interesting Department how I can make electricity on the premises? We have very poor and uncertain electric service here and the worst of it all is, we pay more than anywhere else that I know of, viz: 15 cents per k. w. Pretty steep, isn't it? I have seen exactly the information I seek, I believe, in the Department, but at the time didn't think I would have occasion to use it, so of course didn't note your reply."

My dear boy, I have time and again cautioned readers to keep all copies of the "World" on file, so that they could be referred to. You will find in the advertising pages of the "World" a small light plant advertised by the Detroit Engine Works, 406 Bellevue Ave., Detroit, Mich. This outfit has some very excellent recommendations from users. It seems to be entirely practical and the company will be glad to send you copies of letters of recommendations, together with the address of the writers; also full information concerning the outfit. Fifteen cents per k. w. is indeed an awful price to pay for current. I do not blame you for contemplating a change. On page 599, March 18 issue, you will find a letter concerning the Detroit Light Plant, from an exhibitor in Beeville, Tex.

Machine Trouble.—So. Bethlehem, Pa., writes: "I am running a Lubin 1907 model machine and the picture rocks on the curtain, like a ship in a storm, when run at slowest possible speed. Machine is securely anchored to the floor, rock steady, and the intermittent movement is in perfect adjustment. Sprockets and rollers are new, but the gate is non-adjustable and although not very tight, wears out an aperture plate in a week's time so badly that there is no sign of the tracks left upon it. Outside of this, the machine runs all right. Is there any remedy for the jumping? I have tried about everything. I am positively sure it is not the fault of the film, as we use 20 day service."

Your description of the trouble is rather vague. "Like a ship in a storm" might mean almost anything, but I presume what you are driving at is that the picture has a slight up and down movement on the screen. If this is the fact and the movement occurs once every time the intermitten sprocket goes around (four times each turn of the rank) it would indicate the intermitten sprocket to be out of round, or the intermittent shaft sprung;—one of the two. I do not remember what kind of a tension arrangement the Lubin machine has. I would, therefore, suggest that you take that matter up with the Lubin factory, describing the trouble fully and carfully. They will, no doubt, be able to remedy it. Wearing an aperture plate out in a week is ridiculous. It indicates unduly heavy tension with consequent heavy wear on the sprocket holes of the film, the intermittent movement, and, in fact, the whole machine. If the rocking you speak of is sidewise, it would indicate end motion in your intermittent sprocket, or the film guide at top of gate, which you should immediately eliminate. There certainly must be something wrong with your aperture plates. You could not possibly wear a plate out in a week unless the metal were very, very soft.

Camera Procedure.—Nashville, Tenn., writes: "Would you please inform me as to whether a camera operator, when desiring characters in a moving picture to move fast, turns the crank slow or fast? Has the moving picture camera a shutter or not? If so, give a brief description."

The slower the crank of the camera is turned, within certain limits, of course, the faster the characters will move when projected at normal speed. To get a maximum of movement, the camera should be run slow and the projection machine fast. As a matter of fact, however, the camera man is supposed to run his machine at a steady speed of about 60 per minute, except when making trick films. The camera has a shutter which closes the aperture while the intermittent pulls the film down just as does the projection machine shutter, except that there are no flicker blades, the shutter having but one wing and that blade must close the aperture practically light tight.

Bound Volumes.—Mr. Middlecamp, Princeton, N. J., writes: "Will you please inform me as to whether Vol. VII (1910) of the 'Moving Picture World,' when bound, makes one book, or more than one? I should like to have it, but it might be too big a load for a traveling operator."

The 1910, "Moving Picture World" makes two books, each about three inches thick; Vols. 6 and 7, each one weighing approximately 9 lbs. They are $2 for each volume, easily and substantially bound.

Lenses, Etc.—Princeton, N. J., writes: "Will you kindly give me a little information on the projection lens? The lens nearest the condenser has a convex side and the other side is a flat surface. Should the convex side face the condenser and the flat surface the carbon? Next comes a spacing ring and a convex lens. Does the convex side of the lens face the condenser or the screen? In front are two lenses glued together. Which way should these lenses go in? (One side is flat and the other convex.) Here is a little cam pin stunt: When the pin wears flat, take out the cam and shaft and drive the pin out. Put the worn part in the place wherever the other part came. To catch the lower loop, I raise the idler with the thumb; hold it just barely off the sprocket and with the midle finger and the finger next the little finger I am able to pick up the lower loop. To do this, however, one must be very careful, or the film will be torn. The most prolific cause of losing the lower loop is, not enough tension on the intermittent sprocket idler and too much on the take-up, either or both together.

As regards the lens, Princeton, your whole question may be replied to by saying that the convex side of all factors of a projection lens should face towards the screen and the flat or concave side towards the condenser. As regards the cam pin stunt, frankly, I do not think very much of it. I am afraid it would be more bother that it is worth. What I suppose you mean is that you take the cam pin out and turn it one quarter around. In my judgment, it would be better to get a new pin.

Circuit Breaker.—Mr. H. A. Moyer, Waverly, Ia., writes: "Here I come again with experience as regards circuit breakers. Since my last letter I've tried them out thoroughly on M. P. arcs. They are practical on circuits where an adjustable resistance or transformer is used, so that you can cut your amperage down until you start the arc. On a non-adjustable resistance, they do not work well, since in striking the arc a dead short-circuit is created for an instant, which causes a heavy flow of current and pulls the breaker, unless it is set 15 to 20 amperes above normal load; that is to say, if you are pulling 60 amperes normal, we would have to set the breaker at about 80. I use 60 amperes through compensare and have breaker set at 65. It works all right, but shut the amperage down when striking the arc. I have installed a circuit breaker here on account of peculiar local conditions which render it practically necessary. I have concluded that, since giving it a try-out, I would not advise its use, as it is quite a bother at times. In sending in sketch of induction coil for telephone recently, I forgot to say that it is better to wind the coil where the transmitter and receiver are purchased, as they will then be wound to work with same. The one described is the kind used with transmitter and receiver of Western Electric Company, the numbers of which I gave. I enclose $1.50 for another copy of Handbook, as I gave away the one I purchased when it first came out, and I would not be without one! It is worth $5."

I am very glad you sent in the information concerning the circuit breaker. I should have recognized the fact that it would kick open every time one started the arc. I did not think of that at the time, however, and neither, I guess, did you. But as the oversight has been corrected so soon, there has probably been no harm done. Many thanks for your kind words concerning the Handbook. There are a very great many who feel just as you do about it, if their letters count for anything.

Ventilation.—Harrisburg, Pa., writes: "I am about to erect a motion picture show room and would like to know the best way to ventilate it."

You certainly furnish sufficient data to enable me to give more than a very general answer, Harrisburg. If you propose erecting a one-story theater building, ventilation may be had in excellent form by installing ventilators of ample size in the roof, taking care that they are so constructed as to exclude the light. You should by all means, install at least a twenty-four-inch pipe from the operating room ceiling to the open air above the roof. This not only acts as a most efficient operating room ventilator in hot weather, but in case of fire it carries off the smoke and fumes. You may also secure excellent ventilation by installing an exhaust fan of ample size (dependent on proportions of the auditorium) either to drive fresh air in or pull the foul air out, as seems best in the individual case. This fan ought not to be near the stage since its hum will interfere with the singing of the actors, at any there be, unless its speed be reduced when songs or arts are on. I would suggest that you consult the Kimball Electric Company, 23rd Street, near 4th Avenue, New York City, informing them that I referred you to them. They will take the matter up with you and go into it thoroughly informing you as to size of fans necessary, etc., etc., for your case.

Light Bills Etc.—Mr. C. R. Smith, Columbus, Kas., writes: "You seemed to rather doubt the truth of the statement made in a former communication of mine, concerning our monthly gas bill of $2.75. I will admit it does seem almost unbelievably low, considering the amount of illumination we use. To give you an idea when we used only current our bills ranged from $25.00 to $33.00 per month, paying 12 cents per K. W. (110 volt, 33 cycle current) and at that the owner of the light plant claimed to be loosing money on us. I failed, however, to mention one pertinent point in my other letter, viz.—our only run-counting—performance at all. We turn on the lights promptly at seven p. m. and, rain or shine, start the show at 7.30. Our town is small but in two years there has never been weather bad enough to keep our patrons away. We always have enough to open to. I have all my receipted gas bills and will gladly submit them. Since cold weather started we have been using four gas stoves and four gas lamps, besides the engine. The heaviest bill for engine, stoves and lamps has been $7.75 for one month. We never run less than two shows; sometimes three, and a half of the fourth. We seat 480 and can easily handle our patrons, except Saturday and Sunday nights when we often are obliged to turn them away. One reason we feel able to challange all and sundry to surpass our projection is that such men as Lyman H. Howe have failed to pull our patrons from us. Also, since we came here four different shows have attempted the feat of 'running us out.' We haven't run! If further evidence of the excellence of our work is needed, the opera house manager here has recorded the performances before we came. He had to close up just three weeks after we opened! They fought us with some of the best stock companies on the road at 10 cents admission, but we are still in evidence. We have never given a prize or any inducements whatsoever, except our regular programme, to hold our patronage. I would like, in closing, to offer a suggestion to A. C. users. The blue spot (ghost) may often be removed by bringing the condenser lenses closer together. I had this trouble and instead of buying condensing lenses of different focal length we removed the spaceing band from our condensing lens holder (an Edison), and had it made considerable narrower, bringing the lenses close enough together so that they almost touch. We then made some rings out of ordinary, smooth steel wire, to act as gauges. By getting the condensing lenses just the right distance apart both the blue ghost and the red fringe (present when the lamp is pulled back far enough to remove the ghost) disappear. But don't try to get good light with less than 35 amperes of A. C. Forty or forty-five is better. This may be old to many but I got it by experience."

The letter referred to by Neighbor Smith appears on page 368, Feb. 18 issue, under the title "Natural Gas." You are mistaken in supposing I intended to cast reflection on the correctness of your gas bill figures. I only meant to convey the idea that they would prove startling to theater owners and managers who every month feed many times that sum into the maw of the insatiable purveyors of electric light and power. As regards your challange, if you were able to hold patrons against the Lyman H. Howe Shows, you certainly are entitled to boast of the feat. I note with much satisfaction that your pictures were able to hold their own, and even defeat high class stock work. Time and again have I made the assertion that properly staged and properly projected pictures formed an all-sufficient bill. Every single time when the shadow actors get a square deal they win out. It has never been known to fail. As to the condenser stunt, it is merely one of those funny things which happen but, before receiving your letter, I (last Monday) dictated to the stenographer the very same thing. You will find it in the Department, this week, in answer to Denver's letter. Many thanks for the idea, however. I can't quite catch what you mean by the steel wire "gauges." Explain further, please.

Carbon Setting.—Los Angeles, Cal., lands on the Editor as follows: "I again trouble you, but if you will forgive me this time I shall never do it again, until next time. I tried out your method of setting carbons and it doesn't work right. The arc kept moving around and every little while I had to re-set the lower carbon holder. Enclosed is a sketch of my way of setting; also yours. The difference is quite evident. Your way gave a very bright light, but it rendered the pictures in a monotone; in other words, it injured the contrasting effect of the photographer, in which some films are poor enough at best. Possibly 30 amperes is not enough for that kind of setting. Will some other operators try out the two methods and express an opinion. I would like to ask you if the rectifyer tube were to fail to work, is there any way of using the transformer safely so as not to 'start anything?' Our meter is good for only 25 amperes and I have no rheostat. I overheard an operator tell a subordinate not to focus the picture on a title, that the different foci of the cameras affected the focus of the machine. What is your opinion on this subject?"

As regards the carbon setting, your sketch shows that you are using D. C.; also, if your sketch is correct, you have set the lower carbon a little too far ahead, thus forming in a modified degree the condition shown at "B", Fig. 32, Page 88, of the Handbook (which you will note I say is wrong), to which I presume you refer in having followed my setting. If you followed my setting, as you say, there should be no need to change the lower carbon arm at all. If the carbons are properly aligned sidewise, I consume the whole carbon without making any change whatever in the set. The only difference you have made in your set seems to be to have given the lower carbon less angular advancement. There seems to be little room or need for argument in this matter, since, as you have intimated, the amount of advancement will depend, within certain limits, upon the number of amperes used. I shall be only too glad, however, to receive the ideas and views of different operators as well as the result of any experiments they may make, and to publish same. If I am in error there is no one who wants to have that fact demonstrated more than do I. It is the truth we are all after and it doesn't matter who is right or wrong so long as we find out what is best. As to your question concerning the rectifier, I have written the rectifier people concerning this matter and here is their reply. The figures refer to wiring diagram of rectifier, of which you have, or should have a copy:

Schenectady, N. Y., March 13.

Mr. F. H. Richardson, Editor Trouble Department.

Dear Sir:—It is possible, although rather complicated, to use a rectifier in case of emergency as an A. C. inductor. If 110 V. 60 cycles is the alternating current supply, the A. C. line should be connected across Nos. 1 and 7 (see wiring diagram in your possession), and the arc lamp across Nos. 6 and 12, with the regulating reactance connected in series. Such an arrangement would go with proper adjustment on the regulating reactance for 40 or 50 amperes A. C., but would overload the apparatus, as of course it is not designed for such a high current. However, in an emergency, perhaps the operator would be willing to take the risk. If the line voltage is 220, 60 cycles, the connection above can be used, although of course more of the choke coil would have to be connected in series. There are so many varying conditions, such as big drop in the supply circuit and low or high voltage, that it is hard to make any definite statement. If the operator desires it, I would suggest that he try it out at some leisure time, and then be sure he knows how to do it again in case he is called upon to make such a connection He should be sure that the coils do not get too hot, which can, from time to time, be tested with his hand for temperature.

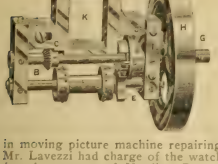
This is the second inquiry we have received of this kind, and probably operators do not ask for it oftener because they have so little trouble in actual service. The tubes are giving long life, but the best thing to do to prepare for a breakdown is to always have one or more tubes in reserve.

GENERAL ELECTRIC CO.

As to focusing on the title, while it is quite true that it is frequently necessary to change the focus of the projecting lens on the different scenes of the film taken by different cameras, it doesn't at all follow that the title should not be focused or that the focus should not be set on the title. Where the title is focused sharp, nine times out of ten, you will find the scene following will be in focus also, or very nearly so.

Condenser.—Thomas, W. Va., writes: "Will you please advise me what focal length condensers to use for a 6 by 8 picture with 52½-foot throw. Am using one 6½ and one 7½; the 7½ next to the arc?"

You have practically a 6-inch equivalent focus lens and should use not less than two 7½-inch condensing lenses.



Mr. E. W. Lavezzi, who advertises this week a new improvement for motion picture machines, is not a newcomer in moving picture machine repairing than any other person. Mr. Lavezzi had charge of the watch machinery manufacturing department of Harding Bros., of Chicago, the largest place of its kind in the country and a tool and jig maker for the past twelve years. Such a valuable experience is the key to the success enjoyed by Mr. Lavezzi in his enterprise.

or a man with mere ideas, he is a skilled workmen with much experience in delicate machinery and he does his work thoroughly. Mr. Lavezzi worked with the firms that turn out the best moving picture machines and the best tools in the country and has had without a doubt a better chance to go to the front as an expert Lavezzi's method of putting this movement into shape, to cause the pictures to overlap on the screen, is something novel. Anyone knows that if the pictures don't overlap there is wasted energy in the light. You may save a few dimes on cheap repairs but you will lose dollars on wasted light.

Suggested by "The Priestess of Carthage."

Our Defective Renting System.

Our present renting system must be modified as it is working against the interests of the exhibitors and discourages the manufacturers.

Let us illustrate:

"Oh! You Clubman" is a production of which the negative did not involve much work and did not cost much money. It is one of these negatives that can be turned out at the rate of 3 and 4 per week, with so little attention that the producer did not stop to light the lamp shown on the table.

"The Priestess of Carthage" is a negative that called for much work and weeks of study, the cost of such a negative must have been at least 10 times more than the cost of the negative of "Oh! You Clubman."

Copies of both negatives are sold to the General Film Co. and these copies are rented out in the same order. They work side by side. The Priestess of Carthage will not be shown more than Oh! You Clubman and Oh! You Clubman will not be shown less than The Priestess of Carthage.

In other words, the General Film Co. has so well systemized the renting, that everything is scheduled in advance. On Monday they buy so many copies from Pathe, Selig, Biograph, Lubin. On Tuesday, so many copies from Edison, Essanay, Gaumont, Vitagraph. On Wednesday, so many copies from Pathe, Urban, Kalem, Edison, etc. A mere business proposition, like a family orders so much bread per week, so much milk, a morning paper, an evening paper etc. The quality of the productions is not considered and most of the employes of the General Film Co. do not look at the films, they merely say "It is good"—"Very Good," basing their judgment on what they read from the prospectus of the manufactured and from the notices of a house organ.

Unless the renters are swamped with orders for The Priestess of Carthage, they will not order many extra copies. If even the exhibitors call for the masterpiece of Gaumont. The General Film Co. will politely inform them that each exhibitor will get it in turn and will not be able to keep it more than a day, as the production (like all other films) is booked in advance for the following days.

An exhibitor who would like to make a special week of The Priestess of Carthage, and the film can stand more than a week on the boards, will be unable to get it, because if he is booked to have it on Wednesday, he must return it the following morning, to fill the programme of Jones.

With this deplorable system the exhibitor cannot make any money with good films and the manufacturers not selling the number of copies necessary to pay their great expenses, prefer to work less expensive productions.

The only time that both the manufacturer and the exhibitor can make any real money out of feature films, is when the manufacturer makes a special release of the said feature films and puts them out with some flourishing titles, like: "Roosevelt in Africa"—"Jeffries and Johnson"—etc. As these films are rented at a greatly advanced price, the renters are then willing to purchase extra copies, to supply the great demand.

There is no doubt that if Mr. Geo. Kleine were to make a special release of "The Priestess of Carthage," he would sell more copies even at an advanced price and the exhibitors would be willing to pay $50 per day and double their admission. If Mr. Kleine releases this Gaumont masterpiece in the usual routine, the General Film Co. will not buy many extra copies, the exhibitor will not pay more than his regular service, the public will not pay a double admission and the Priestess of Carthage will follow the ordinary circuit to wind up on some hall-yes, with so many other superb productions. This would be a calamity because "The Priestess of Carthage" should be able to hold the boards for several years, although it is not a religious production, it is as much if not a better production than the Passion Play.

Mr. Gaumont can afford to give us such remarkable productions, because if Mr. Kleine cannot sell to the General Film Co. more copies than the regular number, Mr. Gaumont has another market, not a closed market, but a wide open market, called the European market. The argument of our manufacturers against an open market, falls flat in the presence of "The Priestess of Carthage." If, as they say, an open market means an increase of manufacturers and a slashing of prices, Mr. Gaumont would not spend the money he is spending on such productions. No, he could not, because the American market, limited as it is with the General Film Co., could not buy enough copies to pay the cost of such masterpieces. Consequently, to be able to produce, Mr. Gaumont must find another market and he has that market in Europe. The European market is so favorable to Mr. Gaumont that he can still improve the quality and grandeur of his productions. Mr. Gaumont must have a good European market to justify him in spending so much money on his negatives.

It is true that they have in Europe, like we have in this country, a lot of would-be manufacturers that should be wiped out and who slash the prices, to try to keep themselves afloat. What saves the good European manufacturers is that the best classes, even the lovers of the Great Comedie Francaise, go to see motion pictures and in Paris they have, what we should have in this country, different grades of moving picture houses. They have the common nickel shows, for the common classes and they have the 1 franc, the 2 franc theaters for better classes, where the manufacturers of high class productions find an outlet for their pictures.

We have made some improvements, and we have noticed the better classes, to be somewhat reconciled to motion pictures, but we have not done enough to capture entirely the better element and we will not succeed until we have a new renting system. Yes, one great drawback with our present renting system, is the poor judgment of the exchanges and the fact that they do not know the pictures they are renting and, for instance I would not be surprised to see the General Film Co. rent "The Priestess of Carthage" to one of our best theaters and to give as a second reel, a "Max on an ugly spree," coming home to smash everything, to lay on the dining room table and smear his face with a dish of cream cheese.

The other day, with "Paganini and the Countess Beatrice" they gave as a second reel, such a bad picture that the audience walked out disgusted, and in their disgust, forgot the beauties of the Gaumont masterpiece.

In an independent theater, they gave the great Ambrosio "Gerusalemme Liberata," a film that won the admiration of everyone, then right on top of it, they gave a picture of a tramp turning dog, after eating a dog biscuit. This was enough to make the audience sick and give a black eye to motion pictures. The spectators who had tears in their eyes at the close of the Ambrosio masterpiece, forget everything to condemn the tramp dog.

Our exchanges should look at the pictures and use a little common sense in making up the programmes. "Gerusalemme Liberata" could have converted many folks to motion pictures and could have made them regular patrons of our theaters but the dog affair turned them against the cinematographic art.

J. M. BRANDT.

BIO CARBONS
Advertised by the man who uses them

NESTO

"Rarely Equalled—Never

IF IT'S A NESTOR IT'S GOOD!

Release of Wednesd

"COULD YOU

A Photo-Comedy of Rarest Excellence ORI

"Could You Blame Him"

Old Colonel Bailey has money to burn, and has made up his mind to let his nephew, Tom, burn it; but Uncle must have the say as to whom Tom shall marry and—here's the rub.

Now, it so happens that Bess is an uncommonly pretty girl, which fact causes Tom to temporarily forget his uncle's riches.

The honeymoon scarcely over when the colonel decides to pay Tom a visit. Here the trouble begins. How to fool Uncle is the question. Debonair Dick, Tom's old chum, kindly consents to pose as Bess's husband and a bedlam of choice fun breaks loose. The Colonel gets completely muddled up in a tangled maze of puzzling events. Dick has a great time at his friend's expense, while unhappy Tom, assisted by the green-eyed monster, spends many uncomfortable moments. The fun is fast and furious all the way through, and the end comes amid a roar of laughter.

Scene from "COU

JOIN OUR MAILING LIST!

COMING! Wednesday, March 29th, "THE

DAVID HORSLEY, German Savings Bank

FILMS

...rpassed—Often Imitated"

NESTOR FILMS — MADE BY DAVID HORSLEY

March 22nd, 1911

...BLAME HIM?"

...NOW! 883 Feet of Inimitable Film Fun

IT PAYS TO GET Nestor Films!

...BLAME HIM"

Mr. Exchangeman!

Whether you are the biggest or the smallest in the business, you must have this typical Nestor comedy, which is not to be confounded with the usual run of so called comedies that are such a drag on the market. There are comedies and comedies. Real comedies do not grow on every bush. Whenever we come across the genuine article, we promptly film it to the delight of hundreds of thousands. "Could You Blame Him?" is a comedy of purest humor. It is but 883 feet in length—you know that brevity is the soul of wit. Incidentally it will begin earning you money the very instant you order it.

Mr. Exhibitor!

Don't blame the Exchangeman if you fail to get "Could You Blame Him?" Blame Yourself, for, if you ask for it, if you make your demand strong, he will have to give it to you. Your program needs a comedy that's every inch a comedy. "Could You Blame Him?" is not a concoction of far-fetched, senseless rot; it contains naught but sane, sound and solid fun.—GET IT!

If He is a Real Exchangeman, he'll give you
ONE NESTOR A WEEK

JOIN OUR MAILING LIST!

...TRUTH"

A Big Foto-Dramatic Event!

...uilding, 4th Avenue and 14th Street, New York

LICENSED.

"The Romance of Bar O" (Essanay).—A Western drama based upon jealousy and a desire to get even with a girl because she prefers one man more than another. The scenes are Western in character, with settings to correspond. The last scene shows the villain led away to his fate, much to the joy of the audience.

"His First Sweetheart" (Gaumont).—This delightful little comedy will bring back the young days of every man who ever had a sweetheart. There is a bit of adventure in it and a vein of delightful comedy which pleases the audience and causes them to look backward with pleasant memories upon their own experience.

"The Beautiful Gorges of Tarn" (Gaumont).—An interesting series of views showing the picturesque gorges of this tributary of the Garonne river in Southwestern France. The trip is supposed to be about 40 miles through these gorges and the work is remarkably well done.

"A Lonely Little Girl" (Pathe).—A touching child picture representing how Margery, a winsome little maiden, pined for her brother when she was adopted by some wealthy people and taken away from the asylum. Then the foster parents get the little boy, too. Margery gets well and the closing shows an extraordinarily happy family. As a child picture this film has unusual merits.

"Red Eagle" (Vitagraph).—An excellent picture based upon the Indian legend that a Red Eagle is an evil omen. Brave Heart kills the bird, breaks the spell and is satisfactorily rewarded.

"Night of Terror" (Edison).—A comedy representing the terrors of two tenderfeet traveling in the West who expected from conversation overheard to be murdered by their hosts. The absurdity of their unreasoning fear is shown in the fact that the people were talking about killing chickens for these same individuals to eat. The story is well told and the views of the Western shack, with its peculiar ideas of storing eatables assists materially in the illusion.

"The Old Family Bible" (Edison).—A domestic drama based upon a combination of jealousy and the sale of the old family Bible, which contained some valuable papers. Through tracing the Bible the man is brought face to face with his sweetheart and their differences are speedily settled. The setting is admirable. The acting all that could be desired, while the photography is quite up to the standard of the Edison company.

"The Irish Honeymoon" (Kalem).—A series of excellent pictures, showing what Ireland is like in its most picturesque portions. It closes with a visit to the estate of Richard Croker, giving a view of that gentleman himself in the act of receiving the honeymooners. This photography has been admirably done, the viewpoints having been selected by an artist of ability.

"Red Deer's Devotion" (Pathe).—A Western picture which has some merit as depicting scenes which might actually have occurred there under some conditions, but marred by the defect of showing desperados kidnapping a girl. This disagreeable scene is not often placed in motion pictures now, and the sooner it is left out entirely the better it will be for the business. The average audience doesn't care for the production of such primitive features of swashbuckling customs and would much prefer to have this portion of any drama suggested rather than openly illustrated. Another feature of this film will not please a good many. It represents a white girl and an Indian falling in love with each other. While such a thing is possible, and undoubtedly has been done many times, still there is a feeling of disgust which cannot be overcome when this sort of thing is depicted as plainly as it is here, even to the point where the girl decides to run away and join her Indian lover. The fact that the girl's father shows the Indian from the house rather hurriedly at the muzzle of a gun is, in a way, a modifier of the tense situation which develops, but it will be admitted by most who see the film that it is not the sort that pleases the average audience.

"The Fury of a Woman Scorned" (Urban).—A dramatic episode purporting to be taken from ancient Rome. The intrigues of princes and princesses are forcibly suggested and one is graphically depicted. That the woman was finally punished for her nefarious work is accepted by the audience as quite in the way of justice. The staging and acting are good, representing Roman life of that period plainly enough. The development of the love story adds a heart interest which is pleasing and the restoration of the general to power, with the denunciation of the woman whose wicked plans failed furnishes a satisfactory ending.

"Beautiful Wye Valley, England" (Urban).—Scenes in this picturesque locality in England. Some of the most famous points are clearly and artistically photographed, affording a good idea of what the country is like.

"How Bella was Won" (Edison).—A story adapted from Dickens' "Our Mutual Friend" and containing the well known characters of John Harmon, Bella and the Boffins. The story is concerned principally with the love affairs of Harmon and Bella, and is worked out with care to the happy conclusion where Bella decides to leave Harmon, even though he is the heir to a fortune. Interest in the Dickens' stories has been strong this year and the reproductions of his novels has been a happy thought. This one is worked out with careful attention to details and the selection of situations has been such as have materially added to the attractiveness. The players have performed their parts well, while the staging and costuming have been attended to by one who thoroughly understands what is necessary in that direction. It is a welcome addition to the series of Dickens' films which have come from the studios this year.

"The Mission Carrier" (Kalem).—The only redeeming feature of this reel is the excellent photography of some California scenery. The story is vague and rapid, in fact, there is no story unfolded upon the screen, nothing but a jumble of incidents which apparently have no connection. A mission carrier loves a girl who is also loved by a Mexican—hence jealousy and attempted r-r-revenge. Such is the slender thread by which we are supposed to connect a number of exploits which are so impossible and ridiculous that they provoked laughter in two theaters where this film was seen. In one scene where the girl is riding to the rescue of her lover she is surprised by a band of "Indians" in ambush. She jump off her horse and runs and actually outdistances these pursuers (laugh one). No doubt it is economical to buy costumes wholesale which is probably the reason why these "Indians" were all dressed exactly alike in new garments (laugh two). Not being used to these new togs these men of the mountains could not run faster than a girl. But the laughter only really began when the "hero," who is armed with a single rifle, picks off first one "Indian" and then another who promptly lie down and turn up their toes. By actual count he kills six before his rescuers put the rest to flight. But the impossibility of his feat is so apparent that every time an "Indian" keeled over a titter was heard all over the house. This kind of drama has no place in the program of today. It is an insult to intelligent audiences.

"Undying Love" (Pathe).—A marital mixup which has a number of deaths scattered through it. There is, too, a considerable proportion of disappointed love, the retirement to a monastery of one man, whose life is made a torment ever afterward by continuous visions of his dead wife. The film is not pleasant and even though the work is well done it does not leave a favorable impression upon the audience.

"Regatta Along the River Mekong" (Pathe).—An attractive yachting picture which seems to have more of the true atmosphere of this exhilarating sport than most of these pictures do. The scenery is attractive and there is plenty of excitement shown which holds the interest throughout. Moreover there are some novelties in yachting which will appeal to one who understands and loves the sport. Films of this character are too few. Pathe makes them extraordinarily well and should turn out more of them.

"The Bridegroom's Dilemma" (Vitagraph).—A roaring comedy representing a bridegroom losing a portion of his trousers on the way to his wedding, but he makes the most of what is left and gets married anyhow. The situations developed are side-splitting in places and the audience does not hesitate to make its appreciation under-stood.

"Conscience" (Biograph).—A graphic illustration of the posssible injustice of circumstantial evidence and the chance of extorting a possible confession from an innocent man under the cruelties of the third degree. It is not particularly dramatic, but it tells a useful story clearly and offers suggestions well worth the serious consideration of thoughtful people. The horrors of the third degree are graphically shown. It will afford those who see it some conception of this inquisition of the twentieth century.

"His Friend, the Burglar" (Lubin).—Another rendering of the time-honored joke concerning the difficulties men have getting away from their wives. The burglar scare is used in this instance and according to the picture works quite as planned. A considerable number of laughs are concealed in this picture.

"The Snake in the Grass" (Melies).—A Western tale telling the story of the way a young Texas girl discovered that there are other snakes besides those that crawl in the grass. It is a story of attempted robbery by a bandit in the guise of a tenderfoot, who gains entrance to the house by making love to a simple-hearted girl. Fortunately the cowboys make short work of the robbers. The little girl learns her lesson and is glad to make up with the big-hearted ranch foreman who has been her devoted admirer.

"The Medallion" (Selig).—A pathetic story, the scene of which is laid in Italy in the seventeenth century and concerns the disappointment in love of David, a great painter. Why repeat the tale? When the young people at last come together and understand each other, the man dies, and the girl has only regrets for her portion. There are some dramatic scenes, the climax coming when the girl finds that David has gone to a monastery. The acting is smooth and even throughout, and correctly interprets the author's thought. The staging is interesting because it illustrates the life and customs of that remote time.

"Comrades" (Biograph).—A comedy dealing with the adventures of a pair of those people who never do any work. The round of pleasure to which one was subjected until his identity is discovered affords opportunity for considerable amusement. The play is well acted and there is much humor in it. Besides, the story is simply and clearly told.

"The Actress and the Singer" (Lubin).—A pretty enough love story, detailing the methods by which a prima donna succeeds in helping a young tenor singer with whose voice she fell in love. He is engaged as the principal tenor in her company and the close clearly indicates that a wedding is in prospect. It is a pleasant story, simply told, but hasn't much claim to dramatic interest.

"Max's Feet are Pinched" (Pathe).—Such comedies as this scarcely have a place in modern motion picture work. It is possible that a man might purchase shoes that pinched his feet. It is altogether improbable that he would keep those shoes, much less wear them to a reception when it had already been necessary to remove them once. There is, perhaps, a certain degree of fun connected with such pictures, maybe largely because of their improbability, but it must be confessed that more probable subjects ought to be available. The Pathes waste a good deal of excellent film and much good work upon improbabilities which they denominate humorous pictures.

"Whiffle's Courtship" (Pathe).—Accepting the theory that all lovers are on the direct road to the funny house this film has fewer improbabilities than the one previously mentioned. The silliness condensed into this picture might be ascribed to a single couple, but it is at least sufficient to satisfy the requirements of several. Maybe a film based upon pure silliness is an advantage occasionally. It makes the others appear better by comparison. This is pure silliness and the audience can enjoy it thus.

"The Code of Honor" (Selig).—A picture which will develop more than ordinary interest because of the accurate representation of the code duello among the German military men. The story connected with it is clearly told and affords an excellent impression of what actually occurs before and during one of these duels. It will give a new view of that mysterious thing called honor among these duelists. The mechanical work is well done and much care had been exercised to make the details accurate.

"All For the Love of a Lady" (Edison).—An excellent picture, the scene of which is laid in old England when knights and ladies were supreme. It is a love affair in which these interesting individuals play prominent parts. The element of jealousy is made of considerable importance, while there is plenty of action to keep up the interest. The last scene, the sword duel between the lord and the young man, is one of the most thrilling and realistic pieces of work ever seen upon the screen. So honestly is it done that the duel appears real. It seems as though the actors were in earnest in their endeavors to kill each other. The young man vanquishes both the lord and his lackey, winning the lady, which the audience agrees is quite as it should be.

"Oh, You Teacher" (Essanay).—A comedy laid among the homely scenes of school and everyday people. They did not succeed in obviating the difficulty of losing teachers because they got married. That has been a habit with teachers from time immemorial. But they succeeded in getting some fun out of it and the young trustee obtained a good wife. So what's the use of attempting to divert Cupid from his rightful prey?

"The Sword and the Cross" (Gaumont).—A picture representing the trials and sufferings of Christians of the early days. It tells the story of a love among the Christians, shows them subjected to maltreatment and represents a crucifixion as a penalty imposed upon the prefect's son. There is question as to whether these pictures are worth while or not. Those times are past. It is now more in order to represent some of the injustice of the present day.

"Breakers in the Clouds" (Gaumont).—A triumph of art and photographer's skill. It represents clouds rolling around Mt. Blanc and is one of the most beautiful of this variety ever placed upon the screen. It seems as the masses of cloud tumble about the mountain, and break into all sorts of fantastic shapes, that the audience has been transported to the summit and was looking upon actual cloud masses. It would be difficult to make this any better.

"Betty Becomes a Maid" (Vitagraph).—A lively comedy in which the millionaire young man is represented as falling in love with the pseudo maid instead of the girl he was supposed to favor. They perform numerous interesting and humorous stunts before the play closes, all of which are vociferously received by the audience.

INDEPENDENT.

"By the Light of the Moon" (Rex).—A comedy that holds the interest and leaves the audience in good humor. The elopement by means of aeroplane and the trouble with the automobile suggest interesting modern possibilities. But the father is just as irate as fathers used to be when they followed eloping couples on horseback or in wagons. The doctor's hurried trip, accompanied by the stork is an interesting bit of work which amuses, while conveying some touch of excitement. And then at the end when the father discovers that the stork carried a double burden his rueful countenance affords a good reason for a hearty laugh. The mechanical portion of this production has been worked out with care and close attention to details and in most of the scenes the photgraphy is good.

"A Trick of Fortune" (Reliance).—A comedy acted with spirit and developing numerous humorous situations. Here is a young man, pursued by fate until he is on the verge of suicide, when he is unexpectedly mistaken for a capitalist. The attentions showered upon him are quite overwhelming, but apart from some slight exaggeration in the characters of the real estate men, not impossible. All this excitement after the man has mistaken a cartridge to make his suicide and his purchase nonexistent. The principal fault is underexposure of the negative film. Some of the interiors are positively bad, while others are more in accordance with good photography. A little more time, or a little more light would have made the difference between a good film and a bad one. One curious gunpowder smoke effect is noticeable in the film which should be corrected. If these spots and streaks are in the original it should be made over. If in the positive, perhaps other prints are free from them. The picture is not up to the standard of most of the work from this studio.

"The Vindication of Jehu" (Champion).—A generally good picture. Being a plain story in reality that it cannot be misunderstood. It has little claim to dramatic strength until the young man goes to the hut where the man lies ill of small pox and discovers him to be the old enemy. The struggle there ending with a confession and death, the return home and the reconciliation with the fiancee back to the West for the little girl left behind are interesting phases of the story. The point deserves commendation. An escape from the jail is a part of the story, but happily the audience is spared the details. There is no suggestion of it. The photography is clear, with the exception of one or two places in interiors, where under exposure mars the picture a trifle.

"A Prison of the Caucasus" (Ambrosio).—A well told story, possessing pictorial qualities of unusual merit. The film is well worth seeing for the series of pictures alone. The scenes depicting life in the Caucasus are all interesting and the pictures give points selected for the background of the different scenes that are admirable. The capture and escape of the prisoner, with the love story interwoven with it, are good, but it does not appear why the girl was moved to commit suicide because the man she loved was gone. Not the slightest intimation is given that he does not intend to return, which makes the suicide seem altogether useless, or unfounded. The excellent pictorial qualities save this film.

"In the Commissioned Ranks" (Nestor).—The well told story of a domestic tragedy settled over the toys and belongings of a dead child. The parents couldn't divide them and they come together again over the doll. The scene is very pathetic and leaves scarcely a dry eye in the audience. Photographically the film is pleasing, and the sudden plunge from gayety to the bier of the child affords sufficient change to create a mild sensation which adds to the interest.

"Bill in Love Again" (Lux).—Once more Bill falls a victim to the charms of a beauty, only this time she is a cannibal by profession and a dusky one for color. His parents are horror-stricken when they discover what their new daughter-in-law is like and as an ending to a somewhat painful situation induce him to sell her to a traveling showman.

"Jones' Remedy" (Lux).—A comedy detailing the fact that in spite of friendly advice to the contrary from those who had made the experiment Jones was determined to get married. And he did, receiving his bride and the commisseration of his bachelor friends upon the same day. There is fun enough in this one to keep your audience good-natured.

"Put Out" (Solax).—A farce that has considerable of the rough-house, but is nevertheless enjoyed by the audience. What happened developed a few comical situations calculated to keep the people in your house good humored.

"Caribou Hunting" (Solax).—A scenic film made in Canada and illustrating caribou hunting as practiced in the wilderness there. The photography is excellent, the locality selected is picturesque while the whole film affords interesting information of a little known sport.

"The Spirit Hand" (Thanhouser).—A film depicting an original method of sharpers to get rich quick. They would have accomplished their purpose effectually only a handsome girl interfered with their schemes and their plans were frustrated. The spirit hand possesses a grip which is calculated to be continuous where gold is concerned. The play is interesting since it is something out of the ordinary and the way the schemers were foiled is worked out to good advantage.

"Her Prisoner" (Bison).—An excellent film depicting an occurrence in the West and developing interesting situations. The scenery is well selected and the characters perform their parts well. The improvement in photography as compared with some previous films is marked.

"The Rich and the Poor" (American).—A graphic representation of one phase of the disputes that so often rise between capital and labor. The overbearing tyranny of the capitalist in this case perhaps has its counter in some instance that some of the audience knows. The triumph of the young foreman is a fitting close to what begins as a disagreeable picture.

"The Message in the Bottle" (Imp).—A striking story of what happens to a young lieutenant wrecked upon an island. His prowess wins the recognition of the savages and the king offers the hand of his daughter in marriage. Just as the weding ceremony is in progress the rescue party, including his sweetheart, arrive. The touching note is the figure of the dusky maiden standing upon a rock, like a statue, watching the boat sail away, heart-broken because of the loss of the man she loved.

"The Fall of a Knight" (Rex).—A comedy dealing with the fortunes of a waiter who impersonated a knight in attempting to win a girl's hand and was summarily cast out. The amusing complications are numerous and the picture affords opportunity for enough of slap-stick work to furnish variety.

"The Penalty" (American).—A sensational picture, illustrating the evils of gambling. It has one especially surprising situation and the whole story is well and clearly told. The photography is clear and the actors have caught the spirit of the play and have reproduced it to good advantage.

"An Unforeseen Introduction" (Eclair).—A love story that is somewhat different from what the principal factor in it intended it should be, but all ends happily, hence there is little cause for commiseration. The unexpected meeting, with its denouement forms the basis of the film and affords whatever of interest it may possess.

"A Day of Storms" (Eclair).—A comedy representing the difficulties encountered by Jack when he forgets his umbrella and is caught in a rain storm. He gets into several uncomfortable situations, landing eventually in a baker's oven where he gets thoroughly dried out.

"The Secret of the Palm" (Imp).—Another Cuban production, detailing the love and jealousy of a Spaniard whose machinations nearly cause the ruin of a young American. The principal dramatic interest is contained in the death scene where the Spaniard confesses his complicity in the exciting events and falls dead afterward. The wedding bells are then prepared for ringing.

"The Test of Love" (Yankee).—A Spanish story, representing the changebleness of a young Spanish girl, her infatuation for an American tourist, how she saves his life when he is pursued by her Spanish lover and the way she returns to her former love after the American is safe. It is a love tale of considerable interest and has numerous interesting complications.

"The Son of the Executioner" (Great Northern).—A feature film of merit, introducing thrilling and dramatic scenes, which are heightened by the magnificent costuming and stage setting. The photography, too, is clear and distinct and its effectiveness is heightened by tinting and toning. In scenic qualities this film will rank very high.

"Foolshead Shooting" (Itala).—This favorite with a large number of audiences displays some more of his nonsensical acting, this time using a shooting trip as a basis. What funny things he does can scarcely be imagined.

"The Senorita's Sacrifice" (Yankee).—A love story of Spain which contains unexpected developments in both the story and the photography. The scenery selected as background is picturesque, the girl is pretty and the love affair furnishes sufficient heart interest to hold the attention of the audience.

"A Gamble With Love" (Powers).—A love story with a Nevada scene for a background. It's principal feature is the re-appearance of the woman's first love at a critical moment in her life and her decision to remain with her husband and child, even though her heart is elsewhere. The acting is good, the scene when the husband appears while the former lover is pleading with the wife to go away is unusually dramatic. The audience plainly commends the wife's decision, even though pity for her situation rouses their emotions.

"Come Back to Erin" (Powers).—A spirited and interesting story of love and intrigue in which a young heiress was in danger of losing a valuable patrimony in Ireland through the machinations of a wicked squire. Through several scenes there are thrills as the plot proceeds, but eventually all is well. The young heiress gets her estate and the young man gets both the heiress and the estate. It is a pleasant picture, one calculated to keep the audience interested and in excellent humor.

"His Younger Brother" (Thanhouser).—A story of more than usual power, worked out through a number of rather complicated, though perfectly clear, situations. That a girl should don boy's clothes and take her brother's place is not novel, but in this instance the interest is increased by the fact that instead of discovering that the employer was a villain she soon learns that the brother is to blame. Then a love affair follows, the sinning brother is given another opportunity and the picture closes with a good feeling everywhere.

"Starlight, the Squaw" (Bison).—An interesting Western film in which the Indian characteristics are produced with some fidelity to facts.

"Was it Worth While?" (Nestor).—Deals with the rather commonplace story of the country lad, who leaves home, mother, sweetheart—all, to win fame and gold out in the great world. This particular young man meets with unprecedented success, and, fired with ambition, is soon able to win the hand of a millionaire's only daughter. After the manner of men, he conveniently forgets the simple farm-girl, who remains true to him. His brother, back in the sleepy, old village, learns of the imminent wedding, and hastens to the city to fight the cause of the forgotten lass. He manages the affair so skillfully that the society belle returns the engagement ring, and the early romance comes to flower. We seldom find fault with the Nestor productions, and the only complaint we now have is that the scenairo lacks strength. "Was It Worth While?" is made worth while through the splendid work of the players, perfect and lavish staging and the always excellent Nestorian photography.

"Under the Stars and Bars."—A civil war photoplay, and the film depicting the work of the Red Cross Society in fighting disease were used by the Milwaukee Journal in its free moving picture entertainment at the South Division High School building. Comedy subjects, a travelogue and musical numbers also were added.

"The Sign of A The Flying A"

TROUSER SKIRT STIRS 3 CITIES; ONE IN CHICAGO
EGGS GREET WEARER OF TROUSERS SKIRT
Paris Mob Pelts Helpless Girl Until Police Aid Her to Escape in Automobile
MOB PELTS WEARER IN PARIS
NEW SKIRT BLOCKS BROOKLYN BRIDGE
First New York Woman to Appear in Bifurcated Garment Stops Traffic.
DEALERS FEAR FOR MODE
HAREM SKIRT JEERED, THEN LAUDED, IN PARIS
Fifty Young Women Cause Much Excitement at Races Wearing Trousers Dress.
HAREM SKIRT WHICH BLOCKS N. Y. TRAFFIC AND AMUSES CHICAGO
HAREM APPEARS IN CHICAGO.
SKATERS FAVOI
Skirt Riots in Madrid.
MADRID Feb. 24.—Two women belonging

Warren Kerrigan and Pearl Eaves in "The Harem Skirt."

THE HAREM SKIRT

Topical Comedy.

The funniest funny film ever released. The biggest crowd-getter possible. Arrange for a two-day's booking—IN ADVANCE. You will not be able to handle the crowds otherwise. Start advertising this American Feature NOW and GET THE MONEY.

Release date THURSDAY, March 23rd.

THE FIELD OF HONOR

Comedy.

A full reel comedy of exceptional merit in point of its laugh-making possibilities. Actually there's a laugh in every foot Release of Monday, March 20th.

DON'T FORGET { BOOK In advance
ADVERTISE In advance
ASK FOR In advance

THE HAREM SKIRT

The funniest funny film ever released.

AMERICAN FILM MFG. COMPANY, Bank Floor, Ashland Block, CHICAGO

START ON A SOUND BASIS

Get a machine that can DO the work—and do it now—and tomorrow—and for a good long time to come.

Let the idea about the original machine go.

BE MODERN—UP-TO-DATE—GET MACHINE WISE by installing the modern machine—THE MOTIOGRAPH.

This is a day of progress—Time keeps on coming and going—and old fashioned machines must be replaced with THE MOTIOGRAPH—THE MOST DURABLE—SIMPLE—ACCESSIBLE Motion Picture Machine on the market—and THE MACHINE THAT PROJECTS THE BEST PICTURE.

Manufactured and Jobbed by ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MANUFACTURING COMPANY, 571 West Randolph St., CHICAGO

AGENTS IN ALL PRINCIPAL CITIES

Letters to the Editor

FOR THE BENEFIT OF THE SERVICE.

Dear Mr. Editor: Supposing you were making several licensed picture houses, depending on an independent exchange several hundred miles distant; this institution telegraphs you the names for each night's program, you advertise them, only to find next day to the surprise but two of the subjects the exchange has named, the other being "Indestructibles." You get little satisfaction from the exchange, and as these concerns are (in the West) separated by hundreds of miles, you cannot readily switch to another. What's to be done?

Don't exhibitors return their reels promptly? Is the exchange man slow or careless, or are the Sales people behind schedule time on shipments? The public is the party for whom these playographs are made, so he is the fellow who pays the freight on the entire film business. Then, why not keep faith with him and give him that for which he is willing to pay, before he becomes disgusted with unfulfilled promises and quits the screen form of entertainment? The exhibitor is helpless. It appears to be up to someone between him and the producer. Who is it?

Progress being the order of the age, why cannot your splendid and impartial journal, invaluable to every branch of the motographic industry, bring this matter forcibly to the minds of your readers, and start something that will result in as marked improvement in film service as there constantly is in quality of stories, number and class of players employed and lavishness of staging and costuming?

Respectfully,
ONE WESTERN EXHIBITOR.

PROPAGANDRY AND THE PICTURE.

Shawnee, Okla., March 9, 1911.

Editor Moving Picture World.

Dear Sir:—I should like to say a few words regarding the article headed "Propagandry and the Picture House" in the issue of Feb. 18th.

The article is interesting, and for the up-to-date exhibitor,—he who would keep up with the times, project good pictures and endeavor to make, rather than lose money on picture propaganda—it offers good information for study and serious consideration.

Prior to the appearance of the article we had given some attention to adv. slides, running several for different firms in town and also by contract with T. R. Woodburn & Co., of Chicago for two of their advertisers.

Now to get at the purpose of this letter. Last night a representative of the Lee Lash Co., of New York, came upon the erstwhile clear horizon of our little city offering a "queer" contract, to wit, "to exclude all other advertising," etc., offering from one to six slides of "Post Toasties," "Hair tonic" and etc., and willing—absolutely willing and anxious—to pay $6.25 (six dollars and twenty-five cents) for quarter (three months) viz., $25.00 per year for each slide. Oh! generous mortal! Oh! poor, poor exhibitor!

Now we are out in the "sticks" in a clean little town in Oklahoma. We run a 5-cent picture house, and project as good a picture as is to be seen in the southwest, and our house is clean and sanitary, and Mr. Rep. of L. L. Co. was very much surprised that we did such business in the two hours he was in the proximity of our P. H. with its store front and Peerless piano and peerless pictures and one minute intermission (5 slides) and continuous performance and! and! and he finally offered $35.00 yearly, $8.75 per quarter, and we told him that, though we are in the business for the nickles, and get some of them and are business people, that even that large amount was not tempting enough, but that he should have no trouble in signing up the rest of the houses at $6.25, but our rental price was $5.00 per month monthly, quarterly or yearly. Yes, he signed for three of the other houses.

Now fo rthe "propaganda" part of the business: if we wanted to cut the price of our advertising rates, we could run 40 slides for merchants here in town at that rate, $2.08 1/3.

As it is we run twelve to fourteen slides regularly, without bother to us, giving satisfaction to the advertiser by proper projection, and not tiring the people with too long showing or worn out slides. If propaganda in the picture house is to be continued, why should not it be profitable? And if exhibitors are going to "cut" and "slash" the price of exhibiting slides of outside advertisers, how can they reasonably expect the town merchant to pay double? and if he cuts the price to the "towner" also he receives less money, runs more slides and gives half the satisfaction he previously did. It is far better to run four slides at $5.00 per month than ten slides at $2.08 1/3.

By all means let us have "Propaganda," but let it be sensible and businesslike on a business basis and unless profitable "what's the use?"

If you cut to extremes for the big agents why not for your home merchant? and when you do that—cut for either—"Propaganda" is dead. If agents want your curtain for their slides, why should they not pay a price within reason?

I should like to have your opinion with this letter, and should be pleased to have exhibitors from different parts of the country tell their opinions. Yours for the betterment of the moving picture industry, I remain, sincerely,

C. EDGAR MOMAND, JR.
Odeon Theater, Shawnee, Okla.

BUTTE, MONT., NOTES.

Mr. A. B. L. Gellerman, president of the Western Independent Film Co., whose main office is at Portland, Ore., has just finished establishing an independent exchange at 102 Hamilton Street, and installed Mr. Charles Malloy as manager. Since establishing his fourth exchange at Boise, Ida., recently (Butte being the fifth), Mr. Gellerman has done considerable missionary work and has recruited several Montana houses for the independent ranks, so prospects seem to be promising for the local concern, their reels already being furnished to the Orion picture theater here. According to Mr. Gellerman, conditions have never been more favorable to the motion picture industry throughout the "Treasure State" than at present and he expects to give the opposition a run for their money in the country tributary to the big copper camp.

The Montana Amusement Co., of which Frank T. Bailey is president, is now operating eleven picture houses and theaters in Montana, including two or three picture-vaudeville combinations. Among the locations of this company's enterprises are Butte (4), Anaconda, Great Falls and Missoula.

WANTS EXCHANGES TO DEAL FAIRLY.

Peoria, Ill., March 3, 1911.

Editor Moving Picture World.

Dear Sir:—I am very glad to read the articles advocating an open market, but would also like to see you advocate that the exchanges keep their word with the exhibitors, better at least than they are doing now in Chicago. It is worse than ever now with the independent exchanges and you cannot leave one without being raised in price by the others. I am paying $50 per week for 7th run and one reel 12th run—at least that is what I am supposed to get according to agreement. But I don't get it and it is no use to kick as all I get are promises which are not fulfilled. I would be pleased to see you advocate a better business system between the exchanges and the exhibitors. Yours truly, L. B.

ABOUT SCENARIO SCHOOLS.

Rutherford, N. J., March 13, 1911.

Editor Moving Picture World.

Dear Sir:—Anent the Scenario School. Let me voice my belief that the only good it performs, is to separate the almighty dollar from the foolish, would-be writers, who never have, and never will be able to make even a three-line anecdote interesting or cohesive. Mathematics may be taught. So may other branches of knowledge. But literary construction is a matter of brain-fitness, gift if you choose; and no amount of schooling will produce a writer, if it is not "in him." On the other hand, some of our best writers in the varied literary fields, admit their utter ignorance of the so-called technique of the trade—the only thing that can be taught.

You, yourself, Mr. Editor; on page 574 of the March 18 issue; in a half dozen lines, gave the whole course in scenario writing in a nutshell. No school, no matter how elaborate their lessons, or how costly their tuition, could do more. In the drama, "the play's the thing;" and in scenarios it is the idea. Now, the person who sets himself up as a teacher of how to evolve ideas, is either a fool or a knave.

Will you pardon a personal experience as a case in point? For some years I had been doing general literary work, including dramatic, but I frankly confessed to an absolute ignorance of the modus operandi of motion picture writing. One evening, in company with many other unhappy victims, I sat through as atrocious a set of films as it has ever been my misfortune to witness. I do not speak of their artistic elements, but the plots were so incoherent, so inane, so disjointed as to be utterly meaningless.

Commenting on them, I asserted that I believed I could do better, when an acquaintance, one of those many who believe they can write, but who have never been able to convince anyone else of it, assured me that I was all wrong.

That the field was a sort of close corporation, that merit did not count—in short, the regular whine of his kind.

His jeremiade did not deter me, however, and I determined to have a try. Now, did I go to some school, or take a course in correspondence? No, sir. I did just two things. I gave up a week to attending every motion picture theater I could find, and I subscribed to Moving Picture World. (This last is not a puff. It is a logical fact. When a man enters a trade, he wants first of all, the tools of that trade. Now, the best tool in the scenario writing trade is the trade paper, that will make him conversant with the various buyers of his handicraft, and give him an accurate knowledge of their needs.)

Armed with this knowledge, I set myself to write a scenario, and, to make a long story short, I sent it to the manufacturer with whose policy it seemed to fit in, and received a gratifying check in less than a week.

Since that time, I have been as successful as the limited field and my more limited time could reasonably warrant. And all without even the catalog of a scenario writing school in my possession. One word more, and this to the carpers; I have found the Scenario Editors almost uniformly considerate and courteous. Much more so than like officials in any other line of literary work.

Many times when some change in their plans has compelled the return of a manuscript, they have taken the trouble to explain the reason of such return; and on more than one occasion have gone so far as to recommend some other firm whom they thought would be likely to accept the scenario.

Of course there are those editors who have never made the acquaintance of "Common Politeness," who return your manuscript soiled and worthless; or worse still, keep your return postage, and never send the script back at all. But they are so few, that I am willing to consign their faults with the mantle of silence, and let them "reck-que-scat in pace."

Sincerely yours,
G. V. MAY.

"A BLUE NOTE," BY THE PIANIST.

Clifton, Ariz., March 5, 1911.

Editor M. P. World, New York City.

Dear Sir:—I notice in a March number the series of "Whys" from J. W. Russell" and your evident interest in improving the service. Let me unload, not a bunch of "Whys," but one great big one on you and implore you, for the "love of Mike," to put in a good word for it. I am not an operator, only a "measley" musician, but we have feelings most like human beings, and our troubles in connection with playing the pictures are like the sea of sand—numerous. My hair is getting whiter each evening trying to select a program that will fit in with any conceivable thing that happens.. Once out of ten times perhaps I hit it. As Russell says, "The titles of pictures are in many cases so obscure that no one has any idea what is going to happen." Like the pianist who was serenely playing away one evening to a "Mutoscope" picture when suddenly Mabel lies down and dies to the strains of "Go Easy Mabel," we all heard about it, yet who could blame the musician? She did not know that Mabel was doomed to die. Nothing indicated it. Of course, there are a few musicians who play by "ear." It is pickings for them to sit and watch the picture change the character of their music to suit the picture, but an orchestra cannot do that. In fact, I cannot myself, nor any of the members of our orchestra, play anything unless we have the paper in front of us. The only way we can do is arrange the best "guess" programme can and pass it all out with the hope that something may fit something.

How much better for all concerned if the operator or manager could hand us a synopsis of what is going to transpire that evening. Then if Mabel was going to die we could give her a proper send-off; or, if she was to be married, we could have Mendelssohn's "all ready for her etc. etc. If the musicians knew the details of the pictures they could increase fully 100 per cent. the effect of them. That is proved where programs do not change daily, the second show being far better than the first. If this does not appeal to you—pass it up. If you can spare a little of the end of your mighty pen, spiel some to the reel wonders or, perchance, the operators who, either through having run a picture before or, having read a synopsis are familiar enough with a reel to give the musicians a valuable tip. Well, enough of your time, thanks.

JACK FAIRFAX

WHY RESTRICT THE CHILDREN.

Westfield, Mass., March 3rd, 1911.

Editor Moving Picture World:

Dear Sir:—Being a subscriber of the Moving Picture World I have been taking a great interest in the educational field. I have been reading of different States not allowing children under 14 and 16 years of age in theaters in the evening, without guardian. Now which is the worst, letting children in the theaters or letting them run the streets? In most of the picture houses the admission is only five or ten cents, where they could go and be learning something, now that the picture houses may have a good many educational pictures. There they can't be smoking cigarettes, and getting into mischief, while on the streets they cannot be watched and nobody knows what they are doing.

I think it is a shame that children are allowed to stay on the streets until eight and nine o'clock and yet are not allowed to go to the picture plays when the chances are that they would go straight home after the pictures. Now, in Massachusetts, children are not allawed to go to the picture plays in the evening. The mothers and fathers can't always afford to go to the pictures and take their children, while they could afford to give them the price alone in order to keep them off the streets. Of course I don't mean children five and six years old but those of ten or twelve.

A FATHER.

THE OPEN MARKET.

Beardstown, Ill., March 6, 1911.

Editor M. P. World, New York City.

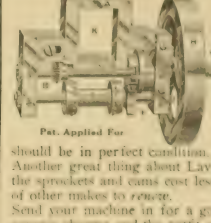
Dear sir:—If the Moving Picture World in the next year or so obtains an open market, it is entitled to its reward, would have earned its crown and, among exhibitors, it would be greeted with, "Well done good and faithful servant, etc." The secret of the future of the moving picture business rests upon the proposition of an open market. If the film companies or manufacturers would advance and improve let them join hands for the open market. If they would see the business retrograde, let them remain stolidly indifferent.

Being a subscriber I am much interested in the business from any standpoint. But being editor of a newspaper I know how much letters of encouragement regarding an editorial policy are appreciated and how industriously the editor seeks to have his editorial suggestion put into practice once he becomes absolutely convinced that his suggestion is unbiased and for the best interests of his city or his clientele, as the case may be.

Yours very truly,
E. E. NICHOLSON.
Editor Illinoian-Star.

For a Clear, Sharp, Flickerless Picture

Lavezzi's Stars, Cams and Sprockets D, F. & F. Can't Be Beat



Pat. Applied For

They make the picture overlap one another on the screen, which enables the light to perform its work. This delicate movement throws from 14 to 20 pictures on the screen per second, therefore it should be in perfect condition. Get the best made. Another great thing about Lavezzi's repairs is that the sprockets and cams cost less than half the price of other makes to renew.

Send your machine in for a good job; you pay all express charges and the outfit will be put in free of charge.

Above Outfit—star, cam, arbor and sprocket D. F. & F.—$12.00

E. W. Lavezzi, 3042 N. Ashland Ave., Chicago, Ill.

BIO CARBONS

Advertised by the man who uses them

STORIES of the FILMS

VITAGRAPH.

DAVY JONES—Miss Davy Jones receives a letter from her mamma and she tells it and with tears of her mamma and she would like to leave her and Davy dismantling the only jewelry for it. Poor Davy, tended dog's with buckles, and Mrs. wife's possible her fashionably starts with Mrs. Jones to visit the mountains in the

They board a street car. Davy gets in a rumpus with the fellow passengers, is thrown off and obliged to walk the rest of the way. The ladies and child makes seating in the parlor, while Davy has to content himself with the hall. He called by the child's nurse and is ushered down with the several canine pets of the members of the card party. Davy accidentally is bitten by one of the pets and forgets his conversation.

His wife, anticipating the worst, calls the undertaker and leave has the extreme pleasure of being measured for his coffin, while his wife and the undertaker make love to each other, this is more than Davy can stand, he gets madder and madder, jumps up and throws the undertaker out of the window. His wife is surprised at his sudden recovery and when she collects her nerves, she makes him get busy at once.

THE ACHING VOID.—Mrs. Martin tries to forget her loneliness by mingling in the diversions of Society. Mr. Martin for the same reason finds no comfort in his home and gives himself entirely to business and his club. They do not have even the companion of each other's society, while one is engaged in her or his pursuits, the other is occupied elsewhere, they yearn for that part of human love and family unity which makes a home a place of happiness and a joy at all times, the influence of the child and the affections of one common interest.

BETTY BECOMES A MAID.—Margaret is the elder and Betty the younger of two sisters. Their brother Jack brings a young unmarried millionaire friend to spend a few days with them. Margaret gets in line for the young visitor and warns Betty not to be too presumptuous, for Betty has the advantage in winsomeness. In order to give her sister every chance, Betty plays servant girl.

Jack's friend is so smitten with the pretty maid, that he can see nothing else. Margaret sees Betty wins. Her identity is made known and the young fellow proposes there and then, the father's consent is gained and Margaret joins in with all the rest offering congratulations.

MELIES.

THE SCHOOL MARM OF COYOTE COUNTY.—"I do hate learnin', but Oh! you School 'Marm!" is what the boys at the spelling school, Hop Lee came to town; and, from "Big Bill" down to Hop Lee, the Chink, they all took to study—and to courtship. The rivalry is friendly until the new foreman blows in and takes the inside track, then "Big Bill" gets jealous. At the swell (?) reception the foreman cuts Bill out. Big Bill decides to "lay for him." The foreman soon discharges a greaser who later robs the paymaster and receives to fix the blame on the foreman. A lynching-bee, led by Big Bill is well started when the School "Marm" interferes and demands a fair trial for the foreman. She herself holds court in the schoolhouse, and sets as Judge, while the boys as jury, hear the testimony.

Now, Hop Lee, the Chink, knows the facts and has the real testimony, but Big Bill kicks him out of Court. Hop Lee loves the School "Marm" in his own way, however, and rounds up the real criminal and delivers him into court just as the verdict of guilty comes in against the foreman. Big Bill now feels ashamed of himself. The School "Marm" decides to marry the foreman, and Hop Lee is satisfied to do their family wash.

ECLIPSE.

THE MONEY LENDER.—The fishing fleet departs and its return is anxiously awaited by the woman-folk on the quay. Also the harvest of the sea is scanty and the fisher-folk are seriously impoverished to meet the demands of the village shylock. One little household—that of Jean and his wife and son—is broken up, but the moneylender in his house is counting his gains, careless of the human suffering they have cost. Suddenly he sees a vision of Jean gazing at him with accusing face. He rushes from the house, down his steps towards the cliffs. To his disordered imagination the villagers seem to be pursuing him with menaces. He steps back affrighted, falls over the cliffs and meets his doom.

NEMOURS AND THE BANKS OF THE RIVER LOING, FRANCE.—Charming riverside scenes make this picture very attractive. The Picturesque architecture of the villages passed as we travel down the stream, the wicked water, the cattle grazing at us as they stand placidly knee-deep in the stream, and the simple country-folk washing their linen by the water's edge, all convey a refreshing sense of rural simplicity.

PATHE.

MAX IS STUCK UP.—Max is invited to a dinner party. On his way he meets the baker's assistant a few choice confections, and while there spots a piece of sticky fly paper. He cannot solicitude the baker asks Max to sit down while he removes the offending bit of paper. This Max does, but unfortunately deposits himself upon a similar piece of paper which is on the chair. This, too, he removes. The assistant baker, but Max manages to carry off with him a large sticky piece fastened on his sleeve. This he discovers on his sweetheart's home and in endeavoring to remove it, he gets it fastened to both hands and both feet. Nobody but a confortionist could ever get rid of those terrible pieces of paper and so add to Max's misery, when he gets to the table as finds he is having lifted up his fork he cannot get loose of it. His glass, too, sticks to his hands and when his future father-in-law passes him a platter, Max cannot let loose and the entire party gets embroiled over who shall have the platter.

THE CATTLE RUSTLERS.—Bob Straters, foreman of Colonel Bamby's ranch, discharges a couple of cowboys who swear to be avenged. These two rustle some of the cattle belonging to Mr. Morgan, the father of the girl Bob loves, and so arrange that Bob is suspected of the crime. Although innocent, things look so bad for Bob that he decides to leave that section of the country and writes a letter to the sweetheart asking that she elope with him. She consents to do this, but when she and Bob are about to ride away over, the real culprits enter his house and steal the little money he has been able to save. They are seen and followed by Bob's sweetheart's sister, who discovers where the money is hidden by the two cowboys. After recovering it she rides for her life toward Bob's house. She arrives just in time, and Bob, who has in the meantime thrown the two thieves out of his door and drops one man in his tracks. The other succeeds in escaping, but the wounded man lives long enough to confess the whole affair. Of course, Bob and his sweetheart live happily ever afterward.

LIEUTENANTSLIEBE.—A lieutenant in the German army is completely infatuated with the daughter of the commandant of the post, but she reciprocates his tender feeling, though she is engaged to a young fellow who is away at school. She is somewhat surprised and somewhat at a loss to know what course to pursue when she receives word from her fiance that he is about to return, having completed his course at the military academy, and she decides that a course of deception is the only way. She enlists both parents in the matter, and they all conspire to shield the name of the girl they love. The attention to the young officer is carried to the point where it has about decided to punish both men when a letter is received from the girl herself announcing her betrothal to another and saves the young men from disgrace, but her reward is only to find that man a husband can never marry her because of her father's rank.

THE KID FROM ARIZONA.—The hero of this story arrives at a local saloon just in time to prevent a half drunken bully from treating a puny Indian maid. Of course, the bully resents his interference and threatens to shoot the fool that the kid has a gun and he has none: so the kid promptly leads the man outside and handing his gun to a bystander promptly beats him to a pulp with his fists. The Indian girl, in her anxiety to show gratitude in some gift to her hero, steals some money from the general store in the village and, wrapping it in her handkerchief, presents it to him. This handkerchief is the thing that the kid given her some time previous, and when the officers arrive on a search for the stolen money find it, suspicion naturally falls on the kid. Rather than allow the girl to suffer, he admits a guilt which is not his and makes a wild dash for liberty, but is finally caught and about to be swung up in real Western style, when the Indian maid arrives and tells her story just in time to save him from the noose.

GAUMONT.

THE LIEUTENANT'S WILD RIDE.—Lieutenant Melville arrives at the village of His letters from army headquarters make it possible for him to secure shelter at the home of a wealthy lady, Madame Braun. They become sweethearts, and the Lady Braun looks forward with dread to Melville's departure. During his absence a wire arrives ordering him to the front. Because suspicions it is a command which will take him away, she reads it, finds it is such an order, and on his unexpected returns tables it in her stationery case. Some hours later he accidentally finds the message, and realizing his responsibility, orders his horse saddled, and dashes off on his wild ride against time.

CUPID'S CONQUEST.—Nicette, the daughter of an old colonel, becomes deeply in love as returned, and Bergate asks the colonel for his daughter's hand, but he refuses.

Now a little statue of Cupid comes to life, and by bringing to the old soldier's memory numerous scenes from the latter's youthful days, persuades the officer to allow the wedding.

THE PEOPLE OF THE ARABIAN DESERT.—Scenes in Tunis. The Dey and Bey and his Favorite Dwarf. The Funeral of a Prince. A Religious Festival. A Marriage Ceremony. Trained Horses of the Chief.

BIOGRAPH

TEACHING DAD TO LIKE HER.—Harry is infatuated with Dolly, and while wishing that a marriage with any one without Dad's consent would prejudice his chances of the future with him, proposes to Dolly with the understanding that he first gain the governor's sanction to their union. Dad, naturally fussy, considering the mere fact of her being a chorus girl. The boy lits upon a scheme to win his father's consent which seems good to both of them. The plan is to have Dad meet Dolly and become impressed with her. The scheme is then had to take a motor through the grounds around their mansion and Dolly is to be tipped by as if by accident. All goes as it was proportioned and the boy leaves Dolly and Dad together. Dad at first refuses to even speak to or look at the girl, but the scheme works and her the weaker his determination. The boy all this time is in hiding hoping that Dad will like Dolly. Dad's failure to resist the charms she loves, is not very encouraging to her information as to Dad's conduct, much encouragement is emphasized by Dad's positive refusal to talk on the matter. The boy, however, notices that Dad takes quite a fancy to Dolly, grows quite gay and debonair in both dress and manners. On the other hand, Dolly is less effusive and seems to be losing her aggressiveness. Dad himself has she another suitor—if so, who? He discovers that Dolly's manner is reasoning that her actions may be affected to urge him on, so he in defiance to his Dad goes and buys the ring. His new bottle-green suit, his "Does Dad Like Her" file soon finds the answer, for he calls on Dolly to find that she likes Dolly and Dolly likes Dad unusually—so much so that the cards will be out in a few days announcing the nuptials of Dad and Dolly.

THE LONEDALE OPERATOR.—The station at Lonedale is in charge of an old operator and his daughter. The youngster who comes on the run between Lonedale and civilization is the sweetheart of the operator's daughter, and upon receiving word on this particular day he hastens her to the station, where, finding her father suffering from a nervous headache, she takes his place at the key after bidding adieu to her engineer sweetheart as he mounts into the cabin of his engine and pulls away. As her father leaves he discovers that his revolver is out of order and takes it with him to fix it. The old operator has forgotten, however, that this is the first of the month, on which a large sum of money is expressed on from the city to the office of the Lonedale Mining Company for the pay-roll. The train pulls in and she receives the express bag of money from the man who also rides, rods see this delivery and assuming that the girl is in charge of the office, take the chance of securing the money. The windows all being heavily barred they make for the back door, which the girl, having no special reason for locking, has. They find it an easy matter to break through this. After locking the door she rushes to the telegraph key and sends a call for help to the next station, some miles up the road, where she knows the train is momentarily expected. Instead of the girl's sweetheart is despatched. Meanwhile, the tramps are slowly but surely making their way through the door to the room where the money is guarded by the girl. She keeps her wits and when the hideous faces break into the room they find it in darkness, as the girl has turned out the light and by the gleam of the moonlight that penetrates the window they see the girl's outstretched arm and hand holding a stream of dangerous looking metal directed full in their faces which forces them in the corner. On, on, rushes the engine until Lonedale is reached a dash for the station is made by the engineer and fireman, who find the two would-be burglars held at bay by a weak woman armed with a nickel-plated revolver, from which the tramps in the dark mistook for a pistol.

THE PHILADELPHIA FILM EXCHANGE, 934 Arch St., Philadelphia
The largest Independent Exchange in the East. The house where you can get quality and a square deal. We buy the entire output of the Sales Company. A trial will convince you. Open day and night. Call, write or phone.
Baltimore Office 610 East Baltimore Street Baltimore, Md.

LUBIN.

HER ARTISTIC TEMPERAMENT.—He was a country girl ambitious to become an artist. Her work was greatly admired by her mother and father and a young man of the village, who admired her as well as her work. So Flo decided to go away to the city much to the regret of her parents and lover.

Success did not come, but pride died hard, and she kept writing encouraging letters home. Her lover guessing that the lessons between them was widening, wrote that he was coming to visit her in the city.

The girl smarting from having him see her poverty after the glowing letters which she had written. She took one of her pictures to a second-hand store and tried to exchange it for a dress. It happened that the proprietor of this store was not a complete of a woman shoplifter and this woman had just come in. The police were on her trail and she gave the unsuspecting like the goods in exchange for the picture.

When Flo arrived at her room she found her lover waiting for her. The police led by this false clue, arrived almost at the same time. Then Flo confessed that she had not made a great success at painting and her lover took her back to home and happiness.

THE SPINSTER'S LEGACY.—Priscilla was known as an old maid in the village, and as such, some of the grocery store loafers considered it smart to make fun of her. Si was not among these. He was really in love with Priscilla, but was too bashful to let her know about it. One day Priscilla received a letter stating that she had been left $10,000 by the will of an uncle. Shortly after that she had plenty of admirers. Jed, Lem and Abe came to her home, bringing presents. It was really wonderful how their feelings had changed toward her. Si came too, but was too bashful to produce much effect. Just at this time came another letter stating that a second will had been discovered which would probably deprive Priscilla of the legacy. Then it was wonderful how the feelings of Jed, Lem and Abe cooled. But Si comforted Priscilla. He actually got up enough nerve to propose and was amazed to find himself accepted. About a week later a third letter came from the lawyers stating that the original will was the authentic one and that the legacy was Priscilla's. Once more the feelings of Jed, Lem and Abe changed, but Priscilla introduced them to Si, her future husband, and then they went disconsolately back to their checker boxes.

BRIDGE AND THE EGG.—Bridget was making a cake and little Willie, after watching her for a while, decided to play a little joke on her. After covering her with a snowstorm of flour he quickly got out of the kitchen with her in pursuit. In his flight he passed a store where some china eggs were displayed. He bought one, took it home and asked Bridget to cook it for him. Poor Bridget tried to break the egg and was amazed to find how hard the shell was. She hurried into another room to tell Willie's mother about it and brought her back to see the egg. Meanwhile Willie had substituted a real egg for the china one. Bridget was determined to break the thick shell and took an axe to it. She broke it and then some. It required all over herself and her mistress. Willie, who had a grand stand seat behind the door, laughed so hard to draw their attention to him, and then he got the

Ornamental Theatres

PLASTER RELIEF DECORATIONS

Theatres Designed Everywhere

Write for Illustrated Theatre Catalog. Send us Sizes of Theatre for Special Designs

The Decorators Supply Co.

2549 Archer Avenue :: CHICAGO, ILL.

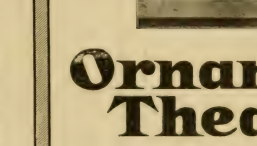
EDISON.

HOW BELLA WAS WON.—The first scene shows John Harmon arriving in London. Stepping at a small lodging house on the Strand he meets a character, also seems to belong to the docks. After the usual courteous exchange of greetings he looked. Among them he sees Bella Wilfrey, a woman intimately true Harmon, ever seems a certain thing to Wilfrey in order to hasten the marriage, however otherwise will go to any measures to prevent the ladies to wed.

Harmon recognizes him. Bony once fight their way to the back of the store, where they fall through a trap door into the cellar. Harmon becomes known a powerful hypnotist by the name of John Harmon. Harmon decides to set the stage. Bella Wilfrey under hypnotic influence.

He was then at home Bella's engagement to Edgar to the Wilfrey. Then Harmon, disguised as Rollins, also came to the time appointed for the wedding. Bella is cured of a spell. Harmon suggests that Harmon sings. Then Harmon and Bella are under the same spell. Bella is and she carries.

Finally Harmon proposes and is accepted to do. Edgar and to the designs she does nothing for him. In an attitude seems unable to Mr. Rollins

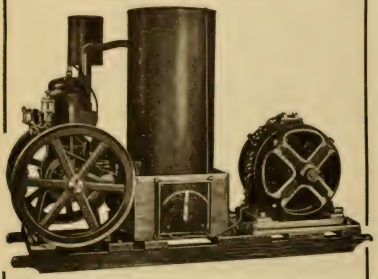


ALL FOR THE LOVE OF A LADY

Mr. MOVING PICTURE MAN

Drop a postal to AMBURE AMUSEMENT PREMIUM CO., Inc., 141 to 147 West 45th Street, New York City, and learn of a proposition that will triple your day's business without a penny's expense on your part

Electric Light Plant Complete
$210.35



Larger Plants at Proportionately Low Prices.

Including the celebrated DETROIT KEROSENE ENGINE and DYNAMO OF SUFFICIENT CAPACITY TO FURNISH CURRENT FOR YOUR ARC AND 10-16 c. p. TUNGSTEN LAMPS for illumination.

Total cost of operation from 5 to 25 cents per day. Gives you better light than you can buy. Gives you the same light in the afternoon as at night. Can be operated by a ten-year-old child.

CAN MAKE IMMEDIATE SHIPMENT.

DETROIT ENGINE WORKS, 406 Bellevue Avenue, Detroit, Mich., U.S.A.

W. E. GREENE FILM EXCHANGE, Inc.

The Oldest and Largest Independent Film Exchange in New England

The House of Quality and Satisfaction

MR. EXHIBITOR :

If you are desirous of finding out how to improve your present service and increase your daily attendance call and have a confidential chat with us. If you are unable to call, drop us a line.

W. E. Greene Film Exchange

INCORPORATED

228 Tremont Street, Boston, Mass.

Telephone 3790 Oxford

NATIONAL EXCLUSIVE PROGRAM

Released week beginning March 20th

MONDAY	REVIER	The Utes Defiance
	ROYAL	The Senator—The Dubonet Fiend
TUESDAY	COLUMBIA	Jim the Rustler
	CINES	Doge and Dogeress
WEDNESDAY	UNITED	Roses and Thorns
	FILM D'ART	Thomas a Becket
THURSDAY	COLONIAL	The Tory—In the Everglades
	REVIER	Spotted Tail's Arrow
FRIDAY	ARROW HEAD	Romance of Sonora
	COLUMBIA	The Ranch Mystery
SATURDAY	CAPITAL	The Virginia Colonel
	COMERIO	Duke of Paris—Electric Shoes

Distributed by A. G. WHYTE

36 East 23d Street, : : : : NEW YORK

SPECIAL

Mexican Revolution Ever since the first outbreak, we have had representatives at the point of interest, Mr. J. W. Ullman having spent 30 days as guest of both President Diaz and General Lorenzo Torres, while Mr. H. Revier has been, and is at the present time at the front as guest of the Rebel General, Pasquel Orozco. We will shortly place on the market a series of authentic films which, for historic and graphic value, have probably never been equalled. The Columbia Film Company, having been under contract with the Mexican Government for the past six months, was enabled to obtain the United States Rights to the use of those negatives made by Mr. Ullman.

New York
Salt Lake City
Philadelphia
Milan, Rome

NATIONAL FILM M'F'G. AND LEASING CO.

Washington
Los Angeles
London
Paris

Any article of merit properly advertised can be made the basis of success; the party controlling the article so advertised will reap the profits.

MR. EXHIBITOR:—

The basis of an amusement enterprise is controlled novelty. Viewed from any standpoint, the success of your enterprise is dependent upon the method of putting the novelty before the public; in plain English, you cannot rob the novelty of its novelty and sell the carcass to the public as entertainment. We are talking to thousands of Exhibitors who are buying film service daily.

If it were possible for us to meet you face to face and talk this thing over, we should never select the pages of a trade journal for the purpose.

From the very instant you recognized that novelty was the mainspring of your enterprise, you have been clamoring for a protected program, in this hopeless quest you have been lured by promises from one Exchange to another; you have been clamoring, complaining, contending, knocking, always seeking, but never finding. In your disappointment, you have gauged the public protest which is shown by smaller receipts at the Box Office as chargeable to everything and everybody.

One day you blame it on the cold, another day you blame it on the rain, still another day you blame it on the pictures, still another day you blame it on the heat, then you blame it on the operator, then the singer, and next the piano-player, then the cashier, then the ticket-taker, then the usher and finally after running the gamut of every conceivable impossibility, you wake up to the fact that your real trouble is the impracticability of featuring your program; that is to say, forcible illumined, comprehensive, direct advertising to reach the public is impossible to you for fear that your competitor will rob you of the fruits of your advertising. You are thus forced to continue your business on the hit and miss principle, hoping that the public will stumble into your house and trusting that these stumblings will be so numerous that a successful business may be built up therefrom. You find your house running behind, neither you nor your competitor able to make money, both suffering from the same condition, attempting to exhibit a novelty, while in reality you are exhibiting a carcass. As an amusement enterprise, you need novelties, you must feature such novelty, you realize this, but alas, you are unable to make it effective. The National Film Mfg. & Leasing Company comes into the field to fill this need. It is the only program which makes the featuring of your program possible, exclusive service, protective service and service which gives you sufficient advance information to enable you to place your program properly before the public without fear of losing control of your novelties.

The only possible way of turning an inanimate thing into a living issue, is by force of publicity.

National Film Mfg. & Leasing Co.,

INCORPORATED

12 East 15th Street, New York City, U. S. A.

Exhibitors send your name for our mailing list, address Dept. B.

While they are waiting for the office Boy to run out on an errand and take the fresh stamps a small bill into Katie's satchel when she upon the table, and Mrs. Mott, not wishing to be outdone by his sweetheart, does the same. They leave the forewoman to making an additional scrawl on the sheet for the next month's quantities and the same idea and slips a bill into the little satchel. The floor manager returning and seeing the little satchel and the bills and the forewoman busily engaged, pockets the latter and adds to the counterfeiting.

Each article is quoted and Mrs. Mott soon sees a chance to secure the articles at very much and bidding over the head of the small cavaliers, he slips it into the satchel. At supper where the different quantities are finally satisfied, one would suppose both would address them, upon the attempt of the starved lass, because both have been picked up the old saying her opportunity, they restored the money.

Katie is in great distress when the office thinking the right to have checked, starts to take her to the station house but on explaining that she is one of the many employes and hastily realizes the cardinal of her friends. Mrs. Mott and Mrs. Flynn seems to envelop us covered with confusion when is accentuated by the fact that Katie innocents embarrass him out of gratitude for his devotion and generosity.

BABY'S FALL.—While a fond mother is preparing to take her little child out for the usual daily airing, she is called to another part of the house by the maid. Baby, being left alone, finds amusement by throwing her doll out of the open window. In trying to recover the toy she climbs upon the window sill, loses her balance and tumbles out, but fortunately falls into the yard, the opened window serving as the floor below.

The mother, returning, misses the child just as baby falls out. Horror stricken, she staggers frantically to the window, and having succeeded in telling her husband's office boy who she is, faints. The maid, unaware of baby's accident and not seeing the prostrate form, runs for a physician for a doctor.

Meanwhile the baby's father has left his office, making straight for home with all possible speed and attracting a great crowd of people on the way. The latter, not knowing the cause of the flow boy calls an ambulance and all tear madly to the scene of the accident. Arriving home just as his wife revives and tells her terrible tale, he is overjoyed to find his little child alive and well in the awning from the lower window and having the time of her life playing with dolly.

The task of rescuing the baby is quite a hazardous undertaking, but with the aid of a long pole, when he lowers out of the window, holding him by the heels, she is finally hauled into the room, much to the gratification of the anxious parents as well as the crowd of enthusiastic spectators.

KALEM.

RESCUED FROM THE DESERT.—Ned, a newcomer in the mining camp, has Tomahquint, a poor Indian, from an attack of the camp bully. After the fight Dirk, one of the miners gives Ned his hand and invites him to his home where he introduces him to his sister. A month later Ned finds gold dirt and makes a double strike. While visiting Dick's sister little brother Jim misdemeanor causes a long concealed Dick's gold dust in a pocket of Ned's coat to fall to the floor, unbeknowing Ned to be accused of theft. As punishment Ned is driven from the camp with one day's provisions. Rose, Dick's sister, who believes in Ned's innocence, seeks out Tomahquint and begs him to go and find her sweetheart. Tomahquint remembering the good deed Ned did him on his first arrival in camp takes up the trail through the desert, eventually finding Ned and bringing him to camp. As they arrive in the settlement little Jim explains his trick, thereby clearing Ned's reputation.

A SAW MILL HERO.—Jim Hemmingway went to college but did not graduate. He had a fine time, but flunked in his studies. His father, displeased with Jim's college experience, decided to send him to a lumber camp in the hope to develop the manhood he believed there was in him. Arriving at the camp Jim pulled off his vest and entered with spirit into the work, determined to prove to his father that he was a "chip off the old block." Shortly after arriving at the camp he had a falling out with big Tom Granger, one of the camp bosses, and he acknowledged butty of that section of the country. Days later big Tom led a mob of lumbermen bent on burning the mill and lumber piles. Jessie, the daughter of the boarding house keeper, overhearing the plot, warned Jim who, with a few loyal hands, in a pitched battle, bravely defended the property of the mill from destruction by the mentioned incendiaries. The next day Jim's father arrived at the camp and was told of his son's heroic deed. This filled the old gentleman's heart with pride and made him acknowledge that Jim was indeed a "chip off the old block."

SELIG

HER WORDS COME TRUE.—John Hudson is exceptional as regards the truth of foretelling the future, while the olive-skinned gypsy pulls rude and vessels in hand. No sooner has his hand handled in madam's jeweled fingers, than a regular circuit of blood-curdling prophecies tend to produce a frosty temperature.

"You will have trouble over some papers."

"You will be sought after by a dark woman."

"You will meet royalty."

"You will take a journey."

"On the 17th you will have a disappointment."

No sooner had he emerged from the tent, he handed the gypsy an extra silver piece, and then failed to return the change from a silver dollar. The boy gets away. This is the trouble over papers that the fortune teller predicted.

The dark woman. A negress with basket of washing on her head outside.

Royalty—Card game. Four Kings.

The journey. Waybill and put in a cab by two men.

On the same reel with

AFTER A HUNDRED YEARS.—Through a dream a young man reveals the early family history of his grandfather, who in October, 1830, while gambling with some friends, became involved, ending with the striking of his host a blow in the face. Just outside the Royal George Inn.

THE WAY OF THE TRANSGRESSOR.—Bill Henson marries a Western girl and takes her to an Eastern city, where they make their home. Bill soon tires of the bonds of matrimony and begins to neglect the little woman who has given up all to share his lot. A child is born to them, but instead of softening the old rotter, it seems only to irritate him, and he takes up with evil companions. Dissipation has begun in earnest and he sinks lower and lower until he is persuaded to become a thief in order to live without manual labor (a thing he abhors).

The complications that arise from now on are intensely interesting, holding the spectator spellbound until the climax is reached when Bill is removed from the path of those whose happiness he would blight.

HER ADOPTED FATHERS.—Bill Bolen and Jed Spray, two old fishermen, had been cronies for twenty-five years, occupying in common their cozy and picturesque little cabin. It is filled with the forsam and jetsam of a life spent upon the water.

One evening as they sat engrossed over their game of checkers, and the cold, cold wind whistled outside, a girl struggled into the cabin, exhausted and fainting, telling them how she and her father had been wrecked and begging for help.

One day while mussel-gathering on the rocks she met a young artist, who, fascinated by her beauty and romantic story, wooed and won her. But she could not bear to leave her old protectors, for, the glamour gone after a year of married life, he left her with a young baby, and the broken-hearted girl returned to the cabin, where her old fishermen never to leave them again.

ESSANAY

A THWARTED VENGEANCE.—Nell Olcott, a pretty Western girl, is the proprietress of a bar and gambling hall in a little Western village. Needless to say she has numerous admirers from the big smooth cowpunchers and miners, who respect her wishes when none of them become drunk at her bar or gamble away all of their money at the tables. One day she is annoyed by a Mexican, who is thoroughly detested by the girl and all the miner, whom she favors. The Mexican swears revenge and in a note to Griswold threatens to take his life. Later that day Griswold overhears an injured miner and takes him to his shack, where, like the girl, he swears vengeance for his injuries. That night the Mexican visits Nell Olcott's bar, gambles and binds her and takes her to Griswold's shack, locking her in a room with a knife and Griswold's window. He then enters the shack, binds his victim, who, believing Nell Olcott is in the room with the window, and after flashing the steel blade before Griswold's face is about to plunge it into his heart when Griswold, freeing himself, enters the room and overcomes the would-be murderer. The Mexican is driven from the shack, where he again attempts to take the life of Nell, but is cut down by Griswold.

GETTING HIS OWN BACK.—Reggy Van Astor, a thoroughly harmless young man of wealth and fashion, is in love with Lola Gilbert, an actress, but the course of true love between the two is darkened by the objections of Reggy's father. We find Reggy, at the opening of the story, preparing to call upon his beloved Lola, but her relatives, carving with him Reggy's newly created resentment, he informs Lola, who is waiting for her to come down, an escaped convict enters and forces Reggy to change trousers with him. The convict then leaves and Reggy and Lola are engaged at love-making when the maid announces Reggy's father. The young man is hidden in a closet close to the left and the "grinning" Van Astor tells Lola she must have nothing further to do with his son. Reggy, meanwhile, has disguised himself to look like a most vicious character, enters the room, holds up his father at the point of a revolver and under compulsion forces him to exchange trousers. Reggy then leaves, but comes across the escaped convict and entering him with a gun drags him back to Lola's apartments. Here things have reached a crisis as two police guards have entered and arrested Van Astor, thinking him the escaped convict. The proper exchange of trousers is then made and Van Astor decides to allow his son to marry the actress.

LOST—A BABY.—A young married woman with a three months' old baby enters a hardware store, leaving the baby carriage outside. She shows the clerk the baby, then starts to make her purchase when a lady and gentleman enter and tell her that some small boys have run away with the carriage. She asks the clerk to hold the baby and she runs out after the young culprits. Soon the two arrives and the clerk, expecting to be relieved by the proprietor of the store, bids the baby under the counter. In the meantime the mother has run down the block and returning to the store with the baby carriage asks the proprietor for the baby. He knows nothing about it and she, thinking the baby has been kidnapped, has the proprietor arrested. This latter is taken to the station, protesting his innocence, where he is in danger of being mobbed when the clerk is dragged in. The clerk reveals now where he left the baby and after returning to the store restores it to the frantic mother.

Independent Film Stories.

ECLAIR.

HURRAH! HURRAH! LET US MARRY.—Germaine Aubry and Jacques Bellmont are in love with each other, but both being exceedingly bashful young people, are somewhat timid about expressing their affection. The parents do not approve of this attachment for Mr. Humont, Sr., in spite of the fact that he is a lender agent is a beau for the charming Germaine, while Mrs. Aubry imagines that she herself is the center of attraction for young Jacques.

Fanciette, the adroit lady's maid, however, has grasped the situation at a glance and decides that a clever stratagem she will succeed in arranging things to please all concerned. She confides this much to the people, and asks that they simply write, each of them, a letter at her dictation, wherein each plans to meet the other at a certain time, and she will carry out the rest of the plot! Accordingly Fanchette states that the letters are brought to the parents of the young people, and advises both the old gentleman and the widow to frustrate the plan by themselves hidden, and at the fixing the appointment made in the letter. Mr. Humont, Sr., arrives at the rendezvous at the designated time, and as they have donned the children's clothes, Mr. Humont imagines that he is in the presence of Germaine, while Mrs. Aubry expects to be greeted by young George.

It is an embarrassing moment when the mistake is discovered, but both being endowed with plenty of good nature, they, in a hearty laugh on themselves—they decide to become resigned to the inevitable and consent to the marriage of the young people. Fanchette and Jacques, intoxicated with mirth at the ridiculousness of the situation, they clasp hands and then and there vow to wed each other!

POWERS

JUST KIDS.—Mr. A. Pet is going to a ball given by his Clover Club and prior to it at home puts on his long forgotten evening suit and sits down with his little family. Bobbie, who can be seen quarreling with his sister, Sally throws a meat ball at her, but it slips and hits the immaculate white front of father's shirt. He angrily strikes them to bed, but they cannot sleep, so they continue their pranks. Bobbie endeavors to drive the flies under the carpet and eventually succeeds the pinster and chandelier on the father's head who is in the room below. Father becomes enraged at the disturbance, but meantime have taken the feather pillows and have turned the bedroom into a snow scene. On father's appearance the several shamefaced kids go to bed. Daddy is rather stunt and this prevents him from crawling into bed, so he decides to crawl out on the other side, dash through the door with father in pursuit. The children lead him a merry chase about the house, finally the consummation of father and the mocking of the kids.

OGALLALAH.—Jim Anderson, a notorious Western gambler, comes into the village of Ogallah and offers the father money for her. The old man is about to accept when the young girl's own lover steps his hand. Jim then offers him whiskey. Another look and he refuses to drink. The gambler fires and kills her lover. She faints or fowl and follows them to their home in the wilderness. He offers the old man a drink which the daughter drinks his share off to the woods. The Indian becomes intoxicated. Jim follows the girl and finds her in the act of fleeing when the young Indian child calls for his father. The gambler becomes alarmed and grabs the child and runs with it. The father, now sober, sees the girl in pursuit. The old man awakens from his drunken sleep, misses his children and follows them by their tracks in the mud. The gambler in the meantime has become tired of carrying the child and throws it down. The old Indian chief comes upon the scene of his daughter standing on the body of her young brother. He swears vengeance and follows in pursuit of Jim. He loses track of him and climbs to the top of a tall tree and eventually sees him come into the open. He takes an arrow, places it in the bow and shoots. Jim is wounded, but still crawls on. The chief eventually catches him and a short combat takes place in the canebrake and we see Ogallaah with his hand raised toward heaven declaring "Vengeance is mine."

THANHOUSER.

WAITING AT THE CHURCH.—Tommy found his fate in a boarding house, but fate was unkind to him. Tommy was one of a number of unhappy men and women, who managed to drag out an existence in the establishment of Mrs. Miggs, where the company was bad and the food was worse. So it can be understood that the advent of a new boarder, in the person of one Flossie Footlights, who elevated the drama by song and dance pleased Tommy very much.

It was love at first sight, agreeable on the part of Tommy, but hard to explain, so far as Flossie was concerned. But Flossie had never seen, and like Tommy before, and that may be the reason.

In the evening Tommy showed himself a hero, although it hurt. He went on the stage once and to shield the pretty of a footgirl counter rush he was a snake from the one to adored.

He proposed to her verbally, and was interrupted. Then he tried to express his affection by letter. He proposed an elopement, and it came off as scheduled time. But—

Well, Flossie was a bride, but it was not the one we wanted. And when he took his pen in hand to explain, he only made a bad matter worse.

Tommy lost his beloved Flossie Footlights, but he still has his boarding house. And too much that causes him sorrow is that his most prized in that unpleasant place is marked "FOR LIFE."

It is a terrible thing to be the landlord of a boarding house keeper, particularly when you didn't have any idea of applying for the job. And that was the fate of poor Bertie.

THE TRAMP.—The hobo did not care for money. All he wanted was a chance to live happily, easily and without work. That was why, when he met a runaway convict, he did not surrender him to the authorities.

Some years later the hobo again met the convict, seemingly prosperous. Not recognizing his former benefactor, he gruffly refused him alms, but the hobo did not bear him a grudge on that account.

In the course of his journey, the hobo met a little girl, who gave him food. Then he repaid the favor by saving her from the wheels of an auto. He was injured himself, and it was thought that the farmer and his wife should take him in and nurse him back to health.

The former convict was selling without money stock, and it was unfortunate for him that he sold some of it to this particular farmer. He was soon unlucky because the swindle was exposed before the hobo left town, for the hobo knew him, and while the hobo was willing to aid a swindler to escape from justice he objected to allowing him to rob persons who had done him the hobo favors.

The swindler got the farmer's money but the hobo made him put it back. And to be sure it got there the hobo acted as the farmer's agent. He didn't give the farmer a chance to offer a reward, but departed in secret to avoid being thanked. Then he should have left town, but tried to make a nest nun of himself, and the chance was there waiting for him. He toward the end of the road," and he preferred that to being a "respected citizen" of a "rising town."

DIVORCE.—Mr. and Mrs. Gray are a young married couple who have everything to live for. But they have unconsciously drifted into the bad habit of quarreling, and children are greatly distressed by it. Mr. and Mrs. Gray decide to separate. Before he leaves for the last time, he wishes to say good-by to all the children. Then he finds his wife, a hurried witness of a scene that is being enacted by the children. They are quarreling fiercely, and through the various queries and misunderstandings which they have with their nervous exact the children their various belongings to their mutual satisfaction until they come to the dollies. The little girl refuses to be separated from her dollies, and rather than wound her, the little boy decides that divorce is horrible and consents to make her cry. The parents now realize the sorrow that separation would mean to their children as well as themselves, and become reunited.

RELIANCE.

COME UNTO ME.—Protesting to a friend against the authorities permitting the holding of a French ball, the Rev. James Whitmer is told they were heroine affairs, greatly exaggerated by the press, and is induced to attend in masked disguise to judge for himself. An altercation arises between a man and woman. Whitmer interferes and is dismasked in the fracas, and his identity caused the clever trustees refuse to believe his version of the incident, and the woman whom he befriended reading of his trial in the newspapers appears before the board and pleads for him. He trustees release on remarks and tell Whitmer the woman is so interested in him or ought to meet her. Whitmer does so, and the woman Whitmer views impressive to the women and asks her to be his wife. She consents and they are wedded. Whitmer resigns his position as pastorless and dependent. His wife, now the married to new him, sells financial assistance from friends in her old circles, and Whitmer studying law was voluntarily gone back to her former life. She put off the simple manner and the influence of declining himself. He finds the reorganized board of trustees in session, denounces having arisen and the violent expression of the pastor, and is offered his pulpit again. With bright overflowing with promises he does the second sentiments, while the woman relinquishing the world to the church, whispers understand "Ich bereit. He was not for me."

AMERICAN.

MEMORIES.—A wealthy banker. In the early years of his married life, suffered a terrible blow when he was robbed of all that he held dear in life. His young wife and baby girl. The loss left him an embittered, hardened man, whilst trying to fathom the depths of his all else Pearl. desire, but with a heart empty and longing for love.

One particular night when more than usually depressed, he wandered aimlessly through the snow driven streets to be attracted by the glare of light from a window through which, he sees a children's party in progress. The room is filled with a merry laugh throng of youngsters and the whose atmosphere is permeated with the love he lacks and so gravely needs. He gazes through th window spellbound and longs with an awful yearning for the touch of the unclad hands.

A little waif ragged and homeless has also been attracted by the warmth and light within, and looks through the window longing for something she has never yet experienced in her young life. Overcome, she sinks sobbing in the snow. He sees his poor little companion, kneels beside her and on questioning the two discovers they have a common bond of sympathy.

He comes her and what most there of it were only his heart and soul.

THE RICH AND THE POOR—[illegible] the acquaintanceship of [illegible] and Lucy [illegible] and [illegible] in Hyde Park morning. At the [illegible] the street the [illegible] engagement of the [illegible] of [illegible] Lucy [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

ADVENTURES OF A COUNTRYMAN IN TOWN.—Jones, a country bumpkin, creates a great commotion in town by his odd appearance and ignorance. He is finally taken in hand by the police, who lo' a gust of wind inflates his huge umbrella, whirling poor Jones and his captors into the air, in a comical, phantasmagorical whirl.

BISON.

STARLIGHT THE SQUAW.—Sergt. Morgan, incensed at being repulsed by the pretty Indian maid, Starlight, tries to kiss her by force. Lieut. Sterling appears unexpectedly, tears Morgan away from the girl and orders him arrested. Morgan is overmastered and reduced to the ranks. He later attacks the Lieutenant, shooting him in the leg, and escapes. Starlight pursues him and is injured by the desperate man. Her tribe takes up the chase and after a spectacular fight Morgan is overcome and bound, just as the soldiers come up. The Indians refuse to surrender the prisoner and a sharp battle ensues. Starlight persuades the chief, her father, to deliver Morgan to the white men to be dealt with according to civilized laws.

THE SACRIFICE OF SILVER CLOUD.—Silver Cloud, an Indian girl, falls in love with handsome Lieut. Parry, who, however, does not encourage her, gently tells her he is engaged to marry the Colonel's daughter. The Indians plan an attack upon the fort, and Silver Cloud warns the Lieutenant. A thrilling battle ensues. Silver Cloud picking up the rifle of a fallen soldier and fighting with the whites. In saving the white women she is captured and carried away by the vanquished red men, and bravely meets the death to which she is condemned, and the pursuing soldiers find her lifeless form—a sacrifice to her unrequited love.

SO SHALL YE REAP.—Alda Travis, a mother but not a wife, finds her child a burden and abandons the infant by secretly placing it on the steps of the dwelling of a wealthy man. The butler finds it and carries it to the chapel door of Father Jules, the priest of the parish.

